MC Committee narrows choices for president

The Search Committee for the Presidency, composed of directors of the college, faculty, an administrator, a student, and the president of the Alumni Association, is proceeding on schedule, assuring that the final decision will be made by the first of the year.

According to Dr. Herman Spivey, chairman of the committee, to begin with there were over one hundred candidates from 31 states and two foreign countries that had submitted credentials to the committee for consideration.

The Search Committee had its last meeting on August 23–24 narrowing this list to ten, and will meet on October 12. Within this period of time, the committee plans to narrow down its choices to make a list of two or three.

According to a progress report issued by Dr. Spivey, those selected will, with their wives or husbands, visit the Maryville College campus in late October or early November. The committee plans on having the student body meet each candidate in some type of question-answer period, the details of which have not been worked out yet.

Then the Search Committee will make its final recommendation to the Board of Directors prior to Christmas, leaving six months for the new president to move in and become acquainted with Maryville College.

The committee is high in its hopes that they can provide Maryville College with an outstanding president. "The number of candidates, and their quality, clearly indicates that the college has an excellent reputation, and that there is a general confidence in its future." This was Dr. Spivey's comment on the committee's work.

Mary Katherine Williamson, the student member of the Search Committee, also has high hopes for the presidential candidates applying for the job. When asked about the applications, she said: "So many of the candidates seem truly excited about Maryville College and it was a hard job for the committee to narrow the list down to the top few. I'm looking forward to meeting with the candidates, and showing them what Maryville College is all about."

Allen oversees

The Maryville College Infirmary will be under the direction of a new nurse, Ann Allen, RN.

There will be a few changes in the operation of the clinic from past years. Dr. George Kramer, Dean of Student Relations, described these changes as a general upgrading of the infirmary situation designed to meet the needs of the students.

The clinic will be open on a limited basis in the morning and afternoon. Dr. Proffit, attending physician, will take more of an active role in managing the clinic. On weekends the infirmary will be closed with Dr. Proffit on call with a referral system through the head residents.

No charge will be made to the student for medication dispensed from the nurse.

Two receive degrees

Two international leaders will receive honorary degrees at Maryville College's convocation at 8:30, September 16 in Wilson Chapel.

An honorary Doctor of Human Letters will be awarded to Norman Cousins, editor of Saturday Review and a well-known writer. Singtoh Chantrakul of Bangkok, Thailand, secretary to the minister of foreign affairs in Thailand, and a 1963 graduate of Maryville College will receive the honorary Doctor of Laws. Changtrakul is also the guest speaker for convocation and will discuss "Thai–U.S. Relations."

"Maryville College has been very conservative in the number of honorary degrees awarded in its 157 years. In honoring these two distinguished world leaders we bring honor to Maryville College," stated Maryville College President Dr. Joseph J. Copeland.

After graduating from Maryville College, Changtrakul received a M.S. in Education from the University of Tennessee. He has been Head Teacher of Bangkok Christian College, a 3,000-pupil school for boys in grades 1 through 12. Before starting his present job, he was elected a member of the Thai Parliament.

Changtrakul has had an important part in the formation of the present Thai government. After the fall of the military dictatorship in 1973, the king appointed him to a national convention to select a National Legislative Assembly to approve a constitution. He was selected to be a part of this Assembly and also served on the committee which examined the draft of the constitution before it was submitted and approved by the Assembly in October of 1974.

Changtrakul is the only professing Protestant Christian in the Assembly. He and a Roman Catholic member led a successful campaign to assure freedom of religion in the new constitution of Thailand, a primarily Buddhist country.

Dr. Horace Ryburn of the Department of Ecumenical Relations in Bangkok, recommended Changtrakul for an honorary degree, stating, "Maryville contributed to his development and to the formation of his convictions concerning social order, liberty, and the integrity of the governing process. . ."

Cousins

Chantrakul

Dr. Frederick R. Wilson, liaison officer for the United Presbyterian Church is South Asia, has noted ". . . the uniqueness of a publicly recognized professing Christian being permitted the kind of role he has played, makes his achievements an even greater tribute to his ability and integrity."

Norman Cousins, the other degree recipient, has long been the editor of Saturday Review, which he brought out of bankruptcy to become a successful magazine. He has written and edited many books dealing with world affairs and the problems of the human race. They include Who Speaks For Man? and The Celebration of Life. Cousins is known to leaders around the world and has advised and discussed problems with many of them.

He has received 31 honorary college degrees and 23 awards including the 1968 Family of Man Award and the 1971 Peace Medal of the United Nations.

Cousins' voice is mainly one of optimism. The faculty honorary degrees committee of Maryville College's Board of Directors, when nominating Cousins, stated, "It is for this optimism, for the quality of his leadership in education and humanitarian causes which reflect the highest ideals for which Maryville College stands, and for his voice of hope 'when everything that's nailed down is coming apart that we desire to honor him this year."

Convocation is usually held at 8:00 p.m., and everyone should note the change from 8:00 to 8:30 p.m.

New personel plug gaps

Along with the new freshman faces on campus, there are also some new faculty and staff members who will replace or assume various positions.

Faculty

Harry Howard is the new political science instructor replacing Dr. Robert Braid. Howard, who is working on his doctoral dissertation at the University of Tennessee, is pleased with Maryville College thus far.

The size reminds Howard of Tennessee Wesleyan where he did his undergraduate work. He will be instructing a freshman Inquiry course this fall and helping Dr. Naylor with Community Issues and Values programs.

William Henry replacing Boydson H. Baird as the Assistant Professor of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, Director of Athletics, and Basketball and Baseball Coach.

Henry is working part of the week with Maryville College and the other part with Baptist College in Charleston, S.C. In October he will be living in Carnegie Hall from Thursday to Sunday. Winter term his family will move to Maryville, when he will be here full time.

In the music department is Robert Bonham, who is returning to Maryville after studying toward his doctorate in Comparative Art at Ohio University. He feels very optimistic about the potential of the Note: There once was a time, when our parents were but children, that movies cost nickles and dimes and before those movies the news of the era was communicated by use of the "newsreel." Anticipating the future, the Echo believes that a newsreel similar to the following might be found in the college archives.

Scene: Young men and women are shown entering residence halls with smiles and a nervous anticipation of things to come.

Narrator: Time marches on! September 6 through 14, 1976. School is soon to begin at Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee. The freshman class is entering the college under a totally new and intensive method of orientation: Orientation Week. The beliefs and manners of a liberal arts education are the focal points of the week's activities.

Scene: The camera pans some of the various activities. Groups are shown at discussion, testing for placement, at recreation, eating, adjusting to dormitory life, and spending time in the nearby Smoky Mountains.

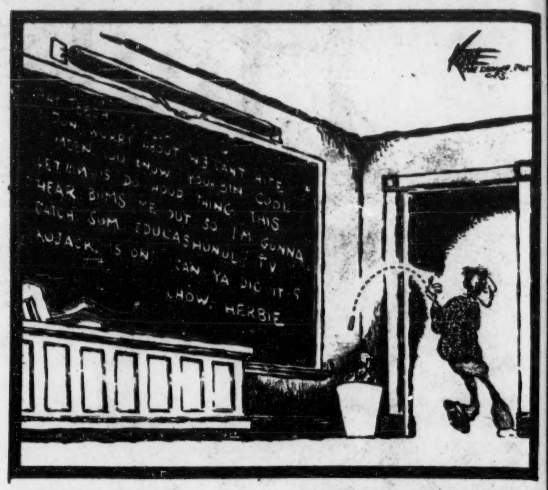
Narrator: (Resuming midway through the pan shot.) The week provided ample opportunity for the incoming students to acquaint themselves with the workings of the institutions. Students were assigned a group leader and in their discussions the input and output of the ideas of the liberal arts education were examined.

As the week continued the leaders felt that a community was being developed that had not existed before on the campus.

Scene: The camera switches to the returning upperclassmen. Parking lots are shown filling up. Students carrying luggage and other assorted paraphernalia march up and down stairs. Greetings are exchanged and the mood is a relaxed acceptance.

Narrator: By late Saturday night many of the upper classmen had begun to return. As the gathering begins again, friends greet one another and preparation begins for the resumption of academic study and its rigors.

After the settling and preliminary greetings a look around provides unexpected recognition. Those faces which had supposedly left for the last time the previous spring have settled again. Students and faculty show the seemingly compulsory good cheer of something begun anew. Bronzed and peaceful faces seem abundant. The voice is of optimism.



Scene: The shots continue to show the settling process. Students are shown in the long lines of registration. The moving continues for most; greetings continue. The normalization of the institution to its academic inclinations begins.

Narrator: The panorama is nearly complete. The stage is nearly set for the year to begin. The college has assumed its responsibility again. Its commitment is there.

As orientation week begins to wane someone is heard to remark that this institution cannot be as bad as everyone might make it out to be if people avoid the impulse to drop out, withstanding all the pressures and frustrations. "Yes," that person says, "It can't be all that bad."

Activities fair set

At 7:00 September 18 in the P.E. lobby, the annual activities fair will be held. In charge of the fair is Dr. Rhodes.

There will be plenty of tables, Dr. Rhodes reported, and all those interested in attending will find a variety of clubs and other organizations prepared.

The activites fair's purpose is to present activities on campus that are open to the student body, and invite those interested to sign up for as many as they like.

BSA To Meet

The Black Students Association will hold a meeting on September 23, 1976 at 8:30 p.m. in the Black Cultural Center.

cp&p notes

Deadline for application for the October 16th GRE is September 20, 1976. Applications are available in the Career Planning Placement Office.

Beginning September 23, a class will be offered for those preparing to take the Tennessee Licensing Examination for working in the field of insurance. Frosh view week one "warmth and friendship"

This orientation week has truly been an experience. I have enjoyed myself and have met many people from other areas. The testing, discussions, and other activities contributed to an overall sensation of entering into a new era of our lives.

The academic activities of the week—the film, the books, the group meetings—were both interesting and informative. Among other things, they impressed upon me the advantages of a liberal arts education. More importantly, though, these events prepared me mentally for the beginning of classes. My mind is no longer on vacation.

The social and sports activities, of course, were the most enjoyable. These provided an excellent opportunity to meet other students as well as the faculty. Personally I enjoyed the trip to Tremont most.

Above all, the thing that impressed me was the warmth and friendship exhibited by the faculty, administration, and students. They made me feel welcome. I was also very pleased to discover that my old friends had been mistaken about upperclassmen—they, too, are willing and eager to help.

So, I start class with a familiarity of the campus and a feeling of closeness to the school as a whole. These things will prove valuable assets in this first year. For me, the orientation program has been a success.

Gerald Burnette

"gratifying"

Freshman Orientation at Maryville College has been exciting indeed. It has been to the credit of those who planned it, and the incoming class seems to have enjoyed it very much.

The week of Orientation was fun in many respects. The many athletic activities have gotten the spirits of the new class off the ground, and the friendly competition for the steak dinner has made for much joking about the cafeteria food. The open house and dance at the House in the Woods was a fun evening that everyone enjoyed. The square dance and the trip to Tremont are also to be long-remembered by the class of 1980.

This past week has provided us all with many opportunities to meet people. In study groups quads and dorms, or even out on the campus everyone has been making new friends. The friendly atmosphere and the continual exchange of greetings is quite a change for students who came from large cities and high schools where there were social cliques. The general opinion is that it is a great thing to know your class and have so many friends within the campus community.

One of the best things about the Orientation is that it has gradually gotten the Freshman ready for studying. Many of the faculty have encouraged students to get the book "How to Study" and the whole program of the study groups has prepared the class for the studies ahead.

In a whole, Freshman Orientation has been a successful, happy, and gratifying experience. It has given the class of 1980 a foundation and a basic understanding of Maryville College, and has started the new Freshmen down the paths of higher learning.

'A feeling of unity"

by Ed Loper
and Tim Rahn

Maryville College in previous years has used an orientation weekend to prepare and teach incoming freshmen of the methods and values of a liberal arts education, specifically as it relates to Maryville College.

This year the college has used a rather intensive and rigorous method covering an eight day period where the freshmen have been thoroughly immersed into the philosophies and ways of liberal arts. Faculty-led groups attempted to acquaint the incoming student as well as possible with both the physical and "mental" machinery at Maryville and what the student is expected to do within this frame work.

It will be months and perhaps years before anyone will be able to determine how effective this new orientation program actually is towards the development of a more solid community. The early reaction does seem to point to a noticable change in attitude of all involved in the program.

The response from the group leaders asked appeared to be of a positive nature. Dr. Robert Naylor said, "I'm really happy with it. The students are getting to know a lot more than just the people in their quads. They're getting a lot of basic skills, like how to study and what's expected of them."

David Powell, another group leader, also pointed out the serious but fun aspect of the week. "The freshmen are getting less afraid." Powell stated. "There's a family, a feeling of unity. I think a community is being formed which has never before been formed at Maryville."

Continuing, Powell said "This may help prevent people from dropping out."

Student reaction was a mixed bag of thoughts and concerns. A typical freshman reaction came from John Bobo who said that "I like it. I've gotten to meet a lot of people that I couldn't meet at a large school. I've enjoyed it."

Noriko Meguro responded that it was "hard." But added enthusiastically "It's fun, too. I've seen many strangers. They're all nice."

While most reacted similarly, Judy Corliss said, "I feel like I'm in summer camp. It would have been better if we came on Wednesday instead. Other than that it's been good. The idea is a good one, it's just too extended."

Another varying reaction was from Charles Brooks who found the week to be "dull, tireless, and lifeless. It would have been alright except for the exhaustive hours and continuous routine."

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, Coordinator of the Orientation Week, also pointed out the enjoyable qualities of the week saying "Who enjoyed the activities most, faculty or freshmen or upperclass assistants, is hard to deter-

Couzens to depart

Matt Couzens, Director of Admissions at Maryville College, will be leaving Maryville some time next week for a job with IBM, in Birmingham, Alabama. Mr. Couzens will, however, be coming back the next few weekends to assist those in Admissions.

Says Mr. Couzens: "I love Maryville College. These are the four greatest years I've ever spent."

When asked if he thought the move a profitable one, Mr. Couzens replied: "At IBM, the products are not the people. Their production grabs information and produces it at a faster pace. It gives businessmen and other people knowledge a lot quicker."

Although Matt Couzens will be doing a somewhat different job than the one he is now employed in at Maryville, he is looking forward to his job at IBM. Along with a raise in pay, the job at IBM provides an opportunity for living in a different geographical area. Mr. Couzens will be working in the computer data processing division.

When questioned as to whether he would still keep in close contact with Maryville College, Couzens replied, "Of course, there is no way I'm going to sever ties."

Mr. Couzens came to Maryville shortly after he graduated from college. He worked for George Kramer for some time, and followed him to Maryville to become Director of Admissions.

MC joins Assembly

This year Maryville College will be participating in the General Assembly of the Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature at Nashville, Tennessee.

Each college is to bring a piece of legislature to the assembly. The Maryville College community is encouraged to submit suggestions for pieces of legislation to Box 2535 by September 27, 1976. All suggestions will be greatly appreciated.

Football

Maryville College football practice for returning Scots and hopeful Freshmen started on Wednesday, Sept. 1. About 45 returnees and 50 Freshmen are fighting for a spot on this year's squad. Daily sessions have consisted of two a day work-outs, a refresher (a mile run at 6:30 a.m.), and several skull sessions.

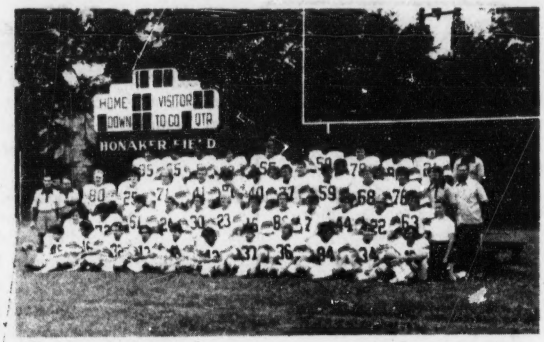
Coach Jordan must cut the squad to 65 players before the season opens.

The Scots traveled to Asheville, N.C., September 11 for a controlled scrimmage with Davidson College from Charlotte—a Division II contender.

The scrimmage gave the Scots a chance for improvement, and helped Jordan decide which Freshmen will make this year's team.

Messiah readies

For the forty-fourth consecutive year, Maryville College will present to the community, Handel's oratorio Messiah on Sunday afternoon, November 14, at 3:00 p.m. This production is made possible through the combined efforts of both the college faculty and students and community musicians.



All interested students and faculty are invited to sing in the forty-fourth production of Handel's Messiah. Rehearsals will begin on Monday, September 20, at 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

In general, it would appear that the orientation week at Maryville College has been successful. Dr. George Kramer perhaps best appraised the week saying "I am greatly encouraged by the orientation program at Maryville this year. Our freshmen class is getting off to a good start."

music department.

Robyn Burton is in the music department teaching string instruments.

She has attended Ohio University and has also been a section violist with Charleston, West Virginia; Lakeside, Ohio; and Greensboro, N.C., orchestras. Since the start of orientation she has been very active and involved in the music department.

Teaching two courses in accounting, one in fall term and another in winter is Dean Drewry.

Having had much experience in accounting he received the Most Outstanding Teacher Award from the College of Business Administration at U.T. in 1973. Drewry is a very active person, in that he pedals a stationary bicycle 17 miles a day.

James Pickens is taking the position of Robert Williams in psychology, with the feeling that it will be a hard act to follow.

Williams and he were lab partners at U.T. While teaching he is also working on his doctorate at U.T. at night. Pickens feels good about Maryville College, and the only complaint he has is that he cannot find a way to make hot water for his coffee.

Head residents

Rick and Pat McGuire along with daughter Babs will be replacing the Kehlers as head residents in Dorm III.

This is McGuire's second year at Maryville College after transferring from DePauw University. He will be a senior religion major and hopes to attend seminary following graduation. Mrs. McGuire is a part-time student here.

Their plans for the dorm include developing "the kind of atmosphere where everyone's rights are respected." McGuire is aware that there are many reasons for attending college and hopes that the resident's goals can find realization in the environs of this year's dorm.

When asked, "Why MC?" He listed Maryville's small size, Presbyterian affiliation, and good religion department as his main reasons.

Jeanne Sielaff is one of two new head residents in Margaret Lloyd replacing the Durants.

The other head resident is Phillip Sanzone of the new preparatory school.

Sielaff is an instructor in Teacher Preparation for Deaf Education at the University of Tennessee. She graduated from Gustavus Adolphus and recieved her masters degree from U.T. She has taught in such places as Sydney, Australia and the inner city of New Orleans.

Minneapolis, Minn. is home for Sielaff.

Administrative staff

The main objective of Judy Mizell, the new Communications Director, is to meet and get to know people on the Maryville College campus. She encourages students to drop in and make use of the Communications office and what it can offer.

Mizell's last job was for a company that did publications for college students, and she is hopeful that this will help in her job here at Maryville.

Judy Mizell is a graduate of the University of Tennessee, and is a native of Maryville. She comes to us from a recent job in Washington, D.C.

Moving from a part-time position to directorship is Jean Jones, in the Career Planning and Placement Office (CPP) Her plans for the activity of the CPP include many workshops, on such subjects as: writing resumes, interviews, and possibly an assertive training workshop this winter.

Jones reports that the emphasis for the first few weeks will be on the seniors, and their future job hunting. However, she will be working with the freshmen in the Inquiry groups this fall, and stresses the availability of the office to all.

New prep school personnel.

Ahmad heads prep school

Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts, the Pre-College Division of the Department of Fine Arts, is beginning its first year this fall.

The school is being established through a Title III grant and will provide arts education for the east Tennessee area. Heading the program and the eleven new faculty members hired by the school is Rosemary Ahmad.

Ahmad received her B.A. from Maryville College in 1961 and her M.Mus. from Indiana University in 1962. She has also studied at the Teachers College of Columbia University, and is presently working on a doctorate at Indiana University.

In addition to teaching at Ashland College, The College of Wooster, Blair Academy of Music, and the School of Creative Arts in Rollins, Florida, Ahmad has also concertized in Tennessee, Ohio, and Florida. This is her third year at Maryville College.

Joining Ahmad as the new faculty members to the Prep School are a wide variety of young artists covering the many facets of the arts.

William Stanley Tucker received the B. Mus. degree from George Peabody College and the M. Mus. degree from Indiana University.

He has served as music director with Professional Artist Productions, conducted at Kentucky Summerstock Theatre, and has performed at Opryland. His duties at the Preparatory School include teaching piano and classes in music theory, ear training, and basic musicianship.

In addition to teaching piano and music classes at the Preparatory School, Peggy Leatherwood, a recent Maryville College graduate, will also conduct the Maryville College-Community Orchestra. Leatherwood has also attended Peabody Conservatory and Rutgers University.

Some of her plans for the orchestra include a Student Concerto Concert in February and a Pops Concert in May. She hopes to start a Youth Symphony Orchestra at the Preparatory School in January.

Teaching classes in Orff-Schulwerk and organ lessons will be Sandra Stewart Murphy. A graduate of George Peabody College, Murphy has also attended the University of Tennessee, received her credential in Orff-Schulwerk at Memphis State University, participated in the E.S.E.A. Title III Project in Columbia, Tennessee, and the National Workshop in Pittsburg. Murphy also serves as Organist-Choirmaster, Day School Music Teacher, and Music Camp Director at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Maryville.

Dolores Brown Zeigler, a Maryville College graduate, has also studied at the University of Tennessee. Ziegler has appeared as soloist with a number of musical organizations in the East Tennessee area, including the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra.

In 1974, she placed in the regional auditions for the Metropolitan Opera's annual competition. She is presently soloist at Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville, and will be teaching voice lessons at the Preparatory School.

The new strings teacher will be Robyn Burton, who has received degrees from Ohio State University. She has performed orchestrally in the Ohio area and is experienced in the Suzuki violin method.

Weiner report released

by Ed Loper

In a report by Stuart Weiner and Associates, an admissions consultant firm, recommendations were made to Maryville College suggesting ways to improve the admissions recruiting system.

The report is the result of a study commissioned by the Board of Directors last spring. It comes out of concern for dropping enrollment and increasing attrition at Maryville College. Basically, the report consists of two parts. The first deals with pointing out the problems that exist in the admissions procedure at Maryville College and the second is a strategy for solving these problems.

Dr. George Kramer commented that the "Weiner report brings into focus the problems that the college faces in maintaining higher enrollment."

Part of the problems that Stuart Weiner pointed out were:

General lack of awareness by prospective students of Maryville College outside of Blount and Knox counties including heavy recruiting areas;

Bottlenecks in procedure designed for handling prospective student requests for information;

Problems in asthetics concerning the physical aspects of the admissions office;

Problems in variety and quality of "homegrown publications."

In commenting on the report both Dr. Kramer and Dr. Joseph J. Copeland stressed that the total message of the study cannot be gauged without mention of the positive aspects of the college. Stuart Weiner and Associates pointed out that Maryville has basically a satisfied and content student body. The college has a number of strong departments and aspects (determined from the viewpoint of the students) that need to be stressed in advertising publications. Most of the students have come because of the small size and geographic location. Overall the report determined that Maryville has many solid aspects in its favor.

The faculty received an official presentation of the report at a luncheon on September 18. In general the report was well received with the faculty concurring with the problem areas suggested. Dr. Copeland went as far as to describe them as "enthusiastic."

President Copeland continued his remarks saying that "we at the college are pleased to have the expertise of Stuart Weiner working with our staff in enhancing our total program. Their objective is to familiarize ourselves with the problems confronting the liberal arts college in today's competitive market."

Dr. Kramer sees the report as providing knowledge and useful information about

Courses offered to students

Courses in real estate and insurance are new offerings in Maryville College's fall schedule of continuing education courses. Registration and first classes begin today.

Entitled "How To Get Rich While You Sleep," the real estate course will emphasize buying and selling real estate as an investment. It is designed for both present and prospective property owners and will explore problems and opportunities for home ownership and investments. The six session course will be taught by Charles E. Brown, a local realtor, and will meet from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Monday evenings, beginning September 27.

The second addition to MC's continuing education curriculum is an introductory course in life, accident and health insurance and insurance laws. The course, which meets on Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. is designed to prepare the individual interested in the field of insurance as a career for the Tennessee Licensing Examination. It will also provide a good working knowledge of the field for those who simply wish to understand insurance for personal satisfaction.

The 10-meeting course begins September 23 and will be taught by Charles E. Howard, local insurance agent. The class is limited to 20 persons, and you must be 18 years or older.

A conversational sign language course to help hearing people better understand deaf people as well as to learn basic skills in sign language and finger spelling needed to communicate with the deaf will be offered on Thursdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. for 10 weeks, beginning September 23.

Other courses that will again be offered include mother-tot swimming, beginning yoga for women, coed karate and beginning/intermediate swimming for women.

Pathways to change

Since the Saga Food Service came to Maryville College three years ago, there have been two major improvements: the upgrading of the food and the appointment of Mr. Bob Miller as manager.

The improvement of the food resulted from a polling of parents and students. The appointment of Mr. Miller came through an act of Saga. In both cases, Maryville College was the winner. In other instances, however, Maryville College students were the losers.

Last year, over $1900.00 was spent exclusively on the replacement of eating utensils, plates, and glasses. Of course there will be broken plates and glasses; however, this money was spent mainly on replacing stolen equipment and equipment purposely and senselessly destroyed by Maryville College students. Last year's athletic banquet was a prime example. Many forks, knives, and spoons were bent and broken by those at the banquet. These were not accidents, but willful destruction of silverware.

Thefts and destruction of dining equipment are not the only problems. In the past, it has taken 15 to 30 minutes at each meal for Saga employees to collect trays left on the tables. Since Saga's weekly budget depended on the previous week, the cost of the placement of equipment and the time spent collecting trays came out of the next week's budget. This meant that the quality of food for the following week was lowered.

Further subtracting from the budget was the taking of food from the dining hall. Saga budgeted 21 meals a week based on a 40 percent "no show" rate. This meant that if food was taken out of the dining room a shortage could occur.

There is also a health law against taking food out of the dining hall. The health department also requires that shoes and shirts be worn in the dining room. This is for each student's protection. A foot cut on broken glass is no joke. Besides, the Board of Health could close the dining hall if they found violators in the dining room.

Mr. Miller has an abundance of ideas, and a genuine concern for students. He would like to see a study night (evening snacks provided in the dining hall) once a week instead of once a term, a weekly special event (a special dinner for that week's "outstanding student", for example) and he also wants the students to receive the maximum return for their money. Ideas like these cannot become reality unless each student restricts equipment damage to accidents, helps eliminate thefts, takes food out of the dining hall only in his person and not on his person, takes his tray up after every meal and observes health rules.

Let's give Mr. Miller a chance to use his ideas. If any students have any ideas, talk to Mr. Miller. He can be found in the dining hall or in his office beside the kitchen. He is always ready to talk to students and is very open to suggestions.

We can pay for meals and replacement of dining equipment due to accidents or we can pay for meals and the replacement of dining equipment due to accidents, theft, and senseless, immature destruction. The choice is ours. I hope we choose the right one.

Catalog changes

A new Maryville College catalog will appear in a few weeks, containing a new format, according to Sarah DeYoung of the Admissions Office.

The new catalog will not be used as a promotional piece as in years past, but as an informative book for students attending Maryville College. It will be much smaller and contain few pictures. The information the catalog will contain is that of academics, department descriptions, calendar, and information on the faculty and staff.

Dean Blair wrote the copy and obtained the information, while DeYoung edited it.

The catalog will not be used as a promotional piece for perspective students, as it has been in past years. Instead, the Admissions Office will put out a brochure called Perspectives (as a promotional piece.) This brochure will contain pictures and information about Maryville College. By cutting thirty pages and putting out the Perspectives, the school will be saving money. DeYoung says she will be glad to receive any comments dealing with the catalog, since it is experimental.

In addition to teaching at the Preparatory School, Burton will also teach private lessons for the College Music Department.

Michael Douglas Coster holds the B.A. degree from the College of Wooster, the M.A. and M.F.A. degrees from Bowling Green State University. Coster has exhibited sculpture, paintings, and photographs at the Mansfield May Show, The College of Wooster, and Bowling Green State University, and has also lectured at St. Francis College. In addition to serving as art instructor for the Preparatory School, Coster will be the new Head Resident in Pearson's Hall.

Having acted professionally in both film and stage productions, Charles Scott Averill studied at the University of Oklahoma and the University of Tulsa. He has appeared in such productions as Promises, Promises, Oliver!, The Real Inspector Hound, and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Averill is also experienced in directing, and will be offering classes in creative dramatics, play production, acting, and voice and interpretation.

In addition to attending Westminster Choir College, Janet Susan Coram received her B. Mus. degree last June from Maryville College. Coram is a member of the American Guild of Organists and has served as organist-choirmaster at Knoxville's New Covenant Presbyterian Church. She will be teaching piano at the Preparatory School.

Donald Mark Barnard has attended Maryville College since 1972. He has performed with the Maryville College Band and Orchestra and the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra, and also studies under Michael Combs at the University of Tennessee. He will be teaching private lessons in drums and percussion.

In addition to teaching guitar, Phillip John Sanzone, who holds the B.A. and B.F.A. from Florida Atlantic University, will also serve as the Head Resident in Lloyd Residence. Sanzone has studied under Luisa Sanchez de Fuentes at the Spanish Academy of Guitar.

He has performed with ABC, NBC, and the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, and has concertized in Florida and the West Coast. If enough interest develops, Sanzone may start a special class in group guitar for college students.

New chaplain serves as "bridge person"

James Stewart, the chaplain, comes to Maryville College from Beirut, Lebanon, where he was director of the University Christian Center.

In talking, Stewart emphasized the role of the chaplain and the stereotypes surrounding it. Mr. Stewart sees the function of the chaplain as a broker, in that he is "concerned about bringing resources and insights and dynamics of religious tradition to higher education."

The chaplain is a bridge person, says Stewart, and added that this was the main reason why he came to the Maryville College campus. He sees Maryville College as stressing the "bridge person theory."

This bridge person functions on many levels, some which may be "religious", and others which may not be. Stewart stated that his function is "to discover and lead religious functions that are appropriate to the situation." Stewart further remarked that we need to find ways to express religion that is appropriate to Maryville College.

"It is not a question of breathing life into the old," stated Stewart, "but rather finding forms that express the life which we had."

Another important aspect of the role of the chaplain is the traditional role of counseling. However, Stewart emphasized the fact that he not only needs to counsel in "religious" matters, but also in those not pertaining to "religion". Stewart plans to provide formal or informal counseling.

Dr. Stewart added that another personal function of the chaplain is to "engage the college in theological discussions." He plans to raise the theological question in a college atmosphere, adding that Maryville College is the best place to do this, because there are people that are willing to take part.

A side interest in the new chaplain is his interest in photography as an art, which he calls "image making". He plans to teach an interim course and eventually teach up to ¼ of a load.

Football

The 1976 Football Campaign for the Fighting Scots will get underway on Honaker Field Saturday, Sept. 25. The Knoxville College Bulldogs, termed by Head Coach Jim Jordan as "probably our toughest opponent," is undefeated with a 2—0 record. Jordan feels that "to beat Knoxville College we must be errorless and keep good field position."

Offensively, the Scots have changed to a Slot—I formation. Sophomore quarterback, Sam Horner, whose arm gained respect from opposition last year, is a big reason for the change. "Horner is an excellent thrower and we will put the ball in the air more this year. Horner's favorite targets will include receivers Dickens, Goodwin, Coley, Crosby, Boone, and Petree."

"The slot—I is mainly a tailback position and we have excellent depth with Genualdi, Fucci, Lasley, and Harrison."

"The big question mark of this season is our offensive line. How our line comes through in blocking is how our season will result. Senior Chip Krug anchors the offensive line. Krug, the smallest offensive lineman, has started for three consecutive seasons and was selected as 1975's best offensive player. We have experience with David Shankle (lt), and Keith Williams (rg). The Center, Wade Edmund, 6ft. 3in., 210 lbs, is a Florida transfer. Doug Smith and Lee Struble are fighting for the (rt) position. Jr. Dan Coley will open at tight end."

"Defensively, the Scots have 6 Seniors and 9 returning lettermen. Our front four (Duling, Moffett, Arcos, and Taylor) have started off and on for three years. Ken Hannah, Tim Kelley, Joe Lombardo, and Steve Savage are also three year performers."

"Kicker Tim Kelley has returned in good form, and Kevin Lynch has had some long kicks in practice."

"Two Scots—Steve Harrison and Gary Petree—may miss action against Knoxville College due to injuries."

Jordan stated that the Freshmen were doing a good job and will be needed for additional depth.

Soccer

The Maryville College Soccer team will open their season Wednesday, Sept. 22, with the Bryan College J.V.'s of Dayton, Tenn.

The squad has only been working out one week, but Dr. Young is optimistic about this year's team, stating that "There are a lot of people out there this year and they're getting better every day."

David "Bucky" Buckwalter and Dr. David Young will share the coaching chores this year.

The Soccer club elected the following for 1976-77: Co-captains, Will Way and Laurie Hill; Secretary-treasurer, Tim Farrell.

Although several veteran players will not return this year, the coaches feel they have some talented Freshmen to fill their shoes. Returnees include Way, Hill, Jeff Ference, and John Malozzi.

The 1976-77 Soccer Club boasts two excellent qualities—youthfulness and experience.

All students interested in forming a Maryville College cross country team meet in the Physical Education Classroom September 22 at 7:30 p.m.

Maryville's program. "The study enables us to begin to accommodate a number of things that we have been concerned with such as an upgragind in the variety and quality of our publications, the need for an on campus facility for admissions that would improve a prospect's first image of the college, and valuable assistance in setting up an admissions office procedure that will upgrade the flow of information needed to process increased numbers of applications."

Over the next few weeks the community will be involved in analysis of the Weiner report.

photographs will be announced later.

FACULTY/STAFF/ADMINISTRATION

A sign-up sheet for faculty, staff and administration photographs will be located in the post office from September 27 through October 8. Faculty who wish to be photographed while teaching may make special arrangements as indicated on the sign up sheet. Location, dress, and pose are to be selected by those being photographed.

Anyone who wishes may submit his or her own portrait or group portrait. Photographs must be glossy black and white, with good contrast and must be approved by the editor.

SECTION EDITORS

Section editors will be responsible for getting calendars of all department and organization events within their areas. They will work with department heads and organization leaders to provide as full as possible coverage of the activities and membership of the groups.

The staff of the 1977 Chilhowean is competent and enthusiastic. The support and cooperation of the entire campus community will ensure an excellent yearbook.

Adair optomistic about church

by Ed Loper

Dr. Thelma Adair, Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, spoke of change and optimism in the church at Maryville College on September 28.

In an interview, Dr. Adair spoke of issues that the church will try to confront while she is its leader. In the next year the church will move out in several new directions.

"One of the greatest concerns is the distribution of resources and the concern for world hunger." Dr. Adair added that we live in an interdependent world, that we must accept, and we must realize the role of the Presbyterian mission within that world.

The message of Thelma Adair is one of optimism. She says that the church must redefine what it can do in a changing situation. Minority groups and the issues of our world all need and deserve the attention of the church.

Dr. Adair speaks from the viewpoint of a member of an urban church, but hastens to point out that rural situations need the help of the larger church also. Rural isolation and alienation, in her view, are as real and important as the problems of her Harlem neighborhood.

When asked about declining active membership and fiscal problems of the church Dr. Adair answered with a great deal of hope and enthusiasm, pointing out that church membership rose slightly over the past year. She also spoke of a personal philosophy where numbers are not really important.

Most of the Presbyterian church is made of small congregations of 250 members or less. To Dr. Adair these are the strength of the church. Her program includes making these congregations more vital and in more in the spirit of corporate worship. Her emphasis is on the line of ecumenicalism and stressing the use of human and financial resources. Despite reduction of progarms she is hopeful about what the church is doing and can do.

Dr. Adair is Professor of education at Queens College and is the ruling elder at Mt. Morrisy Presbyterian Church in New York.

Ann Allen is assuming the position of clinic nurse this year. She replaces Mary Everett.

Frosh increase

The enrollment for the 76–77 academic year was completed September 24, according to Dr. Kramer of the Office of Student Personnel.

The total enrollment for this year is 649 students, which is down from last year's 672. Thus, the enrollment is down 3½ %.

Dr. Kramer also pointed out that there are 253 new students this year in comparison to the 247 new students of last year. This represents 2½% increase of new students from the '75 year. The 253 people consist of 181 freshman, 57 transfers, 9 readmits, and 6 special students.

There is a decrease in the number of returning students. There are 396 returning students in comparison to the 425 of last year.

Frosh elections set

The Elections Committee of the All College Council announced freshman will vote for class officers and freshman ACC representatives Sept. 31 during lunch and dinner in Pearson's dining hall.

Allen: students priority

by David Boyd

"I'm here because of the students," replied Ann Allen in a recent interview with the Echo.

Allen is replacing Mary Everett in the college infirmary.

When queried about Dr. Proffit's role, Allen responded that he is directly responsible for the infirmary and that her orders come from him. Allen said that Proffit has been very cooperative and has been in at least once a week to check on infirmary operations.

She added that Proffit is well qualified and hopes that the students will give both him and the infirmary a fair chance.

According to Allen, the students can expect to find conservative preventive medicine practiced at the infirmary. "Penicillin is not worth a flip for a cold," she said, pointing out that drug abuse and misuse can occur very easily. If such can be avoided she hopes to do so.

"I'm not a doctor and don't claim to be one. I can only take my orders from someone else," Allen informed as she stated that unless a student has a prescription or Proffit has given her permission to do so, a drug would not be administered without his approval.

Asked about weekend sickness, Allen replied that Proffit has agreed to be available and that she would also be willing to accept calls. She noted that such calls should be of genuine need and not for minor annoyances.

Allen has worked at Blount Memorial Hospital, the local headstart program, and in the county school system as a nurse. She graduated from the University of Tennessee School for Nursing in Knoxville.

This year's Watermelon Bust was held before the Knox College versus Maryville College football game. Sponsored by the residents of Dorm III, the Bust was thought by most to be a success. Head resident Rick McGuire hopes the event will become an annual occurence.

Twenty two new members have been selected for the 1976-77 Maryville College Concert Choir, under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter.

Harter has directed the choir since 1947, and under his leadership the musical organization has performed for radio and television audiences and appeared in concerts in scores of cities east of the Mississippi River, including a concert in New York City's Carnegie Hall.

The choir has approximately sixty members chosen after rigorous auditions in the fall. During the school year the choir performs special musical services in the college chapel and for special events such as the presentation of Handel's "Messiah" and the Easter Sunrise service.

Annual tours for the past 27 years have taken the choir to cities throughout the East. The 1977 spring tour of March 11-21 is planned to travel through Indiana and Illinois, the western part of Tennessee, Kentucky, and Ohio, and the eastern part of Iowa and Missouri.

At home the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra has presented the choir numerous times as guest artist.

The first appearance of the 1976-77 Maryville College Concert Choir will be on Sunday, October 3, at the World-Wide Communion service in the Highland Presbyterian Church. The service is under the direction of James Stewart, the College Chaplain.

Members of the chorus include Heidi Parunak, Liza Howe, Renee Christofferson, Nancy Winslow, Leanne Drennan, Judy Thweatt, and Ruth Cartlidge.

Mr. Thomas E. Jones is director for the play, and the assistant director is Tim Stuart. Patricia Damon is Stage Manager, and Tillman Crane is Technical Director.

The Maryville College Playhouse also announced its 1976-1977 season. This year, Playhouse will present two shows, along with "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off" "The Master Builder", and "Scapine".

Season tickets are available for both students and adults at a 20% discount. The price for adults will be $6.00, and $3.00 for students. Tickets will also be available at the door on the nights of the performance.

Vision, revision

A non-fan's look at football

This editorial is for the several football players who, after watching me crash gracelessly against the crash bar of a door which had been (brilliantly) wired shut, made quick repair of the situation by placing shoulders firmly against wood. As I walked through the door one of them called out "Say something good about us". . . .This is something good.

On first writing a week ago, this editorial consisted of long and rambling questions, completed with 72 unsatisfactory and often self-serving answers. The subject were football, the players, the audience, Maryville College, the animosity between the aforementioned groups, and the differences between football players and "regular people."

Football players have always been an enigma to me. I felt certain that they viewed everything from a different set of emotional eyes than I. Everything—oatmeal versus cream of wheat, sex, rain, the pursuit of happiness, proper attire for funerals and indoor gardening. I figured there were reasons for this different view—the incredible single-mindedness of their chosen sport, the high and the pressure of being "heroes" (if in their minds only,) the bigness and quickness of their bodies, and the violence and territorial aspects of their game. Also, they are men surrounded by men, playing against and usually for men, and therefore, more distant to me than the average male, who, upon occasion, finds his world to be at least half female.

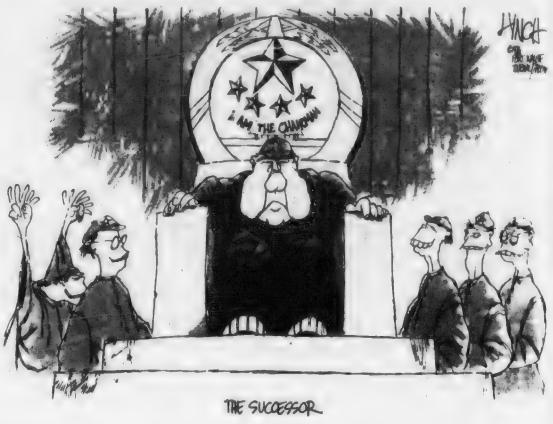
The questions I was asking were two-sided. I wondered about their concern that a major part of their lives would be impossible to attain had they matured to be less tall or beefy or quick. And if they felt used—by their coaches, parents, schools, women, and audience for their tallness and weight. I watched their expressionless, stoney, I-will-not-acknowledge-you faces and wondered what they saw.

I never asked a football player about these things, because, predictably I've never known one well enough to ask him. My discomfort around footballers has had a paranoia raising twinge like no other discomfort I have felt around persons different from me. This discomfort is felt by other Maryvillians. It has been an undercurrent of resentment around here for the last few years and its time it was spoken of.

A non-scientific quickie poll of randomly selected students (mostly women) brought evidence to this resentment and shook the paranoid twinge right off my shoulders. 34 of the 36 people confirmed a question: "If I was waiting in a dentist's office by myself and five football players entered to wait also, I would feel distinctly uncomfortable with them. More uncomfortable than with any other group of people I'd be likely to run into." There is no comfort in numbers when you want to know why people are so scared of each other and you have such a fine example at hand.

The 34 could give no specific reason for their reaction, except, well you know, football players, how they act and all. They didn't know the reason for their reactions and neither do I.

I know that the ones who play "tits and ass" after meals in front of Pearsons don't help any. Their size and speed may in themselves be enough to intimidate, especially when they move across campus in a group. Rumors of their general lack of interest in academics could turn people off, as could their zeal in what some consider a mindless and violent sport. I'm sure a clarification of the official policies toward football players would answer some questions about the resentment. Is all we hear about outrageous budgets, different standards for admission, high dropout rate among freshmen players true?



Last Saturday in the middle of trying observe some answers, two friends dropped by and suggested that I watch the last half of the football game with them. I'm not fond of football, but at risk of ruining my reputation, I went with them.

20 minutes later, some of my questions had been answered and some of them were unimportant.

The men on the bench with their masks off revealed faces I'd never seen before. Instead of those cocky, somber faces usually seen by outsiders, the men were alive. Their expressions of joy, disappointment, pain, anger and disgust told me who they were really playing for. It's not for old M.C. or good old American Values and all that other junk I'd heard. They were playing for themselves and their buddies. That I could understand and appreciate. When I was yelling with the rest of the crowd, I really wanted them to win. Because right behind their faces were the backs of their necks and those thin, almost vulnerable looking necks above all their packing and protection were the necks of just plain people. They looked just like anyone else I know and like who is trying his damnedst to do a good job at something he loves.

I still dislike football on principal, but I will now find it difficult to dislike a group of men who happen to play football. Anyone who does anything with the verve and hutzpah seen last Saturday can't be all bad. Besides, if the co-captain of the team has the savvy to take voice and piano lessons, I'm sure some of us can have the grace to have a good time at a football game. Without apologies.

Nix on Title IX

by Alicia Fields

(CPS)—Title IX, the federal remedy for sex discrimination in higher education, is receiving the cold shoulder from at least two colleges.

The regulations, part of the Educational Amendments of 1972, went into effect about a year ago. They ban sex discrimination in any educational program or activity receiving federal financial aid. Schools choosing not to comply with Title IX risk a loss of federal funding.

After a year-long dispute with Brigham Young University (BYU) in Utah, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare last May awarded the school a religious exemption from some of the regulations.

In a second unresolved case, a small private college in Michigan refuses to comply with any of the regulations. Hillsdale College President George Roche said his school refuses to establish an affirmative action hiring program.

Roche said the school wants to retain its right to hire whomever it pleases.

Title IX changed the definition of federal financial aid, Roche said. Formerly, only money directly received by the college from the federal government was considered federal aid to the college. Now, any school whose students receive government grants, loans or the G.I. Bill is considered to be receiving federal aid, he said.

Hillsdale disputes the new definition and purposely is ignoring Title IX, Roche said.

Proffitt gift announced

Maryville College has received two gifts from Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Proffitt of Maryville for the improvement of physical plant facilities.

One gift has been used to provide restrooms adjacent to the Proffitt Dining Room in Pearsons Hall. The second gift will enable the College to rehabilitate its three tennis courts by providing a new base and surface. The restrooms have recently been completed and the work on the tennis courts will begin next week.

The Proffitt Dining Room was made possible by an earlier gift from Dr. and Mrs. Proffitt. It was created from the back section of the main Pearsons Dining Room following the Pearsons Hall fire and is now used for both College and community functions.

"We are deeply grateful to Dr. and Mrs. Proffitt for these additional generous gifts for the improvement of our plant," stated MC President Joseph J. Copeland. "The Proffitt Dining Room has served both the College and community well during the past two years, and the new facilities will add to this comfort and utility."

Dr. Copeland further stated, "With tennis growing in general popularity and with a fine tennis team, we are delighted to have our tennis courts brought up to the standard of our other athletic and recreational facilities."

Chem profs attend conference

Dr. Robert J. Naylor and Dr. W. Gale Rhodes, of the Maryville College Chemistry Department, attended the Fourth Biennial Conference on Chemical Education at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, August 8–12.

The conference, sponsored by the American Chemical Society, brings together college chemistry faculty from the United States, Canada and several foreign countries. The program includes research seminars by respected scientists and papers presented by participants outlining their own work in chemical education.

Dr. Rhodes presented a paper entitled "Ever-More-Sophisticated Lies About Bonding," which described a new, three-week minicourse in the Maryville College Chemistry Program.

The minicourse introduces seniors to applications of molecular orbital theory in organic chemistry. It makes use of computer programs developed by Dr. Rhodes and his students to do calculations relevant to the course material.

Dr. Rhodes also served as a conference reporter, with responsibility for papers which dealt with application of molecular models in chemical education. His report, "Pictures and Toys," will appear in the January Journal of Chemical Education.

Brigham Young University successfully contended that it could not be forced to comply with some of the regulations because they violate Mormon religious beliefs.

BYU protested a number of regulations including a ban on inquiries into marital or parental status and pregnancy or termination of pregnancy of job or school applicants. BYU President Dallin Oaks said the information is necessary for the college to maintain "the highest standards of Christian morality."

Oaks said Title IX is a threat to the independence of private colleges. Roche agrees.

Roche said that because Hillsdale does not want to compromise itself, it has never accepted money from the federal government. He said Hillsdale has maintained a policy of equality for men, women and all ethnic groups since the school was established in 1844.

Although Hillsdale receives no federal aid, some of its students do in the form of grants, loans and the G. I. Bill. Roche said Hillsdale will continue to ignore Title IX. He added that HEW has not threatened to suspend financial aid to the college's students.

"We are not trying to defy the world" or "disguise discrepancies" in admissions and faculty hiring and pay, Roche said. Hillsdale does not want to get tangled in affirmative action hiring, he said, because it might lower the school's quality of education.

"If you hire a teacher on any other basis than ability you undermine the college," he said.

the preparatory school for arts

"Arts Mecca for E. Tennessee"

by Veronica Sawdon

The Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts is a new and exciting addition to the Maryville College campus. The program, first discussed in 1974, became a reality when a Title III Grant request was approved last spring.

Rosemary Ahmad, Director of the School, gives a clear view of its purpose.

The program was created out of the need in the East Tennessee area for a quality preparatory school for the Arts, and has two main goals: 1) To give college-bound students a superior education in the fields of Art, Music, and Theatre, and 2) To train good amateurs. The Prep School was created to train adults and children without regard to individual goals (professional or non-professional).

Of approximately 130 enrolled members, most fall into the 3–18 age group; however, this should not discourage students at the college level. There are ample opportunities for Maryville College attendees.

Featured, are several classes in guitar, designed to give students a "sound beginning in guitar playing." Interested persons should not be dismayed at missing registration, as lessons may be pro-rated to enable late enrollment.

It might also be mentioned that the addition of guitar education has enabled Maryville College to offer a major in this field. Hopefully, this will lead to an even more developed Music Department.

Peggy Leatherwood instructs music therapy at the prep school.

Charles Scott Averll, instructor in drama at the Preparatory School for Arts, brings both a youthfulness and experience to his teaching.

With the exception of three Maryville College affiliates, the Prep school has its own staff. They were hired specifically for the school and are well qualified according to Ms. Ahmad. It is interesting to note that the average age of the faculty falls between 23–24, suggesting new and young approaches.

For further information contact the school, which is located in the chapel end of the Fine Arts Center. It is open for classes weekdays, afternoons, and Saturdays. Also check the promotional booklet for specifics.

When asked about the future of the program, Ms. Ahmad said she hopes it will "build and become an Arts Mecca for East Tennessee."

'76 grads get more job offers

(CPS)—College students who graduated last spring had better luck finding employment than the class of 1975 according to a College Placement Council report.

Women who completed undergraduate degrees in 1976 did particularly well, the report said. They received 59 percent more job offers than women who graduated the previous year. Job offers for men with undergraduate degrees increased by only 4 percent. But women accounted for only 19 percent of the jobs offered to Bachelor degree graduates.

Football

By Robert Boone

It was plain as day that Maryville came to play ball Saturday against the visiting Knox College Bulldogs.

The Scots displayed plenty of spirit, hustle, and desire to win, in a cliff-hanger. The most disappointing fact was that the Scots deserved to win. The over-confident Bulldogs, who paraded on to the field as if they were number one, were stunned by a jolting defense, which caused 3 first period fumbles.

Sam Horner got the Scots rolling with a one yard sneak. Kevin Lynch's conversion upped the Maryville lead to 7—0. The defense rattled the visitors when strong safety Steve Savage tipped a Knox pass, then linebacker Captain—Ken Hannah picked off the ball and galloped 41 yards to score. The count upped to 14—0 with Lynch's second boot.

As the second half got under way, the desperate Bulldogs called on Pro-prospect Dave Shingles. Shingles, who rushed for 147 yards in 23 tries, also scored two fourth quarter touchdowns.

Tony Hall scored Knoxville's first tally on a 25 yard pass from quarterback Ronald Jackson.

After Shingles's two td plunges, the Scots trailed for the first time 21—14, but they were not through. Quarterback Sam Horner, who finished the game with 132 yards passing, hit Ken Dickens on a 25 yard aerial with 1:05 showing on the clock.

Not settling for a tie, the victory-hungry Scots went for two points. Keith Goodwin tried to run for the go ahead points, but slipped while he cut for an opening hole.

Tim L. Kelley kicked a perfect onsides kick and Savage recovered at the Knox 48. The offense directed by Horner marched to the 13 yard-line as precious seconds ticked away, but a 33 yard field goal try by Kevin Lynch was off the mark—the Bulldogs counted their blessings all the way home.

Senior split-end Ken Dickens played well in Saturday's game. Ironically, he was not supposed to dress. Dickens had been sidelined with serious ankle injury but still participated although not at full speed.

Maryville will travel to Centre College Saturday for a 1:30 P.M. game and should jump in the win column.

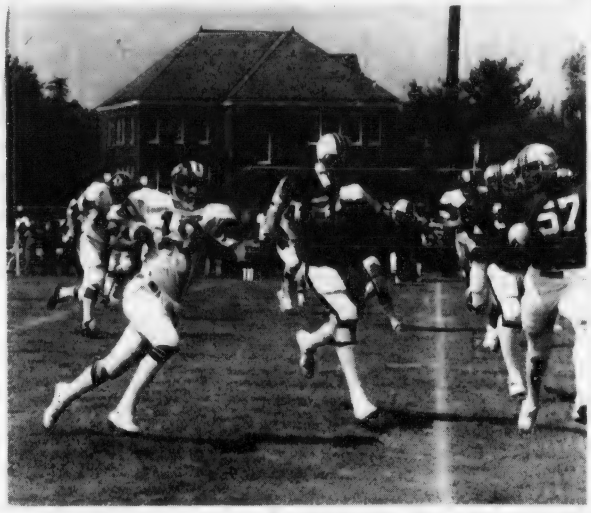
Scoring: Maryville—Sam Horner 1 run (Kevin Lynch kick); Ken Hannah 41 pass interception (Lynch kick); Ken Dickens 25 pass from Horner (run failed).

Statistics: Maryville—First downs 3, Yards rushing 18, yards passing 132, penalties 35, fumbles lost 2.

Soccer

Two second half goals scored by Will Way carried Maryville to a 3—1 victory over the Bryan College J. V.'s Wed., Sept. 22, at Dayton, Tennessee.

Although behind 1—0 following the first half, the Scots made a come back in the final period. Concentrating on ball control, the Maryville eleven gained control of the game. Doug Hardy then added a goal to put the Scots ahead to stay.



Defensively, the Scots received outstanding efforts from Dan Mock, Jeff Cook, and Dave Osborne.

Maryville lost to King College 5—1 Saturday, Sept. 25, at Bristol, Tennessee, but the score did not indicate the closeness of the game. Following a score deadlock of 1 to 1 at halftime, momentum shifted to King's favor. King scored a goal to go ahead with 25 minutes remaining, then abruptly scored 3 times in less than 10 minutes.

Randy Pasqua scored for Maryville by an assist from Will Way and Gary Elrod. Scott Godwin and Dan Mock were defensive standouts, with strong support from Dave Frannsen, Charley Blair, and Bucky Buckwalter.

Perhaps the real story of the game was the goalie work of Dave Osborne. He was injured early in the game when an opponent kicked his foot as he was punting the ball out of bounds. Dave completed the game: his contributions included 5 saves in 1 on 1 situations (that is, fast breaks where one player with the ball is shooting against one goalie). It was not until returning to Maryville than an examination found a bone chip and a possible fracture in Osborne's foot.

An intrasquad scrimmage will be played Sat., Oct. 2. Maryville plays its first home game Wed., Oct. 6, at 3:30 P.M. against the University of the South.

Keith Goodwin, split end for the Scots, set up the first score in last week's game with this reverse play. Sam Horner followed with a one yard plunge into the end zone. The Scots were foiled in their bid to upset the Bulldogs by a 21—20 score.

Nuke reactor discussed here

On October 12, at 7:30 p.m., the Community Issues and Values Committee and the League of Women Voters of Maryville-Alcoa will co-sponsor a program titled "On the Road to Energy Independence—The Breeder Reactor."

The program, which will be held in the Maryville College Theatre, will feature a presentation by Roger Roemmich of Oak Ridge Associated Universities and the Breeder Reactor Corporation. This is an organization of some 730 U.S. electric systems supporting the development of the Clinch River Project, an experimental electricity-producing breeder reactor scheculed for construction in the Oak Ridge area.

Roemmich will present a twenty-minute lecture-demonstration using models and audio-visual media to depict the process of producing energy from the atom within the breeder reactor. Following the demonstration there will be an open question and answer session regarding the use of nuclear power to meet our future energy needs.

In view of the rising concern about the environmental viability of nuclear power and the growing realization that alternative energy sources will have widespread applications in the not too distant future, this question and answer period provides an excellent opportunity for the community to ask for clarification of goals, methods of implementation, and prospects for diversification on the part of U.S. electric power corporations.

Young makes waves

Dr. David P. Young, Title III coordinator for Maryville College and visiting professor in the zoology department of the University of Tennessee Knoxville, will discuss futuristics on the first of three taped programs for WUOT-FM radio.

The first program, to be aired October 6 at 7 p.m., will also include Gil Francis, WUOT public affairs director, and Ann Bitzas, teacher of futuristics at Karns High.

The broadcasting dates for the other programs taped with Francis only, entitled "Energy for the Earth" and "Biomedical Ethics," will be announced later.

Sharon Brown has recently been named secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation.

Brown elected to TCWSF post

Sharon Brown, instructor in the Department of Health and Physical Education at Maryville College, was recently elected secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation (TCWSF).

Beginning January 1, 1977 Brown will serve on the governing board of TCWSF for a two year term. Brown has served on the board since coming to Maryville College in 1974.

TCWSF determines sports guidelines and policies for women's athletics in Tennessee.

Farmhouse hits home stretch

A full report of the status of the Brown-Thompson House (formerly known as the "Farmhouse") will be presented to the entire community after October 18, 1976.

According to Dr. J. W. Nichols, there is one small detail that has to be considered on that date by the general session of Blount County Court. Briefly it concerns two Blount county committees, the Building & Grounds Committee and the Budget & Finance Committee. They are taking to the general session court meeting a recommendation that one area of the land (including the land on which the log house sits), be designated as a historic wayside park and that an organization take the responsibility of restoring and maintaining the house.

Dr. Nichols further stated that "it looks as if the log house has been saved and will be restored on the present site."

Scots stomp Centre

by Robert Boone

Once the ice is broken, things come a lot easier.

The Maryville College Fighting Scots broke the ice at Danville, Ky., Saturday by slapping the Centre Colonels with a 17—9 setback for their first win in fifteen outings.

The previously undefeated Colonels had only allowed opponents 44 yards rushing per game and were not scored on. The statistics will have to be rearranged after Saturday's game with Maryville.

The Maryville College rushing attack, which improved vastly over last week's performance, gained 291 yards on the ground. Sophomore Alvin Nance, seeing action in his first varsity game, was a pleasant surprise. Nance repeatedly found gapping holes in the Centre line and ground out 124 yards on 17 tries. It's been a while since a back has gained over a 100 yards for Maryville. Keith Goodwin and Joe Lombardo also contributed big performances running the ball.

The passing attack came up short with just 11 yards on a single completion in 13 attempts.

A sticky Maryville defense led by Tom Duling, Lee Taylor, and Ken Hannah stymied Centre to only 88 yards rushing. Failing to move the ball on the ground, Centre retreated to the air for 144 yards passing. The Scots struck first and never trailed in the game. On its first possession, Maryville quickly marched 49 yards with the ball before stalling. Tim L. Kelly's 35 yard field goal, which was the first score on the Colonels, put Maryville ahead to stay.

In the second quarter, Maryville jumped up by 10 points. Keith Goodwin, following a key block thrown by Chip Krug, took a reverse and nimbly raced 35 yards through the Colonel defenders for a touchdown and a 10—0 lead as the fans roared.

Before the half ended, Centre scored on a six yard pass from Roy Beard to John Clontz. A charging defensive line foiled the Colonels try for a two-point conversion.

Centre struck first in the third period with a 27 yard field goal by Jim Akin, which closed the gap to 10—9.

Cornerman Mike Smith then made the play of the game. He intercepted a Centre aerial and scampered to the five-yard line before being knocked out of bounds. Joe Lombardo then put the icing on the cake with a one yard plunge. Kelly's kick upped Scoring: Maryville—Tim Kelly 35 Field goal; Keith Goodwin 35 run (Kelly kick); Joe Lombardo 1 run (Kelly kick).

Student robbed Sunday

A routine study break turned into assault and robbery last Sunday night for student Ricky Smith as he walked outside behind Carnegie Hall.

Smith, who was up late studying, went outside at around 2:00 a.m. and sat on the bench halfway down the steps behind Carnegie. Smith says three men riding in a white Chevelle with mag wheels stopped and asked if anyone on campus with a pick-up truck could help him move something.

After saying he didn't know Smith turned back to the dormitory. Just after reaching the top of the steps he was hit in the back of the head and knocked to the ground by one of the men who threatened to stab him if he made any noise. After blindfolding, tying, and gagging him they demanded his room key and led him to his first floor Carnegie room.

Smith says they left him in his room still bound and gagged after taking his stereo and speakers, two watches, his room and car keys, a duffel bag, a lighter, and some cigarettes. After managing to wriggle out of the ropes he telephoned Police and campus security officers.

Police are still investigating. College Maintenance was called to change the lock on Smith's door.

Two similar incidents have occured at the edge of campus near Carnegie Hall in the past three years.

In 1973 Maryville College senior Richard Gaunt was robbed at gun-point behind the Chapel, and a senior girl successfully fought off abduction and rape at the corner of Court Street and Miller Avenue.

Whitt, Young California bound

Kathy Whitt of Kingsport, Tennessee, and Sharon Youngs of Gainesville, Georgia, will be travelling to La Jolla, California on October 9—10. They have been chosen to represent the college at the La Jolla Presbyterian Church, when the congregation will be kicking off a $200,000 capital gifts campaign.

According to Raymond Brahams, $50,000 of the $200,000 that the La Jolla church will be raising will go to Maryville College to set up an endowed scholarship fund. The expected amount is between $200 and $2500 available annually. Brahams further stated that preference will be given to those students planning on church related vocations.

Whitt and Youngs will be speaking at the morning worship services on October 10, and one of the two will return each of the next two years during the pledge payment period of the campaign. These visits are at the invitation of the congregation, and are paid for by the La Jolla church.

Pastor of the church is Rev. Harry D. Brahams, a 1950 graduate of Maryville College. His wife, La Donna Baylor Brahams, graduated from Maryville in 1953.

Coffee tea or the ACC?

Making things count

Over the course of the past several years the All College Council has gone through some hard times. This is especially true of the Main Council where more than one person has born frustration and disappointment while watching their well made plans and ideas go up in smoke.

This, however, is not the time or place to review those events. Rather, we need to let by-gones be by-gones and stop and attempt to appraise the present.

Today was the first regular meeting of the Main Council for the 1976-77 year. For most this is an insignificant event. We are barely willing to stop long enough to take a glance at the ACC. In our failure to do this we have over looked the far reaching and often dynamic effect the ACC has upon the college community.

Second to the Board of Directors, the ACC is the focal point and plays a major part in the decision making concerning curriculum, athletics, cultural life, religious life, residential life, academic standards, and many others. Simply because the Council is concerned with many facets of the community should be enough reason to make people stand up and notice.

People do not stand up, however, and in the past the ACC has been blamed for, among other things, being ineffective and unaware: essentially a do nothing body of students, faculty, administrators and staff. As always when the time comes it is easier to point a finger rather than lift a helping hand.

Hopefully this type of attitude will change over the coming year. The Council itself has taken big steps this year by devising a flow chart for committee reports and responsibilities to the Main Council. It has been in weak and ineffective committees where part of the problem has occured.

With the flow chart the committees should become more viable, enlightened and responsive groups. Responsive not only to the ACC but also to the members of the campus community. Effective and willing committee members will make for a much more conscientious and straightforward main Council.

This year is one of transition for the ACC Main Council. Dr. Copeland's retirement will hopefully be used as a tool for meaningful dialogue with the entire campus community. James Yancey as co-chairman with Dr. Copeland will bring the necessary concern and experience to the ACC.

What can the non-involved student do to make things count? As a minimal gesture he/she can be both concerned and express his/her concern to the ACC and its member committees. The ACC is a participatory government. Then ACC exists and functions best when the participation is both give and take.

Cultural column

by Donna Baines

A stream of dancers, musicians, and actors pour out their talents on Knoxville's stages every night of the month. This being the case, it should be a crime for Maryville College students to sit around with nothing to do.

After a few choice speakers and plays passed students by last year, the ACC decided to pull the Cultural Life Committee out of the mothballs. Therefore, at the beginning of each month a column in the Echo will bring to light a few of the area's cultural events with the aim of supplying the campus with some information and incentive.

If something interests you, and you don't have transportation, we recommend that you join with some friends who are also interested (it may be possible to obtain group rates). Then get in touch with a faculty member connected with the field.

This column will inform you of plays, films, concerts and lectures, and encourage the use of the educational T.V., but it cannot give everything. We ask you to check the newspaper for local theatre and drive-in shows, and any other attractions that are not covered here.

Alfred Hitchcock's Shadow of a Doubt, October 5 (free)
Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore, October 17 the film version of O'neill's The Iceman Cometh, October 24
Olympiad I and II, October 27
Every Man for Himself and God Against All, October 31.

Several outstanding artists will be performing at the UT music hall (If you are interested in any of these shows, please talk to a faculty member). Among the programs to be presented are Alicia de Larrocha, the renowned Spanish pianist, October 9; selections of Medieval and Renaissance Chamber music, October 13; and the Guarneri String Quartet, October 22. All shows begin at 8:15 p.m.

Until October 9, a graduate thesis in ceramics will be on display in Gallery II in the University Center.

On October 25, Helen North from Swarthmore College will talk about "The Wise Women of Ancient Greece" at 8:00 p.m. in the Carousel Theatre. Harold Stephens will discuss "The Role of Black Arts" at the Black Cultural Center (located in the University Center) at 8:00 p.m. on October 13.

The Knoxville Civic Coliseum also offers a wide selection of events. A ticket may be obtained for any program by writing to:

Name of Event
Civic Auditorium
Box 2603
Knoxville, Tennessee 37901

Include the cost of the show (prices usually range from $4-$7) and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The musical, Don't Bother Me I Can't Cope, will open at the coliseum on October 2 at 8:15 p.m. Tickets start at $4.50.

Letters to the Echo

Dear Editor,

The Dorm III House Council would like to take this opportunity to thank the student body for their support of Dorm III's first annual watermelon bust.

Needless to say, the bust was a successful social and financial venture with Miss Kay White winner of the beauty contest and an all expenses paid evening with the person of her choice to the Westside Dinner Theatre sometime before the end of the fall term.

Special thanks to our dorm parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rick McGuire, and Bob Miller of SAGA who assisted the dorm in every way possible. Future events sponsored by the dorm will include a Homecoming car wreck, the raffle of an "Ultimate Evening", movies, and other social events throughout the academic year.

Sincerely,
The Dorm III
House Council
Bill Brewer,
President

Echo sets candidate profiles

In the coming weeks prior to the November election, the Echo will be printing a series of issue profiles.

These profiles have been compiled and made available to the Echo by Common Cause—a Nader based, non-partisan, non-profit citizens lobby dedicated to the improvement of our government.

In preparing these profiles, Common Cause compiled issue materials released directly by the candidates Ford and Carter and records of their positions as reported by various news media available to Common Cause.

"Although the source and date of all positions ascribed to the candidates are not attributed in these profiles," states Common Cause, "source materials are on file in the Washington D.C. Common Cause office." Direct quotes are frequently used usually whenever applicable.

Common Cause concludes that "These profiles do not purport to be inclusive but merely include information gathered by Common Cause thus far in the campaigns of candidates Ford and Carter."

Next week the Echo will feature abortion, gun control, and crime prevention.

School of Dance offers classes for all

by Veronica Sawdon

Cheryl Van Metre conducts a practice session at the Van Metre School of Dance. The school is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall on the Maryville Campus.

The third floor of Fayerweather Hall sees more action today than ever before. It now hosts the Van Metre School of Dance: Home of the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet (MACB).

Cheryl Van Metre, director and instructor, and Sarajune Owen, assistant instructor, enthusiastically describe the activities of the School.

The School is separate from M.C., but rents its facilities from the College. As it is a part of our campus, however, the School welcomes college students to enter its curriculum.

Classes are provided for all individuals with a desire to practice and learn with devotion. All Ballet classes follow the Royal Academy of Dancing Syllabus (London).

Beginners courses are offered for preschoolers to adults. Adult beginners start with an exercise program geared to getting the body in the physical condition necessary for ballet, and lead up to the various steps and poses that initiate the dance.

Advanced courses lead to "pre-professional" status and/or positions in the MACB Company.

Men's classes are also offered. Mrs. Van Metre emphasizes, however, that these classes are "not for everyone." Scholarships are available for men if they show ability, strength, interest, and willingness to work. This includes helping put together productions throughout the year. The men's ballet class meets Mondays at 6:15 P.M.

Classes have already begun in Fayerweather, but registration will continue through the month of October. Classes are not contracted, but the ballet season is in progress from September to May.

Individuals may choose classes meeting Monday—Friday (Saturday is reserved for the MACB), from 3:30 p.m. on, and may opt the number of lessons they take per week. One or two are suggested for beginners. It might be noted that fees for each class go down as the number of classes taken go up. The adult beginners class meets Thrusday at 4:30 P.M.

For those interested in Jazz dancing, a class under the instruction of Jan Dean will meet Mondays at 4:20 P.M.

Much more excitement is in the air for the MACB. This summer, it will be the host of the International Academy of Dance, with Anna-Marie and David Holmes. The Holmeses, directors of the Academy, were born in Canada and studied in Russia.

In the near future, The Van Metre School might become a part of the Fine Arts Department. This proposal was put before the Instructional Programs Committee last spring, Dr. Harter said, and was favorably received. If all stipulations are worked out, Maryville College may soon be able to offer a major in Ballet through the Van Metre School of Dance and the Fine Arts Dept.

Surprising things are happening on the third floor of the Student Center this year. Why not turn up and take a peek? . . . .and let's dance!

Fac wives prepare fair

The Fifth Annual Harvest Craft Festival, sponsored by the Maryville College Faculty Women's Club, will be held in the Chapel Colonnade on Saturday, October 9, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. The event is co-chaired by Mrs. George Kramer and Mrs. Richard Taylor.

The proceeds go to support the student scholarship fund. The festival features fifty-five craftsmen from Ohio, North Carolina, and Tennessee.

Besides many crafts there will be plants, homebaked goods, home-canned jams, jellies, and pickles. Lunch will be available and local cloggers and instrumentalists will provide free entertainment.

Students, faculty, and staff are cordially invited to participate in the festival before attending the 2 p.m. football game.

Take a dive

A Basic Scuba Diving course, designed to establish diving as a fundamental recreational activity, has been added to the schedule of continuing education courses offered at Maryville College this fall.

The certified 10-week course will begin with the essentials of skin diving and progress through the technical aspects of scuba diving. It will include both in-the-pool instruction and classroom presentations.

The class will meet four hours a week from 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning Tuesday, October 5. Tuesday's classroom sessions will meet in Room 162A of the P.E. Building with Thursday's meetings held in the College pool.

Cost of the course is $67 which will cover tuition, tank and regulator. Other equipment may be furnished by the student or rented.

Persons successfully completing the classroom work, pool exercises and three open water dives will be certified by the Professional Association of Diving Instructors (PADI), a nonprofit educational organization and the largest diving instructional agency in the world. The open dives can be made either in Norris and Jefferson City quarries or in Florida on an optional trip planned for interested students who complete the course (students must pay their own expenses for the trip).

Thomas R. Martin of Knoxville, an experienced scuba diver and certified instructor for the internationally known PADI, will teach the MC continuing education course.

The Lady Scots Volleyball team traveled to Cookville to participate in the Tennessee Tech Invitational Oct. 1.

The Tournament consisted of 11 teams including U.T., Moorehead State, University of Tennessee at Martin, and Carson Newman. Competition consisted of each team playing twenty games. Maryville was victorious over Freed Hardeman and Austin-Peay State University.

With only one year of experience, the Volleyball Team will have to work on some weak points. However, Coach Brown boasts of the spirit and attitude of this year's team.

The tournament gave Coach Brown a good look at her team and helped the squad gain experience through tough competition. Maryville will visit Berea College in Kentucky this weekend for another tournament.

the count to 17—9 and Maryville locked up a long awaited victory.

Saturday's win was a necessity for everyone, especially Jim Jordan. "The win was great. The mental confidence it will give the team is unmeasurable. We feel we can play with anyone on our schedule."

And what about the players? One would have had to have been on the team to understand the emotion that was involved. Coach Jordan left the field on the shoulders of his players.

Much appreciation also was felt for the spirit and enthusiasm that the Band, cheerleaders, and fans showed at Center.

Both teams the Scots have faced thus far have been undefeated, and this Saturday is no exception. If Maryville continues its big plays, Hampden-Sidney could be an upset victim. The Scots would love nothing more than to beat Hampden-Sidney come Saturday.

Martin, who is a public health major at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, has been teaching a scuba diving course at UTK for the past year. He transfered to UTK from Florida Institute of Technology in Jensen Beach, Florida, where he was an oceanography major with a minor in marine biology. He worked part time as an evirnomental diver for a nuclear power plant.

At FIT Martin received his PADI certification under the direction of Jim Woodberry, inventor of the Cryrogenetic lung (used for breathing liquid oxygen under water).

Enrollment in the course at Maryville is limited to 20 students. To register, go by the Registrar's Office, first floor, Anderson Hall; or for information only, call Mrs. Thelma Green, 982-6412 or 546-6912.

Prior to that, he spent two years of active duty as a Navy third class scuba diver, stationed in San Diego, California. His division's missions ranged from explosive ordinance division work to the astronaut splash-downs in the Pacific.

Chapman talks on Tellico dig

Jefferson Chapman, research assistant professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, will present a slide lecture on archaeological studies in the Little Tennessee Valley on Wednesday, October 20, at Maryville College.

The lecture, sponsored by the MC Freshman Inquiry Group in Sociology-Anthropology, is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the Theatre. It will cover Chapman's field work in Tellico where he has been field supervisor since 1969. He is currently involved there in excavations on Calloway Island in the Little "T" River, a nearby Indian mound, and other Cherokee sites.

The visiting speaker has done archaeological field work in North Carolina and Tennessee since 1959. He previously taught at Webb School of Knoxville where he was also chairman of the social studies department from 1968-71.

Chapman holds a B.A. degree in anthropology from Yale University, a masters of arts and teaching in history of education from Brown University, and the masters and Ph. D. degrees in anthropology from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Nuke discussion breeds rift

by David Boyd and Tim Rahn

"We're facing the most critical problem since World War II."

These were the words of Roger Roemmich in a discussion of the breeder type reactor nuclear power plant in a program sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Community Issues and Values Committee in the Chapel last evening.

The dilemma Roemmich speaks of is the rapid depletion of fossil fuels and the push by the United States for energy independence.

Roemmich cited that most energy experts feel that coal supplies are sufficient for 300 to 700 years. Oil and natural gas, however, are judged by the experts to last another 10 to 30 years with 20 years as the most agreed upon figure.

Roemmich, of the Oak Ridge Associated Universities and the Breeder Reactor Corporation, pointed to the breeder reactor as the most effective means to solve the dilemma.

The breeder reactor differs from the conventional nuclear reactor in the fuel that is used in the production of the energy. Conventional reactors use uranium 235 (an uneven isotope), since it is a readily available source of highly fissionable material, as are all uneven isotopes. The present supply of uranium 235 is very limited—in fact only .7% of the world's uranium is of this uneven isotope.

Essentially this means that uses for the even isotope, uranium 238, need to be considered in nuclear reactors. Roemmich says this is where the breeder type reactor fits in.

A breeder reactor uses two uranium isotopes in energy production. Uranium 235 is the initiator of the reaction converting 238 into plutonium 239 which itself is a very fissionable material either in the breeder reactor or another type reactor.

This type breeder reactor, as in the proposed Clinch River reactor, is referred to as the Liquid Metal Fast Breeder Reactor (LMFBR). In this process, the heat exchange is made by sodium, a metal with a high melting and boiling point. These properties allow the reactor to be operated without the normal high pressure core cooling system inherent in present nuclear reactors which use water as the heat exchanger.

Following this presentation, Roemmich answered questions from the floor. During this time he stressed the breeder reactor's ability for "more fuel produced than consumed."

Roemmich, when asked about the economics of nuclear energy as compared to alternative energies replied: "Energy is an expensive business. In nuclear energy, the money goes to building. In solar energy [and other alternative energies,] the money goes to research."

Roemmich made this last point in reference to the amounts of money that various energy programs receive from the federal government. In particular, the reference was to the larger sum of money that nuclear energy development and building receives in subsidies.

"We encourage the use of the others. [alternative energies] If you can—do so," stated Roemmich.

Throughout his presentation and the questions following Roemmich stressed the safety and non-polluting (to the air) characteristics of the breeder type reactor.

Observations following by those attending the program thought that Roemmich used a "sell" line in his presentation. Martha Anderson, however, commented "I was interested. I liked it. I was sold on it [,the breeder type reactor.]"

Lynn Rumbley stated that she "just didn't like the way everyone else's facts were false."

Others reacted more specifically to the presentation.

Bernie McGraw, student at the University of Tennessee, stated that Roemmich was "very tactfull in avoiding the major issues that are deterrent to the use of nuclear energy."

McGraw further siad, "He even had the nerve to imply that the dispersal of highly radioactive materials in a populated area would pose

Dole lashes at Carter campaign contributions

by Ed Loper

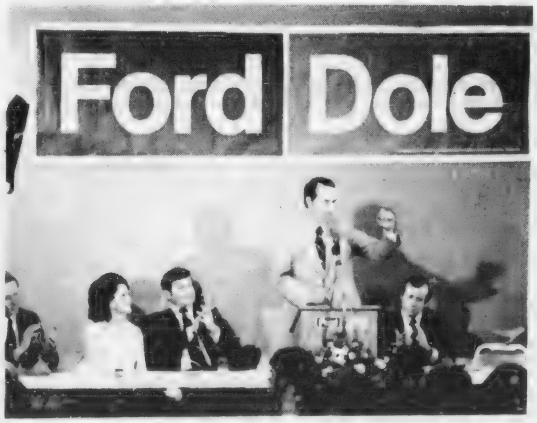
Republican Vice Presidential nominee Robert Dole delivered one of his hardest hitting speeches last night against Jimmy Carter strongly implying deceit and lack of descretion with the American people.

"I am glad to be in Blount County because I want to make some blunt remarks."

Dole, speaking to a packed house at Maryville College, told of inconsistancies between what Carter has told the American public and what the people who know Jimmy Carter say. In the areas of campaign finance and civil rights the stories do not agree. He quoted Carter as saying that no records were kept regarding corporate contributions to his 1970 gubernatorial campaign. Carter's accountant has said that complete records were kept including detailed computer printouts.

Dole drew the conclusion that Carter lied: " . . . Since Mr. Harden was the accountant, maybe his recollection of how the records were handled is more accurate, or maybe Mr. Harden and Mr. Carter didn't have time to coordinate their stories."

Dole told the Blount County Republicans that Carter is not consistant in his stories of racial liberality. Mr. Carter has made a point of speaking about his involvement in an experiment in racial integration long before it was fashionable to do so. The people who were involved in that project say that Jimmy Carter never visited it. Again Dole inferred that Carter lied.



Concluding the speech, Dole doubted Carter's plan to bring new faces into government. He believes the "faces you never hear of can never be effective:

"Can a Secretary of State we never heard of help to keep us at peace—deal with Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Hua in Peking?

"Do our taxpayers want to send their noney to Washington to be played with by people we never heard of? It's bad enough to send it where you do know the people."

From all this Dole concluded that the American public has the "right to expect better than Jimmy Carter. On the other hand America can be proud of Gerald Ford. He is of "known quality and proven quality."

"Stop" on the go

The production of "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off", is working toward its November 18, 19, and 20 opening dates.

Both director and cast members are optimistic about the progress of the play.Tom Jones, director, is working with Dan Kinsinger, music director, and Elaine Armfield, choreographer. This week, the cast will be assisted by Ron Foreman, a professional pantomimic, who also spoke this morning in the Community Issues and Values program.

Jones reported that the cast will be working approximately four hours with Foreman.

Jones further said that "The show is a very athletic one—all the actors go home very tired." The play is staged on a platform, where the actors become the scenery. Not only is there dancing, but the actors become various inanimate objects, such as machines and buses.

John Morton, playing the part of Littlechap, the hero, is also optimistic about the play, stating, "I think it's going to be a good show. I think the students are going to like it because, for once, it's a comedy."

"It's a great experience in imagination, because every character gets to develop his or hers a little differently," says Ruth Wilbanks, playing opposite Morton. Referring to the extensive choreography, she further remarked,"It's also the most fun phys-ed class I've ever been in!"

Ruth Cartlidge, a member of the chorus, plays the part of a Russian woman. After agreeing that the attitude of the cast was good, Ruth went on to say that "It's a fun play. It's totally ridiculous because the characters are totally stereotyped."

Tickets for the first night are already sold out. There are still tickets available for the 19 and 20 dates.

MC receives Kodak grant

Maryville College has received a $5,000 undesignated grant from the Tennessee Eastman Company (TEC) of Kingsport through Eastman Kodak Company's 1976 Education Aid Program, MC President Joseph J. Copeland announced today.

William P. Tilley Jr., professional and office personnel manager for TEC, was on the Maryville campus October 7 to present Dr. Copeland with the check.

Maryville College is one of 12 southern institutions receiving special grants sponsored by TEC and one of 42 schools nationally sharing $3.9 million in special grants. These funds are made available to help institutions revise and interrelate their academic programs to meet the challenge of changing times with new programs and specialized facilities.

Commenting on Kodak's grant to Maryville, Dr. Copeland said, "Through the years Tennessee Eastman Company has been of great benefit to private colleges in this area of Tennessee. We here at Maryville are deeply appreciative of being included in the company's educational aid program. Their $5,000 gift this year will move us forward in our ultimate objective of receiving in excess of $400,000 in undesignated gifts for the 1976-77 current budget."

In all, 230 colleges and universities across the country this year are sharing a total of $4.9 million in grants of three types—direct, research and major capital and special grants. In the past 10 years, Kodak has contributed $40.2 million to more than 700 colleges and universities.

Interpreters get grant

Maryville College has received a $3,000 gift for the deaf interpreter program from four Williamsburg, KY, residents.

The four include Justin Creech, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Young and Mrs. Clara Sexton. All are officers of the C&C Construction Company of Williamsburg. Their gift will be used for three $1,000 scholarships for interpreting majors and is the first made to the College specifically for this purpose.

"Mr. Creech, Mr. and Mrs. Young and Mrs. Sexton wanted to make it possible for deserving young students to serve people less fortunate than themselves," stated Irma (Mrs. Dewey) Young of Knoxville, instructor in the MC deaf interpreter program, in announcing the gift.

"These scholarships will enable students who might not otherwise attend Maryville College and pursue the interpreting program to do so, and we are deeply indebted to these friends for making this possible through their generous support," she added. Mrs. Young also coordinates the program for both deaf and hearing students.

The deaf interpreter program at Maryville, which began its third year this fall, has expanded very rapidly and now has 17 majors, according to Mrs. Young. Maryville College awarded the world's first Bachelor of Arts degree in interpreting for the deaf at commencement last May under this program.

MC Search committee holds interviews

In an all day meeting at the Holiday Inn yesterday, the Search Committee met with three of the top candidates applying for the position of president of Maryville College.

Kit Williamson student member of the committee reported that they will "definitely be asking one applicant and his wife to come to Maryville in the near future."

Anderson will be available for exposure to faculty, students, and administrative workers while on campus.

He will be available for marked that the results of the day-long interview are not final. "The Committee is still looking at others seriously."

WW elections are Friday

The voting for the Who's Who elections will take place on October 15. Seniors will receive their ballots in their post office box and deposit them in the ballot box in the post office.

The list of students who are eligible for Who's Who and their activities will be found in the following places: Post Office, P.E. building, Anderson Hall, Sutton Science Center, Fine Arts Center, and Fayerweather Hall.

Annual benefit concert planned

Florie Cartlidge and Emilie Williams, duo-pianists, will present a concert October 15, 8:15 P.M. in the Music Hall.

The concert is for the benefit of the Kidney Foundation of East Tennessee and is specifically to help fund a Continuing Fellowship for the screening of renal disease in this area. This is the third such concert given by Cartlidge and Williams, who have a wide-ranging repertoire.

In the spirit of the bicentennial, this year's concert will offer music by several American composers: Gershwin, Porter, Rogers, Gould, Haufrecht, and Creston.

In addition, the program will include Saint-Saens' Carnaval des Animaux, complete with Ogden Nash's poetic commentary on the music. Nash's humorous verses will be read by Randy Prewitt of WTVK-TV.

Haufrecht's Square Set is based on three country dances: a clog (which will be danced by the Country Freedom clog dancers), a reel (featuring dancers from MC), and a jig (with the members of the Junior Company of the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet).

There will be no admission charge. Gifts will be solicited for the Continuing Fellowship. The Cartlidge-Williams piano duo has given concerts in Georgia and Michigan as well as at MC. Their interest in the Kidney Foundation began with Cartlidge's successful kidney transplant three years ago. The concert will provide colorful entertainment for the evening and the opportunity to help hundreds of people in East Tennessee who have undetected kidney disease.

Frosh posts filled

The class officers are: Charles Washington, president; Melinda Shannon, vice-president; and Michelle Jones, secretary-treasurer.

Washington says he will work well with the other class officers, since he and Shannon are both from the same town and he and Jones are good friends.

One of the officer's ideas is to improve the student center or turn the old infirmary into a student center. They feel there needs to be a place that students can go and have fun without spending money.

Dracula shows

Old Dracula, a satire on the level of Mel Brooks's Young Frankenstein, will be showing October 16 at 7:20 and 9:20 p.m. in the Chapel.

Admission for the film will be $1. David Niven and Teresa Graves star.

Weavers loom in student center

by Laurie Allen

The rollicking juke box, the pool hustlers, and the metallic rattle and crackle of money changing hands in Fayerweather Hall is an activity of a different nature, the activity of the imaginations—the artist.

Behind the brightly colored doors of the second floor are rooms filled with life in all its variance: publishers, counselors, organizations, and painters. Now another room is developing itw own unique personality. Maryville is adding weaving to its curriculum.

In only its second term of operation, the weaving studio sports four tapestry looms, thread fabrics, warping mills, and eight floor looms, six having been added only a few weeks ago.

The equipment and development of this and other craft appreciation courses were made possible under the Title III fund, a government fund designed to establish advanced programs in the crafts.

Weaving, long considered strictly a utilitarian craft, has now come into its own artistically. It is a folk art familiar to the East Tennessee area and is fittingly being taught here at Maryville at the foot of the Smokey Mountains.

The hand-roughened flavor of the Appalachians mingled with the slick refinement of contemporary art makes this medium most diverse and exciting one. Color, texture, control, and design are painstakenly planned and executed, from the simplest placemat to the most elaborately conceived wall hanging. Even such purposeful items as blankets, pillows, or chair coverings become woven objects of symbolism and fantasy.

It is a media that takes time and dedication; it builds either patience or frustration.

The first project for the students in this course was to put together their own looms from the boxes and packing crates full of pieces of the new arrivals. In the mind-boggling task of sorting 140 lbs. of wood and wire, bolting, screwing, and clipping parts together, and sanding and finishing the bulky structure, a true understanding of the loom and its function was realized. Until any artistic concept can be mastered, there must be an understanding between artist and media.

There is much to prepare and much to remember before the actual fun of weaving can start. And even then it is a slow, tedious process while the design emerges thread by thread.

A painter or potter can get an instant overall idea of what his piece will look like simply by stepping back. A weaver must wait until his piece is completed, or nearly so, before he can truly appreciate hwat he has created. If something is wrong, all the time and effort that went into the piece is wasted and the weaver must take it apart and repair the flaw. There can be no greater satisfaction, however, than intertwining color and fabric into a beautiful, personal, hand-created cloth.

The looms are finished, and now the basic weaving techniques are being learned and practiced. The artists then have a historical research project to do, to better master the complexities of their loom and thread, and finish their term with a final contemporary project of their own design and use.

The process is time consuming, but the value of the experience far exceeds the hours spent, and the enthusiasm and interest do not cease with the final bell. Looms are squeezed into dormitory rooms, threads are hand dyed for the perfect desired quality, rugs are hooked and tapestries woven as personal projects.

For artist and observer alike fabric is no longer lifeless mass-produced textile, but is instead a pulsating array of color, texture, and design woven by hand and heart into one-of-a-kind artistry.

Visitors enjoy a display of Christmas crafts at the 5th annual Faculty Women's Craft Fair held in the Chapel collonade last Saturday.

Rom reviews plans

To provide Maryville College students with fun things to do as a break from academic routine, the Social Committee is planning a wide and large variety of activities this year: some on campus, some out of town, and one or two out of state.

According to new Social Director Kristy Rom, they will range from contests, dances, and movies here at the College to trips to Gatlinburg, Atlanta, and the mountains.

The most immediate event is a showing of Old Dracula in the Theatre this Saturday night.

Other October happenings include a trip to the Crafts Fair at the Knoxville Civic Coliseum sometime between the 18th and the 23rd, with Assistant Professor of Music Robert Bonham in charge. Then on Sunday afternoon October 24, a potluck picnic will be held at Cades Cove. Cars will leave at 1:00 p.m. Those interested should bring picnic foods such as sandwiches, cheese and crackers or a salad to serve four to five persons, and frisbees or other sports equipment for activity on the open field.

Winding up October activities will be Homecoming Weekend, October 30—31, which will include a semi-formal in the dining room, a square dance, a barbecue, and float-making and pumpkin-carving contests with prizes, with a parade of the floats through downtown Maryville.

Plans for November include an all-day trip to Chattanooga, with shopping and dining at the Chattanooga Choo Choo, the famous Southern Railway Terminal converted to a restaurant. A shopping-sightseeing trip to Gatlinburg is also planned.

For the rest of the year the Committee is tentatively planning a trip to Lennox Square in Atlanta just before Christmas vacation, a ski trip, a midnight swim, and a hay ride.

Director Rom hopes students will support these programs, and give suggestions for others.

Piedmont Chamber Orchestra will perform here October 22

Nichlas Harsanyi, director

The acclaimed Piedmont Chamber Orchestra from Winston-Salem, NC, will present a Performing Artists Concert on Friday, October 22 at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel/Auditorium.

Admission for all College personnel is by ID only.

The Piedmont Chamber Orchestra, a professional ensemble of distinction, Nicholas Harsanyi, Music Director and Conductor, was formed in 1968 with a Rockefeller Foundation grant to the North Carolina School of the Arts, the Southern Federation of State Art Agencies, and the North Carolina School of the Arts' Foundation.

In collaboration with the Moravian Music Foundation the Orchestra participated with great success in the inaugural festivities of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington. The 25-member orchestra has a basic strength of nineteen strings, augmented by solo winds, brass and percussion when needed. Based at the North Carolina School of the Arts, the core of the Orchestra is drawn from the faculty of the School of Music.

Nicholas Harsanyi, the Hungarian-born conductor and Dean of the School of Music of the North Carolina School of the Arts, has made distinguished contributions to American musical life. He was the founder, Music Director and Conductor of the celebrated Princeton Chamber Orchestra and recently served as Music Director of the Interlochen Arts Academy Orchestra. Maestro Harsanyi has toured the major center of the United States, Canada, and Europe to high critical acclaim.

In addition to the nationally-known Clarion Wind Wuintet, which is in residence at the School, artist-faculty players include Vartan Manoogian (Co-Concertmaster), former Concertmaster, Orchestra de la Suisse Romande; Veda Reynolds (Co-Concertmaster), former Assistant Concertmaster with the Philadelphia Orchestra and first violinist of the Philadelphia String Quartet; Elaine Richey, violinist, winner of the prestigious Naumburg Competition; Sally Peck, violist, formerly principal violist of the Utah Symphony, and soloist; Denis Brott, cellist, internationally known soloist with major orchestras, winner of the International Cello Competition in Munich, and teaching assistant to Piatigorsky; Lynn Peters, bass, formerly with the Detroit and other major Symphonies; and Manager, Emile Simonel, violist, formerly with the Detroit Symphony, New York String Sextet, and Claremont Quartet. Other members of the Orchestra have been associated with leading symphony orchestras and chamber music ensembles, many of whom are soloists in their own right.

The repertoire embraces the legacy of instrumental music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries as well as an increasing number of twentieth century compositions devoted to the singular beauty and flexibility of the small orchestra.

Universities put lid on enrollment

by Jeff Sorensen

(CPS)—Although tuition is soaring, birth rates are falling and the "case against college" is proclaimed by politicians and professors, few universities are being forced to beg for students.

In fact, state schools are turning away more qualified applicants than ever. Faced with tight budgets and innumerable applications, a growing list of colleges is using strict enrollment limits to dam the tide of students.

Administrators at the University of Minnesota fear enrollment will reach 67,000 by 1981 (enrollment is 57,000 now). So the regents voted recently to limit the school to 59,000 students next fall—and to 61,000 in 1981.

This move will "divert" about 3,400 students from the university in 1977 and 1978, according to Richard Tall, director of university relations. "There was some feeling in the state that we should admit all qualified applicants, regardless of the cost," Tall said, "but without the controls we would need about $7 million more for buildings and faculty."

Tall explained that enrollments will begin falling in the 1980's when the low birth rate of the last decade is reflected in fewer numbers of college age people. He predicts that by 1990 enrollment will be about the same as in 1976.

The story is similar at other schools that are limiting enrollment for the first time this year or planning to do so

'Be kind to Earl Butz' week

Last week Earl Butz stepped down as Secretary of Agriculture. For the small American farmer this could be the best thing that has happened in years. For too long the people that can least afford it have been subjected to large scale "agribuisness" tactics and have been stomped by Soviet grain sales engineered by Secretary Butz. It looks as if our farmers can breathe a sigh of relief for the moment. That, however is not the significance of Earl Butz's untimely departure.

The real sadness of Butz's resignation is in the reason why he had to leave office. He stepped down not because of his ability, or lack of it, as Agriculture leader, but because of his ability to offend minority groups in private conversation. He was judged on lack of discretion and not on lack of professional skill.

Butz told an obscene racial joke to a member of the press—"quasi-newsman," who in an earlier life was not well known for a great deal of discretion either. It is a safe bet that these types of jokes are readily available on any press plane. In recent years, the White House itself has been known to hear a few of them. It is nothing unusual.

Perhaps the real lack of discretion lies with John Dean. R eally, what is the value of printing such a story to begin with? Who cares? Earl Butz is the victim of a cheap shot.

Journalism is a game of discretion. The facts need to be reported and presented in such a way as not to unduly influence the readers. The case of Earl Butz is a classic example of the gross misuse of the power of the media. The incident was pointless. Earl Butz is no longer Secretary of Agriculture. His reputation is even worse than it was before. I wonder if the ends justify the means.

Candidate profiles

Editor's note: The following "Candidate Profiles" are furnished by Common Cause in the interest of promoting better issue awareness in the upcoming Presidential election.

Abortion

Carter

"I think abortion is wrong. I don't think government should do anything to encourage abortion. I think abortion is the result of a failure of measures designed to prevent unwanted pregnancies and to induce the mother to carry the unwanted child through to delivery. I think we ought to do everything to have better education, family planning, contraceptives, if desired. I don't favor a constitutional amendment to give to the states local option on the abortion issue. If, within the confines of the Supreme Court ruling, we could work out legislation with better family planning and adoption procedures, then I would favor it. I don't have any particular law to put forward."

Ford

He opposes abortion "on demand" but believes that in cases of rape or where the life of the woman was at stake . . . . Ford said that he would "of course, uphold the law as intepreted by the Supreme Court." But he also said that he favored a Constitutional amendment leaving to the states the task of redefining limits on abortion.

Gun control

Carter favors registration of hand guns, banning of "Saturday Night Specials,"and prohibition of gun ownership by anyone convicted of a crime involving a gun and by those not mentally competent. He opposes other restrictions on manufacture and possession.

Ford is "unalterably opposed to the registration of guns." He favors prohibitions on the manufacture or sale of "Saturday Night Specials." Ford proposes mandatory sentences for offences involving use of a handgun, banning the import and sale of cheap handguns, strengthening current laws regarding the sale of handguns (no specific measures specified), and increasing the number of federal firearms investigators.

Crime prevention

"I honestly believe . . . that one of the best ways to cut down on crime is to cut down on unemployment . . . Your own son, if out in the street and unable to find work, might turn to crime." The federal government can provide a model for the states by revising our system of sentencing, eliminating much of the discretion given to judges and probation officers, insuring greater certainty in sentencing and confinement, and insuring a higher percentage of criminals being imprisoned. "We should upgrade the rehabilitation programs available to criminals while in prison."

Ford pins his hope of crime prevention on the example of "positive, swift, and just punishment." He believes "certainty of punishment prevents crime." Ford favors mandatory minimum sentences in crimes involving handguns, in serious crimes such as drug trafficking kidnapping, hijacking, and for repeat offenders who commit violent crimes. Ford also favors the death penalty for the crimes of sabotage, espionage, treason, and murder.

"Ghost of the sixties" haunts campuses again

by Russ Smith

To the Carterized Democrats he's a bitter nuisance; to the splintered Republicans he's a potential boon; to the mass media he's a Stassenesque novelty; and to many students he's a ghostly hero of the sixties. But to a small yet active band of disaffected voters, former Senator Eugene J. McCarthy remains the "Silver Knight."

Billing himself as an independent "anti-waste" candidate, McCarthy is making his third bid for the presidency this fall, his first since bolting the Democratic Party three years ago.

The bulk of the senator's support is drawn from the ranks of students, as was the case in 1968, according to Jamie Yeager, McCarthy's press secretary. But, as Yeager is quick to point out, this election year is a far cry from '68, when thousands would thong to hear McCarthy attack the Vietnam War. Today, the political climate at most colleges is subdued, and relatively few students are involved in politics to the same extent as in 1968. Yet Yeager maintains that although the numbers for McCarthy are small, "the quality is high." In 1968, he explained, "everyone was turned on by the war issue, whereas now the senator's supporters are more committed because they've taken a long time to think about the two-party system. As a result, they've made a rational judgement, requiring more forethought."

McCarthy who is calling for the redistribution of employment, sizable cuts in the defense budget, and the acceleration of mass transit, is finding his quest no easy task. Because most states enforce election laws that McCarthy feels are structured in favor of the two-party system, independent candidates have to undertake regorous petition campaigns to secure places on the ballot. McCarthy claims that many of these laws are "archaic" and "discriminatory."

So far, McCarthy has qualified for a ballot position in 23 states. He expects to be listed in at least 40 states by election day, and is contesting adverse rulings in several others.

Currently, the senator is attempting to join the Ford-Carter debates under the aegis of the equal time provision. Protesting that the two man debates will be "just another sideshow" and that they "are a clear violation of the election law," McCarthy's lawyers have brought the matter to court. Failing an acceptable decision, they will argue that the debates should be dispensed with entirely.

Nevertheless, McCarthy and his slim staff realize that it will take more than a positive ruling on the debate issue to prove that he is a serious candidate. For starters, they need more support.

Yeager excitedly talks about the concentrated student activity for McCarthy that can be found on the state campuses of Madison, Wisconsin; Ann Arbor, Michigan; and Boulder, Colorado.

But while these traditional hotbeds of student activism are encouraging to McCarthy, at most colleges there is little organization or interest in his campaign. Mary Brown, news editor of the University of Massachusetts Collegian, reports that although "there is a small and dedicated group for McCarthy, most students will probably stick to the Democratic Party, even though some are hedging on Carter." At the UCLA campus, a student editor says that "whatever was leftover from the sixties is gone" and that there is virtually no support for McCarthy.

Similarly, at Columbia University in New York, once a stronghold for the senator, most students are showing little interest in the campaign. "People are worried about Carter, but will decline to vote rather than go for McCarthy or Peter Camejo (Socialist candidate for President)," a student remarked. "Among the radical chic, non-voting will be high."

On the other hand, some students respect McCarthy for his quixotic battle against what they feel is an unjust system. In Texas, the day after McCarthy's name was ruled ineligible on the ballot, the Daily Texan editorialized: "McCarthy is now restricted to a write-in campaign in Texas. Many persons will never hear of his candidacy or know they can vote for him. The judges' sticky fingerprints will be smeared all over the election results."

As if the decreased political activity among his natural constituency isn't bad enough, McCarthy must also wrestle with media that are geared towards the two-party system and which give him little national coverage. McCarthy complains that the press is treating him simply as a "spoiler" and that "we deserve at least as much attention as Walter Cronkite gave to the boy that he thought for two days was raised by apes." Yeager asserts that "all the columnists are writing the same damned column." "The press has a long habit of dealing solely with the major candidates and in a way they're protecting themselves," he added.

McCarthy and his staff are going after that large mass of registered voters who generally do not vote. In the last presidential election, nearly half the voters did not cast ballots. Counting on secret supporters who "will surface in October," McCarthy is confident that he can win the election, said Yeager.

Or at least, "we'll be able to throw it into the House of Representatives," he added. In that case, McCarthy will bargain with the "most willing candidate" to have leverage in the selection of the next adminstration's personnel.

But for now, it's a lonely bunch that mills around different states, politely collecting signatures on behalf of a man whom most voters have forgotten. Still, with national polls currently predicting that by November, McCarthy may well produce a significant vote total, there's more than a few traditional polls looking over their shoulders at the angry "Silver Knight."

The Band plays on

The Maryville College Band under the direction of Charles R. Hurt has started its 1976-1977 season. Though the band attended the football game at Centre College, the Hampden-Sydneygame marked its first appearance at Maryville College.

The Band has a full year of activities planned including two concerts, Christmas Carolling with the Maryville College Concert Choir, the Homecoming Parade, and attendance at the rest of the Maryville College Football games with the exception of Guilford College. The band invites any interested people to come and help them in support of Maryville College.

Helping to make plans for the Lane College football game this week-end are the newly elected Band officers for 1976-1977:

Repeat of NYC interim

Excitement. Anticipation. Timetables. Preparation. Pre-holiday bustle. Famous names and faces. How does one go about describing a once-in-a-lifetime experience? The hours of planning, letter writing, and phone calls weeks and months in advance all become part of the picture which culminates in an interim adventure in New York City.

December of 1970 saw my first attempt at a nearly annual visit with Maryville College students during the Interim Term to witness first-hand one of the most culturally all-encompassing and famous artistic organizations in the world—the Metropolitan Opera. In retrospect the beginnings were small-scale and naive, yet ambitious for a music teacher in Tennessee, 750 miles away from that metropolis.

I wanted to be able to provide an in-depth view of the Metropolitan Opera for students, which would include more than just the sights and sounds before the great gold curtain. Two facts made this possible: the Metropolitan Opera Guild's sponsorship of backstage tours, and the late Dr. Malcom Willey's friendship with Assistant Manager Francis Robinson, who is in charge of the company's publicity department.

Through personal interviews with Mr. Robinson, extensive insight, accompanied by innumerable anecdotes, has been gained about the functions of this multimillion dollar artistic business organization by some 40 Maryville College students who have participated in this interim since 1970.

I keep telling muself and students that the most recent pilgrimage has been the best yet. Through experimentation and experience, certain specific "musts" for this type of venture have systematically developed—performance selection to create a varied spread of standard works, new productions, composer and language variety; the most economic mode of transportation; departure schedule to facilitate convenient arrival time; rest stops to coincide with good eating locations; hotel accommodations which combine convenience of locale with the best of prices, even for big-city reputation; specific points of sight seeing interest, with seasonal activities kept in mind; and the "right" people to see and interview for background information and advice.

While on campus from December 1 through 10, we researched composers, studied plots, familiarized ourselves with music and libretti, and formulated plans for the following ten days of travel and visitation. With repertoire selected and tickets purchased, we were thrilled with the scope of works and had no time to waste during our preparation.

Taping, watering, mending

by Millie Brewer

Robin Kren, a junior at Maryville College who is majoring in physical therapy, has been busy at her new job of managing the Fighting Scots football team for the 1976 season.

When asked how she became the manager, Robin stated that "the job was open and 'Chief' asked me if I'd like to do it. I thought about it for awhile, as did Coach Jordan, and then I accepted."

The job of managing the foobtall team mostly involves fixing and supplying equipment. The required working hours are from 3 to 6 every afternoon; attendance of football games is, of course, mandatory.

Robin says the team, is finally getting accustomed to having a female manager. Very excited about and interested in her new responsibility Robin projects a good season for the Scots.

New insurance policy explained

The Interstate Insurance Company of Chicago is the new carrier for our College insurance. Details of coverage are available in a brochure available from the Clinic or Business Office. Primarily, advantages of the new coverage are higher limits of payment for illness and broader coverage for certain treatment by physicians.

After $25 deductible in each semester, many expenses of illness are fully covered. The handling of coordination of benefits will reduce red tape for students and the College. Claims under $250 will be paid for covered accident or illness without cross-checking family policies. Claims in excess of $250 will be worked out directly with the insuror who issues family policies. Students will need only to furnish the name of the issuing company and local home agent.

Anyone who has spent time in a hospital recently knows that average costs are around $100 daily. This whole policy is issued at a cost of $34 per student for a nine-month period. It is this low cost that makes the $25 deductible necessary.

Students requiring medical attention should contact Nurse Allen during clinic hours, dormitory residents during other hours, and Dr. Bob Proffitt school physician,should be phoned in emergencies. Students should not report to the emergency room of the hospital except in serious emergencies without first contacting Dr. Proffitt. He is often able to provide treatment at no cost or far lower cost than the hospital as this is part of his obligation as College Physician.

Coed dorms: living and loving

(CPS)—Does co-ed dorm living mess up your head? Yes, no and sort of, according to two Stanford University psychiatrists who reported their findings in Human Behavior magazine.

The pair quizzed 900 freshmen students at a large public schooi in a small town where most students live in university housing. They found that overall, co-ed dorms are more pleasant, relaxed, friendly, enjoyable and that the atmosphere promotes greater personal growth than single sex living arrangements.

They discovered men who opt for co-ed living have higher academic and career goals, who like to drink beer and who think of themselves as easy going and "on top of the world."

Women in co-ed housing, however, were found to be quite different than their female classmates stuck in women-only dorms.

little or no threat. Such misguided statements are typical of the people who are possessed with the mania of generating a plutonium based economy.

Wondering about the effects of wastes in the atmosphere and ground, Sheri Bone said, "I wanted him [Roemmich] to mention the problems of radioactivity, especially along the genetic area."

Bone completed her statement by saying "I wish we could have had a debate—one pro nuclear reactors, one against. And I mean a real debate."

The candidate was introduced by Senator Howard Baker. Earlier this year, Baker was considered by Ford to be a prime candidate for the Vice Presidency. Dole received Honorary citizenship in the City of Maryville and the city flag by proclamation of Mayor Stanley Shields. Dr. Joe Copeland delivered the invocation. On the rostrum with Dole was Mrs. Bill Brock, Lamar Alexander, and Representative John Duncan.

Dole was received at Maryville College by an enthusiastic bi-partisan crowd. Over 600 people were served at the $10 per plate fundraiser.

soon. In addition to enforcing enrollment ceilings, some schools are also pushing back the cut-off dates for accepting applications.

Schools that are feeling the pinch include Purdue, Illinois, Colorado, North Carolina, the State University of New York, Washington University in St. Louis, the University of Santa Clara in California and many others.

Despite the popular conception that more students are giving up the idea of a college education, enrollments have increased substantially for the past few years. This fall, enrollment in colleges and universities nationwide was up 4.5 per cent over last fall. In 1975 enrollment increased 9.4 per cent over the previous year.

A larger percentage of high school seniors are choosing college at present—50 per cent enrolled last year, compared to 46 per cent the year before—according to Census Bureau reports. The figures declined between 1970 and 1973, but since then more people have opted for college every year, particularly women and those above age 25.

"Some schools are questioning the idea of the giant state multiversity that admits unlimited numbers of students—it costs too much. . . . and they find they'll wind up overbuilding," said a spokesman for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

"It's not a new phenomenon," explained George Wade of the Health, Education and Welfare Office. "When institutions feel they can't handle the enrollment situation, they have to cutoff admissions at some point," he said.

In states where college trustees have been reluctant to impose enrollment limits, legislatures have taken the first step. In Oregon, as in some other states, enrollment ceilings are not absolute, but institutions that exceed limits stand to lose state aid.

Last year, Oregon State University enrolled 16,500 full-time students, but received state funds for only 15,500. This year, university officials planned to stay within the limit established by the Oregon Board of Higher Education.

In Florida, the legislature provided financial incentives to schools that cutback on admissions.

Women's volleyball

The Maryville College Women's Volleyball team upped its record to 2—0 by winning the Berea Invitational Tournament Saturday, October 9, in Kentucky.

The tournament consisted of Berea, Union, Georgetown, Midway, and Maryville. Union and Midway were eliminated Friday and Maryville whipped Berea and Georgetown for the invitational honors Saturday.

In the scoring Maryville beat Berea 15—11, 15—11 and then walloped Georgetown 15—9, 15—4.

Serving was the decisive edge for the Lady Scots. Spikers Karen Burkhardt, Paula Hensley, Bobbie Jo Sallade, and Jeri Holcombe paced the effort and were aided by setters Pat Willin and Arlene Ignico. The team as a whole played well defensively.

The Lady Scots are at home Friday for a 7:00 p.m. round robin tournament with Bryan and Sewanee.

Soccer

On October 6, the Maryville Soccer team lost a close game to the University of the South in overtime 2—1.

Shin Tanaka scored for M.C. early in the game on a penalty kick. The goal stood up until the remaining 8 minutes, then Sewanee scored with a driving head shot off a corner kick. In the overtime period, Marshall McLean hit paydirt with a corner kick which gave them the game.

Bart Rutan, who filled the shoes of injured goalie Dave Osborne, played a brillant game, even though in a losing cause.

The play of the fullback crew was superb. Except for the goals off corner kicks, they did not allow any scoring drives. Don Mock, Dave Franssen, Charlie Blair, Doug Hardy, Bucky Buckwalter, and Bill Walker are the fullbacks for the Scots.

On a field that was coated with several inches of mud and water, the M.C. Soccer Club lost to Temple Junior Varsity 7—3, October 8.

Temple jumped to an early 4—0 lead in the first half before Maryville came back with 3 second half goals. Temple matched M.C. with 3 goals of their own in that half.

Tim Farrell scored the first goal on a rebound off the goalie and the goal post. He then narrowly missed another score a few minutes later. Dan Murphy scored number two on a 20 yard direct kick which landed in the upper corner of the goal just over the goalie's outstretched hands. Will Way scored the third goal on a one-on-one situation with the goalie.

Being short on players, Maryville had 4 regular starters who did not make the trip. The Scots expect to give a better performance next Saturday and reverse the score as they host Temple.

Scots dump Hampden-Sydney

by Robert Boone

Call it the greatest upset of the year in Division III. Call it one of the biggest wins in the history of Maryville College football. You call 'em like you see 'em.

It's not every week that you get a peck at the number three team in the nation. Maryville College took advantage of that golden opportunity Saturday before a fine home crowd at Honaker Field and knocked off highly regarded Hampden-Sydney 11—10.

In the process the Scots ended the Tiger's eleven game winning streak. Maryville (2-1) has been good at breaking streaks lately.

Saturday's win was a tremendous team effort. Coach Jim Jordon's defensive unit held H—S in check until the third quarter.

Then H—S scored on a sustained drive aided by a costly infraction. James Ferguson raced around right end for the final three yards. H—S scored again in the final frame on Gary Garner's 21 yard kick.

With 10 minutes remaining and Maryville down 10—0, things looked bad. But the determined Scots never gave up. Directed by Sam Horner, the Scots drove 40 yards in 6 plays. Highlighting the drive was a catch made by Keith Goodwin while a defender clung to his back. Horner then hit tight end Dan Coley on second down for an eight yard TD. Horner later hit Ken Dickens who made the all-important two-point conversion with a tight-rope catch on the sidelines and closed the margin to 10—8.

On the ensuing kick-off, Tim A. Kelly made one of the game-winning plays by snatching a H—S bobble on the 30-yard line. The resulting Maryville drive stalled, however, and the game rested on the foot of Tim L. Kelly. Kelly met the challenge and sent the ball 29 yards through the up rights for the win.

Desperately seeking a comeback, H—S connected on several passes. But their lights were put out by Steve Savage who made a game-saving interception. Maryville then ran out the clock and jubilantly enjoyed a sweet victory celebration.

Ken Dickens completes reception for the two point conversion in last Saturday's game.

There were several key factors in Maryville's win. One was the defensive unit. Led by Tim A. Kelly, the scrappy bunch turned in a strong performance. Kelly played perhaps his greatest game ever in a Scot uniform. The Senior Co-Captain made 9 individual tackles and six assists. Line-backer Wayne Dunn also helped lead the defensive effort with seven tackles and eleven assists.

The offensive line, which was questionable before the season started, has steadily improved and has developed into a strong group. Their blocking enabled hard running Alvin Nance to gain over 100 yards rushing for the second consecutive game. Nance pounded out 122 yards on 24 carries.

A definite plus for the Scots this year is team leadership. Several seniors head the leadership. Every week the team selects one player as alternate Captain for the week. Wayne Dunn was chosen honorary captain for Lane College Week and along with Co-Captains Ken Hannah and Tim A. Kelly will lead the team this Saturday.

Gary Petree and Steve Harrison who have been sidelined with nagging injuries have rejoined the squad and should add extra strength to the team.

Scoring: Maryville—Dan Coley 8 yd. pass from Sam Horner (Ken Dickens pass from Horner); Tim L. Kelly 29 FG.

Statistics: Maryville—First downs 7, Uds. rushing 153, yds. passing 41, Fumbles-lost 4—1, passes 5—13, Punts 10—30.9., Penalties—yds. 6—40.

EVERYTHING FOR EVERY CYCLIST

research and reading. Stacks of Opera News were examined. Books, histories, and encyclopedias by Grout, Ewen, von Westerman and Cross were studied. We knew that our greatest experience and enjoyment could only be derived out of familiarity with the works to be viewed.

Afternoons were spent with scores and recordings, basically one composer and one opera per day. Saturday proved a great prelude to live experience with the opening broadcast of Verdi's "Masked Ball" from the Metropolitan Opera House. We gathered for this event at my house and followed it w ith the televized re-run of Danny Kaye's "Met Look-In." December 9th and 10th were days of concentration on composer's lives, presented in oral reports by the student participants, suitcase packing, and last minute trips to the bank for traveller's checks and cash.

Take-off time from Maryville was planned for 6:30 a.m. on December 11. The group was to meet back at my house and proceed to Knoxville, where David Adcock was to meet us on the Alcoa highway by 6:45. Ah well, with Jean Huntington falling back to sleep, and the baggage not fitting, and Kay's rest stops, we finally made it to Knoxville by 7:30, hell-bent for NYC.

Even with two cars, the varied physical needs of the occupants made driving in tandem a near impossibility. With assorted munchies and coffee to sustain the breakfast eaters, we still missed connections at the Salem/Roanoke Holiday Inns for lunch and ended up eating our fashionably late supper in two shifts at the unbelievable inexpensive, deliciously authentic, Pennsylvania Dutch, Schmeck's Diner in Hamburg, Pa.

Phillipsburg, Eaton, the NJ turnpike—more lanes in the highway, more cars on the road, brighter lights, bigger road signs—our geographical goal is rapidly getting closer.

"Look. That must be the light on the Statue of Liberty."

"No. It's too close."

"But here's the Newark Airport."

"We don't want the Garden State Parkway."

"Not the Holland Tunnel, the Lincoln Tunnel."

"That lane is for trucks only."

"Who's got change for the toll gate?"

"There's The World Trade towers, and that must be the Empire State Building." And finally we're in Manhattan.

From Port Authority north to 72nd St. Can't get on the Westside Highway.

"Is that the same as the Henry Hudson Parkway?"

"Not 'north'—you mean 'uptown'."

Well, that route ought to pretty well take care of the shock absorbers!

Over to Broadway and downtown to Lincoln Plaza and 63rd. It's 11:45 p.m., and we unload at the Hotel Empire. The night clerk has only minor problems with registration. The girls are in one suite, fellows in another, and I get a single. No exciting view out the windows, but with student rates, who can complain?

Bob Bishop reminds me that my car will be towed if I don't move it from in front of the hotel, so I zip it over to the Caracalla Restaurant parking lot at Amsterdam & 68th. It sure is nice to have friends in a big city.

The next morning begins with a visit to the nearby A & P to stock up on breakfast and lunch supplies. Economy is a must for us visitors, as well as the city of New York—who needs a cup fo coffee for 50 cents? Then a visit to the Met's stage entrance to verify appointments and arrange interviews. It's really nice to see Winifred Short, the receptionist. She has been so charming and helpful in the past.

Our meeting with Mr. Robinson is set for 11:30 a.m. on the following Wednesday. But there are a couple of disappointments: Saturday night's performance of the "Marriage of Figaro" is sold out, and Mr. Michael Bronson, Technical and Business Administrator, is involved with labor/management conferences, making it impossible to schedule an interview. Mr. Bronson's executive secretary, Ellen Godfrey, promises to arrange a meeting with Mr. Jay Rutherford, Production Coordinator.

Well, that's the way things got started last year. No mention of side excursions—Empire State Building, churches, Staten Island ferry, museums, shopping, restaurants, and on and on. And this year promises to be just as great.

Naturally, opera doesn't have to be your thing. Just consider the options available for a project in cultural New York City. In addition to churches and museums, there are parks, Broadway, theatres, dance, jazz, photography, Chinatown, Little Italy, Greenwich Village, and many more.

For as little as $200.00, ten days in Manhattan can prove to be a once-in-a-lifetime experience—exciting, challenging, glamorous, educational, dangerous, with the thrill of bright lights and famous people! Only $25.00 deposit immediately and the remainder in December. Con the folks into an early Christmas present, get your buddies to join us, register with Miss Hess now, and come fill me in on your interests and hopes in the big city.

ACC evaluation continues

At the October 13th meeting of the All College Council Dr. Joseph Copeland delivered a progress report on the ACC evaluation.

The on-going evaluation is the result of a directive of the Board of Directors last fall. The president and the administrative officers have been given the responsibility to "evaluate the effectiveness and continued need of the present structure of the internal government and, if necessary and desirable, to develop a new structure for the internal governance of the institution."

In response to this directive the president appointed an ad hoc committee to solicit and catalogue reactions to the council among the college community. The members of the committee were Mr. Edwin Best, Dr. Frank McClelland, Dr. Elizabeth Jackson and Mrs. Penny Proffitt Piper.

The committee interviewed 9 faculty, 12 administrative personnel, 16 students. Most of the people contacted by the committee were generally pleased with the operation of the council as a whole. Only one individual recommended abandoning the present system and returning to the old one. A major complaint was the problems of logistics in voting by consensus.

The committee felt the basic defect in the present system was "namely, inadequate provision for the executive function." It was recommended that action be taken to strengthen this function. It was asked that consideration be given to the idea of a faculty and a student council to broaden the participation of members of those two groups.

The committee made the following recommendations:

Provisions for membership carry-over from year to year giving the council more continuity than it has now;

Limitation of decision by consensus;

Restructuring of committees;

Better communication between the council and the community and its leaders.

The evaluation of the council is an on-going process. The members of the Council are being asked to respond to the report of the ad hoc committee.

Troupe appears Thursday

On Thursday evening, October 21, at 8 o'clock in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall, Maryville College will host the International Traveling Troupe from Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa, North Carolina.

Composed of foreign students attending Warren Wilson, the Troupe is on its fall tour with a program consisting of songs and dances representing Samoa, China, Arabia, Uganda, and Thailand. The Japanese and other foreign students attending Maryville have been asked to contribute some of their own native music.

Before arriving in Maryville, the Troupe will have appeared at a number of high schools. They plan to spend the night on campus and continue their tour the next morning, visiting Knoxville College and Tusculum before returning home.

Mr. Jones and the Maryville College Japanese students, with the help of the World Concerns Committee, will serve as hosts for the evening. The entire College community is invited both to the program in the Music Hall and to the informal reception afterwards in the Fine Arts Center Lounge.

It is hoped that this exchange will be the beginning of a cooperative program involving Warren Wilson, Tusculum, Knoxville, and Marvville Colleges.

Kees elected to ACC

Deanea Kees, from West Islip, New York, is the new freshman All College Council representative.

In an interview with the Echo, Kees gave her reasons for running for the council. "I wanted to 1) be a part of the decision-making body at Maryville College, and 2) it would give me a chance to get out and meet people."

Kees further said that her impressions of the council and its workings are "confusing". She related the council was a very sophisticated and a highly organized, efficient body. But, she added that the method of discussion during the council meetings is "too much like a debate—everyone has to talk."

The familiar process of decision by consensus that the council uses, is another matter of confusion to Kees. Most of the time, when an issue was decided, she knew what had happened, but sometimes it was "not clear."

"It was not a matter of paying attention, but just do decipher what had been said."

Kees also spoke a gap she felt between herself and the faculty and administrative members of the council. Because they were not introduced to her, she felt slightly "inhibited" by their presence.

"The council, overall, runs very well. The presentation of the proposals and the following through of the agenda contributes to its efficiency."

Kees would like to see the council make some moves in the direction of dorm problems, as in the hot water schedule. She also expressed a desire for more guidance through the major advisor.

Nominees selected

The Senior class met last Thursday morning, October 14 in the Theater and chose the Homecoming Court nominees.

The nominees are Libby Lowry, Pam Patton Osborne, Cindy Murane, Jackie Inman, Bette Donahay, Vicki Parsons, Debbie Ackerman, Dale Anderson, Carol Paris, Ann McDonald, Jeri Holcombe, Kit Williamson, and Nancy Reagin Petterson.

The Homecoming election, a campus-wide election, will be October 28, during lunch and dinner. This year one will vote for 5 candidates in order of preference from first through fifth.

Council hears evaluation

In the first regular session of the year, the All College Council heard a report from Joe Copeland about the on-going ACC evaluation.

Dr. Copeland informed the council of the findings of an ad hoc committee looking into the general effectiveness of the council. They found the community basically satisfied with the council although confused about the details of its operation. A particular problem was the concept of voting by consensus.

Dr. Norman Love presented to the council a proposal from the elections committee to revamp the method by which faculty members are nominated to the council. Eligible persons will be given the opportunity to remove their names from contention before nominations are made.

In other action the council

Approved an IPC proposal to add a course in Career Development and guidance;

Heard a brief report from Jim Stewart on the progress of the religious life committees;

Received an offer from the Highland Echo for a bi-weekly column to facilitate the flow of information from the council to the community;

Heard a report from Bill Gannon on the progress of a flow chart of information from the committees to the council;

Approved a second IPC proposal increasing the number of Art studio courses giving majors more of an opportunity to increase a portfolio.

Deana Kees, freshman representative, attended her first meeting as a member of the council.

Refinishing continues on courts

The newly-redone College Tennis Courts will be ready to use in about three weeks, according to Hugh Crawford, Assistant Business Manager.

Crawford said that at least three weeks would be needed to allow the new surfaces to cure properly. Harrison Inc. Construction Company is responsible for the work, which includes installing new posts, and laying a two-inch asphalt base, to be topped with a special coating called Laykold. Curing time will be about two weeks for the asphalt and one week for the Laykold. Long periods of poor weather could require a longer waiting period.

Part of the work for this project included the felling of four large trees at the edge of the courts. Crawford said this was necessary for two reasons: to eliminate the excessive sweeping time required before classes and tournaments, and to keep falling leaves from ruining the new Laykold coating as it hardened.

Remember the academy!

Keeping things whole and the doors open as we beat a path to the sheepskin

One of the findings of the initial Weiner Report is a desire by the majority of college students (and those planning to attend college) for more career orientation and experiences within the academic program. This finding is not particular to Maryville College; it is an on-going national trend in higher education.

This is a substantial change from the type of education offered at most colleges and universities today and in the past.

This change is a rather important one—especially for the small liberal arts college such as Maryville. It has the potential of building an entirely separate type of learning and therefore, an entirely different curriculum from the accepted liberal arts conception of education—pure liberal arts that is. Liberal arts in the sense of the word academic and pure academics as they exist within the process of scholarly learning.

Maryville College is already adapting to these needs of career planning. The Career Planning and Placement Office is one example. Another is the offering of practicums in various majors and the Washington Term where students can gain both credit and practical experience in a career.

The problem is that a college such as Maryville cannot escape this change. It must cease existing purely for the pursuit of knowledge. For the college it is simply an economic situation dictated by the demands and requests of the students. And it is the amount of students choosing to attend Maryville College that will either close its doors or keep them open.

Yet, if this change is made, what concessions will be made to the student who attends simply for the academic program? The student who is interested in learning things in general or whose main concern is not a career, but the development of his/her own ideas.

Scholarly activity and related concerns are of an essential nature. The abandonment of these designs at many small but influential institutions such as Maryville could put a serious dent in the scholarly pursuits of the academy. (Not everybody has the economic or intellectual capabilities to enter Harvard or Yale.)

This is not to say that a total educational revamping will occur nationally. Nor is it saying that a change will sweep through and engulf the academy at Maryville College.

This is a word of caution. A word of caution delivered with several words of optimism. The development of a Writer's Workshop points to interests that can encourage the academy and maintain its influence. Other projects, however, need to be stimulated and offer opportunity for the development of potentials directly related to what we learn and sense.

The numbers of those solely concerned with academics may be few, but they possess a significant measure and contribute to the quality of the mental environs that surround us. There must be a drive to ammend Maryville College's declining enrollment and in so doing make the programs at the College appear more feasible for developing careers. But, in so doing we cannot forget the academy. Tim Rahn

The Highland Echo

I would like to thank students, faculty and staff for the courteous reception given Senator Dole, Senator Baker, Congressman Duncan and all the other Republicans who attended the rally on Tuesday, October 12, in the Margaret Ware Dining Room. I would also like to commend Bob Miller, the kitchen crew, and the student dining room employees who did such a fine job of providing meal service under difficult circumstances. It was an evening that went well despite the pressure of last minute arrangements, and demonstrates again what our campus can do when the need arises.

And on behalf of the entire campus community I would like to thank Sharon Youngs and Kathy Whitt for the fine way in which they represented all of us recently at the La Jolla Presbyterian Church in California. As reported in the Echo, the church is planning to make a gift of $50,000 to the College to establish an endowed scholarship fund. Word from the church since Sharon and Kathy were there indicates that the pastor and the members are delighted with their choice of Maryville College as a recipient of this gift, and with our choice of Sharon and Kathy as our representatives.

International relations

Carter

"Under the Nixon-Ford administration, there has evolved a kind of secretive 'Lone Ranger' foreign policy—a one-man policy of international adventure . . . .foreign policy based on secrecy inherently has had to be closely guarded and amoral, and we have had to forego openness, consultation and a constant adherence to fundamental principles and high moral standards . . . . Secretaries of State and Defense . . . . should regularly appear before Congress, hopefully in televised sessions, to answer hard questions and to give straight answers."

"In every foreign venture that has failed—whether it was Vietnam, Cambodia, Chile, or Angola, or in the excesses of the CIA—our government forged ahead without consulting the American people and did things that were contrary to our basic character."

"A stable world order cannot become a reality when people of many nations of the world suffer mass starvation or when there are no established arrangements to deal with population growth, energy, or environment quality."

"The time has to come for us to seek a working partnership between North America, Western Europe, and Japan. Our three regions share economic, political and security concerns that make it logical that we should seek ever-increasing unity and understanding . . . ."

Carter calls for a re-ordering of foreign policy priorities: high-level unilateral negotiations with communist powers must take second place to re-establishing close working relationships with democratic allies.

Ford

"In our constitutional system . . . . policies should reflect consultation and accommodation between the President and Congress. But, in the final analysis, as the framers of our constitution knew from hard experience, the foreign relations of the United States can be conducted effectively only if there is strong central direction that allows flexibility of action. That responsibility clearly rests with the president . . . . I pledge to the American people policies which seek a secure, just and peaceful world."

Ford's foreign policy is summed up in the following quotes:

"It will keep our powder dry and not put our finger on the nuclear trigger."

"Today, the state of our foreign policy is sound and strong."

"We are at peace—and I will do all in my power to keep it that way."

"Our military forces are capable and ready. Our military power is without equal. And I intend to keep it that way."

"Our principle alliances, with the industrial democracies of the Atlantic Community and Japan, have never been more solid."

"We have an improving relationship with China, the world's most populous nation."

Nichols publishes paper in Semigroup Forum

Dr. J. W. Nichols, assistant professor of mathematics at Maryville College, will publish a paper in an upcoming edition of Semigroup Forum, a professional mathematics journal.

The paper—entitled "A Class of Maximal Inverse Subsemigroups of T_X"—is the generalized result of Dr. Nichols' doctoral dissertation and research done during the College's interim of 1975 and the summer of 1976.

The research deals with algebraic semigroups, a branch of the field of pure mathematics.

Semigroup Forum is a platform of speedy and efficient transmission of information on current research in semigroup theory.

Editors found alike

(CPS)—Who's the boss of the paper you're reading?

According to a California State University sociologist, the average American student editor is white, male, liberal and Protestant. This description holds true in every part of the country in every type school, says Troy Zimmer, a professor at CSU Fullerton.

Zimmer, in quizzing 248 editors, found that while 92 percent felt their paper had a moderate or high impact on the "informational level" of their readers, most saw themselves as mood "reflectors" rather than "shapers" even though 64 percent thought it was important to increase their reader's socio-political awareness.

Zimmer also found that most liberal editors placed more importance on raising reader's political conciousness.

The men's fraternity, Alpha Sigma, has been revived by a group of Maryville College men.

Sig, as the fraternity is commonly called, elected officers last week. Glen Cunningham was elected President, Jeff Genualdi—vice-president, Frank Plaxco—treasurer, Neil McMaster—secretary and Tim Farrell—sargent-at-arms.

Sig is planning a dance in the basement of Carnegie Hall, Oct. 23rd following the St. Leo football game at 8:00 p.m. All are invited to attend.

Fred Hope charities continue

Money goes to Guatemala

by Kathy Dunmire

On April 10, 1976, the Second Annual Fred Hope Auction was held. Many items such as a motorcycle ride, breakfast in bed, and pies and cookies were auctioned off to a spirited crowd in the Chapel courtyard.

After all the interesting "bargains" were sold and the money was totaled, the entertaining evening of fun had raised $500 for the fund.

The next step following the auction was where the money would be sent. Originally it was planned for the money to go the Sahel Desert area in Africa where it had gone the previous year, since this area was still in need.

Before any announcement was made of this decision, Dr. Young received a letter from David Scotchmer, a graduate of Maryville College. Scotchmer is a missionary in Guatemala. His letter expressed the tragedy and anguish of the Guatamalan people after the terrible earthquake of February 4, 1976. The World Concerns Committee changed their previous decision and the $500 from this year's auction and $500 more from previous years was sent to aid Scotchmer and his wife, Sarah, in any way they chose.

The giving of this gift to the Guatemalan people continues a Maryville College tradition. In which, Fred Hope, a student, led a drive to raise $50 for missionary work in China. Hope, after graduation entered the mission field in Africa. In 1910, Maryville College students began the "Fred Hope Fund." In the beginning all money earned was contributed to Hope's industrial school in Africa.

Over the years MC students have continued this tradition by sending the funds to many areas in need including India, Korea, Laos and the U.S.

The drives each year have raised thousands of dollars for mission projects all over the world, thus spreading the friendliness and concern of the campus to those in need.

Oregon rain may be sold

(CPS)—Anybody for a six-pack of genuine Oregon rain?

Well, it should be on the market soon if two young college students from Oregon get their way. Partners Jim Maass and Randy Hermens have plunked down an initial investment of $150 for a shipment of ten ounce jars and labels. They reason that the hustle "could net millions."

"Rain seemed the most likely thing to sell, since that's what Oregon is famous for," Maass said.

Yearbook holds cover competion

The 1977 Chilhowean staff is holding a competition for the cover design of the yearbook. A $25 purchase prize will be offered for the winning design.

Designs should be submitted in any black and white medium which can be reporduced in one color by photo-silk screen, such as ink, scratch board, photography, cut paste or needlework.

All entries are due November 3 in the Chilhowean room at noon in finished form, ready to photograph. Designs should be submitted without signature but with the artist's post box number on the back. Selection of the winning design will be made by the editor and the layout editor.

The words "Maryville College" and the year "1977" must be incorporated in the design. The use of the word "Chilhowean" and the theme of the design are left to the designers. The design must include the front cover and the spine of the book. Art work for the back cover is optional. Further information can be obtained from the editor, Box 2222.

Photographers

Photographers are urgently needed for taking and developing photographs. There will be a meeting for all regular and new photographers at 8:00 p.m. October 20 in the Chilhowean room on the 2nd floor of Faterweather.

Long scoring plays sure do prove costly. The Maryville College Scots found that out at Jackson Saturday night as they lost a close 26—24 contest to Lane College.

Maryville's record is now 2—2. Three of those four games have been decided by a total of four points. Lane scored on long runs of 80 and 55 yards and passes from 49 and 15 yards out.

Hectic plays helped Lane edge Maryville in the scoring department Saturday night. A crucial play came with M.C. leading the Dragons 24—19. Lane was faced with a fourth and one situation on fourth down when Thomas Johnson ran 55 yds. for a touchdown and the decisive points. Another play was a Mike Smith deflected pass which fell in the awaiting hands of tight end Curtis Johnson in the end zone. Those two breaks assured the home club of the victory.

Although for a losing cause, the Scots played exceptionally well and displayed a potent offensive attack. Maryville held the upper hand in statistics with 20 first downs to Lane's 12. The well-balanced offense got 178 yds. rushing and 171 yds. passing for 349 yds. total offense.

Split-end Ken Dickens had a big night with two touchdowns plus a two point conversion and Quarterback Sam Horner connected on 12 of 28 passes for 171 yds. Alvin Nance and Joe Lombardo were also spark plug performers on offense.

Maryville wasted no time moving the ball after receiving the opening kick-off. The Scots marched to the Lane 11 yd. line before a drive stalled, then Tim L. Kelly kicked a 23 yd. field goal. The Scots later regained possession and marched the ball deep into Lane territory but missed a later field goal opportunity.

It was then that Lane went on a scoring spree. Fleet footed Melvin Davis scored on an 80 yd. jaunt, and Mallory kicked the conversion. Lane's Curtiss Johnson increased the lead with a 15 yd. aerial from Wayman Carter. The gangly tight end got a second score on a 49 yd. toss from Carter that stretched Lane's lead to 19—3.

Then the fired up Scots came back as Sam Horner hit Dickens with a 19 yd. score to make it 19—9. Horner again hit Dickens for a 5 yd. striker, and followed with a 2 point conversion to Dickens, as Maryville closed in on Lane's 19—17 lead as the half ended.

The fighting Scots regained the lead at the start of the second half. Charlie McGuire pounced on a free ball after a blooper kickoff by Kelly to give Maryville possession at the 40yd. line. The offense punched its way to the Lane 10 yd. line. Three downs gained only 2 yds., but on fourth down fullback Joe Lombardo bulled over left guard for the go-ahead touchdown. Kelly's kick was true, and the Scots enjoyed a 24—19 lead. Lane struck its crucial blow on the game-saving fourth down play when Johnson found daylight on a quick hitter and sprinted 55 yds.

Coach Jim Jordan was proud of his team's overall effort. "Everybody's hustling, we're really learning our offense and our timing with each other is better."

The Scots played an inspiring game despite the loss. Saturday night's 24 points mark the best point total thus far. The offense had numerous time—consuming drives, and almost completely dominated the third quarter.

Lee Taylor was awarded hit man of the week and Joe Lombardo was chosen honorary captain for St. Leo week. Jordan emphasized that extra work on tackling and the kicking game is a must if they are to beat St. Leo Saturday.

The coaches and players wish to show their appreciation for the supporters who travelled to Jackson Saturday.

Statistics: 1st downs, 20; yds. rushing, 178; yds. passing, 171; total yds., 349; fumbles, 2—2.

Scoring: Tim L. Kelly 23 yard field goal; Ken Dickens 19 yd. pass from Sam Horner (kick failed); Dickens 5 yd. pass from Horner (Horner pass to Dickens); Joe Lombardo 1 yd. run (Kelly kick).

Intermurals begin

The 1976-77 Men's Intramural Program has gotten underway with several flag football games already played. The first game saw the Bombsquad edge the Raiders, 12—6, on two TD passes by Steve Wright.

In game two, Rick England tossed three TD passes to lead Bad Company past HMF, 32—0. The third game saw HMF blitzed by the Bombsquad, 33—0. with Steve Wright hurling three TD passes for the winners. In game four, the Raiders destroyed Bad Company, 38—0, with Mark Stephens throwing and running for all the Raiders' scores.

The fifth game was forfeited to the Bombsquad by Bad Company. And finally in game six, HMF scored, but in a losing effort to the Raiders, 45—6; Mark Stephens threw five TD passes for the Raiders.

These six games ended the first round robin. With a third of the season over, the records are: the Bombsquad, 3—0; the Raiders, 2—1; Bad Company, 1—2; and HMF, 0—3. The second round robin started, October 18.

Women's volleyball

Coach Sharon Brown's Women's Volleyball team shut off Bryan College Friday afternoon in three close matches. However, Bryan College, 7—2, a tough opponent, did not fall easily.

Maryville, paced by the serving of Bobbie Jo Sallade, won three consecutive games: 16—14, 15—9, and 16—14. Karen Burkhardt also led the offense with several fierce spike shots. Coach Brown stated that the offensive power carried the win for Maryville.

The B-team also saw action in two games. The results were 16—14 and 15—8 in Bryan's favor.

be green with a red outer border, replace the cracking, badly deteriorated older courts. Total cost is around $10,000. A gift by D. W. Proffitt, prominant Maryville Businessman, made this restoration work possible.

Until the new courts are ready, one court in the P. E. Building's center gymnasium will be set up for tennis players all day Monday through Friday until 4:00 p.m. For facilities at other times, Crawford recommends that players try the John Sevier public courts on Westfield Road, or the Sandy Springs courts on Montvale Station Road.

Booters shut-out Temple

The Maryville soccer club revenged an earlier loss to Temple College Jay-Vees by pinning them with a 2—0 setback October 9.

Goalie Bart Rutan turned in the only second shut-out for a Maryville soccer team in the last four years. Neither team generated a score in the first half, even though both teams had a goal called back due to a penalty.

The second half offered more action as Laurie Hill scored Maryville's first goal from the left side of the goal. About ten minutes later, Gus Horcasitas added another score with a head shot in front of the goal.

The Maryville strategy for most of the game was a two fullback defense, in which Dan Mock and Bill Walker turned in outstanding performances. Offensively, Will Way and Mark Soloninka had numerous close shots, but none ripped the net. John Mallozzi returned to the starting line-up from a nagging leg injury to turn in a strong display of excellent halfback play.

Many non-starters played with outstanding hustle and ability. Among them were Joe Carnevale, Dave Carrick, Chris Rigell, Jeff Genualdi, Gary Overton, Charlie Blair, and Dan Zerick.

Board meets tomorrow; four new directors selected

The Maryville College Board of Directors will meet in semi-annual session on Thursday and Fridsy of this week.

Meeting with the board for the first time will be four new members named by the Synod of the South. They are: Barbara A. Kerr, James M. Callaway, Robert R. Campbell, and Clinton Marsh.

Miss Kerr, a 1976 magna cum laude graduate of Maryville College, has been an outstanding campus citizen. She was a member of the Instructional Program Committee, serving in 1975-76 as co-chairman with the Dean of the College. Active in religious life on campus, Miss Kerr served as co-chairman of the committee that planned the College's 100th observance of February Meetings in 1976. She holds membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma and Beta Beta Beta. Barbara is now engaged in research at the Laboratory of Tumor Biology at Emory University Clinic in Atlanta.

James Miller Callaway graduated from Maryville College in 1952, and received his M.D. degree from Vanderbilt University Medical School in 1956. He is a member of the Blount County and Tennessee Medical Socities, the American Medical Association, and the American Board of Surgery. Since 1964, Dr. Callaway has been a practicing physician and surgeon in Maryville.

Robert R. Campbell is a prominent Knoxville attorney, a member of the firm of Hodges, Doughty, and Carson. He and his wife are members of Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville, where both have served in many positions and where he is an ordained elder.

Clinton Marsh, former Moderator of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, USA is now associate Executive of the Synod of the South with offices in Atlanta. He holds the A.B. degree from Knoxville College and the Th.B. from Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary. After serving pastorates in Virginia and Indiana, Dr. Marsh became Secretary of Evangelism, North Central Area of the United Presbyterian Church, then from 1965-69 was Director of the Ecumenical Program for Emergency Action in Africa, an agency of the All Africa Conference of Churches.

The Thompson Brown house as shown last spring.

Cabin to remain on site

Good news came last week to members of the College community interested in preserving the old farmhouse. The Blount County Quarterly Court unanimously adopted a resolution designating the log house and the acre on which it stands as an historic wayside park. The County Judge was empowered to contract with a citizens group for restoration and maintenance of the house.

This action comes some 18 months after Maryville College students and faculty members first moved to prevent destruction of the early 19th century structure.

In May 1975, the Maryville College gave Blount County an option to buy three acres on Tuckaleechee Pike for construction of a new health center. Although unable to halt the sale, the College did move to protect the log house and offered to permit its relocation near the woods.

By January crews of students under the direction of Dr. J. W. Nichols and Suzanne Phillips began removing siding from the house and tearing away porches with the idea of moving it to safety. Simultaneously, the College gave students permission to raze barns and outbuildings on the site, selling the used materials to gain funds for restoration.

After several weekends work, and the growth of considerable community interest, the idea of leaving the house in place and forming a wayside park emerged. The County agreed to place the health center to the rear of the lot and to consider permitting the house to stand. Efforts shifted to selling off the outbuildings and to continuing research on the house. For these efforts, the Tennessee Historical Commission, in May, awarded to students a certificate of merit for outstanding contributions to historic preservation.

In September and October, with favorable Court action expected, a committee of students and townspeople pushed on with planning for the house's restoration and future use. Incorporation of a sponsoring group is underway, National Register status for the house is being sought, and step by step plans for reconstruction are being mapped out. A drive to solicit money, services, and building materials is in the planning stage. Public announcement is expected soon.

Already several individuals, organizations, and business firms have offered aid.

Once these efforts are coordinated, students will choose a "piece" of the project to which they will apply the approximately $1300 raised last spring.

For those wanting immediate involvement, Dr. Nichols will head work groups in roping off the area surrounding the house, mowing, raking, and general clean-up.

Of particular interest to students is the possibility, now under investigation, of bringing an archeological field school to the site during spring term and offering credit for work completed.

'Much more than a job'

by Veronica Sawdon

What is CP&P? One of the most workable definitions of career planning was developed by Dr.'s Fowler, Walker, and Rhodes, several years ago as they worked for the establishment of a Career Planning and Placement Center on the M.C. campus.

The definition: "For our purposes, 'career' means much more than 'job.' Career planning is planning for the making of a life, including leisure as well as vocation. It involves the exploration of goals and values, an understanding of the educational process, and preparation for flexibility and mobility in an occupation."

The CP&P office is all of that and much more. It exists to assist the student body in every possible way.

The staff—composed of Jean Jones, Kathy Joyner, and Karl White—is available to help M.C. students learn of the options open to them with a liberal arts degree. Information is available through various seminars, workshops, freshman inquiry groups, and unlimited materials at the center.

Next year, it is possible that a career Planning course will be added to Maryville's curriculum. The Career Development class will concentrate on five major areas of growth and exploration: self-assessment, values clarification, development of decision-making skills, exploration of educational and/or career objectives, and processes of entry into the world of work.

Materials accessible for students include graduate school information, occupational materials, and educational information. Jean Jones emphasized the fact that anything not available at the center can be easily obtained.

Individuals who are hesitant about seeking a job should visit the CP&P office for an encouragement boost. Statistics show that 80% of all jobs are not advertised, but if one learns the secrets of the task, he/she will know how to find the jobs without ever opening a newspaper.

The biggest burden of career planning falls on the student. He/she must make the first move. There are many, many job opportunities available, but without self-evaluation and a bit of work, they will remain hidden.

Seventy percent of the seniors have been, and all of the freshmen will be oriented at the CP&P office this year. There is always room for another interested career seeker, so direct your life at CP&P.

Choir prepares Pippin

On November 3, the Maryville College Concert Choir, under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter, will present a Community Issues and Values program featuring choral and solo selections from Steven Schwartz' musical Pippin. The semi-choreographed and costumed program will be held in Wilson Chapel at 9:20 A.M.

Steven Schwartz, composer and lyricist, has also written the words and music for the off-Broadway musical Godspell. He has won the Drama Desk Award and the Variety Critics Poll. In addition, Schwartz has written the English texts for Leonard Bernstein's Mass and the title song for the play and movie of Butterflies Are Free.

The setting of Pippin is in 780 A.D. in the not-so-holy Roman Empire. Pippin, the first born son of Emperor Charlemagne, is obsessed with a desire to be completely fulfilled, and, while he is still Charlemange's son, he is also a modern young man. Although the musical is in the eighth century, it evokes modern times as well. While trying to find himself, Pippin either fails or becomes bored with anything less than the extraordinary but in the end does settle for the ordinary—in the persons of a wife and child—and, perhaps, lives happily ever after.

Pippin is born in the opening number, "Magic to Do," and stakes his claim to an extraordinary life in "Corner of the Sky." After attempts at war and sex, Grandmother Berthe encourages him to try the greater pleasures in "No Time at All." Pippin tires quickly of the pleasures of the flesh while step-mother Fastrada proceeds to plot his downfall and the murder of her husband. Inspired by politics, Pippin murders his father. But finding that his reforms are impractical and, reforming the reform, he winds up a despot himself. The Leading Player then heeds Pippin's plea and amazingly restores his father's life.

Almost defeated by his failures, he is taken in by a widow with a small son and a large estate. Needing a man to do the chores, Catherine tries to convince him that she's an ordinary "Kind of a Woman," but Pippin is not convinced, telling her he's "Extraordinary" and not out for domesticity. Following a "Love Song," Pippin leaves, whereupon Catherine tearfully states "I'll gues I'll Miss the Man."

In the finale, Pippin, avoiding the choice of martydom through a spectacular suicide by fire (and though stripped of everything) chooses instead to hopefully survive domestically with Catherine and son.

Soloists selected for the November 3 performance include: Stanley McCleave and Mike Jacobus in a duet of leading players; Ruth Ann Wilbanks and Judy Corliss alternating as Grandmother Berthe, a womens quartet consisting of Bonnie Holsinger, Marian Hummel, Betty Paine, and Judy Fulks; and Judy Thweatt as Catherine. The role of Pippin will be shared by Tom Banfield and John Morton.

The first six weeks of the fall term have been busy ones for the CPP staff. We want to thank the seniors for their excellent response to the senior meetings. So far, we have met with over 80% of the seniors. We have offered five resume workshops and seven interview workshops with average attendance of 8 to 14 students each.

A reminder to you to complete a rough outline of your resume and bring it in to us for review. This will be helpful to you in making employment contacts during the holidays and helpful to us in making contacts on your behalf.

To all fine arts and theatre majors: We have invited Ms. Judith Crumb, Placement Director of The School of The Boston Museum of Fine Arts, to be our guest in November. She will present a program on "Survival Skills for the Fine Artists."

Also, we are meeting with each freshman inquiry group. These meetings will continue through November.

Morton dallies amorously

"Stop the World—I Want To Get Off," the British musical hit that delighted audiences for over 16 months will be the opening production of the 1976-77 Maryville College Playhouse season.

The play will be presented beginning on November 18th and running through November 20th in the College Theatre.

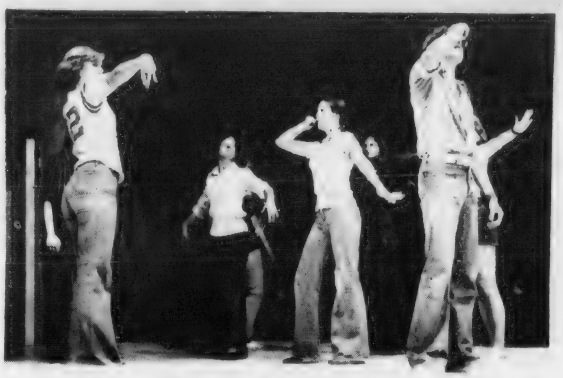
John Morton, a sophomore speech-theatre major from Lyndhurst, OH, is starring as Littlechap in the kind of dream role every young actor covets. Morton is the only man in the musical and is surrounded by 10 lovely girls. This international success came into being because Anthony Newley, co-author of the show, wrote it to that specification for himself.

Newley, a British subject, was being reluctant with a London producer who wanted to put him under contract for a show. The producer asked him impatiently just what kind of play he wanted to do. As a joke Newley snapped back, "A one-man revue with 10 girls around me." The producer said, "Bring me such a show and I'll put it on."

Newley took him up on the idea and a few months later brought him "Stop the World—I Want To Get Off," written by himself in collaboration with his friend Leslie Bricusse. The remarkable book, lyrics and music all were written by the Newley—Bricusse team. Newley showed additional versatility by taking the one male role and directing the show.

Although such a "one-man band" concert rarely succeeds, "Stop the World—I Want To Get Off" became a London triumph that ran 17 months, and Newley himself came to New York to re-enact his coveted role that Morton will be doing in the Playhouse production.

Along with Morton, the cast of 10 ladies will be led by Ruth Ann Wilbanks, a junior speech-theatre major from Granby, CN, who plays Littlechap's wife Evie. Anya, the Russian version of Evie who seduces Littlechap is played by Ruth Cartlidge, a sophomore speech-theatre major from Maryville. Heidi Parunak, also a sophomore speech-theatre major from Pitman, NJ, will play Cio Cio San, the beguiling Japanese lotus flower who also gets with our hero. The American version of Evie, Ginnie, will be patriotically done by Judy Thweatt, a sophomore voice major from Winchester, VA. Others in leading roles include Julie Adams, a junior English major from St. John, U. S. Virgin Islands, and Adrienne Bennett, a freshman speech-theatre major from Maryville, as Littlechap's daughters.



"Stop the World" is the story of a commonplace man's entire journey through life with some frequent stops for amorous dalliance. It chronicles Littlechap's life from birth to his courtship and shotgun wedding; his going to work in his rich, domineering father-in-law's business; his gradual rise to eminence as an industrial tycoon; his election to Parliament; and his elevation to the peerage (he is finally Lord Littlechap).

At the end, the mediocre man who has elbowed his way to the top—and picked up a coronary condition along the way—evaluates the emptiness of his success in the show's biggest hit, "What Kind of Fool Am I?".

This life story of a twentieth century "Everyman" is spiced with a number of other songs which have achieved widespread popularity (notably "Mumbo-Jumbo," lampooning the doubletalk of political electioneering). The play also features a humor of unusual width—ranging from broad to sharply pointed, from frivolous fun to stinging satire—in the English music hall tradition of mixing corn with clever commentary.

The musicalized tale of an opportunist's life is being directed by Thomas E. Jones, head of the MC speech-theatre department. Elaine Armfield, a local dance instructor, is in charge of the extensive choreography of the show, and Dr. Dan Kinsinger of the music department faculty is serving as musical director.

Tickets are now on sale for the opening pruduction of "Stop the World—I Want To Get Off" and can be purchased by either writing Maryville College Playhouse, Box 2825, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801 or by calling the box office 982-2911 any afternoon. Adult tickets are $2.50 and student tickets are $1.50. Season tickets are also on sale for the entire season for $6.

"Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" is reaching the final phases of production as the MC Playhouse opener.

Saga gives recognition

by Charles Craven

Food Service Director Bob Miller, who is pleased with the greatly improved morale on campus this year, wants to help boost it by providing special recognition for noteworthy persons, groups, and organizations, and by helping them make special food arrangements for out-of-town trips and other special occasions.

The first of what Miller hopes to be a series of special recognitions came October 9 when the football players, after defeating number-three-ranked Hampden-Sydney, were served hamburgers and French fries as they sat in a group in the dining hall. Plans such as this will be arranged so as not to cost any extra money: in this case the food items cost no more than what was served to other sutdents, and the student waitresses volunteered their time to serve the players at the tables.

Miller planned this treatment not only to reward the football players, but to establish this sort of recognition as something that can be done for any group, person, or organization whose outstanding achievements come to his attention.

In addition to providing recognition for organizations, Miller invites them to seek his help when making food arrangements for special occasions. Women's Basketball Coach Sharon Brown and Band Director Charles Hurt testify to help he has given them. For these organizations and the athletic teams he has arranged for them to eat at out-of-town colleges that also have Saga Food Service, in addition to providing them with early breakfasts, late suppers in the Student Center, and sack lunches—all at no extra charge.

Hurt emphasizes that Miller "really went out of his way to help the Band. Were it not for his help we would have attended only one away game instead of two." He also remembers the refreshments provided for the October pep rally at which the Jazz Ensemble played.

Regarding these special services, Miller says, "That's part of what we're here for." Realizing that he is in a position to affect more students than anyone else on campus, he wants to do anything he can to help the morale. He says, "We (at Saga) have been looked on as outsiders, and I don't want us to be—I want to be a part of the campus community."

Messia Soloists announced

Seventeen soloists, students and singers from the community, have been selected for the 44th annual presentation of Handel's Messiah at Maryville College at 3 p.m. on Sunday, November 14, in Wilson Chapel.

Thomas Banfield, a sophomore music education major from Chesterland, Ohio, will sing the tenor recitative, "Comfort ye."

The tenor aria, "Every valley," will be sung by Harold Mays, choral director at South-Young High School in Knoxville. Mays has been with the Knoxville city school system since he graduated from Maryville College in 1959. The November 14 performance of Messiah will be the first appearance of the South-Young High School Chorus, who will join with the combined College Concert Choir and College-Community Oratorio Chorus for the performance.

The bass recitative "Thus saith the Lord" and aria "But who may abide" will be sung by Dr. Dan Kinsinger. Dr. Kinsinger will be performing as Messiah soloist for the 24th year, and has been on the college music faculty since 1954.

Dolores Ziegler, voice instructor at the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts, will sing the alto recitative "Behold, a virgin shall concieve," and aria, "O thou that tellest." Ziegler has appeared as soloist in a number of musical organizations in East Tennessee, including the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra. She has studied at the University of Tennessee since her graduation from Maryville in 1973.

Michael Jocobus, a senior music education major from Lower Burrell, Pa., will sing the bass arioso, "For behold, darkness shall cover the earth." The bass aria that follows, "The people that walked in darkness," will be sung by David Adcock, a senior music education major from Knoxville.

The soprano recitatives "There were shepherds" and "And the angel said unto them" will be sung by Judy Fulks, a freshman voice major from Clearwater, Florida.

Editors propose moratorium

Nuclear Energy development should cease

Editor's note: During the past two weeks, several members of the staff of the Highland Echo have been contemplating a statement of opposition of the use of nuclear energy in solving the current energy dilemma. Our reason for this concern stems from the discussion of the breeder reactor at a Community Issues and Values program aired two weeks ago last evening.

In that discussion, the push for nuclear energy was more than apparent. It is basically this and the current proliferation of the nuclear reactor as the saving grace to the energy independence of the United States that causes our biggest concern.

While the Highland Echo cannot have an impact upon the "great decision-makers" hopefully we can prompt you, our readers, to take heed as individuals and, as a collective whole and fully examine the concerns we have expressed.

A special note of thanks to be extended to David Young, long a catalyst in directing the futuristic thinking on the Maryville College campus.

First: credit where credit is due. Roger Roemmich, who presented the program "On the Road to Energy Independence—The Breeder Reactor" on October 12, is right about certain factors concerning the breeder reactor and the conventional reactor.

*The nuclear reactor can function at an exceptionally low economic rate in certain parts of the country where coal-powered turbines are impractical.

*There has been—to date—an outstanding safety record by the nuclear reactors that serve the consumer public.

*The immediate air pollution factor is virtually non-existent.

There are some other things that need to be considered. The economic situation is an unknown—who knows what the price of uranium will be ten years from now. Already within the past four years the price of a pound of uranium has risen from $6 to $40.

The use of the breeder reactor, which Roemmich and his employer—Oak Ridge Associated Universities and the Breeder Reactor Corporation—encourages, depends heavily upon the reprocessing of uranium and plutonium fuel by-products. This, too, is an expensive process.

In an editorial in Chemical and Engineering News by Albert F. Plant this factor is pointed out. Nuclear Fuel Services which owns the sole commercial reprocessing plant for these by-products in the United States is currently considering ending this service due to the tightness of governmental rules which would monumentally boost the cost of reprocessing. This, in the end, passes the cost right on the consumer.

When considering the fantastic safety record at nuclear reactor sites, the stipulation must be made that the past is not the future—obviously. Two particular incidents, now labelled close-calls, point to the potential of a reactor creating a melt-down where nuclear contamination of the environment becomes possible if not probable.

In 1966, the Fermi Reactor near Detroit faced a possible melt-down situation as it was being prepared for the production of energy. The failure of various safeguards almost necessitated the evacuation of the city of Detroit. Had this been the case there would have been but a matter of hours for the occupants to flee.

At Brown's Ferry in Alabama in 1975 a similar situation occured. An accidental fire burned through the cables of the safeguard systems rendering these useless. It it had not been for the last minute work of a single worker, the nearby town of Decatur, Alabama would have been severely threatened.

These two incidents point to the human factor that must be taken into account at all nuclear reactor sites. A compromise in the construction and maintainance of these plants means the chances for such incidents to occur are multiplied.

Alvin Weinberg, former director of Oak Ridge National Laboratories points towards this necessity of "using the highest standards of engineering design and execution; of maintaining proper discipline in the operation of nuclear plants in the face of the natural tendency to relax as a plant becomes older and more familiar; and perhaps of managing and operating our nuclear plants with people of higher qualification than were necessary for managing and operating non-nuclear plants; in short, of creating a continuing tradition of meticulous attention to detail."

Another pollution factor Roemmich failed to consider is the possible air pollution in an accident situation. Radioactive particles released in such a situation would be extremely harmful to the environment. An area contaminated by such an accident, as was possible at Brown's Ferry, would dictate stern protective measures. This includes the possibility of cordoning-off of the area for several hundred years.

Another aspect considered by Roemmich but not under the topic of pollution in his discussion is the disposal of waste materials. Roemmich stated that with the breeder reactor the wastes that will accumulate by the year 2000 could be stored in a room 25 by 25 by 25. But, this is before the wastes are diluted for storage. Therefore, the actual amount would be several times greater than his prediction.

An implication not mentioned by Roemmich was the social-institution factor. Nuclear energy and its production places particular demands upon society, These are, as Weinberg says, a vigilence and quality control generation after generation for a length of time to which humanity is unaccustomed.

For example, the disposal sites will have to be guarded thousands of years to insure that people do not disturb them. Action either planned or unpremeditated could cause a reaction detrimental to the society. The question we must ask is will future societies understand us in the way that many pretend now to understand such past societies as the Romans and Greeks?

We have examined the issues head on: cost, safety, pollution, and social implications have all been considered. In doing this we have purposely avoided statistics due to their purely temporal qualities—today's fact is tomorrow's fiction.

In concluding we urge the following: That a ban be imposed upon the development of nuclear energy in both construction and current use. As an alternative, a ten-year moratorium on nuclear energy envoked during which time full consideration should be given to alternative energy sources. These solutions could come via solar, wind, geothermal, and other forms of soft technology.

In a discussion with David Young recently this moratorium seemed to be the most logical solution to the situation at hand. In an article in early September the Wall Street Journal mentioned that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has declared such a moratorium. This is a positive and necessary step.

A new technology needs to be attempted and subsidized thus promoting a softer and smaller means of acquiring energy. The important element again is human life. We need to make our energy sources akin to the human experience, cease nuclear proliferation, and realize that the time has come where man's future existence needs to be considered as his technology prepares to overwhelm him.

In a sense it is a delivery. We need to realize that this very delivery could be either into a positive future or into the very bonds of the technological monster we seek to escape.

Candidate profiles

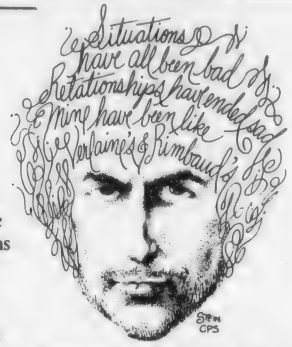
Nuclear power

Carter

"The private commercial production of enriched nuclear fuel should be approached with extreme caution.

"U.S. dependence on nuclear power should be kept to the minimum necessary to meet our needs. We should apply much stronger safety standards as we regulate its use. And we must be honest with our people concerning its problems and dangers."

Ford



"Greater utilization must be made of nuclear energy in order to achieve energy independence and maintain a strong economy. It is likewise vital that we continue our world leadership as a reliable supplier of nuclear technology in order to assure that worldwide growth in nuclear power is achieved with responsible and effective controls.

Alternative energy sources

"A major immediate need is to derive maximum energy from coal, while preserving environmental quality . . . . Power companies and industries must shift to this source of energy, and we must invest in improved mining efficiency, cleaner combustion technology, and a better transportation system for moving coal to its end users."

"Coal must be used increasingly as an alternative to scarce, expensive or insecure oil and natural gas supplies. We must act to remove unnecessary constraints on coal so that production can grow from the 1975 level of 640 million tons to over one billion tons by 1985 in order to help achieve energy independence."

Dylan put on day shift at colleges

(CPS)—"Twenty years of schoolin' and they put you on the day shift," whined Bob Dylan in 1965. But now Dylan himself-after fifteen years of myth-building and paying literary dues—is being put back into schools, as Dylan seminars spring up on campuses around the country.

It doesn't take a fortune teller or gypsy from Desolation Row to know that the next generation will find Dylan's words bound between Viking cloth covers, stacked 300 high in college bookstores, right next to Rimbaud and Whitman. In the coming years, it will be the professors and critics who were raised on Dylan that will be determining what is of "literary merit," not their crotchety teachers who rejected "the youth's voice of the sixties."

"Anyone who thinks Dylan is a great poet has rocks in his head," snorted a University of Vermont English professor in 1965, summing up academia's attitude towards Dylan (himself a University of Minnesota drop-out).

Not so long ago just a handful of maverick teachers were quoting Dylan's words, mostly graduate instructors who led clandestine discussions in seedy coffeehouses, seeking a respite from an outdated curriculum of a stuffy English department. Or the draft resisting music teacher who almost lost his job for goading seventh graders into a secret verse of "Blowin' in the Wind."

Today, Dylan is not only taught by legions of teachers throughout the country, but is thought by some to be the major poet of our era.

In the last two years, courses dealing with Dylan have been offered at such diverse colleges as the University of Southern California, the State University of New York, Johns Hopkins University, and Dartmouth College.

At a recent meeting of the Modern Language Association in San Francisco, fifty scholars, almost all young English professors, gathered to discuss "The Deranged Seer: The Poetry of Arthur Rimbaud and Bob Dylan," and how Dylan's view of women has evolved from "macho posturing" to a "reconciliation of the sexes."

"I always use Dylan in my poetry classes, it's the most popular section of the course," says Belle D. Levinson, professor of English at SUNY at Geneseo. "Increasingly," she adds, "students are more familiar with Dylan's songs, mostly because he's being taught in the high schools."

Levinson emphasizes the "crucial links" between the poetry of Dylan and the French Symbolists, particularly Rimbaud and Baudelaire. She lectures about the similarity of Dylan's and Rimbaud's psychic trips, how both "were drained by drugs and came out with changed senses of perception." Their poetry is that of "evocation and experience rather than description." Levinson often compares Dylan's "Mr. Tambourine Man" to Rimbaud's "The Drunken Boat" since both poems are surrealistic, drug induced, mystical journeys.

At Geneseo, two of Levinson's colleagues taught an interdisciplinary course on the music and poetry of Dylan that drew scads of student raves.

The chairman of the Modern Language conference, Patrick Morrow of Auburn University in Alabama, agrees that Dylan's time has arrived in "higher learning" but stresses that it's mostly the junior colleges and state

World Scene

Henry Kissinger confirmed a rumor that Vietnam and the United States have agreed to an "exchange of views" designed to improve relations between the two countries.

Two Rhodesian black leaders have vowed to increase guerrilla warfare against the Ian Smith government. Meanwhile, Smith said that the white minority can hold out against blacks and international sanctions for over two years.

This past weekend, most newspaper editors endorsed the presidential candidate of their choice. Most favored Ford by a four to one margin. Notably, The New York Times and the St. Louis Dispatch supported Carter.

In a report to the central bureau, Leonid Brezhnev scolded the American presidential candidates for their "tough line" against the Soviet Union.

Pathways to change

The All College Council at its last meeting approved two recommendations from the Instructional Program Committee: a credit course in career development and a revision in requirements to permit art majors to choose among five emphases (art studio, art history, art therapy, art education, and interior design).

These proposals grew out of the expression of student needs, faculty interests, and response to the Weiner Report recommendation that the College provide more opportunities to "allow students to test career options before making final choices and to test in an on-going way the relevance of their course selections and activities."

In the process of making these decisions, both IPC and ACC members asked the questions that are troubling administrators and faculty of liberal arts colleges everywhere: What direction should the curriculum be taking in 1976? What concessions should be made to student (and parent) demands for career orientation? A recent report by the Association of American Colleges showed most private colleges to be "maintaining or even increasing their emphasis on liberal education so far in the face of waning student interest," and this in spite of warnings that such a course may sound their death knell.

The tendency at many liberal arts colleges seems to be either to pursue the established course or to capitulate to career interests. Fortunately at Maryville the question up to this time has not been either/or. Rather it has been "Why the dichotomy?" Certainly no dichotomy existed in the minds of the founding fathers, whose aims were primarily to train ministers, always, however, with the emphasis on liberal learning. Gradually they accomodated the curriculum to the needs of teachers, lawyers, doctors, and business men.

If, in the intervening years, the balance at Maryville has been successfully maintained, it has come about through an understanding of what is meant by liberal arts and career. Liberal arts may be defined first in terms of subjects—the arts, humanities, social sciences—but, more important, in terms of those disciplines that stress ideas, creativity, and critical thinking. Occasionally a course in literature or the arts might not fit the latter half of the definition, whereas a skills course directly related to career (or, more narrowly, to vocation) might well stress ideas, creativity, and critical thinking. It becomes a matter of attitude and approach.

Career, according to the definition adopted by the faculty committee responsible for drawing up plans for the Career Planning and Placement Program, involves not simply work or vocation, but total life. The Career Planning staff, in proposing a course in career development, wisely followed the committee concept, designing a course that will include values clarification, self-assessment, and development of decision-making skills, as well as the more practical exploration of processes of entry into the world of work.

It looks as if while other colleges are debating the either/or position, Maryville will stay with the both/and, being careful to keep the two in balance. It is heartening to see questions raised—in committees, in the ACC, in Echo editorials. Such questioning will provide the tensions in which creative decision-making can continue to flourish.

Literary magazine supported

Poetics need consideration, too

Last spring a literary/art publication, Impressions, was presented to the campus. This represented the works of approximately 25 poets, prose writers, and artists. It also represented the individual efforts of six to seven others who contributed to the production of the magazine.

For a time this writer was editor of Impressions, and, while there are times when it is hard to separate the magazine from my personage and speak objectively of its content and purpose, I must seek now to do so in the interests of its continuation.

If there can be one major fault with last year's publication it was the size of the production staff. This work was done by three people. Due to this size the publication was hampered in three ways. First, was a feeling of elitism that was both perpetrated by the staff and against staff and the idea of the magazine. Second, it slowed the production of the magazine to delay its appearance until the end of the spring term. And third, this delay was sufficient enough to make the appearance virtually meaningless to many.

To ensure a proper and representative creative publication these faults must be corrected.

Impressions, if it is to succeed as a publication, needs the support of this community. The basic interest for such a publication exists on campus—how big an interest remains to be seen. That interest is as important as any of the other extra-curricular activities on campus. Recognition of the type Impressions can give to encourage the creative mind is an absolute necessity if this campus is to make any claims about its support to the creative tendencies the people here.

The need for Impressions can be explained the following way. The football team is currently enjoying a considerable amount of success. Two people who have contributed to its success—there are others, too—are coach Jim Jordan and tailback Alvin Nance. They, fortunately, have an outlet for what they do well.

This same type of outlet should be granted to the poets of this campus, such as David Powell and Lisa Wilson, both whom have produced poetry of merit. Again there are others in the arts.

Impressions will require sound and creative leadership in the editorial position if it is to continue as a representative vehicle for the creativity of the campus. In a recent meeting of the Communications Committee the decision was made to go ahead with publication this year with certain factors considered.

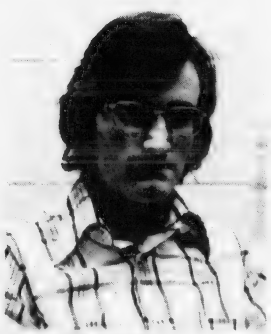
There is no money: Along with editing capabilities the editor will have to show the ability to fund the magazine, an outlay of $400 to $800. There will be little if any continuity from the staff that produced Impressions last year. And finally, the editor must have the time to create not only a product of artistic value, but he/she must have the time to give the magazine publicity and make people notice its existence.

The Communications Committee of the All-College Council has taken significant steps towards establishing this outlet. It remains for the community that surrounds and vitalizes itself here to meet the challenge and answer with a product that bears the artistic talents of these times at Maryville College.

Tim Rahn

Anderson to visit MC

According to a recent communication from Raymond Brahams, the first presidential prospect will be visiting the Maryville College campus this week. He is Dr. Wayne W. Anderson, currently Director of the Trustee Leadership Program for the Association of Governing Boards.



Students will have a chance to meet Anderson from 10:30 a.m. to noon on October 29, in Anderson 214. During that period he will be available to answer questions, and ask a few, of the students who care to attend.

It will be informal, and students should feel free to drop in for awhile and then leave if they have other obligations.

Brahams reported that in addition to this meeting, Anderson will be around the campus, with some free time, all day Friday and part of Saturday. Students may initiate additional conversations with him during these free times. The biggest block of free time is Friday, 9:00 – 10:30 a.m.

Registrar memo

The Registrar's office has reported that there will be no charge for a CIV credit. However, it is requested that a student register for a CIV course as he would any other course in order to help with the bookkeeping involved in checking attendance.

Arthur T. Fowler

Fowler presents seminar

Arthur T. Fowler, a 1975 chemistry graduate of Maryville College, presented a seminar to the Department of Chemistry of the University of Kentucky on October 8.

His lecture dealt with recent progress in establishing mechanisms for the action of certain carcinogenic (cancer-causing) organic dyes. Fowler's interest in this subject grew out of research at Maryville, particularly a 1974 summer project, sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Fowler is currently a graduate student at the University of Kentucky, pursuing his interest in carcinogenic organic compounds.

Applications accepted for Impressions

Looking toward the publication of a literary magazine, Impressions, at Maryville College, if financial underwriting can be assured, the Communications Committee of the All-College Council is seeking applications for staff in two categories:

1. Editor. Open to all majors. Qualifications: upperclassman-preferably, this year, a Junior or Sophomore; at least "C" average; some experience but not currently holding another editorship. Application must include the name of the person who will serve with the editor as the business manager.

2. Anyone interested in a particular area:art, layout, copy, proofreading, typing, etc.

The Communications Committee is stressing continuity and attempting to build an experienced staff. Those participating this year should look forward to working next year, when requirements for the editor will include one or two years experience on the staff.

All these jobs will take time and there will be no financial remuneration, but valuable experience will be provided for those interested in this field.

Address application to Box 2861.

Shields appointed to SREB

Dr. Randolph Shields, chairman of the Department of Biology at Maryville College, has been appointed a consultant to the Kenan Education Program of the Southern Regional Education Board.

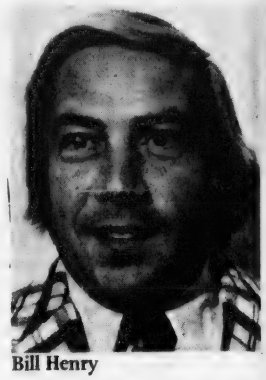
The Kenan Foundation provides grants for the improvement of teaching in minority institutions. Dr. Shields' first assignment is at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, where a program is underway to improve the teaching of science. He will make campus visits in the fall and spring to evaluate the progress being made in the institution's Kenan Program activities. Later he will attend a meeting in Atlanta with other consultants and staff to review the year's work.

Henry sets goals for athletics

by Robert Boone

When Bill Henry replaced Boydson Baird as Maryville College's Athletic Director, he knew challenges lay in his future. The native East Tennessean, who was a friend of the great Lombe S. Honaker, was attracted to Maryville mainly because of its reputation.

"My goal is to develop the same reputation athletically for Maryville College as it has academically. I believe if we're going to have an athletic program at all it should be the best program."



Henry eyes a new image for the Athletic Department: a program of excellence in which the school and community take pride in young men and women developing themselves. Their experience at Maryville should be meaningful, build character, and teach qualities on the athletic field which become important in life.

Henry knew when he took the job that it would take patience and hard work, but he also believes nothing is worth getting unless one works hard to get it.

"I won't accept reasons why we can't be successful. If we have people who want a great program here, we'll have it."

Fighting a busy schedule, Henry will continue to work hard to achieve his goals. The Curriculum of the man with many hats includes scheduling athletic contests, recruiting athletes, conducting rules and regulations, and serving as head baseball and basketball coach. Henry does not believe his goals are impossible to reach and declares "Life's greatest satisfaction is doing things people say you can't do."

Presently Mr. Henry is in the inconvenient position of residing in South Carolina and commuting to Maryville College four days a week. But this disadvantage will end in December when he and his family move to Maryville.

Bill Henry

Serving his first year with Maryville College, Bill Henry has been successful at the University of Florida, Union College, Union University, and Baptist College at Charleston.

Stewart to appear on WATE-TV Friday

James Stewart, chaplain at Maryville College, will appear on the "Today in Tennessee" show on WATE-TV (Channel 6) Friday, October 29.

Stewart, along with James Harb of Knoxville, staff member of the Knoxville Friends of Palestine, and Shassan Rubeiz, professor at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, will discuss the conflict in Lebanon on the hour-long show.

Stewart, who joined the MC administrative staff this fall, formerly served as campus pastor and director of the University Christian Center in Beirut, Lebanon, for nine years before returning to the United States this past March. Professor Rubeiz also served in Lebanon from 1970 until the summer of 1975 as professor of studies in welfare at the Beirut University College, a Presbyterian-related school in Beirut.

The show is aired from 6 to 7 a.m.

Young's paper

On ethics of increased science

The question "Do we want to make super people?" will be raised by Dr. David P. Young in a paper on biomedical ethics to be delivered before the 28th American Chemical Society Southeast regional meeting in Gatlinburg on Friday.

Biomedical ethics is "an area of inquiry that raises the ethical question or questions of how we ought to use our ever increasing scientific knowledge as it applies directly to human beings," explains Young. The field covers a wide variety of topics such as genetic engineering, psycho-surgery, freeze burial, euthanasia, and brain-computer interfacing.

Young has taught biomedical ethics here at Maryville College for the past four years and is currently doing likewise as a visiting professor in the Department of Zoology at the University of Tennessee. The paper will deal primarily with the teaching of biomedical ethics that he has done here and at U.T.

While the meeting in Gatlinburg will be concerned with the field of chemistry, Young hopes to arouse the professional chemist's awareness of the ethical issues involved in their field.

Young feels that the ethical questions are inter-disciplinary and no one person whether an "ethicist, theologian, historian, biologist, or chemist" is any more or less responsible for ethical decisions.

"These are human questions," says Young. He says too that chemistry is contributing a lot of basic material, but that the field must also consider the ethical aspects of research.

Young's paper will cover two areas of thought and shift from one to the other. DuPont Chemical's slogan of "better living through chemistry" expresses the first idea and the second idea is expressed by the bionic man concept. Young explains this concept as the idea that we can make man "better than he was." Young feels that this is the basic issue since biology and chemistry have reached the point where we are now capable of changing the human organism. Not only can we have better living but life itself can be altered.

Young is the author of A New World in the Morning The Biopsychological Revolution and is engaged in writing a new book currently titled 21st Century Pioneering: Alternative Pathways into Now.

Joe Genualdi breaks through for a 56 yard touchdown run in Maryville's 63—2 win over St. Leo.

MC wallops St. Leo 63-2

by Robert Boone

Everyone got a piece of the action Saturday as Maryville College breezed by St. Leo 63—2 for their third victory of the year. Maryville's explosive offense had the Scots up 50—0 at halftime, and coasted downhill to an easy victory. Incidentally, Saturday's 63 points equal the total points produced by Maryville last season.

Maryville dominated the statistics, getting 24 first downs, 446 yards rushing, and 64 passing. St. Leo, swarmed by hungry Maryville defenders, finished with one meager first down and 32 yards total offense.

Senior tailback, Joe Genualdi, had a sensational day with three touchdowns on runs of one, four, and 56 yards to lead Maryville in scoring.

Joe Lombardo started Maryville's scoring parade on a 3 yard run. Tim L. Kelly connected on the conversion for a 7—0 lead. Gary Petree swept right end on a broken play for a second touchdown, and Paul Murphy mauled over from the five for a 21—0 lead with three quarters remaining. Coach Jim Jordan then rushed in reserves to play the remainder of the game.

The second quarter saw Genualdi get his first touchdown on a determined one-yard blast. Freshman tackle Larry Wright recovered a Charlie McGuire blocked punt in the end zone for another score as the Scots poured it on. Genualdi again hit daylight on a four-yard score and defensive end Phil Lloyd smothered a St. Leo back in the end zone for a safety. Tony Scalise rambled 13 yards for paydirt as the Scots concluded a fabulous 29 point second quarter.

Maryville added two second half touchdowns to polish off the scoring jamboree. Genualdi exploded down the left sideline for a 56 yard sprint and Robert Boone grabbed a 20-yard aerial in the corner of the end zone from David Kibben.

Coach Stinnet, Craig Arcos and Coach Jim Jordan

St. Leo escaped a shut-out by nabbing a Maryville runner in the endzone for a safety.

Next Saturday in Homecoming style, Maryville hosts highly ranked Millsaps College for probably the season's most important game. Beating Millsaps Saturday is Maryville's first big step in reaching the Division III playoffs. If the Scots could win the remainder of their games (7—2), they would be a definite playoff contender. Saturday's showdown should be a thriller.

Scoring—Maryville: Joe Lombardo 3 runs (Tim Kelly kick); Gary Petree 11 run (Kelly kick) Paul Murphy 5 run (Kelly kick); Joe Genualdi 1 run (Kelly kick); Larry Wright recovered blocked punt in end zone (Kick failed); Genualdi 4 run (Kelly kick); Phil Lloyd tackled Joe Holden in end zone for safety; Tony Scalise 13 run (Kelly kick); Genualdi 56 run (Kelly kick); Robert Boone 20 pass from Dave Kibben (kick blocked).

Intramurals

In last week's flag football action, the Raiders eased by the defending champion Bombsquad, 6—0. A defensive struggle from beginning to end, the game's only score came on a Scott Garren to Bruce Hill TD pass.

The other game was very close. In this one, HMF got into the win column by taking Bad Company, 31—24. Wayne Williams scored three TD's to lead the winners.

Man from Stasafran

(CPS)—A 19-year old man in Bay City, Michigan, was found a long way from his alleged home, Stasafran, a planet he said was located off route Earth, north of the orange Milky Way.

The police questioned the man who was sleeping in a motel doorway, who claimed to be fleeing nuclear holocaust on his home planet. The man gave "A-1—B-2 Proton Street" as his home address and offered as proof of his identity the letters "TS" tattooed on his arm, standing for Travel Spaceman."

Travel Spaceman spent the day in the Bay County Jail drunk tank and under further questioning said the "TS" actually stood for Terry Spencer.

Scots blank Bryant

A cold and dreary day resulted in a cold and dreary game for the soccer club Wednesday, Oct. 20, as they lost a home decision to King College, 7—2. King jumped out in front of the Scots in the first two minutes and went on to a 5—0 halftime lead. In the second period Will Way scored twice, but so did King for a final score of 7—2.

A head goal by Shin Tanaka provided the only goal Maryville needed Saturday as they shut out Bryan College Jay-Vee's 1—0. Bart Rutan, who played an outstanding game, became the first M.C. goalie ever to turn in two shutouts.

Laurie Hill and Will Way paced the offense while Bill

After a scoreless first half, Randy Pasqua assisted Shin Tanaka for the goal with 20 minutes elapsed in the second Walker anchored the defense. Cindy Murane and Marsha Geraghty also kept offensive pressure on the Bryan goalie. The Soccer Club's record is now 3 and 4.

Busy weekend for women

Last weekend had plenty of volleyball action as the women volleyballers had home matches Friday and Saturday with Carson Newman/Milligan and Trevecca/Tusculum.

Spearheaded by Bobbie Jo Sallade and Jeri Holcombe, Maryville defeated Milligan in a match with scores of 9—15, 15—7, and 15—12. Carson Newman was tops with wins over Milligan 15—5 and 15—2, and over M.C. 15—2 and 15—9.

In Saturday's action, the Scots lost an opener to Trevecca 15—1 and 15—7, but bounced back to hand Tusculum a loss with 18—16, 15—1, 15—4 games. Trevecca pounded Tusculum 15—2, 13—15, and 15—10.

schools that are leading the trend. "Popular culture has not been accepted by most major colleges yet," he asserted. Morrow himself taught a pop culture course at USC which he found was extremely popular with students.

Morrow, praising Dylan's eclectic taste in literature, explains, "Dylan is powerful because he has the vision to seize the spirit of a movement, much like Yeats."

William McClain, professor of German at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, was tickled when a few of his students uncovered direct parallels in the writings of Dylan and playwright Bertolt Brecht. "It's wonderful to know that the words and moods of Brecht are available through Dylan on the juke boxes of America!" McClain said.

And at Dartmouth College, where a seminar called "The Songs of Bob Dylan" was offered last fall, Bob Ringler, a biology major, remarked, "It was one of the best courses I've had. I was somewhat skeptical at first, not knowing much about Dylan, but I found that some of his songs recreated the themes of Browning, Blake and Rimbaud."

Dylan is only the latest in a long succession of renegade writers who were scorned by the literati of their day. Rimbaud was detested by the Parisian men of letters in the early 1870's, and was running guns in Asia before cultists succeeded in legitimizing his poetry. Whitman's masterful Leaves of Grass was banned for its "obscene and immoral paggages." And Ezra Pound's poetry was proclaimed "incoherent, the work of a madman."

This slow acceptance is probably no surprise to Dylan, who has an acute sense of history and always plays his cards right. H is songs are like a newsreel of the sixties and seventies, filled with the movements, fads, slang, and personalities of the time, songs that were made to be examined theiry years after they were written.

Dylan will most likely be a grandfather by the time they teach "Advanced Blonde on Blonde" at Oxford, but as he once said, "I'm still gonna be around when everybody gets their heads straight."

The two ariosos which follow, "And lo, the angel of the Lord" and "And suddenly there was with the angel," will be sung by freshman voice major Judy Corliss, from Knoxville.

Judy Thweatt, a sophomore voice major from Winchester, Virginia, will sing the soprano aria, "Rejoice greatly."

The alto recitative, "Then shall the eyes of the blind," and aria, "He shall feed his flock," will be sung by Betty Payne, a freshman voice major from Clearwater, Florida. "Come unto him," the soprano aria that follows, will be sung by a local community singer, Mrs. Winnifred Hollyfield. A Townsend resident, Mrs. Hollyfield is a member of the Chilhowee Choral Society and formerly sang in churches and religious musical events in New Orleans.

Dr. Charlotte Beck, a member of the English faculty at the college, will sing the alto aria, "He was despised." Although Dr. Beck's two advanced degrees are in English, she holds the Bachelor of Music degree from U—T.

The soprano recitative "Thy rebuke hath broken his heart" and arioso "Behold, and see" will be sung by Cindy Murane, a senior voice major from Hawaii. Murane will also sing the aira, "I know that my redeemer liveth."

John Morton, a sophomore speech-theatre major from Lyndhurst, Ohio, will sing the tenor recitative "He was cut off" and aria "But thou didst not leave his soul in hell."

The soprano aria "How beautiful are the feet" will be sung by Marian Hummel, a sophomore music education major from Huntsville, Alabama.

Frederick Frost, a community singer, will sing the bass recitative "Behold, I tell you a mystery" and aria "The trumpet shall sound." Frost has attended Maryville College and appeared in musical and theatrical productions on campus. In "The trumpet shall sound," he will be joined by Robert Carl, who will play the solo trumpet part.

Women in media... a checklist

(CPS)—Josephine the Plumber and Aunt Bluebell may appeal to the consumer masses around the country but they would not meet the guidelines set forth by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year (IWY) for the portrayal of women in entertainment programming and advertising.

The IWY Commission, which includes such notables as Alan Alda, Governor Ella T. Grasso of Connecticut, Katherine Hepburn, Barbara Walters, and Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana, directed their checklist to writers, directors, producers, and others including actors and actresses. Sponsors of commercial advertising messages and agencies that create them were also on the IWY Commission's mailing list.

The guidelines of the IWY Commission roughly asked the following:

(1) Are the women you portray shown as whole people or as weak and confused and dependent upon male strength, courage and inventiveness?

(2) Do you look for ways to show women in roles that are not stereo-typically defined?

(3) Are you writing parts for women?

(4) Is the exploitive "woman as victim" theme the main entertainment value of your piece?

(5) If a rape is shown, is it dealt with as a basically sexual experience or as a physical assault?

(6) Are somen presented as appealing because they are "cute", uninformed or manipulative?

(7) Do you show men responding positively to strong independent women, just as you show women who respond to men who have those qualities?

(8) In a scene involving men and women, who does all the talking, speculating, problem solving?

(9) Are the women in a crisis portrayed as emotional or irrational?

(10) If a woman has an idea, plan or solution, doe she apologize first or expect to be taken at face value?

(11) Are unmarried women usually presented as incomplete or inadequate?

(12) Does your work reflect the fact that some women occasionally rescue men—emotionally and physically?

(13) When a woman takes action that reflects self-esteem, does she do so as a result of her own insight?

(14) Do the women, as you portray the, have good, open friendships with other women?

Carter squeaks past Ford

In one of the closest elections in recent memory, Jimmy Carter squeaked past Gerald Ford to become President-elect of the United States.

Carter built his strength early in the evening throughout the Southeastern part of the United States. The "solid south" became a reality for the first time since the days of Lyndon Johnson. It is estimated at press time by CBS News that Carter carried 55% of the southern vote as compared to 29% by George McGovern in 1972.

President Ford made his strongest showing in his native mid-west. However, the states carried were of low electoral yield and were not enough to compile a strong enough offense to stop Carter.

The pivitol point came when the voters of New York City overturned the more conservative upstate vote and broke open a deadlocked state vote. The 41 electoral votes added by New York put Carter within 3 votes of the needed 270. Much later, the state of Mississippi added 7 votes making 274 electoral votes for Carter.

This election was characterized by close contests. It may be days or weeks before an official tabulation is finished. Already, the Republican party is seeking to impound the voting machines of New York indicating the possibility of a recount in that state. Other key states such as California, Ohio, New Jersey and Hawaii are in a state of deadlock at press time.

This election is interesting as seen against the back-

President Copeland and 1975 Homecoming Queen Lynn Houlberg present the new queen Kit Williamson and her fiancee.

Williamson crowned queen

by Charles Craven

A Queen crowned, a football game won, a parade of floats, a semi-formal dance in Pearsons Dining Room, a pumpkin-carving contest: these things and others made for an enthusiastic Homecoming with active student participation in spite of cold and wet weather.

Kit Williamson, senior English major, was crowned Homecoming Queen, surrounded by her court of Libby Lowry, Cindy Murane, Pam Patton Osborne, and Carol Paris.

Miss Williamson says that although receiving the crown was "a shock," it was the kind of thrill she can look back on and feel really good about. "It will help me to remember friends, and also those whom I don't know well, as their support made this possible," she said. "I always thought that Homecoming Queen was something that happens to somebody else—to super-people," she continued, emphasizing that last weekend had changed her perspective. She says the experience "reminds me that a good part of my last year is gone; it's hard to believe that it's gone by so fast."

Miss Williamson's only reservation about the honor given the Queen is in knowing that it can cause bad feelings among friends of girls who didn't make it. "I just hope it won't be a dividing factor," she says.

Miss Williamson has been a junior-senior counselor, a tutor for the Japanese students, co-chairman of the Communications Committee, and student member of the Presidential Search Committee. She is engaged to a Naval officer and expects to travel considerably the next few years. She eventually plans to go to graduate school, possibly majoring in library science.

The float contest was won by Davis Dorm, with the Band and Carnegie Hall taking second and third places for their floats. The pumpkin-carving contest, held on Pearsons Patio, was won by Karen Amos, with Dave Osborne and Pete Xiques placing second and third. A small group of Maryville businessmen judged the contests.

The weekend's activities were planned and coordinated by the Social Committee, who provided the pumpkins and other supplies.

A successful Homecoming dance was held in Pearson Hall Saturday night.

Board approves income budget

A 1977-78 income budget of $3,150,900 was adopted by the Maryville College Board of Directors in their semi-annual meeting held on campus October 28 and 29.

Twenty nine members of the 36-member Board plus two honorary members were present for the meeting presided over by Dr. Dan McGill, head of the Department of Insurance at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Four new members elected to the Board recently were introduced at the opening session and all assumed committee assignments. They are Maryvillians Barbara Kerr and Dr. James M. Callaway, Robert R. Campbell of Knoxville, and Clinton Marsh of Atlanta.

The Board members heard a report by Stuart Weiner and Associates of Chicago, professional counselors in the area of admissions, and approved the Weiner study with its recommendations for strengthening the MC admissions program.

A report from the campus community regarding the year-long evaluation of the All-College Council form of governance was presented at the meeting also. The Board adopted the report's recommendations to reconfirm approval of the ACC with certain clarifications and changes.

The Board also voted for Maryville College to participate in the Tennessee Legislative Internship program. This program allows students pursuing degrees in law, political science, history, administration, social work, economics, sociology, journalism, and related fields to earn college credit while working as interns in offices of the TennesseeGeneral Assemblyin Nashville.

In other action, the Board elected Dr. Herman Spivey of Knoxville to membership on the executive committee and to the vice chairmanship of the Board; reelected Mrs. Carle Davis of Maryville as a member of the Blount County Hospital Board; and approved the elevation in rank from associate to full professor for Dr. Margaret Sherer, chairman of the education department.

Also during the meeting the Board received a status report from the Presidential Search Committee headed by Dr. Spivey. The committee reported that they had narrowed the field from 154 applicants to 12 and were in the process of inviting some of these candidates to visit the campus. The committee hopes to complete its work in December and make its recommendations to the Board in early January.

The report to the Board on deferred giving showed total expectancies to date of $2,632,000 through this program.

The Board also heard a report on the Tremont Environmental Center operated by Maryville College in cooperation with the National Park Service and took into account the planning now going on for new physical facilities there.

The Board also observed a brief period of silence as a memorial to Mildred (Mrs. Loyd H.) Langston, teacher, educational administrator and academic dean at Katharine Gibbs School in New York for 30 years who was a member of the MC Board of Directors from 1967 until 1972. She was an honorary Board member at the time of her death this fall. A son, Douglas Langston of Hopewell, New Jersey, is a member of the Board at present.

Looking at the election, media, and polls

Carter and Ford: mirrored image

Last evening, James Earl Carter, the Democratic Party presidential candidate won the national election over the incumbant Gerald R. Ford. Their campaign was one of the closest in recent history, if not one of the more fiercely conducted campaigns in recent history.

It was a campaign marked by the ability of the Democratic Party to unify itself after eight years of ineptitude on the national level. It also saw the Republican Party vicously at odds within itself as Ford and Ronald Reagan battled for the top position. Indeed, the early campaign showed the promise of being a Democratic white-washing of a Republican fallout.

This was not the case. Instead, what happened last evening showed in great detail the power of the broadcast media and explained in great detail the polls possible effect on the outcome of the election.

In watching the early election returns on NBC and listening closely to the reportage of David Brinkly and John Chancelor one could see how the networks bias was working, and working substantially in Carter's favor. This was exhibitted clearly in how their prediction tallies for states were working.

Where with even a small percentage of precincts counted and Carter in the lead, that state—according to the NBC prediction—would be a Carter state. The same was not the case for Ford, especially with Connecticut where even with a large percentage of the vote in and Ford ahead (in a state that was strongly Republican all day) NBC held-off their prediction until it was inevitable.

The polls which showed the apparent closeness of the race up until election eve also played a significant part by unintentionally encouraging one of the largest voter turnouts in history. The candidates had not relieved the voters of their apparent apathy, rather the poll's predictions made everyone want to be appart of the election.

Essentially, this is merely conjecture. The Echo, and this writer in particular, are as politically inept as Ford was throughout the early part of the primaries and into the convention. After all, in making our headlines on Monday evening we were brash enough to say "Ford squeaks past Carter."

There is one thing that can be said though. That is despite the removal of the "Watergate stygma" from the White House and the new look Carter will bring to the presidency when one gets down to the brass tacks of the man the appearence of that man will be the same of the man he will replace.

While Carter might be safely able to assume the position of President of the United States with a fresh outlook and a campaing machinery of unquestionable competence, one cannot help but think that within several years it will all be for naught.

Tim Rahn

Letters to the Echo

Dear Mr. Rahn:

As Chairman of the Republican Party of Blount County, Tennessee, I wish to express my appreciation to Dr. Joseph Copeland, Mr. Raymond (Brick) Brahams, Mr. Bob Miller, and all the other persons at Maryville College that aided us in the preparation and presentation of the dinner the other evening. Possibly, in view of the national publicity the event received, to say it was a success, would be an understatement. I fully realize that many students and personnel at Maryville College were inconvenienced somewhat by the arrangements which had to be made for the dinner and I apologize for that. It was my feeling however, that we were treated with utmost courtesy by everyone at Maryville College. I realize that everyone is not a Republican and that everyone will not vote for President Ford and Senator Dole in November, but I do sincerely appreciate the manner in which supporters of the other candidates conducted themselves while we had our dinner.

Sincerely,
Jerry G. Cunningham
Chairman

Dear Editor,

Six cheers for the latest issue of the Highland Echo. In addition to the esthetics of page one and other attractive Homecoming features, it is the most illuminating issue I have yet seen.

Particularly appealing, to me, is the responsible concern and clearheaded reasoning reflected in the editorial board's stand on nuclear energy development. Tim Rahn and David Boyd will find powerful reinforcement and extension of some of their points, from a world as well as a national standpoint, in the October 1976 number of the prestigious quarterly, Foreign Affairs.

Running down the wooded path the smell of muscadine air warm and charged with the electrical excitement fall bears
I look through the leaves into Aslan's wild, green eyes filled with love, freedom, and challenge.
The mane, a golden sea, uncharted ships lose their way in,
My limbs alive, can run forever in the evening twilight
The moon rises, I pause to make a wish on the lone star.

Back in the dorm greeted with casual, friendly faces Huddled around the pop-corn on the floor
Like the ancient Hebrews round the campfire stew.
Laughing, joking, telling stories
Warm buttery smells hot chocolate and companionship.

I am me
You are you
I want to be the Meist—Me
you the youist—you
Do not mold me in your preconceived shape of what I am.
But turn me loose
And fill your pattern of yourself.

ACC judicial to change

In regular session the ACC met last Wednesday and heard several reports and proposals.

A proposal from the Judicial Council concerning the Review Board was approved by the ACC. The proposal recommended that since the Review Board seldom reviews cases handed down by the Judicial Council unless there is new evidence and since a student is thus restricted in his attempts at appeal that this stipulation be lifted. A student if he is dissatisfied following the usual judicial process may now request that the Review Board review his case even if there is no new evidence.

Pointing out that the religious preference among the student body has shifted, James Stewart outlined one of the considerations that is being made to cope with this shift.

Stewart brought out the fact that the Roman Catholic preference group is now the second largest preference group on campus, second only to the Presbyterians. Through an arrangement with the Bishop of Nashville, the Campus Ministry Staff for Roman Catholic Students at the University of Tennessee will be on campus each Tuesday evening to celebrate the Eucharist.

Vespers to feature jazz

The Maryville College Jazz Ensemble will provide music for the celebration of Holy Communion this Sunday, November 7 at 7:00 p.m. in Wilson Cahpel. Jazz, a music form which expresses the heights of both joy and sorrow, is a most appropriate vehicle of expression in a service like communion.

In recent times a series of jazz masses were composed for use in the Roman Catholic Church and numerous jazz communion services have been created for use in almost every part of the Protestant Church.

During this Sunday's service the group will attempt to match the feeling of the music to that of the service, expressing brokenness and sorrow where that is the essential feeling of the worship. Then praise and joy where that is the mood of the liturgy, or hope where that best expresses the feeling of what is being said.

The service is open to all persons interested in celebrating the sacrament of communion and hearing the offerings of the Maryville College Jazz Ensemble. The Jazz Ensemble is made up of Charles Hurt, Director, playing the trombone; Curtis Leonard, alto sax; Rick Carl, trumpet; Jim Gray, drums; Trip Ziegler, piano; Steve

Counselors are not shrinks

Donna Young, counselor

by Kathy Dunmire

Do you like to talk to people and know they enjoy talking to you? Did you know that Maryville College offers a place on campus where you can do such a thing? Fayerweather Hall isn't just a bookstore, dance and art studio, etc. It also houses the Maryville College Counseling Center with two friendly people, Ray Wasson and Donna Young.

Aware of the "myths which surround the idea of going to a counseling center," the counselors would like to change the concept.

First of all, one does not have to be "crazy" to stop by the office. Young emphasized when asked who should come to the center that it "doesn't matter who you are because sometimes you feel you need to talk to someone in your immediate environment who is not biased."

Myths debased

One may enter the office and just "rap" about school or friends and be assured that nothing of the conversation will be reported to anyone. The counselors do not even discuss with each other the students that stop in each day.

The two rooms which compose the center are casual and not extravagant. Patients are not analyzed on large couches; that is not the type of counseling this center offers.

Young and Wasson are on the Maryville College payroll while working on their doctorates at UT and are here for the benefit of the students and not themselves. The students which they see are not research animals for any projects nor are treated as such.

In attempting to demonstrate the feeling of warmth,the counselors try to be around the Student Center or cafeteria to make themselves known. By doing this they are not complete strangers to anyone visiting the center.

When anyone shares with the counselors, no value judgments or stereotypes are labeled to the personality. They are qualified enough to understand that each case is different and must be handled differently.

Advising when necessary or just being a listener seems to be the "therapy" for their "patients." But, Young and Wasson both realize that if they can't help a person, they can refer the student to someone who can.

Both counselors havemaster'sdegrees in counseling and are confident of their abilities. They both are interested in helping any member of the MC community who feels a need for their services. Wasson expressed that he "would be amenable to start an encounter group, communitive skill group, assertive skill group, consciousness (inter or intra) group, psycho-drama group, personal relationship group or any group that any faculty or students would be interested in."

Wasson also emphasized his willingness to be a guest speaker in classes or to be available as a consultant for special studies.

Art show in FAC

Maryville College Art Department will sponsor an exhibit and sale of approximately 600 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection on November 10. The event will be held at the Maryville College Fine Arts Center Lounge.

Along with prints by such masters as Picasso, Goya, Renoir and Hogarth, can be seen works by many of today's American artists, some famous and some not yet famous.

Room has been made for new merchandise. Come and see.

Scots win 12-6

Millsaps meets match

by Robert Boone

Using an inspired defense along with nature's Homecoming gift of sloppy weather, Maryville upset nationally ranked number 8 Millsaps College 12–6.

Saturday's Homecoming weather was a gift in disguise, because it hampered one of the nation's best passing attacks led by Ricky Haygood, the leading passer in the country.

Defensively, Maryville was awesome. Gutty defensive plays led to both Maryville socres and eventually clinched the victory. The Scots could have gone into the locker room with a 35–0 halftime lead, but failed to capitalize on numerous scoring opportunities. The result was a down-to-the-wire finish.

Maryville's defense set up both touchdowns as Millsaps attempted to punt. Maryville's first score came when Wayne Dunn bulled through to block a punt and Ron Lawson fell on the ball at the Majors' five-yard line. Joe Lombardo needed two tries to cover the distance as Maryville went ahead 6–0.

Senior defensive end Joe Moffett later set up another score when he tackled punter James O'Fallon and then scooped up the loose ball on the 9. Keith Goodwin scored from 4 yards to up the count 12–0. Ken Dickens and Lombardo came up with two super catches which kept the scoring drives alive.

The kicking game failed to connect on any scoring attempts.

Guided by Haygood's bullet passes to his flaring backs, the Majors drove to their score in the third quarter. Ted Ruemke crossed the goal with a Haygood 14-yard pass. Tom Duling broke through to slap away the extra point attempt, giving Maryville a 12–6 lead.

Scot end Keith Goodwin runs for the winning touchdown.

Maryville led in total offense with 236 yards to Millsaps 229 yards. Freshman standout, Alvin Nance, piled up 124 yards in 32 attempts, and defensively Maryville checked the Majors passing attack to 11 of 31 for 144 yards. Haygood, who had averaged 235 yards per game in the air, was sacked six times.

Maryville stuck to basic plays in the fourth quarter hoping to preserve its lead and run down the clock. With Maryville failing to move the ball Millsaps had three chances to score. But the defense showed its class and stopped Millsaps cold. Millsaps biggest threat was halted in the endzone when Mike Smith intercepted Haygood's pass to kill the scoring opportunity.

Next week Maryville hosts another strong air attack. Southwestern at Memphis has averaged 234 yards-per-game passing and will be gunning for the Scots 4–2 record.

Youngs host open-house

Last year many people were observed looking in the windows of Willard House (the 3 story unhaunted house across the hedge from Davis or the Thaw side of Lloyd.)

This year everyone is invited to an open house to see for themselves the marvels of a home built in 1890: fireplaces with wood, tile and iron work, real wood woodwork, tall ceilinged rooms from the era of a receiving-sitting room and of a library, 6 bedrooms, 5 bathrooms, a third floor, unfinished but with a marvelous oval window by a bench seat overlooking the mountains, and the piece de resistance – a throne.

The present occupants of Willard House, the Young family, extend a cordial invitation to the campus community to see this lovely house between the hours of 4:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. on November 6, 1976.

Soccer

The Maryville Soccer Club had no luck with the University of Tennessee October 27, failing to generate any offensive power. The Volunteers came out ahead 7–0.

Women's volleyball

The Maryville Women Volleyball team ventured to the Milligan Small College Invitational October 29–30 and came away with a third place trophy.

The Lady Scots won two matches from Clinch Valley, 15–9, 15–13, and Mars Hill 17–19, 15–9, 15–9; but lost to Carson Newman 15–7, 15–7. Mars Hill came back to defeat Maryville 15–11 and 15–5 for a second place finish. The Scots will travel to U.T.C. and Covenant for away matches November 3 and November 5–6.

Outreach serves area

The Community Outreach Committee was set up to give students an opportunity to provide social services needed in the Maryville community. Although the committee has fallen on hard times in the past several years, it is in the process of revitalizing itself by providing students with the opportunity to work with Blount County Human Resource Agency, one of whose programs is designed to teach illiterate adults how to read and write.

Teaching for Human Resource requires a three-hour training session and a three to six month commitment of one to four hours a week. According to Bruce Semple, head of Human Resources, materials are provided, and transportation can be arranged. Volunteers are matched with compatible students and can check back with Human Resource frequently.

Although volunteers for Human Resource do not get paid, there is a great deal of personal satisfaction to be gained from teaching a person to read and write. Moreover, the experience looks good on a resume. According to Semple, 50 percent of the work is not so much teaching the mechanics of reading as it is helping the person believe that he has the ability to read and write. Volunteers must be reliable, since not showing up for teaching sessions may add to the student's discouragement and lack of belief in himself.

If you are interested in teaching illiterate adults, contact any one of the following: Anne Gilliland Box 2307

Campus program and art show

Egyptian art program set

The art, history, religion, and writings of Ancient Egypt are featured in a special exhibit currently on display in Maryville and will be the topic of a Community Issues and Values program at Maryville College November 17.

The program is set for 9:20 a.m. in the Theatre.

Guest speaker for the program is Mrs. Judith Crumb, career planning and placement director of the School of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Mrs. Crumb is actively involved with the Museum's Department of Egyptian and Near Eastern Studies and also serves as translator of hieroglyphics for the Museum. She will discuss Egyptian themes of writing, religious observances, and Egyptian beliefs concerning life and death and will illustrate her talk with slides and photographs from the Museum.

To coincide with her visit to Maryville College, Mrs. Crumb has made arrangements for an exhibit of Egyptian artifacts to be shown here. This rare and valuable collection of 32 Egyptian art objects on loan from the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston is currently on display in the main lobby of the Bank of Maryville main offices downtown.

Included among the items on display is a collection of Egyptian pottery of the Early and Middle Pre-dynastic age, dating from 4000 to 3200 B.C.; a gilded mask of a woman's head from a mummy case; a letter to the dead from the Tomb of Meru (2160-2040 B.C.); a scribal palette with its original reed pen (2686-2160 B.C.); and a coffin foot board decorated with paintings and polychromed hieroglyphics. Also included in the display is a 4000-year-old loaf of bread.

The exhibit, entitled "Insurance for Eternity—A Collection of Egyptian Burial Objects and Samples of Hieroglyphics," is being brought here through the cooperative efforts of the Maryville College Career Planning and Placement office, the MC Community Issues and Values committee, and the Bank of Maryville. Items in the exhibit will be on display through November 19.

In addition to her scheduled talk, while on campus Mrs. Crumb will meet informally with both fine arts and theatre

Quartets appear Thursday

Ture or False?

Barbershop was a musical fad in America at the turn of the century that faded shortly afterward and finally died out. Answer: False!

To prove it, come spend an hour of your time with a group of "obsessed" harmony lovers, who sing in praise of mother, home, young love, and Dixie, and who will try hard to share their obsession with you.

Cindy Murane, senior voice major, will offer her independent studies presentation on barbershop harmony to all those interested in hearing a portion of their country's musical heritage. The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. on November 11, in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall, followed by an "afterglow" in the FAC lounge.

Performing with Cindy will be her quintet, made up of such featured singers as Joan Wiseman, Rosemary Ahmad, Kathy Kerr, and Chris Curran. Two big highlights of the show will feature the Men's Barbershop Chorus from Knoxville, under the direction of Mr. John Ribble, and the Atomic City Sweet Adeline's Chapter from Oak Ridge, directed by Vicki Hobson.

44th annual presentation of Messiah this Sunday

For the forty-fourth consecutive year, Maryville College is privileged to present to the community Handel's oratorio Messiah on November 14, at 3:00 p.m.

This production is made possible through the combined efforts of both the college faculty and students and community musicians.

The re-creation of this spiritual work, 230 years old, has been termed an awesome religious musical experience for those who attend. A 150-voice chorus formed by the joint forces of the Maryville College-Community Oratorio Chorus, the South-Young High School Chorus, and selected singers from the community, accompanied by a forty-piece orchestra with pipe organ and harpsichord, will perform the oratorio. Hundreds of people from far and near have been drawn to the Maryville College campus to witness the grandeur of this musical presentation and to receive the inspiration of its message.

A unique feature of the College's performance of Handel's Messiah is the variety of soloists selected from student, faculty, and community singers.

An oratorio is usually similar to an opera in form, involving a full-scale plot with characters and action. Most oratorios also have a narrator who exposes the story and serves to connect the solo vocal selections with the choral and orchestral portions.

Messiah is an exception as an oratorio; it is essentially non-narrative in the conventional sense and has neither specific characterizations nor narrator. Rather, the implied story evolves around the prophecies of the coming of the Messiah, the life of Jesus Christ, and the life hereafter. The set pieces typical to both opera and oratorio, including overture, recitatives, arias, and choruses, are employed by Handel in Messiah.

The libbrettist, Charles Jennes, adapted passages of the Old and New Testaments of the Scriptures to form the oratorio's text. The work was premiered in Dublin, Ireland, with Handel conducting from the harpsichord. His performing forces consisted of only twenty-six singers including soloists with an orchestra of thirty-five.

This oratorio is performed annually throughout the United States and Canada, usually during the seasons of Advent and Lent. Since its first American presentation at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, in 1780, Messiah has provided spiritual inspiration to thousands.

Optimism and hope...

Still no existing "community"

In looking back over the past year at Maryville College, one can sense a fundamental feeling of change on the campus. During this year the food service has improved by 75%. We have seen the rise of a winning football team. And in the process we have become optimistic.

Our thoughts seem to have turned to the future somewhat, a new president is imminent, and we appear to feel good.

Perhaps one of the most significant, and, at the same time the most quiet, aspects of this feeling is the study commissioned by the Board of Directors last spring by Stuart Weiner and Associates. They have told us something very fundamental about our campus.

What we have at Maryville College is good—and it is productive. They found that we have a campus that is alive and students that are happy. We are not as negative as we think we are; nor do we need to be as negative with ourselves as we are. Maryville College students in random polls have said that we have departments and faculty, as well as students, that are above reproach.

Wittness the article "Pathways to change" this week. In the discussion about the Community Issues and Values Program we see what a valuable contribution that particular program has made to our campus. It is one of many. The point is that an outsider has told us what we have. It is time to capitalize.

At this point, the ugly perennial question of "community" raises its head. Specifically, do we have one? It seems that we advertise "community," yet we do not have it. The hard question is: What is community?

It would appear that we are still are a divided people. To a degree, we still have a split between Fine Arts and athletics. In the same manner, two opposing factions exist between career-oriented people and liberal arts students who are around "just for the scholarship." In short, we do not understand each other, and during a great deal of the time we do not respect each other. We are still not together.

Dean Blair once explained the concept of "community" as being an ideal toward which we strive. It may or may not be obtainable. The important thing is that we all work toward the ideal together with respect and dedication. If we lose sight of the goal, or hope of reaching that goal, we have lost. It is not apparent that "community" exists at Maryville.

Right now, Maryville stands at a crisis point. We have the ingredients: optimism, supportive outside criticism, and hope. We can either use these things or let them lie fallow. The basis of reaching community potential can be started this year and continued under a new administration next year. Change always brings refreshment and more change. That is fact and its process takes nothing away from the past;

We all must work together. Can it be too much to ask to be able to live in a community of a degree of common purpose, love, and peace?

Ed Loper

Pathways to change

Values are learned. If values were equal, consistent, and universal, there would be no values. Or issues. Variances in belief and understanding are what give us change, passion, discovery, and amusement. The seemingly boundless variety of the world is born in the differences between us. Thank God for differences.

The Community Issues and Values Committee, aware of its purpose to program pertinent, and impertinent, issues and make them available to the college community and the larger community, would like you to be aware too. The Committee brings to Maryville some of the variety of the world. You are offered films, speakers, pantomimists, singers, demonstrators, rock-hounds, lunatics, and lovers of all sorts. You may experience their value in the formal presentations, and you are encouraged to meet and learn from these people after programs, sometimes privately and sometimes in discussion groups.

For these opportunities you may even come closer to graduation as if such a thing were necessary to stimulate curiousity (though there are people who want "credits" for being alive, forgetting that they are a long-time dead). The flesh of the Community Issues and Values idea is its programs; the bones are as follows:

You may receive one course credit for attending thirty programs (as you would attend thirty meetings of a class). You may receive a maximum of two course credits (sixty programs) if completed before graduation (otherwise there is no time limit for completion). These programs are not required for graduation and you may attend the programs whether or not you sign up for credit.

Course credit and the fact that there is no extra charge for this credit is like a gift to those curious enough to explore. Credit is entered as satisfactory (S) on your transcript, and a drop (you may drop credit attendance before the twenty-first program) is listed only as a drop, not as a failure. A drop after the twenty-first program is listed as unsatisfactory (U). You may attend without signing for credit, and if you submit attendance cards at the program you may even sign up at any later time and receive retroactive credit for those programs already attended.

You should also know that before each regular program anyone may speak to the audience on any issue. This three-minute opportunity is called "What's on My Mind." It has been neglected somewhat this term, and we are encouraging you to remember that the opportunity exists. See Dr. Robert Naylor, David Powell, or Harry Howard, or any other member of the committee if you would like to use this time.

Remember, too, that a liberal arts education is one that illuminates differences. You cannot judge the uniqueness of these programs until you have seen them, although some of our community who have exceptional foresight refuse to attend the programs because they "know" they will not like them.

We ask for your suggestions and help in planning and publicizing future and current programs and in evaluating past programs.

Jewelry class designs

Pulsating lines dance

by Laurie Allen

The lines dance and pulsate across the page. They are jagged, irregular pencil strokes roughly outlining a feathery design. Lines, incomplete, project the essence of the dimensional piece soon to be.

The notebook, torn and battered, stained by rain and spattering dyes, contained the thumb-worn sketches of many ideas and dreams. On these pages, uniting imagination of hand, beauty has been conceived, and through a lengthy time-consuming process will eventually be realized and created. The dimensionless slashes of charcoal are soon to become a small, finely constructed piece of jewelry.

On paper the design and concept change constantly, and as the selection of the basic material becomes paramount, the piece takes on an even more spasmodic life. The hard, icy metal demands a say in the birth of the design as its unyielding substance forces a few spidery pencil ideas off the page to be replaced by a more substantial or desirable effect.

The design is the thing, design and balance being the perfect definitions for the craft of jewelry creation. Not only is balance determined by shape, as in canvas work, but also by texture, by color, and by the dimension of the thing.

From tools, graceless and oppressive, come shapes and creations that sparkle and float and sing like the twinkle whisper of a shower of stars. Screaming drills and blazing angry torches bring a piece of frigid, lifeless metal into a brilliant, writhing existence. Iron-grip vices clamp onto the piece, andsmoking bubbles of solder unite the twists and shapes of copper, brass, and silver into a complete whole. Rasping files and grating sandpaper painstakingly smooth fire rough, pebbled edges. Smouldering acids at dull-pounding buffers cleanse, and shimmering reflections appear on the once marred opaque surface.

From imagery to reality the process is long and often tedious. Every touch of flesh to metal must be contemplated carefully, for despite the strength of the material the design can be easily and irreplacebly destroyed. But despite the hours of tension, frustration, and even anger at a particularly stubborn sliver of metal, there is that wonderful, sought-forsensation of elation and triumph when the solid shapeless mass yields ot the hand and chisel.

A delicate fiery piece has been freed; it has shaken off the earthly confining bonds of inanimateness and has become a thing totally new and complete in itself. From smeared and eraser-pebbled paper, the design, be it necklace, pin, ring, or pendent, has come into existence, no longer a blueprint, but instead a dimensional multi-faceted life, a gift, a personal creation forged entirely by mind and hand.

Editor's note: P. G. Evergreen & Sun is a column for the creative efforts of the campus community. All are invited to submit poems, satire, short prose pieces, and cartoons (or whatever suits your fancy.) The only stipulations are that it must be short, signed, and reasonably safe to publish.

Intramurals continue

In last week's flag football action, the Raiders took two games, beating HMF 19—12 and the Bombsquad 12—0. In the first game, Bruce Hill scored two TD's for the Raiders. In the second game, Mark Stephens tossed two TD passes for the Raiders.

After several games, the men's volleyball standings are: Egor, 6—0; Harra Decal, 4—2; VIP's, 4—2; I Phelta Thi, 3—3; Down's Clowns, 3—3; the Huns, 3—4; and Alpha Sig, 2—4.

In the individual sports, Junichi Kasuya won the tennis championship, and Dr. J. W. Nichols won the table tennis tournament.

REMEMBER! Coed volleyball entries are due November 12, and Men's Basketball entries are due November 18!

Defense shines

Scots blitz SAM; assure winning season

by Robert Boone

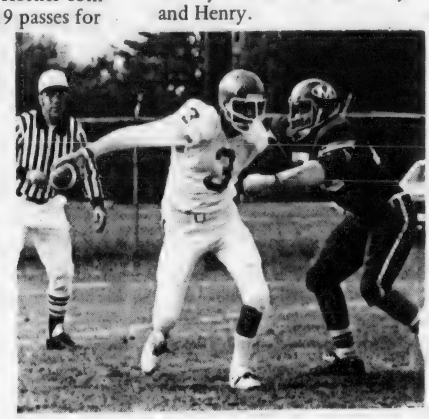
It's official. Maryville, 5—2, has assured itself of a winning season after coming off an 0—9 season last year. Incredibly, the Scots could be 7—0 if you erased about 3 plays.

Led by a gruesome defense which set up Maryville's first two scores, the Scots made it three in a row as they shutout Southwestern of Memphis 17—0. Senior defensive end Tom Duling recalled, "Saturday's win is the first time we've shut out a team since I've been playing here."

Joe Moffett, who was making tackles all over the field, Danny Thomas, and Wayne Dunn led Maryville defensively. Thomas had two interceptions to halt Southwestern's attack. The defense set up a field goal and touchdown by pouncing on a fumble and blocked a punt.

Terry Gardner gave the Scots their first big break as he unloaded on a Lynx punt returner; then teammate Chip Krug came up with the fumble. The Scots failed to move the ball and Tim L. Kelly booted a 34-yard field goal for a 3—0 halftime lead.

As the second half got underway, Maryville's second score was again set up by the defense. Charley McGuire roared through to block a Southwestern punt and fell on the ball at the Lynx 10. Joe Lombardo found a hole fit for a Mack Truck and went for a touchdown from the six.



Then Maryville put the game out of reach with their longest scoring play of the season. Sam Horner found Ken Dickens streaking all alone down the sidelines and lobbed a 64-yard bomb as Dickens went untouched into the endzone. The remainder of the game matched Southwestern's sputtering offense against Maryville's defense. The Lynxes filled the air with pig-skins, but failed to score as the clock ticked away.

After the game, senior Chip Krug summarized the win, "The defense did a hell of a job; the kicking game was great."

The offense didn't do so bad either. Sam Horner completed eight of 19 passes for 176 yards passing. Dickens, who has 15 receptions, grabbed four passes and accounted for over 100 yards. Alvin Nance just missed the 100-yard mark. He rambled 98 yards on 24 attempts.

The Scots will try for their fourth straight win at home Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. as they host arch rival Emory and Henry.

Defensive standouts Craig Arcos (L) and Joe Moffet are shown in action in last Saturday's game with Southwestern. Scot's defense was incentive enough for a 17—0 victory.

V-ball team finishes

by Veronica Sawdon

The Women Scots Volleyball Team wrapped up its official season last week with two matches on November 3, and November 5—6. Coach Brown's squad saw action in the Covenant Invitational Tournament, as they walked away with a 5th place position.

The Tournament was divided into two pools consisting of the following teams: Pool A—Tennessee Temple, Covenant, Sewanee, and Chattanooga State; Pool B—UTC, MC Geneva (Pa.), and Bryan. Round Robins were played within each pool, and then between pools A and B.

Maryville scoring was as follows: MC/Geneva: 9—15 and 5—15 (Geneva; MC/Bryan: 8—15 and 16—18 (Bryan); and MC/UTC: 15—11 and 15—11 (MC).

The weekend's action was aided by outstanding plays from Karen Burkhardt, who was exceptional at spiking and dinking, and Bette Donahay, who came off the bench to effectively assist the offense.

This Thursday night, the Scots will travel to Murfreesboro for the State Tournament.

Booters pound UT twice

What a difference a week can make; at least that's the way the Maryville soccer club feels. The Scots lost to the University of Tennessee last week 6—0, but came back November 3 to thrash the Volunteers 6—5. This marks the second time Maryville has beaten UT. Two years ago at UT Maryville romped 10—3 for perhaps their greatest victory ever.

November 6, the Soccer Club upped their record to 5—5 by beating UT 4—2. The Orangemen jumped out to a 2—0 lead in the first part of the game, but as action settled down it found Maryville repeatedly missing. Then just as the half-time buzzer sounded Gus Horcasitas drilled a twenty yard free kick into the corner of the goal to make it 2—1.

Dominating the second half, Maryville got scores from Horcasitas, Will Way, and Joe Carnevale. UT's scoring guns remained silent. Goalie Bart Rutan and halfback Scott Godwin played outstandingly, and Shin Tanaka came close to several scores which were either high or wide.

To date this is the best season the soccer club has enjoyed and will shoot for more victories in a tournament this Sunday.

Four colleges form consortium

Maryville, Knox, Tusculum, Warren Wilson

This past weekend six members of the Maryville College faculty attended a conference in Gatlinburg to discuss the feasibility of an academic consortium involving four schools in the southern Appalachian region.

The consortium, called Appalachian Presbyterian University, will be an exchange program of students, and possibly faculty, for special programs. Four schools are involved. They are: Maryville College, Tusculum College, Warren Wilson College, and Knoxville College.

Each institution has a special area of expertise. These areas of specilization will be capitalized upon with each institution sharing a part of the cost. Maryville College will conduct a program in the fine arts; Warren Wilson, cross-cultural exchange; Knoxville, science; and Tusculum, special education.

Cooperation of this type is expected to continue to provide a quality education to students at a reasonable cost. At no point is it expected that any of the colleges will lose their individual identities. Each will remain a seperate institution.

Immediately the goals of the university are:

cross cultural exchange—Warren Wilson's international team of dancers;

weekend seminars in instrumentation at Knoxville College;

overseas educational experiences (a projected trip to the Bahamas in March).

The future goals of the consortium exist in making feasible the exchange of students and faculty in the areas of particular expertise.

Representing Maryville College in each of the special areas were: Drs. Carolyn Blair, Marilyn Pollio, Harry Price, Gale Rhodes, James Bloy and Elizabeth Fowler.

Waters publishes paper; attends deaf meet

Dr. Jerry E. Waters, professor and chairman of the psychology department at Maryville College, will speak at West High School in Knoxville on Thursday, Nov. 18, on the subject of sleep and dreaming.

In addition, Dr. Waters and Andrew Klein and Frank Hall, both formerly with MC, have published an article in the national "Journal of Altered States of Consciousness." The article, entitled "Long Term Effects of Marijuana Smoking," appears in Volume 2 of the Journal, dated Nov. 2, 1975-76.

Klein is a former instructor in the psychology department at Maryville and Hall is a recent graduate who worked on this project for his independent study.

Dr. Waters recently attended a Verbo-Tonal Methods Conference at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville.

The verbo-tonal method of teaching speech and language to deaf children and adults is relatively new in this country.

Dr. Waters and Irma Young, instructor and coordinator of the deaf interpreter program at Maryville College, along with Priscilla Book, Bekah McCredie and Sandy Hawkins, all Maryville students, recently talked to the Blount County Women's Medical Auxiliary about the progress of the deaf program at Maryville College.

No flu shots here

The infirmary is not giving nor will it give Swine Flu inoculations according to Nurse Allen in an interview last week.

Allen went on to say that the health department is the only place that she knows of where one can get the vaccine.

According to a notice posted in the post office, people with diabetes, heart, lung, or kidney diseases should take the inoculation because the flu could prove to be especially serious for them.

Both the notice and Allen recommend that people who have a fever, are allergic to eggs, have had another flu shot within the past fourteen days, or have had an allergy shot on the same day should not take the inoculation.

After receiving the inoculation there may be tenderness at the site of injection, headaches, fever, chills, and general malaise. Allen said that the most complained of side effect from the inoculation was headaches.

The last Swine Influenza inoculation Clinic was scheduled for today from eight until four at the health department, but if you are still interested in receiving the inoculation you might check with either Allen or the Blount County Health Department to see if it is still possible to get inoculated.

MC hosts interpreters

The annual meeting of the Tennessee chapter of the Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf (TRID) will be held at Maryville College Nov. 19-20. The convention is being hosted by the Knoxville division of TRID.

Friday's opening meeting is at 7:00 p.m. in Room 113 of Sutton Science Center will consist of a panel discussion concerning issues facing Tennessee's interpreters. The panel will consist of Betty Steed of Memphis who will discuss local certification of interpreters; Betty Lawson, teacher at Tennessee School for the Deaf in Knoxville, whose topic is the National RID evaluation process; Susan Childress, president of Knoxville's RID, who will report on the National RID convention in August; and Georgia Hobb of Nashville, president of TRID.

Saturday the interpreters will have workshop meetings in the Wilson Chapel with consultant Jim Jones from the Technical Vocational Institute of St. Paul, Minnesota. Jones is coordinator of the National Interpreter Training Consortium. He will discuss "Interpreting English Idiomatic Expressions," "Understanding Deaf Idioms" and "Reverse Interpreting." Participants will have an opportunity to practice using materials and equipment from the interpreting lab at Maryville College.

Saturday evening TRID members will attend the Maryville College Playhouse production of "Stop the World—I Want To Get Off." This presentation, which includes a great deal of mime, will be interpreted by Irma K. Young, coordinator of Maryville's interpreter degree program, and Mark Leitson who interprets classes for deaf students at the College.

For further information, contact Marie Griffin with the interpreting program at MC or Susan Childress with the Knoxville RID.

Dr. Norman Love and Harry Howard confer with a parent, J. D. Dewhirst, at the Morningside reception for parents last Saturday.

'Stop the World' opens tomorrow

by Charles Craven

The far-out title of the musical comedy, "Stop the World—I Want To Get Off," playing November 18-20 in the Maryville College Theatre, comes from the cry of dismay repeatedly uttered by the hero, played by John Morton of Lyndhurst, Ohio. He cries, "Stop the world" whenever he gets a shocking come-uppance—as when he finds that the girl he's been trifling with is pregnant and he faces a shotgun wedding.

He also utters the expression when he gets news that is surprising but not bad—as when he learns that this same girl is his boss's daughter and that their marriage can boost his business career.

Curtain time for "Stop the World" is 8:15 p.m. The play is under the direction of Thomas E. Jones, director of the College Playhouse. Dan Kinsinger and Peggy Leatherwood are serving as musical directors. Choreographer is Elaine Armfield; Tim Stuart is assistant director.

Called "a new style" musical, "Stop the World" follows no previous pattern for American stage entertainment. The Maryville College production has tried to capture this spirit both in stage production and scene design. The play is directed somewhat along the lines of an adult English pantomime, the kind of show the English put on for children at Christmas time in almost every British theatre.

Tickets may be purchased at the College Theatre office (982-2911) or at the door. Adult tickets are $2.50; student tickets are $1.50.

Watch the itch

"It's no disgrace to have body lice but it is a disgrace to have them and keep them." emphasized Nurse Allen in a recent interview with the Echo concerning the rumors about body lice on campus.

It is Allen's opinion that the problem is here but it does not seem to be limited to the campus. Allen reported talking to three local doctors who told her that the number of cases coming in for treatment had increased this year. Also for a short period of time it was hard to get the medicine needed for treatment but now the infirmary has an ample supply.

Treatment of the condition, characterized by the presence of small dark brown to black insects and itching, is easy and effective. Treatment involves an initial application of Kwell lotion and then a subsequent application four days later. In addition to this, all bed linens, clothes that have been worn, and clothes that have come in contact with the clothes that have been worn must be washed.

For further information or treatment contact the infirmary.

Committee needs student imput

In the October 27 edition of the Echo an article entitled "Literary magazine supported" was featured in a space similar to this. In that article the various reasons for the neccessity of a literary magazine were discussed by this writer. The purpose of this editorial but to point out the state of communications here at Maryville College.

To do this one needs to consider the state of communications here at Maryville College.

To do this one needs to consider the importance of the All-College Council Communications Committee and its role within the framework of the ACC. The Communications Committee is thought by some to view the communication of the college, how well the members of the community respond to one another. This is a glaring misconception.

The Communications committee is indeed concerned with the communication between the members of the community, but in a sense that is more concrete—it deals directly with the publications of the college, specifically the Echo, the Chilhowean, and Impressions. It is this committee that determines the editors of these publications, approves the staffs, and determines the policies that directly effect these publications.

While this distinction may not seem very important to some it does bear a significant weight upon the level of communication and output that the publications give to the campus. As anyone who has had experience in attempting to communicate can tell you, how and what is communicated is vitally important—in fact, communication is considered necessary for existence in today's society.

The problem is that we assume that communications will take care of themselves—we take their existence and maintenance for granted. This is the problem with the Communications Committee now. There simply is not enough imput into the committee to make sure the committee is performing to its highest level, although the faculty/staff members are exceptionally consistent in attendance.

This lack of interest is especially true of the student members of the committee. There just does not seem to be enough interest to maintain a sufficient number of students on the committee. (There are other things such as time conflicts that must be taken into consideration, granted.) This is especially sad in light of two things:

* the committee is going through a rebuilding process this year and thus far the only students interested in seeing this rebuilding through are the editors themselves.
* the current state of the Echo, limited as it is financially, dictates that a goodly portion of its staff is empty handed each week and that now only one half of the material and ideas can be used in publication due to space limitation.

Unfortunately this is a situation that exists in more than one ACC committee. While it is highly improbable that such a razzle-dazzle termination of the Communications Committee would occur as did with the Ways and Means Committee last spring serious consideration needs to be given to the situation now at hand.

In determining the policies for the publications on this campus there can be no lapse in direction or imput.

Grandpa

When I was small he knew everything;
At least it seemed so.
I mean to hunt and fish and working all day, and telling of the old days like they were the great days, with the small guy whipping the big guy
all the time and such;
And his cellar full of a thousand wonders—
they're all still there, and each tool had it's place
(there were a thousand places)
And the pot-belly stove, door half open, coal and wood burning orange inside.
Early to rise? We'd be up before the sun,
Off to unexplored lands and new adventure, teaching we who were lucky not to fear those things the unlucky still do—his guns (he had hundreds), the always sharp pocket knife (one for each pair of pants), the furry creatures of the day and funny noises in the night, the slimy fish—fifty bluegills in a day—
I caught three . . .
never a woodsman quite like he.
Grandma died; he got older that day,
but not much older;
slowed down that day,
but not much slower;
yes I can remember, I wasn't so young—
Tom might not.
But he was Socrates
(not that I knew of Socrates at the time, or that I agreed with him once I knew him),
and had an answer for any question I asked.
He'd gone the hard way, in the war and in the mine,
And he knew an easier way for me.
He'd never say that everyone must take the hard way—
Did he know that?
But I was older now—I had the answers, not be.
I went on my own
(we all must, they say),
to find my own smooth road,
and have been stumbling ever since.
He knew everything when I was small, but now I'm old—he doesn't know everything,
just a lot more than me.
I never bothered asking about the important things.
he couldn't possibly have known . . .
yet I think I might ask, next chance I get,
Because one thing's for certain—
I'll want him when he's gone.

A Mellow-drama

She quietly turned towards and said, "Really, I can't go on like this. What am I to do with my feelings?"

He quietly looked at her. She with her large blue eyes and perfect hair. Then he quietly turned and walked away.

tune in next week for a conclusion . . .

Enlightment of Littlechap

by Debbie Welch

For suggestive comedy of ribald sex and typical jokes on nationality see "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" at the theatre this weekend. Ten lovely women, ranging from seductive to demure with skimpy costumes and luring leotards, entice and enlighten the only male character.

The musical, written by Anthony Newley in collaboration with Leslie Briciusse, depicts the life of Littlechap, the only male played by John Morton, in his rise to fame, fortune, and disillusionment. Morton, improving with every performance on the Maryville stage, portrays the character well in pantomimist garb.

The show sports some of the best choreography and music seen from the MC Playhouse. Especially well done are the pantomined scenes of the human factory, the Russian slave rowboat, and the bouncing ball between Littlechap's daughters portrayed by Julie Adams and Adrienne Bettett.

Voices from the actors range from good to great with a finely tuned chorus in spots. The chorus, precise in its delineation of Littlechap's world, adds confusion or clarification when needed.

Littlechap, on his way to the top of English society, meets influential women all too willing to discuss business behind closed doors. Anka, the dominant, forceful, straight-forward Russian female, takes time out from football practice to make Ruth Cartlidge a hit of the show as she encourages Littlechap to combine business with sex olympics.

Littlechap's numerous dalliances are carried out on occupational trips behind the back of his productive English wife, Evie, portrayed by Ruth Ann Wilbanks. Ms. Wilbanks, well-known to the Maryville stage, again shows her talents as she fights tooth and nail to regain her husband.

The show also presents some new freshman faces that may add to the artistic achievements of the theatre in the future.

Though the play drags in places, Tom Jones and his assistants have put together an evening of entertainment. In the spirit of suggestion, go see it.

Betsy Moore, senior art major from Kingsport is presenting an art show through November 20 in the Fine Arts Center Gallery. The show features watercolors in the manner of Turner and feather-like pencil drawings and illustrations.

Moore has just completed her special studies in Celtic illumination.

Booters take tournament

The Maryville College Soccer club came back from the Soccer Tournament in Knoxville Sunday with their first trophy, a championship, and their first winning season ever after defeating UT No. 2, 5—4. The two tournament wins upped Maryville's record to 7—5 for the year.

In the first game Maryville came from a 2—0 deficient to overtake Morristown 3—2. Shin Tanaka got two of Maryville's three goals and Laurie Hill contributed the other goal. Bucky Buckwalter was brilliant in the middle defensive position. He saved a goal by taking the ball from two Morristown attackers in front of the goal after the goalie was down and out of the play. Scott Godwin, Dave Osborne, Mark Soloninka and Doug Hardy also shined from their halfback positions.

In the championship game against UT No. 2, neither UT nor Maryville scored, although both had opportunities, and the game ended in a scoreless deadlock 0—0.

The Championship was decided by having each team choose five players to shoot penalty shots. Bart Rutan stopped the first UT attempt but the next four UT penalty shots were good. All five Maryville shooters, Gus Horcositas, Bill Walker, Scott Godwin, Randy Pasqua, and Doug Hardy scored on the UT goalie to give Maryville a 5—4 edge and championship.

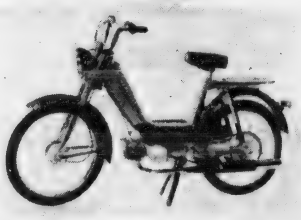
Volleyball team takes third



The Women's Volleyball team traveled to Middle Tennessee State University November 11-13, participated in the TXWSF State Volleyball Tournament, and came away with third place in the state division of the Non-AIAW.

Maryville lost the first match to Southwestern 6—15, 9—15; advanced to the semi-finals after winning matches over Freed-Hardman 2—15, 15—12, 18—15, and Trevecca 15—10, 8—15, 15—11; but then lost again to Southwestern 11—15, 7—15 in the semi-finals. Bryan College won the Non-AIAW Tournament, and Southwestern finished second.

Two Maryville volleyball players, Karen Burkhardt and Pat Willin, were selected to the All-Tournament team. The Tournament in Murfreesboro concluded the volleyball season with a winning mark of 11—10.

Scots sting Wasps

Offensive powerhouse Alvin Nance carries the ball for a gain in Saturday's win over Emory and Henry.

by Robert Boone

Directed by a talented young quarterback, who displayed plenty of poise under pressure, the Fighting Scots out-scored Emory and Henry Saturday night 34—28.

The Virginian Wasps never quit and almost overcame a deficient Maryville 20 point lead.

Charley Hixon, in his first starting game, completed 13 of 18 passes for 250 yards, and directed an attack which amassed 479 yards to add to the offensive show. Punter Tom Fleish only had to punt one time in the contest for Maryville.

The Scots displayed balanced scoring with five players getting touchdowns. Maryville jumped on Emory and Henry quickly and led 14—0 with 4:00 remaining in the first quarter. Both touchdowns followed mistakes made by the Wasps. Senior defensive tackle Lee Taylor erupted into the Emory backfield and caused a fumble which was recovered by teammate Joe Moffett. Keith Goodwin wasted no time and on the first play scored on an 18 yard reverse following Chip Krug's block.

Emory and Henry's failure to recover a free ball on the following kickoff resulted in Maryville's next score. Charley McGuire recovered Tim L. Kelley's squibble on the Wasp 32. On the next play Hixon flipped a screen pass to Joe Lombardo that went 28 yards to the 3 yard line. Alvin Nance hurdled over the entire line for his first score of the year and Lombardo's determined conversion effort made it 14—0.

Paced by a strong offense, Emory and Henry climaxed a 57 yard drive on Chip Hill's 4 yard burst cutting the Scot lead to 14—7.

Hixon's hot arm met the challenge and threw eight yards to Goodwin, then dumped another screen pass to Lombardo who outraced all the defenders for a 40 yard touchdown.

Refusing to die Emory and Henry matched that TD with a 20 yard pass to Mike Snow from Mike Roberts and reduced Maryville's lead to 21—14.

The next series displayed the combined threat of Hixon to Dickens. Vince Fucci gave Maryville excellent field position on a 46 yard kickoff return. Hixon fired an 18 yard strike to Ken Dickens then rifled a 22 yard TD pass that was right on the money. Maryville strode to the locker room with a 28—14 margin.

Maryville scored once more in the game, and the touchdown proved a decisive factor. Faced with a fourth and four situation on the Wasp 17, Maryville lined up for a field goal attempt. "I told Danny to just try for the first down," Jordan later exclaimed. Field goal holder, Danny Thomas caught opposing players off guard, faked the field goal, and rolled to his right 17 yards for a TD, the winning margin.

Although Maryville led 34—14, Emory and Henry again came back and scored twice. Roberts combined with Snow from 10 yards for their second score and Hill went eight yards off tackle to close the gap 34—28. The defensive unit had to make a desperation stand to salvage the victory. Senior defensive tackle Ernie Arcos had five quarterback sacks to lead the Scot defensive charge. Joe Lombardo led all receivers with 5 receptions and added an additional 78 yards rushing. The play of all the seniors was exceptional as they fought and won for the last time on Honaker Field.

This dedication and leadership of the eleven seniors has resulted in the team's first winning season since 1972. When a team is successful, you have to look at their captains. Tim A. Kelly and Ken Hanna have played inspired ball all year and have kept the team knitted closely together in rough spots.

These eleven Seniors will be playing a college game for the last time this Saturday in Greensboro, North Carolina, against tough Guilford College.

Scoring—Maryville: Keith Goodwin, 18 yd. run. (kick failed); Alvin Nance, 3 yd. run. (Joe Lombardo run); Joe Lombardo 40 yd. pass from Charley Hixon (Kelly kick); Ken Dickens 22 yd. pass from Charley Hixon (Kelly kick); Danny Thomas, 17 yd. run (kick failed).

'Best of all worlds'

Judith A. Crumb, an energetic woman with lots "on her mind," has created and developed her job, interests, and hobbies in diverse and exciting areas.

Crumb works as a Career Counselor at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Her job involves developing options and alternatives for the students, helping them to secure good careers, and, this year, presenting survival approaches for the Fine Artist.

Although career planning is her job, Crumb has been interested in Archeology from an early age. She investigated career opportunities in this field while still in high school, but found that they were virtually closed to women unless they married into the archeological profession. After a few years, she "dropped archeology as a career, but not an interest."

With the job she has now, Jidith Crumb cuts her own path. She generally works 8—12 hours a day with students, and spends her spare time pursuing the study of hieroglyphics or exercising her access to the Egyptian and Near Eastern department of the museum. She calls her job "the best of all possible worlds."

Egyptian studies are not her only interests as she has an extensive background in the theatre. Crumb and her husband have been co-directors of the Company of Players of St. John the Evangelist in Boston since 1970. They produce shows together when they have the time, energy, and desire.

Crumb occasionally does some travelling in the North, usually giving evening lectures or visiting classes. This is her first week-long tour; she had already been to Vanderbilt, Peabody, and other colleges. After finishing her program at Maryville, she will visit W. Carolina University before heading home.

The future looks bright for Crumb as she pursues a job, interests, and hobbies that are satisfying to her. She and her husband hope to take a trip to Egypt in the near future, and travel by boat down the Nile from Aswan to Cairo, stopping at major sites along the way. The trip should enhance her already wealthy insight into a world she has created with determination and persistence.

Chem group honored

The Maryville College chapter of the American Chemical Society for the fourth straight year has been selected as an outstanding chapter by the national ACS Council Committee on Chemical Education.

The Maryville College chapter is one of only 49 chapters out of a total of 652 across the nation which have been commended for excellence in the 1975-76 academic year.

The American Chemical Society helps students interested in chemistry develop attitudes of professionalism through their affiliation with the Society during their undergraduate years.

Carter must decide

Fate of draft-evaders unknown

(CPS)—Now that the presidential elections are over, it is only a matter of time until President-elect Carter makes good on his campaign promises of unconditional pardons to draft evaders.

The National Democratic Party platform called for a "full and complete pardon for those who were in legal or financial jeopardy because of their peaceful opposition to the Vietnam War, with deserters to be considered on a case-to-case basis."

However, Carter said in September that he would not be bound to the party platform and would refuse to give pardons to draft nonregistrants or to upgrade less than honorable discharges.

Earlier in his campaign, Carter stated that "amnesty means that . . . what you did was right. Pardon means what you did, whether it is right or wrong, you're forgiven for it. And I do advocate a pardon for draft evaders."

Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's Director of Policy and Issues, claimed that the new administration's policy is "not one of unconditional pardon for deserters" but would instead depend on several criteria, one of which is whether or not the man was deserting because of opposition to the war or opposition to the Army itself. Such a condition would be determined by a hearing officer, Eizenstat said, and offering a hypothetical case, he added that if the man had deserted from the middle of a key battle and had led to the death of twenty people, he probably ought not be pardoned.

Yet, the National Council for Universal and Unconditional Amnesty (NCUUA) is questioning such a condition and, according to a report by the Department of Defense, only one percent of the AWOL's that participated in President Ford's clemency program deserted from combat situations.

Efforts to keep the amnesty issue alive on campus have been weak and poorly attended. In Madison, Wisconsin, at the University of Wisconsin, a July amnesty conference attracted only 40 workers. In September, 60 people attended a conference in Des Moines, Iowa, where the speaker was a minister from the University of Iowa.

President Ford's amnesty program does not meet with approval by NCUUA which has called the program a demonstration of "the power of the President to upgrade the military discharges as well as the futility of issuing amnesty or pardon discharges." Arizona legislature has given participants in this program an especially difficult time by passing a bill which prohibits clemency discharge holders from getting publicly funded jobs. And in Madison, Wisconsin state law requires county veterans affairs officers to have honorable discharges.

Those who will be paying particular attention to Carter's treatment of the amnesty issue will include a reported 8,700 convicted draft violators who have served sentences, paid fines, or gotten suspended sentences. Ford's program excluded these men

Klockentager directs admissions

Maryville College President Joseph J. Copeland announced the appointment of John W. Klokentager, Jr. as the new director of admissions for the College.

Klockentager, previously director of admissions at William Penn College in Oskaloosa, Iowa, assumed his new duties December 6.

In his new position at Maryville Klockentager will be responsible to the office of the dean of student relations. He will direct the College's student recruitment efforts and coordinate the activities of the admissions office staff.

The new Maryville College admissions director has been on the staff at William Penn for five years. He served as an admissions counselor for two years, associate director of admissions for one year, and director for the past two years.

He has also been active with the Iowa Association of College Admission Counselors and with the Iowa Association of Personnel and Guidance, serving with the executive committees of both organizations.

A native of Des M oines, Iowa, Klockentager is a 1971 graduate of William Penn. He holds a B.A. degree in sociology with emphasis on psychology, guidance, andpre-professional training.

Five earn Presser awards

Five Maryville College music students have been selected by the music faculty to receive Presser Foundation scholarships, Dr. Harry H. Harter, chairman of the Department of Fine Arts, announced.

The recipients are David Adcock, senior music education major from Knoxville; Martha Cain, sophomore music education major from LaFollette; Judy Thweatt, sophomore applied voice major from Winchester, Virginia; Carol Paris, senior applied piano major from Owensboro, Kentucky; and Betty Carol Zinavage, junior applied piano major from Waynesville, North Carolina.

Presser Foundation scholarships are made possible by an annual grant to Maryville College for music students of good character with satisfactory academic ratings. MC recipients must have above a 3.4 grade average out of a possible 4.0 for the previous year and must be upper class music majors. Preference is given those who expect to become teachers of music.

Jones selects cast

Cast selections for the February 24, 25, and 26 production of Henrik Ibsen's The Master Builder have been selected by Thomas Jones.

The play, completed in the latter part of Ibsen's life, is a psychological study of the struggles of the human soul. The master builder, Solness, played by Ron Fagan, is a man verging on insanity.

His wife will be played by Ruth Cartlidge, and Liza Howe will play the part of Hilda Wangel. Others selected for the cast include Tim Stuart as Ragnar Brovik, Phil Der Philbosian as Knut Broviak, Elizabeth Parkhill as Kaja, and Don Tosh as Dr. Herdal. Jones will be assisted in directing by John Morton.

The Master Builder continues with the idea of success as exemplified by Solness, an architect whose success is built on a tragic incident which deprived him and his wife of their two baby boys.

In his guilt, Solness became convinced that everything he consciously or subconsciously desired would happen. The play deals with his attempt to extricate himself from this guilt for loss of his two sons and the realization of all his desires.

TVA plans six more nukes

Ten years from now, nearly half the power supply for the Tennessee Valley region will come from nuclear power facilities now in operation, under construction, or on order for the TVA system. After TVA's first operating nuclear plant, Browns Ferry, six other nuclear plants are scheduled for completion in stages between now and 1986 to meet rising power demands.

TVA's decision to utilize nuclear power along with its coal and hydro-power plants was made after weighing nuclear and other power sources and taking into account economic, safety, and environmental considerations, according to Chairman Aubrey J. Wagner.

"The choice of nuclear was made on a plant-by-plant basis, and TVA will continue to consider coal and other sources for additional power supply as needed to meet the region's requirements further into the future," Wagner said. "So far in the 1970's, nuclear power has come out ahead each time TVA has begun planning new baseload generating capacity. In fact, the biggest share of new gene-

Echo complies with policy

Keeping with the official policy of Maryville College, the Highland Echo will no longer carry advertising alluding to the sale of beer or other alcoholic beverages.

On January 4, 1977, the Echo became aware of an administrative memo drawing attention to advertisement in the Echo and other official school publications which directly offered beer for sale. That memo stated:

"Historically, Maryville College has followed a policy of discouraging the use of alcoholic beverages, and that discouragement includes not advertising in college publications. With this policy, then what justifies the ad in the newly published college directory and the ads in various issues of the Echo?"

The Echo responded with a statement to the staff dated January 7, 1977. In that statement, editor Tim Rahn agreed to comply with existing college policy. Rahn directed that advertisements will use the word "beverage" with the understanding that the establishment also deals with the sale of other beverages such as coffee and soft drinks.

Rahn stated that although the Echo will comply with official policy, the position is "not easily taken."

Rahn went on to say that, "I feel strangely compromised. I am a firm believer in the rights of the individual to do as he or she pleases in the privacy in his own room. I am also a stickler for the first amendment guaranteeing freedom of the press, which incidentally allows for the freedom of the advertiser."

Rahn went on to say that he sees a "curious and persistent double standard of the alcohol policy and practice." He followed this saying that the problem has been solved for the Echo, but alcohol still continues to be consumed on the campus.

In this light, the editor directed that the matter be brought before the community.

Ideas and issues

Taking the new year's roundabout

Traditionally, an editorial that attempts to put something in perspective usually comes at the beginning or end of that particular thing. This is especially true when "the thing" is the academic year. Presently we are in the middle of the academic year at Maryville, and perhaps now, rather than five months from now, we can attempt to gain a perspective of the more important issues and occurences of Maryville college.

The reasons for such a perspective are evident in several areas of the college community. Its governance system, the impending naming of the new college president, and the persistent double standards are all vital issues that somehow demand our attention. Few, however, want to give these any real attention—especially students.

The All-College Council is in need of rejuvenation. The Echo in the past has attempted to point out just how important an active and functionable ACC can be to this college. We have also attempted to show just how much importance there is in the ACC and how it can work to everybodys' advantage.

Things in and out of the main council have it nearly at a standstill. Committees, as was pointed out in the final editorial of fall term, perhaps more than any other aspect of the ACC need rejuvenation. Students should simply take the ACC more seriously. If they can show their concern, it may spark enough faculty and administration interest that would improve the ACC image tenfold.

By the end of this month Maryville College will have chosen a new president. Again, many have tended to overlook the importance of this selection. And again, this importance needs to be stressed to the utmost. With this selection, Maryville College stands the chance of gaining more than it is possible to estimate now—a new man and a new face can do nothing but bring a fresh and vital outlook into many of the issues that plague the college now.

And the final point is the issue of double standards. As one might note from the article on the front page, the Echo is complying with the policy that discourages the use of alcoholic beverages by limiting advertiser's words. It is mentioned that we are doing this grudgingly, and this writer only needs to re-enforce this once and stress the fact that somehow and somewhere rights are being tampered with.

There is, however, another need to stress why we are complying with the policy. Our compliance comes after a great deal of careful thought, where many of the issues surrounding the entire matter were taken into consideration. Once we had weighed all the pros and cons, what was clear to us were the possibilities of the future of this college. Maryville in its own slow and roundabout way is coming to grips with the issues that now give it an appearance of being two-faced.

What does all this mean? Hopefully we will begin to have some of the answers come the end of this year. But for the present it means that we all need to take stock of things, both personally and as a whole, of the issues and ideas at Maryville College. Somehow, with evaluation, we can come to a new consciousness where all might benefit.

Tim Rahn

What is a title III?

What's Title III? is the question I have heard most often this year as I have had the responsibilities for coordinating MC's $250,000 grant for institutional development from HEW.

There is hardly a nook or cranny that Title III doesn't influence on the campus. Perhaps because its fluence is felt through so many different people and programs, it's easy to miss the forest (Title III) for the trees (people and program).

Just the names of the program areas with Title III support is enough to illustrate its wide range:

—Curriculum Development (freshman year, global consciousness),
—Preparatory School for the Fine Arts,
—Programs in Deafness,
—Allied Health Services (cardiac rehabilitation),
—Business Administration Major,
—Crafts Major,
—Early Childhood Education,
—Environmental Education,
—Counseling Services,
—Career Planning and Placement Office,
—Administrative Development, and —Weiner Admissions Study.

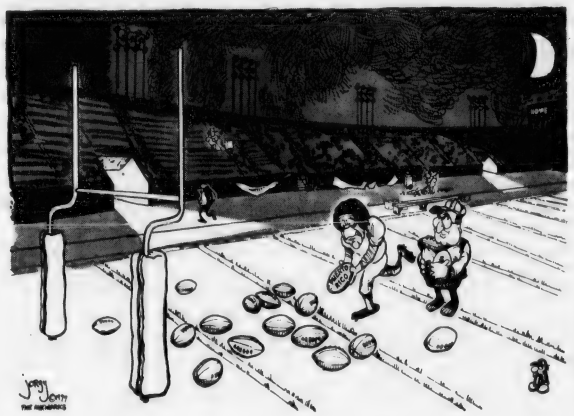
Title III is shorthand for a program of support for Institutional Development under the direction of the Bureau of Postsecondary Education of HEW. Financial support is granted on a competitive basis "to developing institutions of higher education to assist in the strengthening of their academic, administrative, and student services."



Maryville has received Title III support since 1967. Although this year's amount of $250,000 is approximately 8% of the College's budget, it is clear that through the programs it supports its influence is many times greater than its budget percentage.

So look around a bit at what Title III's doing to improve the Maryville education. We're all benefiting in many ways.

As seen by the list of program areas, Title III is known by many names. Maybe that's why I get asked so often: What's Title III?

If you want to know more, come by and see me in Sutton 128.

King's birthday Saturday

In his book, Why We Can't Wait, Martin Luther explained why African-Americans could not wait for civil rights to alleviate the injustices they faced day to day. In 1967, in his next book, he posed the ever pressing question, Where Do We Go from Here? Unfortunately, King is no longer with us, snatched from our midst by an assassin's bullet. Though he has physically departed, his spirit still affects many.

Saturday marks 48 years since King came. The world was lucky to have him for 39 of these years. During his lifetime, King led a movement to bring all people together.

The beauty of his leadership rested on its non-violent structure built on its foundation of love. Constantly employing this battle plan, King conquered hate time after time. This determination won him a Nobel Peace Prize.

A Baptist minister, King felt his non-violent philosophy came from God whose work King was out to do. This outlook, however, marked King, who shook it off by saying, "Like anybody, I would like to live a long life. Longevity has its place. But I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will." King also knew that God's will could mean giving up his life. That did not matter to him either because he had "been to the mountain top."

We still do not know where we are going, and African-Americans are still waiting for something to decimate the daily evils they experience. For anyone to think that one man could answer that eternal question and liberate Blacks is an impossible idea. His worldwide leadership and non-violent philosophy, however, were steps in the right direction, steps that were followed by many. His birthday on Saturday should be not only a celebration but also a reflection on what his philosophy has meant to the world.

and it is not clear whether or not Carter will pay closer attention. The largest group of draft violators are non-registrants who face up $10,000 or five years in jail. Neither Ford's nor Carter's program include them.

And then there are the 792,000 veterans who hold less than honorable discharges. These men include the non-deserters who refused orders to Vietnam, who talked questioningly about the war or who even organized radical newspapers. The fate of these men is as unclear as President's Carter's focus on the issue that simply will not go away. Said Carter in August, "Where I come from, most of the men who went off to fight in Vietnam were poor. They didn't have the money to hide from the draft in college . . . the Vietnam veterans are our nation's unsung heroes, I do not favor a blanket amnesty, but for those who violated Selective Service laws, I intend to urge a blanket pardon . . . For deserters, each case should be handled on an individual basis in accordance with our nation's system of military justice."

Scientists locate biggest thing

(CPS)—German astronomers have discovered what may be the biggest thing in the universe. How big is it? Imagine the biggest, widest, most gigantic piece of space stuff you've ever heard of. This thing is bigger.

The Germans have dubbed the thing "3C123" and are presently "watching" it through a huge raditelescope near Bonn. Right now astronomers say all the parts of 3C123 may not be related, but if they are, 3C123 will measure in at 137 million light years across, seven times greater in diameter than any other object in the universe.

By comparison, the distance from the earth to the sun—93 million miles—is roughly only eight light minutes.

Hunter gift to library

To "add new dimensions..."

Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, former professor of English and dean of curriculum at Maryville College, has given the MC library a $1,000 gift for use in acquiring valuable research materials.

Dr. Hunter's gift has been used already to acquire microfiche collections of The Annual Register for the years 1758-1776 and 1795-1889. This supplements the library's collection covering the years 1777-1794 and completes the set.

In addition to the initial acquisition, the library will use the gift as the nucleus for establishing the Hunter Research Library of Original Sources. According to Jane Savage, MC librarian, plans are to set aside a special room to house original source materials and special collections and documents of special interest to the serious students.

"Dr. Hunter's gift is a most generous one and it will add new dimensions to library research," stated Savage. "We are grateful for the enrichment this addition will make to the entire collection, and we are most appreciative of his thoughtfulness and support of the library at Maryville College."

She added that future acquisitions for the Hunter Research Library would be of interdisciplinary materials but with an emphasis on literature, history and the social sciences.

Examples of materials the library hopes to acquire in the future for this special collections room are missing volumes of the original series of Early English Text Society Publications as well as the extra series; Early English Courtesy Books (1571-1773), 120 books from research materials in the Newberry Library; First Books, a series containing facsimiles of the first books published in England; The Edinburgh Review (1802-1906); Illustrated London News (1842-1904); Covent Gardens Promptbooks; and missing volumes of MC's Atlantic Monthly collection.

Miss Savage added that it is hoped Dr. Hunter's gift will be the first of many such gifts to improve the College library's holdings once the special room is established in his honor.

Dr. Hunter is a 1914 graduate of Maryville College and holds an M.A. and a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago.

He served as head of the English department from 1918 until his retirement in 1960. He was also dean of curriculum from 1930 to 1956. As dean he developed the Honors Program and the Independent Study Program, required for all MC students in their junior and senior years, and instituted Comprehensive examinations.

Dr. Hunter also developed a course in rhetoric and logic as well as taught advanced courses in Chaucer, Shakespeare, the History of the English Language, and Modern Poetry.

While at Maryville, Dr. Hunter combined teaching and writing, producing scholarly articles on Shakespeare, the American language, and poetic theory. He also wrote two books, Shakespeare and Common Sense, a critical work published in 1954, and This Man's Art, a collection of poetry published in 1964.

Since his retirement from teaching, he has written another book, William Faulkner: Narrative Practice and Prose Style, a critical work which was published in 1973.

Dr. Hunter now resides at Montvale Nursing Home in Maryville.

The Scots were led in scoring by Wayne Emme and Mark Stinnet who both contributed 20 points. Wade Edmond turned in another fine ballgame scoring in the clutch and doing some good rebounding while contributing 15 points, most of which came in the final moments of the ballgame.

Kelly makes record book

Maryville College football team's place kicker, Tim L. Kelly of Pennington Gap, Virginia, will have his name in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Football Records book after a slight delay of two years.

Back in November, 1974, Kelly, then a freshman, kicked five field goals in MC's football game with Emory and Henry but to no avail, he thought. The Wasps won the game 20 to 15 over Maryville, and while Kelly's extraordinary feat was duly reported in the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times story of the game, nothing more was said.

This fall Maryville's alert assistant coach Dick Taylor, reading an NCAA publication, saw where a player had tied the NCAA Division III record for most fields goals kicked in a single game. The record? You guessed it. Five field goals. Several players who have tied the record were listed in the report also, but, Taylor noticed, Tim Kelly's name wasn't on that list.

Tim Kelly

After notifying the NCAA of Kelly's performance in 1974, Maryville College received word that indeed Tim Kelly's "name has been added to the others who have achieved this feat and it will appear in the next edition of the NCAA Football Records book" where all official records now appear.

According to Steve Boda, Jr., research director for NCAA, the cumulative reporting system used in Divisions II and III makes it difficult to determine single-game marks, so the NCAA depends upon individual schools to report single-game records. Alas, Tim Kelly's feat went unreported—until now.

"However," Boda writes, "Tim will receive his due recognition."

Scots wallop St. Mary's

by Dave Osborne

The Women Scot's Basketball team started the new year in grand fashion, by defeating St. Mary's 80—53. Coach Sharon Brown's team (1—3), got its first victory of the season by controlling the boards and running an effective fast break.

Sharon Youngs and Captain Libby Lowry matched each other with 13 and 12 points respectively. Both had not hands from the outside, cleaned the boards, and had fine outlet passes to start the fast break. Bobbie Jo Sallade also had 12 points, compiled from outside shooting and fast-break-layups.

Margaret Fitch (8 pts.) and Joel Campbell (9 pts.) were also on the receiving end of the fast break. Karen Burkhardt (10 pts.) was tough inside, and Pam Osborne had eight points from the outside.

The Highland Echo is looking for students to help secure advertising for the paper.

The job is not very time consuming and is a chance to earn a little extra money. Any interested students are asked to contact Box 2820 or the Echo Business Manager, James Dewhirst, as soon as possible.

Wrestlers home tonight

The Maryville College wrestling team held on to its pre-season rating in the top twenty Division III schools nationally, according to the Amateur Wrestling News.

The Scots appeared in the top twenty for the first time in the pre-season ratings which were released in December and held on to the top twenty spot, according to the January 7 release.

The Scots are still looking for their first victory, but were able to maintain their National rating by virtue of the strength of their competition. Amateur Wrestling News explained, "Maryville College has been competing with University Division schools and still demonstrates that their National place winners from a year ago can still continue to win in spite of several steps up in the calibre of their competition."

The Maryville College wrestling team returns to action this evening at 6:30 p.m. hosting Tennessee Tech and Chattanooga State in the gym.

The Scots travel to Clemson University over the weekend where they will take on Clemson and Georgia Tech.

Cagers drop two

by Jack Turregano

The Maryville Scots are still looking for their first victory of the year.

Saturday night the Clinch Valley Cavaliers came to Maryville and squeaked out a 80—78 win. In this loss the Scots led at times by as much as twelve points, and were safely ahead at the half by twelve.

Clinch Valley, however, came out hungry in the second half and began to peck away at the lead Maryville had established, finally going ahead for good with four minutes to go. Had it not been for some last minute heroics by Wade Edmond the game would not have been so close at the buzzer. Although the game ended in a defeat there were some fine personal performances in the contest. Wade Edmond played a good floor game gathering in some crucial rebounds and scoring in the clutch. In all Wade contributed 22 points but in this category he was out done by Wayne Emme who pumped home 24.

On January 10, the Radford College Islanders invaded the Maryville home court and pulled out a thrilling 79—76 victory over the winless Scots. The Scots down most of the game came on strong in the final minutes, and with just 1:05 left in the ballgame found themselves tied at 74 apiece. Hoping to get the ball back the Scots fouled Ken Richardson and he was awarded a one plus one free throw situation and converted on both attempts. Maryville got the ball in and came down to score on a short jumper by Edmond. On the inbounds pass Richardson was again fouled, he made the first free throw giving the Islanders a 79—76 lead with 13 seconds left in the ballgame. A tip in try with eight seconds to go failed rating capacity begun in recent years by power systems nationwide has been nuclear, partly because of the big cost increases for power generated from fossil fuels."

On the controversy over nuclear power plant safety, Wagner said the agency feels experience and the weight of scientific opinion indicate that nuclear plants can be operated safely, and can provide a vital part of America's energy supply.

"Commercial nuclear power production began nearly 20 years ago, and in about 300 combined reactor-years of operation at commercial nuclear power plants there has been no damage or injury to the public or operating personnel from a nuclear-related accident," he said.

The TVA Chairman said the scientific and technical community, with some exceptions, has voiced support for nuclear power. "Perhaps the best known statement was made in January 1975 by 32 of the country's most eminent scientists, 11 of them Nobel prize winners.

"Other endorsements for nuclear power have come from the Power Engineering Society and the Energy Committee of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers; the National Council of the American Institute for Chemical Engineers; the Board of Directors of the Health Physics Society; and the National Society of Professional Engineers. More than 25,000 scientists and engineers signed a petition, presented by the American Nuclear Society to the Federal Energy Administration, calling for increased construction of nuclear power plants."

Vol. 62 No. 12 | Maryville, College, Maryville, Tennessee | January 19, 1977

A large stone placed along with a Weeping Cherry comprises the nucleus of a planned Japanese corner of the planting memorial.

Trees are memorial gifts

Several shrubs and trees have been planted on campus between Anderson Hall, the Chapel, and Sutton Science Center as a memorial to Mrs. Milton Smith, who died last year. She was the wife of Milton Smith, who retired last summer as Maryville College Foundation Counselor.

In addition, a blue spruce was planted in memory of Raymond I. Brahams, Sr., who died last Fall. He was the father of Raymond I. Brahams, Jr., Maryville College Administrative Assistant to the President.

Several friends of the College made the memorial for Mrs. Smith possible. The Saga Food Service Staff contributed to the planting for Mr. Brahams.

The Smoky Mountains Garden Club, under Mrs. George Kramer's direction, did the planting. The Club chose trees and shrubs native to East Tennessee, plus a few new varieties which had already been planted elsewhere on campus.

Mrs. Smith was known especially for her activities in the Faculty Wives Club, and in many other service affairs on campus.

Farmhouse status

Slow but secure process

The Thompson Brown House (known as the farm house to students) has not been forgotten. Last term the Blount County Quarterly court granted permission to concerned people from the college and community to restore the house on its present site.

At the present time a group of individuals, headed by Dr. Sarah McNeil, Dr. John Nichols, and Ann Merrill, is in the process of formally organizing the restoration project. This process is very slow, as it involves incorporating, fund raising, getting estimates, obtaining insurance, etc. The group is incorporated under the name of Blount County Historical Trust.

Dr. Nichols wants to remind students that they are responsible for two major achievements concerning the house:

(1) the students helped raise over $1000 which will be used for restoration.

(2) Maryville College students are responsible for calling the attention of the community to the historical significance of the log house.

Dr. Nichols also wants the Maryville [illegible]uents to know that their continued interest and help will be much needed in the months ahead. If paper work and legalities are over by the spring term, students again can go out to the farm house and help in the restoration project. At present, nothing physically can be done.

Buckley amendment clarified

Act still in legal limbo

by David Boyd

"I think it is a good thing; a student should know what's in a file about him," stated Dr. Kramer, Dean of Student Relations, in a recent interview with the Echo concerning the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act.

The Buckley Amendment, the actual piece of legislation that grants the student and his parents access to his educational records, was passed in 1974 attached to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. After more than three years of hassling between schools and governmental officials, the act's regulations were finalized in June of 1976. Schools have until June of this year to comply with the act.

The amendment bears both good and bad tidings, according to articles published by CPS and by the Center for the Rights of Campus Journalists.

Provided for in the amendment are the rights of the student and his parents to inspect educational records, remove erroneous material, and limit the amount of directory information that can be released.

Directory information as recognized by the act includes the student's name, his or her local and permanent addresses, fact of enrollment, the number of credit hours, telephone numbers, the degrees and awards that the student has received, recognized activity participation, attendance dates, class level, and major field of study. Grades are not considered directory information and cannot be released without the student's permission.

This is a major area of contention at the University of Oregon where opponents and proponents have squared off in a heated debate over the Buckley Amendment, according to a CPS release.

The University does not consider the student's name, fact of enrollment, number of credit hours, or degrees and awards received as part of the directory information which can be withheld by the student. Don Chalmers, Director of the Office of Student Advocacy, says that the 'university can be sued right now for non-compliance with the law' on this point concerning directory information.

Violations of student privacy rights have occurred at the university. Class lists have been released to the F. B. I. and complete student lists have been sold.

Basically, if a school fails to allow the rights outlined in the act to the student, then that student can file suit.

Students attempting to get into graduate, medical, and law schools are finding that this act is a mixed blessing.

Ski trip, Ross concert planned

On January 21, the Social Committee is sponsoring a skiing trip to Gatlinburg Ski Resort. The trip will cost $14.00 per person, and that fee will include lift ticket, ski rental, ski school, and the bus fare. The bus leaves at 5 p.m., and the skiing will last from 6-10 p.m.

There must be at least twenty-five people participating to receive the group rates listed above.

Among upcoming events the Social Committee will sponsor a concert featuring poet/folksinger Jack Ross on February 11 at 8:15 p.m. The concert will be in the Chapel.

Ross, currently living in Nashville, has written and performed theme music for ABC's Wide World of Sports, and Eastern Airlines. He has performed for numerous colleges, including Emory and Henry, Auburn University, Milligan College, and others.

Ross has three albums out, the latest solo album entitled Quite the Handyman.

Auburn University evaluates his performance by saying: "Ross blesses the audience with voice . . . . it flows and softens, but can laugh and wonder why too . . . . he didn't want to leave and nobody else wanted him to . . . ."

Orchestra members needed

In its first season under the direction of Peggy Leatherwood, the Maryville College-Community Orchestra invites interested instrumentalists on campus to attend the rehearsals in preparation for a Student Concerto Concert on February 19 and a Pops Concert in the Spring.

Those interested should come to the Monday night rehearsals from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Band Room. No audition is necessary.

Director Leatherwood also teaches piano, theory, and music history at the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts. She received the B.Mus. degree from Maryville College and is now attending graduate school at The University of Tennessee.

Lit-mag applications due

The Communications Committee of the ACC will choose the Editor for "Impressions" this week, and has set tomorrow, January 20, as the deadline for applications. The Committee is seeking applications for staff in two categories:

1. Editor. Open to students of all majors. Qualifications: upperclassman, preferably a Junior or Sophomore this year; at least a "C" average; some experience but not currently holding another editorship. Application must name a person who will serve with the editor as business manager.

2. Anyone interested in a particular area: art, layout, copy, proofreading, typing, etc.

The Communications Committee is stressing continuity and is attempting to build an experienced staff. Those participating this year should look forward to working next year, when requirements for the editor will include one or two years experience on the staff.

Applications should be addressed to Box 2861.

Carter program questioned

Draft evaders should be granted amnesty

The "peace with honor" obtained by the United States in Vietnam has left several disturbing loose ends which must be dealt with before America can cleanse its conscience. Particular attention must be given to the problems concerning U.S. policy on draft evaders.

According to the National Council for Universal and Unconditional Amnesty (NCUUA), President Ford's amnesty program is futile, since states such as Arizona and Wisconsin have already set up legal barriers against those who hold anything less than honorable discharges.

Ford's method of dealing with the situation has also excluded the 8,700 convicted draft violators who have already been sentenced. Those few Americans who still have an interest in the issue are left to wonder how President-elect Carter will deal with those who opposed the Vietnam War by resisting the draft or by deserting from the armed forces.

Carter advocated a pardon for draft evaders during his campaign, but qualified this by stating that he intended to refuse pardons for draft non-registrants. The President-elect also opposed upgrading less than honorable discharges.

These attitudes will do very little in solving the problem at hand, since non-registrants are the largest group of draft violators. In addition, 792,000 veterans now hold less than honorable discharges. Therefore, Carter's proposed program would seem to be a glossing over of the question, while the majority of those to be affected will be simply ignored or, worse, forced to face legal and social rejection by the nation's system of "justice."

The National Democratic Party platform has called for a "full and complete pardon for those who were in legal or financial jeopardy because of their peaceful opposition to the Vietnam War, with deserters to be considered on a case-to-case basis."

While it is agreed that the problem of desertion carries widely varied and extenuating circumstances which necessitate individual attention, the question of pardon vs. amnesty is quite a different subject.

Carter has clarified his opinion on pardon as opposed to amnesty by stating, "Pardon means what you did, whether it is right or wrong, you're forgiven for it." If pardon is to be the solution to this problem, then it must be inferred that draft evaders were wrong in adhering to their spiritual ideals, since one does not need forgiveness for following principles which are right for that individual.

The only clear solution in considering this issue, then, must be amnesty—unconditionally. A nation faces very serious consequences when it reaches the conclusion that its citizens have the inherent right to follow their own spiritual and civic consciences, except when their philosophies do not fall in direct agreement with those of the government.

Convicted killer Gary Gilmore was executed by firing squad Monday at Point of the Mountain, Utah. This marks the first incidence of capital punishment in the United States in ten years.

A severe cold spell has crippled the East coast for nearly a week. Natural gas companies supplied by Tennessee Gas Pipelines are expecting cutbacks in supplies available to customers. Private homes will not be affected, but industry and business could be cut back to levels needed only for prevention of physical damage.

Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman announced that he will sign contracts allowing oil companies to build superports to house supertankers. Coleman also announced that he has signed contracts with major automobile companies to provide airbags in new model cars starting in 1979.

Smuggled cigarettes out

(CPS)--Notice to smokers--the weed you're smoking may be of the legal variety, but then again, take a good look at the tax seal. It may be counterfeit.

According to the Louisville Times, about 295 million packs of cigarettes are bootlegged out of Kentucky each year. The potential profit to smugglers is in the neighborhood of $25 million. In other tobacco producing states, the market is even higher.

Many of the illegal butts are bought, shipped and sold by organized crime figures. The Times research report said that fully-loaded semi-trailers are used in the operations.

Editorial policy revamped

This week the Echo begins a new policy concerning the regularly featured editorial. From now on, the editorial on the top of the editorial page will be the policy or position of the Highland Echo.

We begin this policy with the hope that it will align us with what we feel is a better way of formulating an opinion on the issues that arise. This also follows closely the accepted journalistic practice for publishing editorials. These editorials will be written by Janice West with input from a five-member editorial board.

This Echo policy is not to be construed with the policy of either the individual members of the Highland Echo or in a broader sense, the policy of the college. All issues discussed will be open to rebuttal from any member of the college community.

Periodically the Echo will offer a column of the opinion of individual staff members to round out the view on the editorial page. In this same light, members of the community are welcome to echo their views concerning a particular matter in either a guest column or in a letter to the Echo.

Only in mice: a tale of estrogen

y Helanine Lasky

(CPS)—There's gold in em there pills and while e Food and Drug Admintration (FDA) continues to sue warnings against danerous sex hormones and omen's contraceptive deces, there is no let-up in the rescription fever which rages ntreated in the offices of any gynecologists around e country.

One of the most dubious rugs still being prescribed ithout FDA approval is iethylstilbestrol (DES), a ynthetic estrogen pill reommended to women who re prone to miscarriage. he DES pill is also being ommercially marketed to ost menopausal women as a youth drug."

Sometimes mistaken for itamins, the pills have been indly swallowed on schedule at least 500,000 and ossibly as many as 2 million omen since 1940. In 1970, ES was linked to a form of ginal cancer that was turning in women whose mothers ere given DES during regnancy. Eight cases of this ype of cancer were reported New England and verified Massachusetts General ospital which maintains a egistry of the clear cell adencarcinoma. Of 280 known ases, 40 have died of the ancer and two-thirds were connected to DES usage. No cases have been reported in 2,708 women registered since 1975.

Physicians debate, the government researches, lawyers file,and women organize;but the risks remain as high as ever while more than a half million prescriptions are written yearly for progesterone-like hormones during pregnancy. These drugs include Provera, Depo Provera, Delautin, Duphaston, Norlutin, and Norlutate. In 1975, the FDA withdrew approval of any use of the progestins during pregnancy.

A report written by Dr. Sidney Wolfe, Director of Public Health Research Group, shows that the progestins are being issued at the same rate at which they were dispensed before FDA warnings. There were still 533,000 progesterone prescriptions written for women in 1975 despite recent studies that prove that the progestins are barely effective in preventing miscarriages.

One of the more disturbing aspects of the estrogen drug pitch is the advertising that accompanies the product. A doctor can switch on a special FM office radio given free of charge by the Physicians Radio Network and hear round the clock broadcasts paid for by pharmaceutical companies.

S. E. Massengill, commonly recognized for its supermarket-shelved douches, distributed a pamphlet in 1969 for its Menest Tablets. The booklet called "The Menopause: A New Life of Confidence and Contentment" was distributed to physicians by the tens of thousands. Each of its 34 pages contained a comic strip which printed questions asked and answered by an Ogden, Utah, obstetrician. One cartoon showed a woman with a bottle of estrogen pills asking whether or not the pills cause cancer. "Only in mice," was the response.

Doctors have jumped on the brand-wagon when it comes to advertising the estrogen pills,and one Brooklyn, N.Y.,gynecologist wrote a book called Feminine Forever which acclaimed the drugs, and sold 100,000 copies within eight months.

The reading follows the recent publication of Powell's newest volume of poems, Strawberries. Strawberries is Powell's second such volume, the first being My Watermelon Man, which was published in 1968.

Poetry readings are not a formal affair. They require only the attention of those interested in hearing the effects of the poet's words. Usually quiet, readings have a settling and contemplative effect on the mind.

Some readings, as in the case of Charles Bukowski, can be quite the opposite, erupting in confrontations between the poet and audience.

A 1967 graduate of Maryville, Powell has traveled in Europe and spent several summers in England. He furthered his education at the University of Tennessee by receiving a Master of Arts degree in English.

Powell is a native of Pennsylvania.

Coster exhibits paintings

Michael Coster, artist-teacher on the faculty of the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts, will participate in the Middle Tennessee State University Invitational Exhibit at Murfreesboro January 9-30.

Coster will exhibit two paintings entitled "Silvered Sunset" and "VIsions at Midnight" in the exhibit at the Art Barn Gallery there.

Artists-faculty members representing 22 Tennessee colleges and universities are participating in this exhibit.

Coster, who teaches all art classes—children through adult levels— at the Preparatory School, is a sculptor and has also studied painting, art history,and photography.

He holds the B.A. degree from the College of Wooster in Ohio and the Master of Arts and Master of Fine Arts degrees from Bowling Green State University. He was a graduate teaching assistant and graduate teaching fellow at BGSU before joining the Preparatory School faculty this past fall.

Noting that students now have the right to inspect all information contained in the files about themselves, educators are refusing to write recommendations or writing them so blandly that the graduate schools are being forced to rely heavily on raw test scores.

These students anxious to get into graduate schools are signing waivers of confidentiality. These limit the amount of information, such as letters of recommendation, that the student can review.

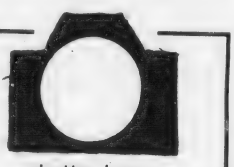
According to Kramer, compliance with the act involves three steps. First, the school must have a written institutional policy. Secondly, the school must notify the student of his or her rights under the law, and finally, the school is to provide a system for the student to gain access to records as set forth in the act.

Kramer says that Maryville College "is in the process of getting geared up for compliance." Presently a written institutional policy is awaiting administrative approval. Once finalized, the policy will be sent to all Maryville students with a letter of explanation attached.

Records which are not covered by the act and which the student cannot gain access to are, educational records that are used by and accessible only to the person who made them, records of the campus security unit, employment records, alumni records, finanical aid records, and student health records. Yet, a student's personal physician can inspect the health records.

Scholarship offered for 30

Approximately thirty amuel Robinson Scholarships ill be awarded in 1977, acording to an announcement ade by Jean Huffman, Mgs., INANCIAL AID FOR STUIES of The United Presbyrian Church's Vocation gency. The scholarships ailable on a competitive asis to students in any of the olleges related to The United resbyterian Church in the .S.A. are in the amount of 00.



Funds for the scholarships ere provided by Mr. Samuel obinson, a Presbyterian layan, who desired they be dministered by a national ffice for college students. he scholarships involve the riting of an essay on an asgned topic and the memoization of the answers of the estminster Shorter Catechm.

Mr. Robinson, a largely self-educated and self-made man, held a profound belief in the character-forming results of memorizing The Shorter Catechism.

The competition in the 1975-76 academic year produced eleven contestants and eleven winners. The total awarded was $2900. The scholarships are offered only to students in United Presbyterian-related colleges, though the students need not be United Presbyterians.

The essay topic for this year relates to a comparison of The Shorter Catechism's understanding of Jesus Christ with The Scots Confession's understanding of Jesus Christ. The essay topic and the rules of the competition have been provided by the United Presbyterian Church and are available in the Chaplain's Office.

Scots gain first victory

Scots down Sewanee; meet Centre

by Jack Turregano

The Scots basketball team, led by sophomore guard Wayne Emme's 20 points and clutch-free throw shooting, ran away from the Sewanee Tigers in the final moments to gain their first victory of the year on Monday 66–56.

The game was decided in the late minutes when the Tigers fell behind and were forced to foul to get the ball; during this time the Scots sank 7 of 9 free throws to increase their margin from three to ten points, the winning margin.

The Scots showed four men in double figures for the game. They were all led by Emme's 20 points. Ty Limbaugh contributed 15 points, most of which came in a torrid battle under the boards. Wade Edmond who led the Scots in rebounding with 11 also contributed 11 points, as did Mark Stinnet who captured 7 rebounds.

On January 13 the Maryville Scots traveled to Bryan College in a search for their first victory of this new year. About two hours later the Scots were still searching.

The Scots were humbled at Bryan 105–72, as they were unable to contain the hot shooting Lions. The Lions were led in their attack by Wes Johnson with 22 points, and Jerry Cline with 17. The Scots high point men were Wayne Emme with 22, Ty Limbaugh with 14, and Mark Stinnet with 12 points.

On Saturday night the Scots were again on the road this time traveling to Milligan College to take on the Buffalos. They were once again soundly defeated.

The Scots played a decent first half and found themselves down by only eight at the half. But in the second half the Buffs came out and the game's end was never in much doubt. Milligan used its overwhelming size, speed, and great shooting ability to beat the Scots.

Scottie Notes:

Kevin McKinstry played a good floor game contributing 5 assists and 6 points before being injured early in the second half of the Sewanee game. Coach Henry played a number of ballplayers against Sewanee; Ron Brofman came in and contributed a good hustling ballgame; as did John Thomas and Joe Beals, a couple of players we have not heard a lot from; but that situation might change as both played well under the pressure of a close game. . . The coach of Sewanee was zapped with two technicals in the closing seconds . . . .

Maryville's record for the new year stands at 1–4, with the next game at home Wednesday against Centre.

Cage program defended

by Jack Turregano

The Maryville College basketball team has fallen on some tough times this year. In fourteen attempts this year the Scots have posted only one victory. There are many reasons for their misfortune. It seems only fair to point out these shortcomings to the critics who have so unjustly downgraded the basketball situation.

To begin with, the Scots have a new coach, Bill Henry. Coach Henry had little time before the season to get to know his ballplayers. This made it tough to formulate an offensive and defensive pattern in which all the squad members would feel comfortable. Along with this the Scots are a very young team. They list only two seniors on their roster. Both usually start along with one sophomore, a transfer, and a number of different big men (none of which have had any real college experience until this year).

This all makes for a young, inexperienced team lacking the cohesiveness that it takes to win in these college ranks. Another of the Scots' problems is a real lack of size. They have a small team that is not blessed with outstanding speed or great leaping ability; and with a smallish lineup they are often overpowered on the boards and near the basket.

Along with all these problems the Scots have faced a number of good teams this year. The teams they have played have showed a great physical ability to play well together.

This coupled with the inexperience and lack of physical ability have led to some humbling defeats. These are just a few of the problems Coach Henry has had to wrestle with, but the future does look bright.

The Scots are blessed with some fine young ballplayers, and these are the ones who will control the future of the basketball program here. A little help in recruiting and a willing attitude could make the Scots a very respectable team in the 1977-78 season.

Wrestlers win big

The Maryville College Wrestling team must have made some New Year's resolutions as they impressively started the 1976-77 season with two consecutive double victories.

The Scots, who lost five straight matches before the holidays because of numerous injuries, dropped Tennessee Tech and Chattanooga State in a couple of mid-week matches and then surged back last weekend for two more big wins over Georgia Tech and Clemson. The matmen whipped Tech 46–6 and Chattanooga State 48–4, then followed with wins of 34–8 over Georgia Tech and 34–10 over Clemson.

Scots drop two cannot shake second half slump

by Dave Osborne

If the Women Scots had put two halves together January 11, they would have had their second consecutive victory, but unfortunately, they did not.

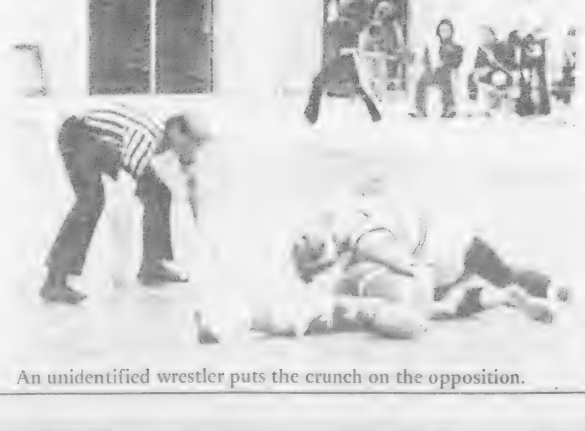
The girls led 27–19 at halftime, then fell to Bryan College 47–39. Maryville shot a mere 12% from the field in the second half.

Coach Brown said, "The loss was due to a couple of factors. The scoring was really inconsistent plus, the Lady Scots did not perform well in the second half." They scored only twelve points in the second half, three field goals and six foul shots.

Sharon Youngs led the team with 20 points and 13 rebounds. Pam Osborne (8 pts.) and Karen Burkhardt (5 pts. & 9 rebounds) also contributed well. Chris Curran and Ann Amick are still sidelined with knee and ankle injuries. Curran may be lost for the year.

"We're looking forward to Bryan coming here," Brown said. "We have something to show them." That game will be February 1.

The Scots hung tough until halftime January 15, then dropped a 64–29 decision to Roane State.



"We had a very slow second half," Coach Brown said. "We have to break the second half slump." The Scots were down by only 27–17 at half. "We're playing good defense. It's working good. There's no offense."

They say that good defense beats a good offense, but for the second straight game the girls scored only 12 points in the final frame. Libby Lowry had 8 of those 12.

Lowry led the team with 13 points, while Pam Osborne had 8. The duo combined for a total of 21 points. Leading scorer Sharon Youngs was out-of-action with an injured knee but will be back in the line-up soon.

The girls are home tonight for the first half of a basketball doubleheader.

Coach Brown said recently "We have to keep working, I think it's a mental attitude that we must break, there's something inside that says we can win, but there's something that says we can't." Coach Brown is very optimistic about the rest of the month. "We should have at least 4 victories by Feb. 2.

Kees, Shoemaker are new Chilhowean editors

Chilhowean room on Monday afternoon

by Ed Loper

In a series of meetings this week, the Communications Committee of the ACC released Deborah Huffman from her duties as editor of the Chilhowean and replaced her with Debbie Kees and Sophia Shoemaker.

This action comes as a result of a series of missed copy deadlines over the last three months. To date, no copy has been submitted for publication for the months of November, December and January. As of now, no company has been selected to publish the annual

The Communications Committee met on Friday to review the situation. It was decided to release Huffman from her duties mainly because of the fact that she is not enrolled as a student this term. The decision was also based on the fact that no apparent work has been done on the annual since the middle of November.

According to staff members, the major problem of the Chilhowean would seem to be a lack of organization. A fair amount of loose ends exist such as an unfinished portrait schedule and an ambiguious production schedule.

On Monday, the Committee met again and unofficially named Debbie Kees, currently assistant editor, and Sophia Shoemaker co-editors. Their task will be to try to produce an annual by the end of May. Their official consideration as editors is pending their acceptance by Friday.

Kees is a senior recreation major from West Islip, New York. Sophia Shoemaker is a senior from Oneida, Tennessee and is currently an English major.

The new editors will assume their duties immediately. The position of Chilhowean editor carries with it a stipend of one-half tuition.

Shoemaker spoke for herself and Kees in an interview with the Echo Tuesday evening:

"Debra and I regret the time lost, but we still feel that we can get out a good yearbook if students and faculty will cooperate. The students must make some effort to help the staff and show interest in their own activities (show up for formal and group photos) in order for the yearbook to be a success."

The annual experienced a shift in editors mid-year in 1972. In that year editor Tim Hodge missed three deadlines in January, February and March. He was removed when the contract with Hunter Publishing Company was broken.

Hodge was replaced that year by Freddie Rhodes who produced a yearbook that made its appearance in June.

In the March 31, 1972 edition of the Highland Echo, editorial response was made to the situation. The problem here was identified as a "lack of responsibility."

"This lack of personal responsibility has affected every member of Maryville College. Every student is out the several dollars that comes to the Chilhowean from the activities fees...we hope that steps can be taken to prevent such irresponsibility from recurring in the future."

Huffman could not be reached for comment.

Bans sex discrimination

Title IX compliance sought

by Bonnie Holsinger

Maryville College is presently moving towards compliance with the Title IX requirements banning sex discrimination, according to Raymond Brahams, spokesman for the college Title IX committee.

The Title IX committee, formed to deal with the areas concerning this federal law, consists of Bob Layman, Sharon Brown, Lisa Wilson, Dr. Jerry Waters, and Raymond Brahams. Jean Jones has been appointed recently, taking the place of Elaine Spurlin.

The committee was appointed by the president, and had its last meeting on September 30, 1976. There are plans for a meeting in the near future.

Title IX is a law that bans sex discrimination in education, and covers the following areas: admission, educational programs and activities, financial aid, employment, athletics, textbooks and curriculum materials.

The committee found that the only area which needed any concern at this time was intercollegiate athletics for women. Upon the request of the Title IX committee, a proposal was presented by the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee to the ACC dealing with women's intercollegiate tennis.

The council passed the proposal, but the money for the team may have to come out of the existing budget, which means cutting back other sports areas.

Brahams, a member of the committee, stated that Title IX does not require that expenditures for both the mens and womens teams be equal, but the college has to provide the equal opportunity if there is sufficient ability and interest.

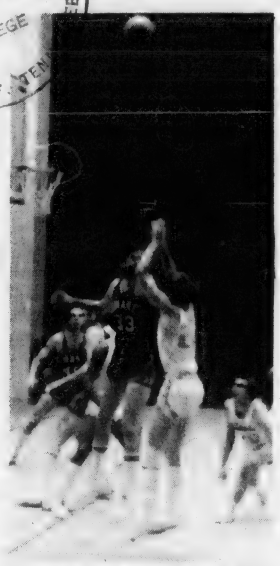
Brahams went on to say, "I think everyone agrees there shouldn't be sex discrimination," but conceded that there is a problem in alleviating that discrimination because of the nonexisting funds to support new women's tennis.

This is not a dilemma concerning Maryville College alone. Many small colleges as well as universities across the country are facing equally precarious financial problems.

According to a CPS release, most schools do not want the money for the Title IX ruling to come from within the existing college budget. Instead, they are looking for more state aid, and allocating other funds for women's tennis.

Brigham Young University in Utah has been declared exempt from the Title IX ruling on religious grounds.

According to CPS, Hillsdale College in Michigan is still refusing to comply with the federal regulations.



Their dispute is over establishing an affirmative action hiring program.

However, Brahams stressed Maryville's support of the law and the plans to comply with it. Brahams says, "If anybody has any concerns in this area, in regard to any programs in the college, please let someone on the committee know." Brahams further remarked, "I'm sure that the committee will be able to work out these problems."

If, in the event that the committee cannot come to a decision, action will be taken by the administration, and from there it will go to the board.

'Eiger Sanction' to be shown

"The Eiger Sanction," a film starring Clint Eastwood, will be shown this Saturday night, January 29, at 7:00 and 9:15 p.m. in the College Theatre. Admission for this film, which is being sponsored by the Social Committee, is $1.00.

Fending off the feds

by Carol O'Connor

(CPS)—The Internal Revenue Service, Friday, backed off on a controversial plan to start collecting income taxes on the value of free or reduced tuition given as a fringe benefit to some 27,000 children of professors.

First proposed last November as a way to plug leaky loopholes in the current tax system, the IRS stood to tax $20 million worth of scholarships. However, just as soon as the measure was proposed, the U.S. Treasury Department was bombarded with protests and criticisms from the halls of academia to the heights of professional organizations.

The professors argued that the current tax-free tuition remission programs that more than 800 schools and universities nationwide use is supported by a 22-year history. In 1954, the House and the Senate specifically approved the kind of scholarships which the IRS could classify as tax-free fringe benefits. Many professors also pointed out that they had taken their jobs, often at lower pay, so that their children could attend the school free.

The 1954 action was based on the notion that people who teach other people's children should not, for financial reasons, find their children excluded from the benefits of education.

The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) also pointed out that faculty families were being unfairly singled out. Last month, William Simon, secretary of the Treasury, veoed an IRS proposal to tax certain corporate pre-

Greek study offered

We will offer Greek 101, 102, 201-4, next year (1977-78), if there is sufficient interest. Most students whose vocational compass is oriented either toward the church or graduate study in religion should seriously consider learning Greek. Greek is required by some seminaries for graduation and by some churches for ordination.

Committee, ACC, need to take closer look at publications

Awesome lack of responsibilities

An upheaval in the editorial staff of the Chilhowean occurred at Maryville College in 1972. The result was the mid-year appointment of a new editor and a delay in publication of the yearbook until the summer.

It would be hoped that more care be taken in the selection of the yearbook editor and in supervision of the progress of the staff during the school year in order to avoid a repeat of the 1972 chaos.

However, history seems to be repeating itself with this year's Chilhowean. The major problem again is apparently a definite lack of organization between the editor and the staff.

Editorship of the yearbook or of any campus publication carries with it an awesome responsibility. The editor is responcible to the editorial staff as well as to the campus at large.

This year's Chilhowean editor seems to have fallen short of her responsibility, since:

a) according to Echo sources, the deadlines for November, December, and January have not been met;
b) the editor has neither met with nor communicated with her staff, other than photographers, since interim;
c) there is no evidence that any work has been done on the yearbook since the latter part of November.

The Communications Committee finally became aware of the problem and met on January 21. At this meeting, it was learned that this year's editor is not enrolled at Maryville this term and, therfore, can no longer serve as editor of the Chilhowean.

Another meeting of the Communications Committee and Chilhowean staff on January 24 showed that, although the editor had begun with good intentions, nothing materialized. This resulted in the tentative appointment of two new co-editors, Sophia Shoemaker and Deborah Kees.

The original yearbook staff has promised its support, and hopefully, a yearbook can be prduced before the 1976-77 school year ends. The co-editors are willing to work, but they need the cooperation of the entire campus in order to work successfully.

The thought remains that this problem might never have occurred if more interest in campus activities existed. If students took more interest in the affairs of publications and in the community in general, more involvement and less irresponsibility would be present.

The Acc supposedly checks on the work of the various committees on compus. It seems that the Communications Committee has been seriously neglected by the ACC this year. Otherwise, the lack of organization on the Chilhowean staff would have come to light much earlier.

It would appear very simple for the Communications Committee itself to keep abreast of the progress of those publications which fall under its supervision. In the case of the Chilhowean, there is no evidence that this has been attempted by the committee other than occassional conversation with the editor.

With the alleviation of the problem now in effect, the only hope left is that student apathy will not prevail. The new Chilhowean co-editors need maximum cooperation from the campus in order to complete a full year's work in four months. With luck, the campus will show enough concern to offer assistance to the yearbook staff in the months ahead.

Stardate

Impressions - the definite reality of publication

Editor's note: "Stardate" appears as a regular column for the first time in the Echo this week. Hopefully in the future it will provide the reader with a meaningful presentation of the individual opinion of one or more of the editors.

It is particularly pleasing for this writer to note present security of the literary publication, Impressions. While in the above editorial mention is made that the Communications Committee, through circumstance, has contributed to the present condition of the Chilhowean, that same committee must be commended for their efforts to maintain Impressions.

It is not just the committee though, that needs to be applauded. It has been a small, dedicated group of students who pressured the committee into continuing Impressions. And it is this same, small group of students that must now produce the magazine, and hopefully preserve its fundamental creative concept for the future.

The staff of Impressions this year will be operating without an editor. Instead, they will work as a cooperative to complete its production. In this, each staff member will have the responsibility as the next; each will work with the others to achieve the end result.

A cooperative publication will hopefully pave the way for two things to occur. First, a definite editorial responsibility should grow, thus ensuring the quality of the publication. Second, since the responsibility and work load is to be shared, the members of the staff will all have the opportunity to gain working experience on a publication. This is invaluable to the continuity of Impressions.

Presently, Adrienne Bennet, Richard Bottone, Kathy Dunmire, Bonnie Holsinger, Alan Regenbrecht, and Ricky Smith comprise the staff. Their proposal for the operation of the magazine will be forwarded to the Communications Committee for final approval on Friday.

This staff is working now with a gentle, concerned enthusiasm to organize themselves and prepare for both the financing and production of the magazine. If they can sustain this present enthusiasm there should be little difficulty in producing the final magazine.

Yet, one final item needs to be stressed. The magazine will only succeed if a goodly number of individuals wish to insure its success. If your concerns are creative in nature, lend some vocal or creative support to the staff of Impressions.

The future of Impressions has once again been assured for the time being. The exemplary cooperation between the committee and those on the staff has gone a long way in that respect. What remains to be seen is the maintainence of the outlet for creativity at Maryville College.

Tim Rahn

Impressions seeks literary contributions

The staff of Impressions, the literary magazine, is asking for the creative contributions of the campus community to be selected for use in a publication early this spring.

Poems, short stories, essays, and line drawings are all welcome for consideration by the editorial staff. Such efforts may be submitted to box 2860, preferably typewritten. The staff has set a tentative deadline for submitted articles for February 28.

Interim options broadened

The Interim subcommittee of the Instructional Program Committee announces that students, especially those who have felt dissatisfied and bored with previous Interims, now have two options for designing their own projects. Both options, however, have deadlines.

The first option allows any group of students to organize a subject of their choice and to choose a faculty advisor who would be willing to sponsor them. Interested groups must submit their proposals to the Interim Committee (Box 2863) by February 25.

The second option allows a student to plan his/her own independent Interim. Such an Interim can be on campus, off campus, or out of state. To plan an independent Interim a student will need to fill out an application which the Committee will make available the first of April, and turn it in by April 15. The student will also need to arrange for an off-campus person to be their supervisor, plus a Maryville faculty member who can verify the educational value of the project.

Feb meetings to focus on worship

February Meetings at Maryville College, under the guidance of the Worship Committee, are ready with this year's theme of "The Diversity of the Christian Community as it is expressed in its worship."

The Meetings, held from February 13-17, will feature selected speakers, groups, and seminars centering on the theme. Jim Stewart, Maryville College Chaplain, says activities will focus on the questions: "What is worship, why worship today, what are the various traditions of worship represented on this campus, and how can this diversity in worship enrich the life of Maryville College and the greater community?"

The featured speaker for the Meetings will be Rev. Pat McGeachy, Nashville Urban Minister for the Presbytery of Middle Tennessee and the downtown Presbyterian Church. Mr. McGeachy's background includes: authorship of several books relating to contemporary Christian life, composition of several contemporary hymns and songs, and leadership of numerous workshops to develop greater consciousness about worship and celebration. Mr. McGeachy was recently involved with a program called "A New Song." This program worked at "involving people in the excitement of worship as celebration, and bringing the biblical message to life for young and old." Mr. McGeachy believes " . . . we are under orders to sing to the Lord . . .," and he will bring that message and his guitar with him as he introduces the February Meetings on Sunday, Feb. 13.

Also adding to the Meetings will be the Gregg Smith Singers. This internationally famous group will present a concert on Wednesday evening, Feb. 16. Hailed throughout the world, the Gregg Smith Singers will feature a program of contemporary sacred music- relating it to the theme of the February Meetings.

Another important facet included on the agenda will be worship services representing four major Christian traditions: Evangelical Free Church, Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic, and "mainline" Protestant.

The meetings are now ready to begin. The Worship Committee will announce further details later.

McCall speaks on land use

On February 2, the Community Issues and Values program will present Tim W. McCall, Director of Land Stewardship for the Southeast Regional Office of the Nature Conservancy.

McCall is slated to speak on "The Role of the Private Sector in the Preservation of Natural Areas." A film entitled "American Land Trust" accompanies McCall's presentation, and afterwards he will hold a question and answer session.

The Nature Conserverancy is an organization concerned with land use, managing 1,474 areas containing a total of 800,000 acres in 47 states and the Virgin Islands. Last year alone saw the completion of 200 projects costing 60 million dollars.

Strawberries

by David Reed Powell illustrated by Heather Van Dyke Nonn

by Tim Rahn

Poetry, since my high school days, has been a constant source of rejuvenation and solace in my life. Poetry has become more than prose versified and rhymed; it has grown to become, as Archibald McLeish speaks of poems, something "palpable and mute/As a gobbled fruit."

In this sense, I have grown with poetry since that time. I passed through poets of many generations, then finally settled on the contemporaries. Lowell, Ammons, Koch, Brautigan, and Merwin have all became poets of quality—each a master, worthy of emulation.

Along the way I met David Powell, a poet. I have grown to know this man who teaches part-time in the English department at Maryville more and more as time has passed. I have known him in the ways most others know him: the bearded one slipping notes into boxes that read "Get you yazoo over there!" or the guy who always has a smart remark.

Yet, I have also come to know Dave Powell as a friend and poet, and in the process found the two inseperable. But I, like the others who have gotten to know him now find it no great surprise that he has published another small book of poems, Strawberries.

Strawberries is a pleasant book of 24 poems. Arranged with a touch of class and highlighted by Heather Van Dyke Nonn's illustrations, it grabs the eye with a bowl of lush strawberries on its cover. These delectable berries are inviting us to take a bite of what is inside.

And, it is the poems within that really count. They show a definite purpose, Dave Powell's "stake in the heart of memory" as his second poem tells us. In a similar way the theme is communicated to the reader—a theme of the vitality of life and its terrifying counterpart, death and death's handmaiden, time.

We can see in the dedicatory poem this life/death paradox in the lamentation of the death of the poet's father. Yet, there is little sorrow here, or in any other poem in Strawberries. In each of these saddened moments there is the echo of life. In "Ritual," the concluding poem of the book, the father even in death protects against death:

Listen to our dead fathers chanting for us:
Go away, death.
Go away, death.
Go away, death.

With this first poem and "Ritual" we have what is vital in this book. Other poems, however, respond to a particular variant to the life/death theme. The sonnets sound the urgency of the poet's message. "Sonnet On Spring" impresses life deeply with the lines,

I who fought winter death by keeping still,
Now wish to screw the stars. And can. And will.

The "Sonnet: On Absence" and "Sonnet: On Strength" both answer again to a father or image of profound power. They express the impact of the poet's experience with the situation. Again, the poet's perception of the encounter pushes us to realize that same encounter forcing us to consider our experience as opposed to the sonnet's totality.

Not all the poems are this serious. "Self-portrait with Peanut Butter Sandwich," while full of its serious moments in telling of the ride up (or down) Rt. 81, should strike a bond with anyone who has ever driven through that awesoem wasteland of Virginia. The poem itself captures the drive's feeling even so far as the on and off reception. "Chewing Gum Poem" is of similar nature, full of both pun and fun much like Brautigan.

Among all of these is a poem that still mystifies me. "Faith is an act that is always physical," is a poem that demands of the reader a similar occurence, and consequential identification with the poet. Unsure of this connection, the reader can ruminate with the proverbial aspect of the poem:

Faith is an act of repetition,
Like eating.

Also in this poem we are forced to ponder the possibility "that death is a choice" and weigh what is said here with that in the other poems.

Some of the poems are not as successful as these mentioned. For instance, "Love Song and Sonnet from Someone Dying" seems unapproachable and blessed with an uncertain title.

Gail Aiken

Not all the poems can be considered here: implications are forever. At any rate, find this book—beg, borrow, or buy it—it speaks of two things. Quality poetry is being written by and from this campus, and the poet Dave Powell sees enough and well enough to give of himself.

A final word: Remember, give of yourself what the poet demands; all poetry is reciprical.

David Reed Powell's poems must be heard to be fully enjoyed. He will be reading this Friday in the FAC Music Hall at 8:00 p.m.

Byrd serves as assistant coach

Probably not as well known as his father - Ben Byrd, the Knoxville Journal sports editor - Rick Byrd might well be in the future.

A Knoxville native, Rick is serving as assistant coach for Bill Henry and working on his masters degree through graduate study at U.T. Conflicts? Not really. Rich maintained a 4.0 last quarter, but agrees that away games are the biggest problems concerning his studies.

The big goal in Byrd's life is to have a career in coaching. He's off to a good start. Starring as a guard at Doyle High School, Byrd was named to the Honorable Mention All-State team his senior year. He later played on the junior varsity for U.T. where he was a 50% shooter and point man.

Byrd also gained experience and confidence by spending many long hours at several summer camps under such winning mentors John Wooden and Ray Mears. Mears sent Byrd to the ACC Tournament as a scout for the Vols. Right now, Maryville College backetball is his chief concern.

"It's a tremendous opportunity, and I have been given a lot of responsibility. Before the season I was worried what it would be like working with guys close to my age. The guys accepted me extremely well and I have confidence."

Coaches Byrd and Henry have a basic philosophy. "We want guys on the court that can do the best job." They aren't afraid to substitute players in the closing minutes of a tight game, because they have confidence in seven or eight players, not just five. Henry and his assistant are installing experience in a young ball club. Add some good recruiting and you have a winning recipe at Maryville. 2—13 does not tell the basketball story because 4 games were lost by 3 points and one by 2.

Byrd admits that his salary won't pay his gas bill from Knoxville, but he was obliged to help Coach Henry, "a long time friend from way back."

Byrd's future plans include accepting a coaching bid somewhere. He hopes to get a permanent head coaching job with a Junior College.

Who knows? In the future Ben Byrd might be asked, "Say, aren't you the father of Rick Byrd, the coach at ...?"

requisites such as free airline flights for airline employees and relatives.

In Congressional testimony January 7, the AAUP argued that other professions aren't taxed for fringe benefits extended such as free airline flights. The AAUP also pointed out that physicians aren't taxed for free medical services extended to their families nor are department store employees taxed for discounts extended to them.

So, after a storm of angry letters and testimony given by a horde of college and university representatives at the January 7 hearing, the IRS was convinced it had made a mistake.

The witnesses, according to the IRS, stated "problems associated with changing the tax treatment of amounts received under tuition remission programs." In view of these problems and the joint study of the tax treatment of scholarships and fellowships called for by the House and Senate Committee Reports on the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the IRS concluded that the proposed plan should be scrapped.

By the time that the testimony was given on the proposal, which many professionals felt to be blatant contradiction to past Congressional action and an unfair attempt to single out professors, the professors, had managed to rally several Congressmen to their side, including House Education and Labor Committee Chairman Carl Perkins, D-Ky., and ranking minority member Albert Quie, D-Minn.

Women win over KC..

by Dave Osborne

The Women Scots came home Monday night full of fire and happy to be off the road trip. Coach Browns' girls found two forces when they traveled to Tennessee Wesleyan January 15, the opposing girls and the officials.

Tennessee Wesleyan scored 21 points from the free throw line and a total of 29 fouls were called against Maryville. The final score was 79—55 in favor of Wesleyan. The Maryville girls did not shoot a foul shot in the first half, and finished with 38% shooting. The girls didn't play a bad game. "I was pleased. We played well, we're passing well, and we worked our fast break. We had good rebounding too." Coach Brown seemed quite happy about her girls play.

Sharon Youngs had her best game with 26 points and 7 rebounds. Libby Lowry had a fine game also. She ended up with 16 pts. and 10 rebounds. The Women Scots had 37 total rebounds with 21 on the offensive boards. "Sandy Chambers had an excellent defensive game," Brown said. She also had 7 rebounds.

Add 46% shooting from the field, 48 rebounds and 3 players in double figures, and you have a winning combination. Joel Campbell and Pam Osborne shot 100% from the floor on January 19, beating Knoxville College.

Karen Burkhardt came out with a new hair style, then took it to the court scoring 19 points and pulling down 17 rebounds. Nine of those points came from the free throw line. Libby Lowry had 17 pts. and 10 rebounds. Sharon Youngs contributed 12 pts. and 11 rebounds.

The Women "put together two good halves," Coach Sharon Brown said. "We had good offense, it didn't go stale in the second half. We just put the ball in the hoop."

Maryville showed predominance on the boards for the second time this season. The other time was a victory over St. Mary's.

Grapplers win

Coach Don Elia took his grapplers to Boone, N.C., January 18, and avenged an earlier season loss by whipping Appalachian State 24-20.

One of the highlights during the match was Bob Valentine's pinning a foe who earlier had broken Valentine's nose. Elia's squad evened their record at 5—5.

Results: 118 Tom Bonner (MC) won by pin. 126 Jay Pensyl (MC) lost 12-0. 134 Ralph Melia (MC) lost 6-4. 142 Ed Davalos (MC) won 9-1. 150 Mark Thedford (MC) lost 5-3. 158 Rorrer (MC) won by pin. 167 Ray Oliveri (MC) lost 4-2. 177 Wayne Dunn (MC) won 16-4. 190 Bob Valentine (MC) won by pin. Heavyweight Bob VonMitch (MC) won 7-2.

Edmond leads Scots

Spurred on by a rebellrous crowd the Maryville Scots overcame a three point halftime deficit to defeat the Centre Colomels in the final moments 68—67.

The Scots were led in scoring by Wade Edmond with 25 points. Edmond also collected a number of rebounds as did Mark Stinnet, and Ty Limbaugh. Wayne Emme was close behind Edmond with 19 points. Joe Beals turned in another fine ballgame playing tough defense and running the offense with precision.

The Scots next ballgame is Thursday when they face Covenant College from Lookout Mountain Tennessee at home. The starting time will be 7:30.

ACC approves women's tennis

At the January 12 All College Council meeting the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee submitted two proposals, both of which concerned women's sports.

The first proposal, which concerned awarding lifetime passes to athletic events to eligible female athletes, passed without delay. Such a practice was previously established for eligible men.

The IAC's second proposal was to establish a Women's Intercollegiate Tennis Team. They presented to the ACC a brief history of women's tennis at Maryville College, a rationale for intercollegiate status, and an itemized budget.

After discussing at length the funding, and the appropriateness of a separate women's team in conjunction with Title IX, (the equal opportunity law), the ACC reached a concensus.

The ACC conceded that the proposal could be passed only if the last sentence was stricken. When the Council removed the last sentence, which read "that women's tennis be sponsored by new funds and not with existing funds for intercollegiate athletics," Maryville College's first Women's Intercollegiate Tennis Team became a reality.

The ICC wants to hear from any faculty member or student who has suggestions or complaints concerning athletics at Maryville College. Any comments can be addressed to the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, Box 2436.

MC Board selects Anderson

Dr. Wayne Anderson

By Ed Loper and Charles Craven

"I am pleased and thrilled about being chosen as the eighth president of Maryville College. I have had seven extraordinary predecessors, and I'll try my best to live up to this awesome tradition," said Wayne Anderson as he publicly accepted the presidency of Maryville College.

Dr. Anderson will succeed the sixteen years of Dr. Joseph J. Copeland's presidency on July 1, 1977.

This follows action by the Board of Directors who voted on Monday to confirm the Presidential Search Committee's recommendation of Dr. Anderson.

Dr. Dan McGill, chairman of the Board, stated, "The board is confident that Dr. Wayne Anderson will bring new heights of achievement to the institution that was so nobly conceived by Dr. Issac Anderson in 1819 and nurtured by six dedicated successors, including its current distinguished president, Dr. Joseph Copeland.

"Despite his relative youth, Dr. Anderson brings to the college an impressive array of talents", Dr. McGill added. "He should provide vigorous, innovative and sound educational leadership in the difficult years ahead. He can expect the full support of the board as together we confront the problems facing small liberal arts colleges today."

As executive assistant to John Hopkins University Presidents, a position he held from 1966 to 1975, Dr. Anderson's duties included serving as liaison between the president and the faculty, staff, and students. He also served as assistant secretary of the Board of Trustees and adviser to the student government.

Before his work at Johns Hopkins, he was assistant to presidents of the National Association of American Colleges. From 1962 until 1966, he supervised various commissions of the Association, conducted research, managed annual meetings, and did editorial work, speech writing and public speaking.

Schoen, Zinavage recital set

Betty Carol Zinavage and Suzanne Schoen, two junior music majors, will present a recital Tuesday night, February 8, at 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Zinavage, a piano major from Waynesville, North Carolina, will perform selections by Schumann and Ravel. Zinavage has received the Oscar Phillip Steele Award, Fine Arts Competition Awards, and the Theodore Presser Scholarship. In addition, she is the first vice president of the Alpha Zeta chapter of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women.

Flutist Schoen, who is president of the Delta Omicron chapter, has programmed compositions by Bach, Honegger, and Faure. She is also a recipient of the Oscar Phillip Steele Award and Fine Arts Competition Award. A Maryville, Tennessee native, her activities at the Fine Arts Department include eight years of participation in the annual production of Handel's Messiah.

Admission is free, and a reception will follow in the Fine Arts Center Lounge.

Dr. Dan Kinsinger dies

by Charles Craven

Dr. Dan Howard Kinsinger, associate professor of voice at Maryville College, died Friday, January 28, at his home in Maryville. He was 58.

Dr. Kinsinger had suffered a heart attack this past fall and spent about a month in the hospital, but was recovering and had planned to resume teaching this week. He met with his voice students Wednesday to plan schedules, and attended the basketball game Thursday night.

Dr. Kinsinger was alone when stricken Friday morning. He was found in the kitchen by his son around noon and pronounced dead on arrival at Blount Memorial Hospital at 1:20 p.m.

In his twenty-three years of teaching at Maryville College, Dr. Kinsinger is remembered by the music faculty for being gentle but persevering with students. Though many of his former students have gone on to distinguished careers as vocalists, he was also known for his patience with beginners and his interest in their progress.

Dr. Harry H. Harter, Fine Arts Department Chairman, commented on Dr. Kinsinger's willingness to help any group or organization needing musical assistance. He took an active part in opera workshops held on campus, singing lead roles in Manotto's The Consul, Puccini's Gianni Schicci, and Mozart's Impresario, and giving helpful advice to other singers. He was directing the music for Stop the World—I Want to Get Off last fall and was scheduled to take part in Amahl and the Night Visitors in December when heart trouble put him in the hospital.

In his earlier years at Maryville he directed women's and men's glee clubs, which performed light, secular music for "springtime serenades" and other programs.

He was always willing to fill in as a soloist for the Messiah wherever he was needed, says Dr. Harter, who commented on his ability to sing a tenor or bass role equally well. He was to have sung in the Messiah last fall.

Dr. Harter went on to describe him as "very generous with his time and talent both on and off campus. He was very loyal to New Providence Church, and was especially loyal to the church choir." But he also made a special effort to honor requests to sing at other churches, Harter says, and was thus "a good liason" between the College and the surrounding community. For a few years Dr. Kinsinger was the choir director at Broadway United Methodist Church.

His outside hobbies and interests included the Faculty Club, in which he served for several years as treasurer, and the Maryville Rotary Club, where he hald a perfect attendance record until his illness last fall. As a photographer he supervised a darkroom at the Fine Arts Center graphy club. He also liked to bowl and play poker with a club of other faculty members.

Dr. Kinsinger will be especially missed for his sense of humor, particularly his puns. Dr. Harter named him as "the best punster on campus."

ACC talks food

A concerned group of about forty students talked with the All College Council at its regular session on Wednesday in regard to the food program at Maryville College.

The scheduled item of business was a report by the food committee given by Jackie Inmann and Bob Miller, Food Service Director.

Miller told the council of two additions of the Saga Corporation to the Maryville account. One is the very recent addition of the Tremont facility and the other is the possibility of adding a "Meals on Wheels" program.

All food for consumption at Tremont will be prepared in the Maryville kitchen. This will increase the efficiency of the current production schedule and will increase volume, resulting in a savings for the students. Income from Tremont will be used to upgrade the entire program.

The "Meals on Wheels" concept is designed to feed the elderly in their own homes. Again the volume of the Maryville kitchen will be increased so as to achieve a savings for the students.

Miller told the council that

Ross to appear in concert at MC

Poet-folksinger Jack Ross will give a concert here on February 11 at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. The Social Committee is sponsoring this performance.

Jack Ross' music reminds listeners of the open road. He tells of lost loves and people he has met. His song It Wasn't Supposed to Turn Out This Way is about falling in love unexpectedly. But it is also about Ross and his music.

There is a slight touch of Harry Chapin in him; however, he reminds you of Gordon Lightfoot, whom he admires.

Ross' recent professional credits include fronting for Dox Watson Dobie Gray, and the Kingston Trio.

In his struggle for a professional career he has been a janitor, a life guard, a crate stapler, a disc jockey, a recording engineer, and a water heater factory worker.

Ross has a college degree in music and speech. He wrote and performed the theme music for ABC Wide World of Sports and Eastern Airlines. In addition he has a song-writing contract with Famous Music, a Gulf-Western subsidiary. He also owns and manages a production and booking agency called Room Service Productions.

Tickets, which are $3.00 each, will be available at the door. They may also be purchased in the dining hall during lunch or dinner.

Knight presents

Lee Knight, folklorist, will give a presentation at the Community Issues and Values program next Wednesday, February 9, in Wilson Chapel.

Knight, whose topic will be Teaching Through Folk Music and Folk Literature, will share some of the songs and messages of international folklore to illustrate the history and customs of many cultures. He is now in residence at the South Carolina Arts Commission, having toured Russia, South America, and the United States.

Anderson selection applauded

The need for "a new beginning"

The first president of Maryville College was a thirty-nine year old Presbyterian named Anderson who was born in Rockbridge County, Virginia. Now, one hundred fifty-eight years later, history is about to repeat itself with the selection of another Anderson, Dr. Wayne W. Anderson, as the eighth president of the college.

The new president-elect is also thirty-nine years old, a Presbyterian, and has family connections in Rockbridge County, Virginia.

Dr. Anderson assumes his new position saying, "I have had seven extraordinary predecessors, and I'll try my best to live up to this awesome tradition. Perhaps . . . it's time for a new beginning at Maryville College."

There are several reasons for a hopeful outlook on this recent appointment. Dr. Anderson has compiled an impressive list of experience, including administrative positions with three recent presidents of Johns Hopkins University, with two presidents of the Association of American Colleges, and with the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The president-elect is presently director of the Trustee Leadership Program of the Association of Governing Boards, in Washington, D. C. The Association is in charge of research and training conferences for trustees of colleges and universities. This will give more valuable insight into the total operation of Maryville College as Dr. Anderson becomes president.

The selection committee is to be highly commended for the excellent job it performed in choosing the new president. Much time and concentrated effort went into this process, and the committee has done its work with utmost efficiency.

In addition to his creditable record, Dr. Anderson also brings youth and vigorous energy into the presidency. He has listed two major immediate priorities regarding his new position, the first of which is to attract as many funds into Maryville College as possible. This job is to be coupled with the task of making the budget for the college more realistic.

Anderson's second priority is to establish a more open presidency by encouraging interaction between his office and the students and faculty of Maryville. A more open presidency would be extremely good in establishing relationships which heretofore have been nonexistent or ignored by both students and Dr. Copeland's administration.

Once again, a plea is made for a new consciousness to oppose the prevailing attitude of student apathy. Maryville students were invited during the presidential selection process to meet with the various candidates—little student response was shown.

One often hears complaints of students that Maryville lacks a "spirit of community." How can a community spirit exist when the majority of the "community's" members refuse to become involved in "community" activities?

We are once again left with the hope—feeble as it may seem—that the students of Maryville will attempt to join with the new president in making "a new beginning" for Maryville College.

Stardate: after the food fight

Demeaning, dehumanizing, demoralizing

Last Wednesday, the All-College Council indulged itself in dialogue with students regarding the food service at Maryville College. I think that by most standards this dialogue can be seen as a meaningful discussion instead of the meaningless rhetoric that usually passes for dialogue at Maryville College. This writer saw the afternoon as a more productive adventure than what he had first expected.

However, one element raised its head which I had been mulling around in my mind for sometime. That is a basic and fundamental dichotomy that exists in certain relationships within the dining system at Maryville College.

At one point the subject of the famous "Superbowl Sunday food fight" became the topic of discussion; it was inevitable. The members of the council were properly repulsed, while the students seemed to be indifferent. One student's remark greatly disturbed me. I quote as best I can:

"It is our food, we paid for it. What we do with it is our own business—if we want to fight with it we can." This points out a fundamental problem that I have seen for a year and a half; I am sure that it is much older.

The student workers have been placed in a most awkward position. They are working for a large corporation that has its rules and regulations. They are living intimately in a community for which they also work. Oftentimes their tasks are not pleasant—or at least they do not have a high degree of satisfaction. At best they are drudge jobs of cooking, cleaning and serving. Therefore, the workers live in the "Maryville College Community" and are also servants to it. The net result is a lack of respect.

Some see the idea of a food fight as an economic issue. I see it as an issue in human dignity—a basic premise that Maryville College stands behind implicity on paper. I think perhaps the throwing of food is an expression of frustration on one hand, but is a denial of humanness and a lack of respect on another.

As I look and see a mashed-potato covered server crying in one corner of the kitchen, or as I look upon another scraping peas out of the carpet with a knife, I begin to see what dehumanization is about. I see human beings who have been reduced to cleaning machines picking up after the Id-type will of their peers. I begin to understand the blank faces that I have seen on people who have been beaten down by years of being a servant with no recognition or respect. Seeing this microcosm , I shed a tear and get a glimpse of what social justice might mean.

Perhaps I have spent too much time with theologians who spout the ideals of justice and the essence of humanity. Perhaps I have spent too much time with Karl Marx and other philosophers who constantly tell us that man is being screwed out of the right to be human; I doubt it, though. In light of all this, I have to ask the question—Is it too much to ask to be able to live in a world of respect as a human being with other human beings?

ucational administrator from Baltimore, Maryland, Dr. Anderson was educated at the University of Minnesota, The Woodrow Wilson School of Princeton University, and Georgetown University of Washington, D.C., where he earned his Ph. D. in 1974. His dissertation was on the White House staff of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

At a press confrence on Tuesday, Dr. Herman Spivey, chairman of the Search Committee, stressed Anderson's credentials as being important to a strong liberal arts program in a small college.

After introducing himself, Anderson commented, "Isn't it remarkable that the College, headed at its inception by a 39-year old Presbyterian man named Anderson who was born in Rockbridge County, Virginia, shall about 158 years later turn to a person with the same characteristics? Perhaps this signals it's time for a new beginning at Maryville College."

Both Issac Anderson when he founded the College and the President-elect share the characteristics of being 39-years-old, a Presbyterian, and

"Confident about the future"

by David Boyd

The announcement that Dr. Wayne Anderson will be the next president of Maryville College was met by two basic reactions.

Those aware of the announcement and possessing some knowledge of Dr. Anderson generally expressed positive feelings. Dean Blair in a statement Tuesday afternoon for the Echo said, "The Presidential Selection Committee proved to be thorough in assessing our needs, diligent in searching for the right person, and obviously persuasive in convincing him to come. Dr. Anderson has all the qualifications for continuing the tradition of strong leadership that has given Maryville College its secure position in higher education. The announcement of his appointment makes me even more confident about the future of the College."

Dr. Anderson's credentials and qualifications impressed several other people interviewed. One of these was Assistant Professor of English Germa Cate. She stated that "Dr. Anderson comes to Maryville College with outstanding credentials and an awareness of the needs of a small liberal arts college."

Dr. Robert Ramger expressed his satisfaction with Dr. Anderson's fund raising abilities and with his public relation work. Ramger added, "I'm glad that the Board of Directors has overcome the mystique that the president of the College has to have a Bachelor of Divinity Degree."

Personal impressions of those who have met Dr. Anderson tend to be favorable. Kit Williamson, the student member of the Presidential Search Committee, relates, "I was impressed with him from the very first interview. I like his enthusiams, his sense of humor, and I think he'll be able to relate openly with the students.

Administrative Vice President, Neil McDade, found Dr. Anderson " . . . open, willing to listen, interested in constructive change, a very secure personality . . . knows where he's coming from, and knows where he is . . ."

Student reactions varied but Anderson's age seemed to be the most commonly mentioned factor. Tom Morrissey, a freshman, said "I think he is an excellent choice because he is a young man and has good credentials."

According to Charles Brooks, a freshman, " . . [Anderson] should have a closer relation with the students because of his age."

The second basic type of reaction arose from a lack of knowledge about the presidential change. Jim Miller, freshman, answered when queried about his feelings on the selection, "I don't have any feelings on that. I didn't even know we were making change until this morning." Replies of "Who is he?" and "Anderson Who?" were common.

Not all of the comments were entirely favorable. Julia Ramsey expressed the idea "that it doesn't make that much of a difference." Sophomore Rebekah McCredie said that Anderson was second on her list and referring to the interview sessions held for students last fall added, "He was very sympathetic but he doesn't have any answers to the problems."

Greg Wiberley, a senior, thought that it was "an awful waste of a paper to tell us about it."

having family connections in Rockbridge County, Virginia.

Dr. Anderson went on to say that "I am particularly happy about my new calling because of the rich tradition, the spirit, and the people associated with the college. Maryville has a sterling faculty committed to its work, its students and the College. The staff, led by Dr. Copeland, is talented and devoted to the institution, and has already been quite helpful to me. The students I have met have impressed me with their affection for the College and their determination to help make Maryville College even better."

Following his brief remarks, Anderson answered questions from the press in attendance.

Dr. Anderson set as his first priority a "plea for resources." This, in his estimation is imperative. In order to attract the funds, "you have to work; you have to hustle."

In response to a question about attrition rates, the president-elect noted that enrollment difficulties are nationwide and that they will continue to spread across the country.

"A special effort must be made at Maryville to provide a systematic approach to enrollment. We must not overkill: It is important to see what happens to the student once he arrives.

Anderson made the assurance that he will conduct an "open presidency." He sees regular meetings and informal collaboration with students as means to opening lines of communication.

Finally, Dr. Anderson fielded a question on what he expects to do in regard to the effectiveness of the ACC. He admits that he has not had time to study the matter but sees the necessity to revive and restructure the council. He feels, however, that "The experience of joint participation in government is a good one."

In his remarks, Dr. Anderson offered Maryville College hope for the future:

"Apart from the past, the future is promising indeed. There is room—considerable room—for a church-related liberal arts college like Maryville because it provides a solid grounding in the liberal arts, equips students for the real world ahead, confronts students with ultimate questions of religious and human values affecting their lives and, above all, it cares for the individual. This is what Maryville College is all about—and what it will continue to be about in the years ahead."

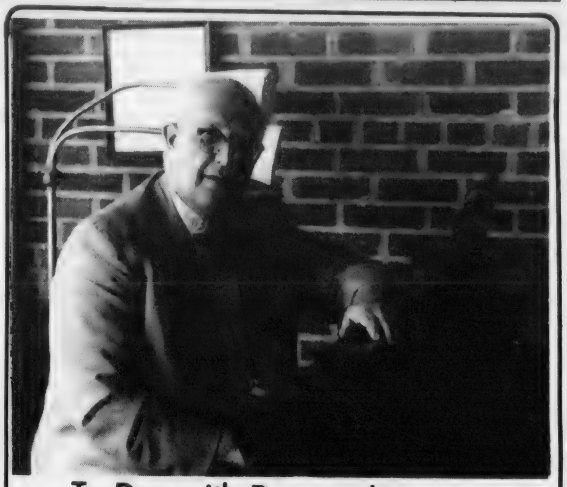
everyone will benefit—"the students, Saga and Maryville College."

A direct result of this savings will be the addition to the Saga staff of an "on-site" supervisor who will act in the capacity of assistant manager. He will directly supervise the preparation and presentation of the food. Miller said that this "will add to the quality of the food and to student satisfaction."

In answer to student questions Miller explained the following items:

*The Saga contract is computed on the basis of 40% no show. This enables them to provide meals at a rate of 73 cents per student per meal. The no-show rate means that food is prepared for about 60% of the boarding population, with student preferences and attendance trends taken into consideration.

Miller felt that for the size school, our current plan was the most economical. Meal tickets with more variety, or a "pay as you go" system—even with less variety—would prove to be more expensive in the long run.



*The Saga Corporation publishes a suggested menu for each meal of the week. The Food Service Director has the option of changing that menu for a variety of reasons. If a food is not available, or if the students have showed a poor response to it in the past, a substitution is made. In any case a substitution is made of equal nutritional value.

A group of students expressed concern with the physical aspects of the dining room. They asked for a basic change in the arrangements of the furniture and for a division of smoking and non-smoking areas. Since then the long tables have been broken up and arranged into smaller groups.

After the meeting, Miller expressed a "good feeling" about the session with students saying that he had heard some new ideas and concerns that he will take into consideration when making future plans at Saga. He added that the Saga Corporation is a "people oriented business and I welcome observations and suggestions about the food service. If you don't see what you want or have a question, ask."

President Copeland called for "positive action regarding the food service, giving it the attention it needs as a vital part of the student's lives."

In other business the Chairman asked the officers of the ACC to determine a method of distributing bumper stickers that seek support for private colleges. No reports were heard from the academic, social or religious program areas.

To Dan with Pun-ctuality

Crown Prince of Punsters, you've cheated each and all
Of the sweet pain of groaning at your bargain basement humor;
Never again will you tell me, like a panting muse,
To "put a little English in my singing."
Or say to a classical scholar, "I've et three, Brute."
As you pile up your plate at a banquet.

Sinecure of high C's, the Messiah will never soar so high,
Or Kasper make so giddy with his magic box
As Amahl looks on in bright eyed wonder.
You entered the nine-years wreck that was once my voice
And, gently sweeping, sanding, and polishing,
Coaxed its roof and arches to a higher gloss,
Never counting the waves in my vibrato,
Or measuring the cavernous hole
That yawned in the middle of my tessitura.

I like to think you drouzed away from life,
A dull recital of toil and pain,
And even now are being measured
For a size forty-six celestial robe,
Ready to take your place as first of tenors
In the Newer Providence Sunday Choir,
That God merely wanted the high notes higher,
Needed a "solo pimp" more than we do here,
That one Sunday morning you'll be asking me
If I've anything ready for ten-forty-five.

I know that a certain Gabriel Faure
Has long impatiently waited
For someone whose French is pure,
Who bends the line of his treacherous phrases
With just the amalgam of sweet and somber strain.

I think that there are some unfinished things
That ought to be life stacked in your studio—
Let nobody dare, for example,
To take your place at Faculty Club dinners,
Writing receipts and parleying puns,
Belching quietly before your solo,
And softly nodding when the first slide comes into view.

Covenant latest Scot victim

by Jack Turregano

Led by the strong floor play of point men Joe Beals and John Thomas, and Wayne Emme's 35 points the Scots won another barnburner 88—86 over Covenant College.

Emme had a spectacular night bombing home his 35 points, the highest point total by any Scot all year. Following Emme in scoring were Mark Stinett with 17, Wade Edmond with 15, and Ty Limbaugh who tossed in 12. This was by far the most balanced scoring attack the Scots have shown all year.

For the third time in as many ballgames the Scots have showed great poise under the pressure of a close contest. Where most teams might choke and die the Scots have held together and played like veterans. This formula has paid off in three consecutive victories, all close, and against some very good teams.

The Scots played Tuesday night at Emory and Henry. They return home to face the Milligan Buffaloes Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

In SEIAC meet

Dunn is 'outstanding wrestler'

The Maryville College wrestling squad fared much better in the mid-southern Championships than they did at Chattanooga against UTC. Maryville took third place among 19 participants, had two first-place winners (Dunn and Valentine), and placed Wayne Dunn as outstanding wrestler of the tournament.

The Moccasins of UTC, who were ranked second nationally last year in NCAA Division II, took eight of the ten matches for an impressive 30—6 win over M. C. The loss was Maryville's first this year and levels them at 6—6.

UTC won the first six matches before Wayne Dunn took charge with a 9—4 decision over Mike Sea in the 167-pound class.

Two matches later Bob Valentine gave Maryville a win in the 190 category over Tom Flanegan 6—5.

Dunn's win marked 19 in a row for the hustling 167 pound junior. He is tied with Gary DeRiter for third place on The Scots list of consecutive matches won without a loss.

The junior boasts a 14—0—1 record for the season.

Three of UTC's wins were won by pins.

Paced by all-Americans Wayne Dunn and Bob Valentine, Maryville College captured third place in the mid-South Championships at Georgia Tech Friday, Jan. 28.

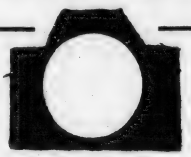
The championship consisted of 19 teams including the top five teams MTSU, Colgate, M.C., Georgia Tech, and UTC.

All of the Scots participants placed in their category except Mark Thedford, who was hurt in his first match, and taken to the hospital. Maryville's three top men, Dunn, Valentine, and Melia won over every opponent by pins to reach the finals. Wayne Dunn—167, and Bob Valentine—190, captured first places, and Melia finished with a second.

Third place winners were Bonner, Sayers, and Davalos. Pensyl, Oliveri and Von Mitch each captured fourth place finishes.

Coach Don Elia has announced the upcoming South-Eastern Intercollegiate Association Championship (SEIAC) which will be held at Maryville, Feb. 11-12. Several SEC teams including Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama will come to Maryville for participation. Tickets cost '50 with student I.D.'s at the gate.

Maryville entertains Sewanee and Clemson University February 5 at Maryville in a three-way match. Action gets under way at 6:00.



Maryville vs. UTC: 118-Mike Agnew (UTC) over Jay Pensyl (MC), 5—4. 126-Dirk Siron (UTC) pinned Tom Bonner (MC) 1:30. 134-Rick Wallen (UTC) over Ralph Melia (MC), 13—6. 142-Dean Smith (UTC) over Dan Harmon (MC), 17—1. 150-Joe Waddell (UTC) over Ed Davalos (MC), 8—1. 158-Bill Bone (UTC) pinned Robin Rorrer (MC), 1:04. 167-Wayne Dunn (MC) over Mike Sea (UTC), 9—4. 177-David Weeks (UTC) over Ray Oliveri (MC), 16—6. 190-Bob Valentine (MC) over Tom Flanagen (UTC), 6—5. Heavy-Ralph Zinger (UTC) pinned Bob Von Mitch (MC), 3:39.

Vol. 62 No. 15 | Maryville, College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 9, 1977

Theme: Wholeness and diversity in worship

Author - folksinger to open February Meetings

The Reverend Pat McGeachy, minister of the Downtown Presbyterian Church of Nashville, author and folksinger, will present the opening lecture of Maryville College's annual February Meetings next week.

This year's meetings, set for Sunday through Wednesday, Feb. 13-16, will explore the theme "Wholeness in Diversity: A Christian Perspective."

McGeachy's opening lecture, entitled "New Perspectives on Worship," is scheduled from 10:40 a.m. until noon Monday in Wilson Chapel.

The introductory speaker is a member of the Joint Committee on Worship and Music of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church. He is also the author of a number of books and hymns and songs relating to contemporary Christian life. His books include Traveling Light, The Gospel According to Andy Capp, Common Sense and the Gospel, and A Matter of Life and Death.

A native of Atlanta, Georgia, and a seventh generation Presbyterian minister, he holds an A.B. degree from Davidson College in North Carolina; the B.D. and Th. M. from Union Seminary in Richmond, Virginia; and the STM from San Francisco Seminary in San Anselmo, California.

After 20 years as a pastor in North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee, McGeachy is devoting full time to what he calls a "ministry of celebration." As director of "A New Song," a materials and consultant service for worship renewal based in Nashville, he has led numerous workshops to develop greater consciousness about worship and celebration.

Activities for February Meetings begin Sunday at 7 p.m. with the first of four worship services to be conducted on campus by four major Christian traditions. This initial service will be followed by a song fest and get acquainted session at 8:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Lounge.

The Rev. Charles Fowler, minister of Logan's Chapel United Methodist Church in Maryville, will lead the first worship service, a Protestant service for the Lord's day. A discussion will follow regarding the service, the significance of its setting, material objects used, the ceremonial acts or movements, the music utilized and how the service reflects the conception of God held by the community.

A similar discussion will follow each of the other worship services. These include a Greek Orthodox Liturgy, set for 9:20 a.m. Tuesday, led by Father Thomas Pistolis, priest at St. George Greek Orthodox Church in Knoxville, and A Bless-In, an evangelical free church worship service at 7:30 p.m. that same day, led by Pastor Dale C. Fridley of Knoxville. A Roman Catholic Eucharistic Liturgy, led by Father Gregory Caiazzo, presently director of the John XXIII Catholic Center at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, is set for 9:20 a.m. Wednesday. All four worship services will be held in Wilson Chapel.

Also scheduled throughout this four-day period are a series of seminars relating to the worship theme.

Rabbi Matthew Derby of Temple Beth El in Knoxville will lead a seminar on "Worship in Judaism" on Monday at 2:30 p.m. in the FAC lounge.

Also scheduled at that time in the Proffitt Dining Room is a seminar on "The Role of Women in Worship," to be led by the Rev. Gwen Buehrens, an ordained Episcopal minister and adjunct professor of sociology at MC, and the Rev. John Buehrens, minister at the Tennessee Valley Unitarian Church of Knoxville.

A seminar of "Theological Foundations of Worship," led by the Rev. William Varker, minister of Forest Lake Presbyterian Church in Columbia, SC, and an MC alumnus '51, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Proffitt Dining Room.

On Tuesday at 1:10 p.m. the Rev. Larry Gipson, an Episcopal priest serving the Church of the Ascension in Knoxville, will lead a seminar on "Psychological Foundations of Worship" in the Proffitt Dining Room.

"Worship and the Arts" is the topic of a seminar set for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday in FAC 103. Dr. James Bloy, professor of music at MC, will lead the discussion.

Master Builder progresses

"Heavy show—dramatic"

by Charles Craven

"Rehearsals are going well—the actors are doing a good job," says John Morton, who is assistant director of the Maryville College Playhouse production The Master Builder.

Morton is assisting Thomas E. Jones in directing the production, which is scheduled for its first performance in two weeks on February 24.

Morton finds the play to be challenging to the actors, saying, "It's a heavy show—highly dramatic, "with "a lot of imagery" for the players to understand and project. But "the actors are doing a good job with their parts," he continued, "especially the women. Ruth Cartlidge is doing the best job," he says. "She had a hard part, but is doing it well."

Morton went on to compliment two other actors: Ron Fagan and Phil DerPilbosian. With "the hardest part in the play," Fagan's role "needs some work," though he is making good progress. He applauded DerPilbosian's efforts, saying that the kind of role he plays "will be the one everyone wants to see more of."

Most Maryville College students who have taken English 122 will remember The Master Builder as one of the reading assignments for that course. Morton especially feels that "those who read the play in English 122 or who will have the course this year" should see the performance, saying that they will find "it is easier to understand the play by seeing it."

The production is scheduled for its first performance in two weeks on February 24, and will be held in the Maryville College Theatre.

Fuel supplies will last

by Ed Loper

Neil McDade, Maryville College vice-president, has denied a rumor that Maryville College will close one week early at the end of this term.

McDade said that the College is anticipating no problems in supplying heat for the rest of this term. At times the fuel supply has reached a low level. At no time, however, has a critical shortage existed.

McDade said that low supplies have been blamed mostly on the weather. The company that normally supplies fuel has had transportation problems with barges held up in ice jams on the Mississippi River.

Maryville College student teachers have been escaping the hardships and drastic schedule changes that have been common at other colleges and universities in this area.

None of them have suffered the anxiety of student teachers at Tennessee Technological University, where schedules have been turned upside down by public schools being closed for all of January because of bad weather and gas shortages.

With the Maryville City Schools closed for only two days (county schools were closed ten days), student teachers at Maryville College have experienced nothing more than a break in routine, which all of them have enjoyed.

Nancy Shamblin says her fifth grade teaching at Rockford Elementary was not hurt at all. Though the snow days caused her to lose a number of teaching hours, she says, "I liked them. They gave me a lot of free time which helped me catch up on my work."

Dr. Margaret Sherer, professor of education, thinks that the school closings gave the elementary education teachers "a great advantage." "They had plenty to do, and most of them worked on their logs, reading assignments, and lesson plans." She anticipated that the student teachers would have no problem fulfilling their minimum three hundred hours of classroom experience.

None of the student teachers interviewed by the Echo anticipated problems because of the missed days, which have been so few that Evelyn Blackburn, teaching at Eagleton Elementary, says, "I'd like to have another one right now so I can sleep."

TVA and the snail darter

Perpetual progress for people

Halt the Telico Dam Project—was the word given last week by a federal appeals court in Cincinnati. The Tennessee VAlley Authority has been ordered to stop any activity in the Telico area which would change the home waters of the snail darter, a member of the perch family.

What is the significance of the decision? In 1966 TVA began building this $116 million dam about 20 miles west of Knoxville. Upon completion, this dam would have created a 32-mile long reservoir on the Little Tennessee River providing both hydroelectric power and bring recreation facilities and employment ot the area.

There have been objections to the Telico project since its conception. The first is very personal in nature: families were forced from their homes, evicted for the sake of progress. This is less than comforting to families that have held on to these home sites for generations.

Then, in the midst of the nationwide concern over the maltreatment of the environment, the second major objection rises. The snail darter was discovered along the river bottom in 1973, the same year that the U. S. Congress passed the Endangered Species Act. This refused federal funds to projects that destroy the habitat of endangered species; in 1975 the snail darter was declared one such endangered species.

There are other objections to the Telico Dam. The recreational facilities created by TVA in Tennessee are already numerous. The addition of one for the sake of progress is ridiculous.

Any recreational facility created by TVA in the Telico Dam area would also result in the destruction of the burial grounds of the Cherokee Nation in North Carolina. To flood this historical landmark would be abominable.

If substantial alleviation of the "energy crisis" were the goal of TVA, there might be less objection to the project. This is hardly the case. Electricity generated at the dam would amount to a small percentage of the total TVA output when compared to the nearby Kingston Steam Plant.

Actually, water power is simply not a dependable source for electrical generation. In fact, a mere two percent of TVA electricity comes from hydroelectric power.

With these objections in mind, the real purpose of TVA's project remains unknown. The southeastern areas of the United States have benefited tremendously in the past from TVA projects. Yet, the questions the Telico project raises leads one to believe TVA has lost sight of its original goals and is concerned only with perpetuating itself.

Though TVA plans to appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, it is apparent that the federal appeals court is right in its interpretation of the laws. The TVA does not have a legal leg to stand on in its appeal—perpetuating "progress" is not enough reason to claim the snail darter.

Stardate: when communications fail

Execpting the ultimate challenge

Norman Cousins, in a recent Saturday Review editorial, wrote of the need for effective communication in both journalism and personal matters. The issue involved was the rejection of a story by the prominent writer, John Hersey, who misunderstood the editor's intention in postponing publication.

The outcome of the situation was a rather large communication gap. Cousins, at the close of his editorial, put it in a nutshell by saying, "The most difficult and precarious enterprise in the world is effective communication. It is the ultimate art . . ."

Cousins' editorial served as a reminder that not only is communication the ultimate art, it is the ultimate challenge. I was accutely aware of that challenge when the Echo staff began to receive second-hand criticism following the news story and editorial on the Chilhowean editorship. The particular objection was that the Echo was too hard on Deborah Huffman.

Our decision to run the article and editorial was based on two outstanding features of the issue. First was the amount of rumor that was circulating among students. Second was the lack of responsibility on the part of both the Communications Committee and the Chilhowean staff and editor.

It is important that I state that the story was based on fact. The information was gathered from the source of the discussion and decision, the Communications Committee. The story also evolved out of interviews with the majority of the people involved. The only exception was Deborah Huffman, who had not been officially notified of the action.

During the entire duration of our coverage we had regarded the handling of the situation as delicate, due to Deborah Huffman's relationship to the Echo and the closeness of the small college

Letters to the 'Echo'

Dear Editor,

I noticed with interest your editorial of January 19th, 1977 entitled "Draft evaders should be granted amnesty."

Without debating the question in detail, I think it is abundantly clear that in granting a pardon to all of the draft evaders, that this was a blow in the face to all of those who have served our country honorably. To be logical, it would seem appropriate now to pardon all of the Medal of Honor winners, Purple Heart holders and all tax evaders. In fact, to follow the logic through, it would seem we should pardon all those guilty of any crime and have complete amnesty for any criminal violation and to start over. The essence of your editorical would mandate that a sign be placed on the Iwo Jima Memorial here in Washington saying "This effort was in vain".

It will be interesting to note the effect of the Carter pardon on "future unpleasantries" which might erupt in Africa, the Middle East or any number of places throughout the world.

Also, to be remembered as to the Carter pardon to draft dodgers, the next draft (by Carter or some other President) must now include an "RSVP".

Pathways to change

by Bonnie Holsinger

Maryville College has recently approved the continued support of TISL, an organization for college students, in which three Maryville College students participated in this past fall.

TISL stands for Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature. This student legislature represents over 131,000 of the students in all the college and universities in Tennessee.

Maryville College joined the rank and file of this organization in the spring of '76, making the fall of '76 the first year Maryville students participated in the legislature. TISL is composed of a Senate and a House of Representatives, and is modeled after the actual state legislature. Students participate in making and passing bills. This procedure is through committees and through each of the Houses.

The meetings were held in the capital building in Nashville on November 10, 11, and 12. This year, James Yancey, Tom Peters, and I were the representatives for Maryville College at TISL. James also served as vice-chairman for the Judicial Committee, and I served as secretary for the State and Local Government Committee.

Before I mention the personal benefits that were derived from my participation in TISL, I would like to note some of the benefits that Maryville College will receive. Participating in and being a member of TISL gives Maryville exposure to other schools across the state. The interaction with students from other schools can provide insight into Maryville's own system of governance, and perhaps institute some much-needed changes.

TISL is also regarded as a fairly influential body. In this, it has some bearing on the real Tennessee Legislature. Several bills that were drawn up and passed by TISL delegates were seriously considered by the state legislature.

TISL is also beneficial to the individual student in a number of ways. Parliamentary procedure is used, and this is helpful experience if a student wants to go into law or any other area that uses parliamentary procedure extensively.

TISL, however, can also widen the average student's outlook; for instance—I will probably never use the parliamentary procedure, but that knowledge may be helpful to me some day. It is also good to compare the advantages of this type of system to our existing system at Maryville.

Next year there will be only two delegates attending from Maryville College; one for the House of Representatives, and one for the Senate. If you are interested in participating in this type of experience, please feel free to contact any member of the All-College Council for further details.

Historical Trust underway

Organizational matters and a slide presentation will highlight the first meeting of Blount County Historic Trust, Inc., on February 12, 2 p.m. in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center.

The corporation is being established to preserve historically significant records, structures, and artifacts in Blount County. It will be the sponsoring agency for the restoration and maintenance of the Thompson-Brown farmhouse near the campus.

A representative of Knoxville Heritage, Inc. will present a 20 minute slide program on the purposes and activities of the Heritage. Important committee assignments will be made to convert the local corporation from a paper charter into a functioning trust. A special student membership category is planned to permit Maryville College students to participate fully in this restoration project.

Dr. Sarah B. McNiell, one of the Maryville College faculty members of the Trust, says all members of the campus community are urged to attend.

The Maryville College tanks will hold a nine day supply of fuel oil. This winter the college has been instituting the policy of "topping the tanks." That is, keeping a top level of fuel oil at all times by purchasing small amounts from other suppliers.

Soloists selected

The Maryville College-Community Orchestra, under the direction of Peggy Leatherwood, has announced the selection of three soloists for the Student Concerto Concert, to be held in Wilson Chapel next week on February 19.

Leatherwood, director, also teaches at the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts. She holds the B. Mus. degree from Maryville College, and is directing the orchestra for her first year. Additional plans for the orchestra include a pops concert in the spring.

A wanderlust...

Bikes fifteen days to Florida

by Veronica Sawdon

The trip from Maryville College to Sarasota took only fifteen days. That's remarkable when one realizes that three Maryville College students accomplished the feat on bicycles this past interim.

Ron Shadduck, Robert Boone, and Bill Gannon each acquired a 10-speed bike and a sleeping bag, and set off November 26 on the ultimate interim, which provided a potpourri of experiences.

The group secured Dr. Gale Rhodes as their faculty advisor last spring and designed the trip as an experience in bicycle touring; complete with planning, financing, photography, and a future slide presentation.

Each of the tourers earned his own money, either by "pumping plasma" (donating blood) or through a summer job. The plan was to travel as lightly as possible, spend the night in local churches or with friends, and eat along the way. So, with a letter of introduction from Dr. Copeland, they set off.

A detour was interjected to allow a visit to Plains, Georgia, now termed "an opportunist's paradise." In between the bumper stickers and "tacky" slogans, the trio managed to meet Miss Lillian Carter (Jimmy Carter's mother), Hugh Carter, and some delegates from Korea.

Another day in Eatonton, Georgia, after a brisk morning ride, Ron and Robert were checking their packs when the local deejay came by. After passing them on his way to work, he wondered what they were doing. Ron's brief explanation led the three to an interview on WXPO.

The most provocative incident to happen to this wanderlust crew occurred after their arrival in Sarasota. The three were on their way to Venice Beach in Ron's Mustang when the horn and flasher of a sheriff's car caused them to pull over. Before they could blink, an officer had his gun on the trio and ordered them out of the car.

Matt Dillon—the name now given to the officer—ordered them to put their hands on their heads, and a back-up squad arriving on the scene proceeded to frisk the dumbfounded college students and illegally search the trunk.

In the midst of confusion, the story became clear. The previous evening three youths in their early 20's—one with a beard, which Ron had picked up, beat-up, and stripped an 87 year old man, and escaped in a car identical to Ron's.

The police did not apologize for the mistake, and the three were set free to muse on the fact that they'd traveled 900 miles without any trouble, only to be bombarded in Sarasota, Florida.

Each of the travelers had a favorite experience, Ron's being a visit to Andersonville Prison where he realized that the purpose of the interim was to see the country and not to be hampered by a schedule.

Bill's favorite memory was of a Smithville Baptist deacon who invited the group to breakfast and offered them money.

The satisfaction Robert found was when he arrived in Sarasota and didn't have to pedal anymore.

The trip was a success in all areas, and Ron and Bill both say they'd do it again. Plans are now being made for a spring break excursion, and anyone interested in joining the tour is invited to contact Ron or Bill.

Also on Wednesday, an Agape Feast reenacting the meals Jesus shared with his followers will be held at 5:30 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Room.

A concert of contemporary sacred music by the internationally famous Gregg Smith Singers will follow the meal at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall. This 16-voice mixed choir has been called one of the finest professional ensembles in the country and has achieved an international reputation of superb choral mastery.

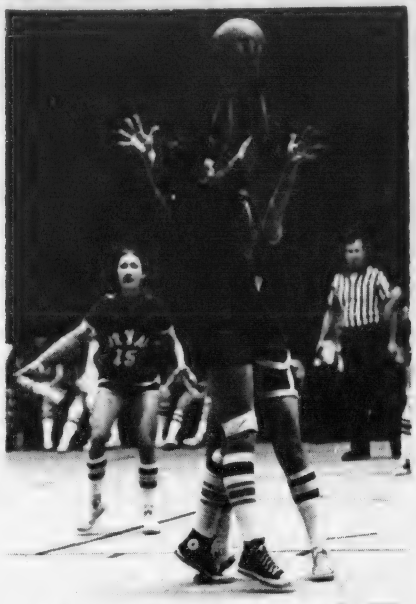
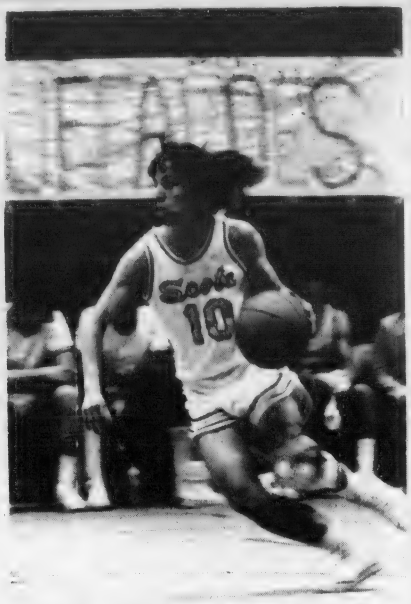
Milligan swamps Scots

by Jack Turregano

The Maryville College Scots led by the scoring of Wayne Emme and Ty Limbaugh won their fourth consecutive game last Tuesday night. The Scots defeated the Wasps from Emory and Henry 81–71.



The Scots took control from the tip-off, and with Emme scoring 20 points, Ty Limbaugh adding 19, and Mark Stinnet helping with 17.



The game was never in much doubt. The Scots were up by 6 at the half, and outscored the Wasps 44–40 in the second half.

On Thursday February 3, the Milligan College Buffaloes invaded the Maryville College Gym, and soundly trounced the Scots 99–70.

The Scots were close at the half, trailing 45–36, but Milligan took control in the second half and blew the Scots out. Wayne Emme and Mark Stinnett were the only Scots to score in double figures with 29 and 19 points respectively.

This leaves the Scots with a record of 4–14. The next home game will be Thursday, when King College comes to town.

As the basketball season winds down the Scots are still hard at work. On the left Sharon Youngs prepares to pass off and Joe Beals, on the right, makes a break for the basket in action last week.

Intramurals

The women's intramural Volleyball season finished last Tuesday, February 1, with plenty of last-minute action.

Two teams—the WIVS and BS^2—were in competition throughout the 4-weeksseries. Last week's play-off was needed to determine the winner.

The WIVS had won 5 games to the BS^2's 4, and the 3rd Floor Rowdies' 0. The final game between the WIVS and BS^2, however, favored the contender and brought the toll to 5–5.

The play-off was that same afternoon, with the WIVS stealing the show with two consecutive wins of 15–0 and 15–2.

Members of the winning team were Captain Sheri Bone, Kit Williamson, Debbie Welsh, Veronica Sawdon, Sharon Bailey, Charlie Orange, Becky Huisinga, Beth Richardson, and Jane Richardson.

Lady Scots win two, drop one

by Dave Osborne

The Lady Scots played three games in the last week, winning two and losing one.

The girls first win was 65–51 over Bryan College on February 1 avenging an earlier loss at Bryan.

"It was great," Coach Sharon Brown said later. "It comes close to being our best game. Our full court press is building our confidence. We collected our poise, and got up by eight at halftime."

Maryville's scoring attack was led by Sharon Youngs with 22 pts., followed by Pam Osborne with 16. Kathy Kaplan's ten clutch points and Libby Lowry's eight were also deciding factors. Youngs also had eleven rebounds followed by Lowry's ten.

Then on February 3rd, Carson-Newman came to the Maryville College Gymnasium. The girls suffered a disappointing loss by the score of 61–52.

"If we had a better first half, we might've won. We did better on the freethrow line," Coach Brown said. Maryville was outshot 49% to 29% in the first half. "It was a good game for Libby," Miss Brown said. Lowry had 21 pts. and ten rebounds. Sharon Youngs helped in a losing cause by scoring twelve points plus nine rebounds.

Following a poor first half, the Lady Scots bounced back to trounce the St. Mary's Saints a 66–41 loss on Saturday.

Maryville shot 86% from the freethrow line. A big factor was the girls 52 rebounds, 27 on the defensive end. "We clicked in the second half," Brown said. "Sandy Chambers did a fine job on the boards."

Karen Burkhardt led the team with 15 pts. and nine rebounds. Kathy Kaplan, Pam Osborne, and Sharon Youngs each had twelve points. Youngs also had twelve rebounds. The victory puts the Lady Scots record at 5–9 for the season.

SCOTS SPOTS: Libby Lowry has returned to early season shooting form after a mid-season dry spell. She scored 50 pts. in her last four games prior to Saturdays game when she collected four fouls in the first half.

Chris Curran's game has improved with the strengthening of her knee.

Bobbie Jo Sallade is lost for the remainder season with an ankle injury. Ann Amick is still sidelined with an ankle injury.

community. Yet, some have found fault with our course of action.

We were informed that we had been too hard on Deborah Huffman, that the "faculty is up in arms" over our coverage. If so, we would have prefered to be confronted directly, either by a letter or a rebuttal of our opinion. The thought had more than once crossed our mind that we might have been too hard on her, yet we had to fulfill our editorial responsibility.

The fact remains that people regarded our story and editorial as too hard on Deborah Huffman. These people neglected their responsibility by failing to record their dissent publically.

As stated previously, the Echo is open to any criticism of editorial opinion in the form of a rebuttal or letter. We hope that in the future those objecting to our views will take the time to respond as such.

We constantly strive to be fair in our coverage of the issue. If the "faculty was up in arms" the Echo never knew about it. We should have. Tim Rahn

They include trumpeter Rick Carl, senior music education major from Wilmington, Delaware; Betty Carol Zinavage, junior applied piano major from Waynesville, North Carolina; and Judy Thweatt, sophmore voice major from Winchester, Virginia.

Additional plans for the MC-Community Orchestra include a pops concert in the spring.

Annual efforts "going well"

by Charles Craven

Chilhowean editors Debbie Kees and Sophia Shoemaker say their efforts towards getting a yearbook published are "going well."

The editors completed negotiations for a contract with Taylor Publishing Company last week, and are arranging underclassmen photographs plus faculty and senior directories this week.

Shoemaker says seniors should find mimeographed forms in their post office boxes today which they should fill out immediately, listing the organizations and clubs they have belonged to, offices they have held, and honors they have received.

Shoemaker hopes that no senior will "put the form in his pocket and forget about it. They have to return them to the box in the post office by Monday at the latest, or they won't be listed in the directory. Our schedule is so tight that there's no way we can wait any longer than that."

She went on to say that the faculty had shown a "good response" for their directory, and hopes the seniors will respond just as well.

The pictures for underclassmen, plus seniors who were not photographed last fall, are being scheduled for next week; Kees and Shoemaker plan to announce the time, day, and place later. Kees says the formal pictures will be taken "out of doors in an environmental setting." Underclassmen will not be charged a sitting fee; seniors who want a formal picture may be charged a nominal fee of not more

Frances Massey retires

by Judith Mizell
Director of Communications

Miss E. Frances Massey, associate dean of student relations and former dean of women at Maryville College for the past 30 years, will retire at the end of winter term, March 11, MC President Joseph J. Copeland announced today.

Dean Massey, who has now reached retirement age, has elected to leave at this time in order to enable her successor to participate in planning for next year's activities during the spring term.

A native of Alabama, Miss Massey taught high school English, biology, social studies and geography in schools in Alabama prior to coming to Maryville College. She joined the Maryville College staff in January, 1947, as dean of women and assumed her present position in 1975.

"Frances Massey has given consistent effective administrative leadership to Maryville College during three decades, keeping a sensitive and delicate balance between the individual's freedom and welfare and that of the College. We wish for her mulriple joys in her new life of retirement," Dr. Copeland stated in making the announcement.

"As Dean of Women,

Frances Massey

Miss Massey supervised the three women's dormitories but earned a reputation as a champion of all students–both male and female," stated Dr. George Kramer, Dean of Student relations. " She has maintained this reputation in her present position in the student personnel office and in her other campus activities."

Smith Singers preform tonight

The internationally famous Gregg Smith Singers will present a concert of contemporary sacred music on the Maryville College campus tonight at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

The concert, which is part of the College's annual February Meetings, is also sponsored by the MC Performing Artists Concert series. The concert is free and is open to the public.

The Gregg Smith Singers, a 16-voice mixed choir, has been called one of the finest professional ensembles in the country and has achieved an international reputation of superb choral mastery.

Their concert at MC will provide an opportunity to hear contemporary sacred music presented by artists with an unusual sensitivity toward the beauty of choral expression.

An added feature of this group's performance is their highly acclaimed creative presentations. Concerts by the Gregg Smith Singers are dramatic experiences in themselves as each song is performed with the singers moving into different arrangements throughout the performing hall, creating the effect of live stereo music.

Bender to speak on genetics, birth defects

by David Boyd

"It is estimated that currently about one in 25 children suffers from a genetic defect. Some of the projections I've seen suggest that in four or five generations, if we don't do something about cleaning up the gene pool, perhaps one in 10 children may have genetic defects." This is a statement by Dr. Harvey A. Bender in an interview published in the February 3, 1973, issue of A.D. Correspondence.

Harvey Bender

Bender, a geneticist from the University of Notre Dame, will be on the Maryville College campus next Wednesday, February 23, to present a Community Issues and Values program entitled "Genes and Society."

Poignant ethical, legal, and moral questions arise as man's ability to monitor and manipulate his genetic makeup increases. How should these new techniques be used? Who should use them? What will their effect be? This lecture is designed to challenge the audience to consider the impact of the new genetic techniques on society.

Bender is an advocate of genetic counseling, counseling of people on the possibilities of producing defective children. He states, "genetic counseling is . . . the most significant resource we now have for direct human intervention in choosing our children's genes."

One of the newer techniques of prenatal diagnosis used in detecting genetic disorders is amniocenteses. It involves removal of some of the amnionic fluid surrounding the embryo for analysis enabling the detection of seventy or more disorders in an unborn child.

This technique, however, is veiled in controversy. Some of those concerned about its use argue that the parent has a right not to know of the defect. This is due to the fact that no preventive step can be taken to assure a normal child.

According to Bender, a society that chooses to ignore its genetic makeup either by reluctance to fund counseling programs, research, or education is making "a significant ethical and moral decision." He goes on to add that "Society's current desire not to know is in mortal combat with one of its most cherished values: the right of the individual to make responsible choices and take appropriate action."

In the interview cited previously, Bender states,"I think that it's much more important to talk about future

Notes on retirement

Massey service commendable and exemplary

Effective at the end of this term, Maryville College will lose one of its important administrative pioneers, when E. Frances Massey will leave her post as Associate Dean of Student Relations.

In discussing the many innovations which Maryville College has seen in past years, one might overlook the office of Dean of Women which Massey headed until 1975. To most, it was always there as an integral part of the typical college campus, and in many respects it still is there in the presence of Dean Massey.

The situation at Maryville is different in one aspect; Frances Massey is the first and only person in the history of the school to hold the position of Dean of Women. Therefore, the office itself is totally what she has made it, and many unique qualities exist presently which were possible only because of the personality of the woman who held the office.

Perhaps the evolution of social attitudes has reached a point that calls for a restructuring of the office of Dean of Women as it has existed within the last ten years. It must still be remembered that, during her association with Maryville College, Frances Massey has herself made many of the innovations which have caused this evolution.

To assume an office which was previously nonexistent would be a monumental task for anyone. Massey more than met the task, developing the structure of her job without policies of predecessors on which to fall back. In meeting new situations over the years, she could draw upon nothing but her own ingenuity.

Massey, during her first years as Dean of Women, played an important role in strengthening the Women's Student Government Association. This organization produced many strong female leaders who left Maryville to become successful leaders in many areas of life.

Several descriptive phrases come to mind when one discusses this office as Massey has developed it. The first is open-mindedness. Massey's system was one of experimentation; if a request or problem occurred, it was considered and tried, rather than discarded due to lack of precedence. This willingness to employ new approaches to situations has been remembered by many. Dean Massey is often the first person alumnae wish to see when they visit the campus.

Perhaps the key word in considering the atmosphere created by this woman is graciousness. Massey's personality has shown through during her years at Maryville; she has handled the duties of her office with a poise and confidence which one rarely finds in an administrative position so susceptible to stagnation or antipathy. The interest exhibited by the woman has kept the door open to change.

It is this graciousness and open-mindedness which must be remembered. Hopefully, enough of Dean Massey's personality will be left behind in order to keep the office continually open to innovation.

Stardate: as buildings deteriorate

Historical preservation urged

The certain preservation of the Thompson-Brown House is a reflection of diligent efforts by those concerned in maintaining a vital part of America's past. At the same time the year of long and arduous work by those individuals show the problems encountered in restoring and preserving historical facts.

The students, faculty, and community members will no doubt realize the fruits of their labors. Yet time seems to be quickly running out on other buildings on the Maryville College campus, buildings that are also a vital part of our heritage.

One of several buildings on campus that needs attention is the Post Office. Of prime concern is the large stained glass window that has bowed with the settling of the building over the years.

Second is a problem found in many buildings—pest or termite control. Damage sustained several years ago was not serious, yet it does contribute to deterioration.

And third is the condition of the plaster and paint in some parts of the building. This is due to water collected between the exterior brick and interior plaster lathe.

In a recent discussion with Ed Loper of the Echo staff, Hugh Crawford, who directs the maintenance operations for the college, acquainted the Echo with the difficulties of building up-keep.

Crawford told the Echo that three separate companies have looked at the problem of the window. None, however, wants to chance any damage that they might incur while making repairs.

Crawford also elaborated on the damage to the plaster by saying little could be done for several reasons: The water trapped between the wall and brick has saturated the brick making it impossible to inexpensively extract, and the maintenance department is both lacking in time and experience to adequately correct the crumbling plaster.

As a final note, Crawford pointed out that the lack of funds available for large scale renovations when coupled with the problems listed above make the preservation of campus buildings virtually impossible.

Yet the fact remains that something needs to be done. The Post Office building—no matter how difficult or costly it is to maintain—is a significant part of the heritage of the college and in a larger sense the history of American architecture. Its destruction and disuse would be costly in too many ways.

I am not predicting that the post office is slated for demolition within the next several months. I am stating that a preservation fund is needed to insure the physical quality of the building for others to appreciate.

It is useful to close by quoting Constance Greiff from the introduction to Lost America:

"We are losing not only identity in place, but in time. The buildings that have gone and the ones that are threatened constitute a valuable historic and artistic testimonial, recorded in brick and mortar rather than in ink, of what America has been and is becoming. We need our old buildings as a point of reference, not just to tell us about the past, but to help place the present and future in perspective."

Both Kees and Shoemaker say the chances of delivery this spring are good but they have not decided if they can make the deadline. Kees said, "We'll do everything we can to get it out this year, but finishing the organization pictures and getting the darkroom work done on time will determine whether we have a spring or a fall delivery." She continued, "The photographers are working every day--the chances are really good that we can make it this year."

Right now the staff is working hardest on layout. Kees says no part of the book is completely finished though she insists, "you really can't work on just one piece at a time–you have to do the entire book as a whole."

Shoemaker says, "We have all the pictures of the administration taken, and all of the faculty have been assigned to photographers." She says they are able to use a large number of photographs taken while Deborah Huffman was editor, and that they now have some pictures for clubs, sports, faculty, and seniors, as well as some candids. All of Huffman's workers are still on the staff, Kees says.

A summers eve's portrait - and more

by Tim Rahn

The late evening mist had already begun to collect in the coves and valleys surrounding the small college community. It was an evening like many in the foothills to the south of the Great Smoky Mountains. The older folk, cooling from the heat of the day, sat on their front porches watching the traffic flow ever slowly past them along Court Street.

Yet it was not too misty nor too dark for a photographer in a third floor room in Anderson Hall. He stood there, camera readied, to capture that moment for an eternity.

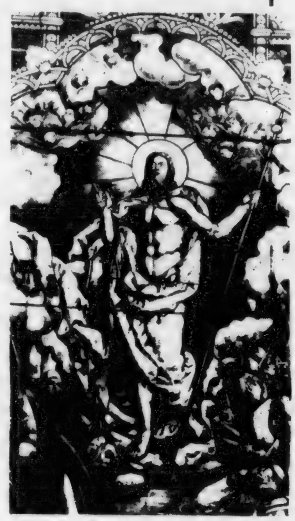
In the center of that picture stood a small brick building. In the midst of many trees darkening in the dusk, its plain brick facade caught the rays of a lingering sun. On the right side of the building was a white bell-shaped tower bright with the full effect of that sun.

The building was the pride and joy of a small Presbyterian college that just a score of years before had withstood the ravages of the Civil War. It stood, at that moment, as a monument to the man who had revived that college at that close of the war, Thomas Jefferson Lamar.

Lamar was, in effect, the second founder of Maryville College. The Synod of Tennessee at their first meeting following the war accepted his plan to reopen the college. And it was his death in 1887 that precipitated the construction of this building--the Lamar Memorial Library. At the time it was judged to be little less than a marvel.

That building still stands today, though it is hardly large enough to function as a college library any longer. Instead, it is now the post office and print shop for Maryville College.

The college catalog of 1889-90, published one year following completion of the new facilities,records: "The building is model in every respect, and it even surpasses the expectation of those concerned in its erection. It is a noble and fitting monument."



In that same brief statement it is pointed out that the library was the largest in east Tennessee with 10,000 volumes. A reference library was open six-hours a day, and books could be drawn during a three-hour period.

The catalog went on to elaborate: "The results of the use of the library are manifest in the increased literary culture and the general information of the students."

Thaw Hall, built in 1920, now houses tha Lamar Memorial Library. Since 1922 the small brick building has served in several capacities. First it was a bookstore. Then in the 1950's the post office was added. And, finally in this decade, the print shop was moved into the bulding.

The post office is a simple building. Of dark brick exterior it offers little of the "organic architecture" seen in the Fine Arts Center. The interior woodwork (except the pine dome) is oak. As The Samuel Tyndale Wilson history of the college points out, it was so built "for this man [Lamar] with his 'heart of oak.' "

A large stained glass window is displayed on the east wall, which has confused many as to the origins of the building. Those people are likely to think that it formerly stood as a chapel, finding it unusual that such a window would be in a post office. Instead, the window is a memorial to Lamar by his brothers and sisters, and it was copied from a painting by Durer.

The building's use as a library is evident in the alphabet that can still be seen printed at the base of the balcony. Older photos and records show that this area was used for alcoves or student study carrels.

The infirmary building is another building of the Lamar memorial. Twenty-one years following the completion of the library, the Ralph Max Lamar Memorial Hospital was built in memory of the Lamars' infant son.

Presently these two buildings stand as the only structural memorials to the Lamar legacy. That legacy was spawned at a time when the future of Maryville College was bleak, by a man who had the strong will needed to reopen the collge and encourage its growth.

Again we can venture with another photographer of long ago inside of the library. The morning is bright. The large east window glows in the picture's cneter as the morning sun bathes all.

As several students stand by whispering, the photographer captures that moment for an eternity.

Yok Fan's choice is nasilemak: steamed rice with ground chili-pepper and fish. She also enjoys laksa, a soup,including long noodles and vinegar, and hot, spicy curried chicken.

Coffee is also quite popular in Japan, as evidenced by the country's many comfortable coffee shops. There is a variety of coffee, Noriko's favorite being Blue Mountain for $1.00 per cup. "Blue Mountain is the best!" agrees Kaoru. "American coffee is weak."

The Japanese students buy their ingredients at Kroger and at A&P, which carry some Chinese food. There is also an Oriental food store in Knoxville. Japanese grocery stores, like American ones, sell quick foods such as instant noodles, soups, and rice.

Despite the distance, American food has found its way into the East. Hamburgers are a great favorite, and McDonalds, Pizza Hut, Dairy Queen, and Kentucky Fried Chicken have invaded the Orient.

Perhaps because of this West-East infiltration, eating customs range from chopsticks to silverware, low tables to high, and lifted bowls to plates on the table. "In my country, it is not bad manners to bend over and lift my bowl to my face," says Yok Fan.

Noriko says that American food always looks the same, and agrees with Yuko Oka who says that in Japan foods such as fresh fishes vary with the seasons. Noriko also says, "American food is oilier and more fattening."

Scots drop home finale

by Jack Turregano

The 1977 Maryville College Basketball Team has given us some very exciting as well as aggravating times. Their last second loss to King College Thursday night was both.

The Scots rocketed their to a 12-2 lead on the strength of Wayne Emme's outside shooting and some cold hands on King's part. At 12-2 the tide turned and no sooner had the Scots been up by ten when they were down by four, then six, then eight.

Mark Stinnett

At the start of the second half the Scots began to battle back. With 2:31 to go in the contest , they were tied with King 52-52.

At that point the King coach ordered his team into a four-corner stall, hoping for an easy shot. And easy it was. With 1:23 to go in the ballgame their point guard drove into the lane and canned a short eight foot jumper to put King ahead 54-52.

The Scots hurried down the floor with just a few seconds left and scored to tie it up once again. With nine seconds on the clock, King began to work for the last shot, and with four seconds to go Randy Poole of King threw up a 12 footer that banged off the rim. Maryville missed the rebound and with no one there to box him out, Poole followed his shot and got the short tip-in to end the game 56-54 King College.

An overwhelming height disadvantage and some outstanding offensive play from Hal Dennis was too much for the Scots as they lost their 2nd game of the week against Washington and Lee; 88-74.

The Scots who were down by 19 at halftime made a spirited second-half rush at Washington and Lee, but could get no closer than 11 points.

High scorer in the game was once again Wayne Emme with 33 points. Ty Limbaugh, playing his last game before a home crowd, had 15 points on 6 field goals and 3 free throws. Mark Stinnett also scored in double figures hitting for 12 points.

Jane Richardson

— Richardson Named Dean —

Jane G. Richardson, head resident of Dorm I at Maryville College for the past year, will become assistant dean of student relations for the College, effective spring term, MC President Joseph J. Copeland announced today.

Ms. Richardson succeeds Miss E. Frances Massey who is retiring at the end of winter term after 30 years on the MC staff, first as dean of women and most recently as associate dean of student relations.

In addition to assuming her new duties as assistant dean, Ms. Richardson will continue her responsibilities with Dorm I through the end of spring term. At that time she will concentrate all her efforts in the new position.

"Through her service as dorm parent at Maryville, Jane has developed an excellent rapport with students and has demonstrated an exceptional ability to confront students' problems and effectively handle them with understanding and common sense," stated Dr. George Kramer, dean of student relations.

Ms. Richardson, who joined the MC staff in February of 1976, is also a senior at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville where she has been doing both undergraduate and graduate work in crafts, psychology and guidance counseling and college personnel work since 1974. She expects to complete all degree requirements there next year. She has also studied crafts at Arrowmont School in Gatlinburg.

A native of Oak Ridge, Ms. Richardson was secretary and assistant to the adult services director for the Daniel Arthur Rehabilitation Center there from 1969 until 1974. Prior to that from 1964 to 1969 she was executive secretary for the Oak Ridge Community Art Center. Her duties included serving as assistant to the president and board members in the Center's activities and programs; coordinating volunteers; and managing the Center's office, gift shop and exhibits gallery.

The new assistant dean has extensive volunteer experience in working with all age groups through church, civic and youth service organizations. She served as board member for two years for Cooper House, a halfway house for boys in Oak Ridge, and four years at the Coffee House, a community program for teens and young adults. She coordinated a child sponsorship program for underprivileged children and a recreational program for stroke patients and other physically traumatized men and women at the Daniel Arthur Rehabilitation Center.

Ms. Richardson served as liaison between the Tennessee Mental Health Association and Tennessee mental health centers for one year. She has also held membership on the TMHA board and on the executive and legislative committees.

She was president of the Oak Ridge Regional Mental Health Association for two years and was also actively involved in the building fundraising for and subsequent activities of the new Regional Mental Health Center of Oak Ridge.

She is a member of the Frist United Presbyterian Church of Oak Ridge where she is an elder and has participated in various church activities.

Ms. Richardson has four children. They include daughters Jorjan, 22, of Townsend, and Beth, 20, of Maryville,

Master Builder Opens Tomorrow

The Master Builder, Henrik Ibsen's decisive victory for realism in the theatre, will open tomorrow night, Thursday at the Maryville College Theatre.

Leading roles of the play, to be presented each evening through Saturday beginning at 8:15, will be performed by MC Playhouse members Ronald Fagan as Halvard Solness, Ruth Cartlidge as his wife Aline and Liza Howe as Hilde Wangel.

According to Thomas E. Jones, director of the show, The Master Builder exemplifies Ibsen's special use of characters, profound dialogue and imaginative play construction.

Jones sees the play as having ambiguities that allow directors, actors, and audiences to find meanings to suit themselves. Henrik Ibsen, to Jones, seems to want his audiences to ask critical questions about his principal characters.

Ibsen, along with Strinberg, revolutionized playwriting by experimenting with new forms, notably naturalism. With the study of psychology beginning to interest writers, Ibsen and others shifted the emphasis of their plays to internal examination in search of greater truth, but not necessarily greater realism.

Ibsen's creation is the so called "well-made play" which states in dramatic terms significant social problems. Many of the problems no longer concern the 20th century, but the dramatic skill in which they were presented excels even now.

Others appearing in the play include: Elizabeth Parkhill, Tim Stuart, Philip Der Pilbosian, Donald Tosh, Wyndell Thompson, Ruth Wilbanks and Lois Lane.

Tickets are now on sale. For advanced orders write to the Maryville College Playhouse, Box 2825, Maryville College or call 982-2911. They will also be sold at the door each evening of the performances.

Last year's Concert Choir before leaving on choir tour

"Broadening Horizons"

A new awareness towards world issues has come about. The World Concern Committee of Maryville College has decided to try something different. It has joined up with an organization affiliated with the Foreign Policy Association called Great Decisions 1977. This is an organization structured to help people feel aware and a part of the international issues which affect us all.

The members of the group read an article from the Great Decisions booklet, which provides them with the factual data necessary for discussion. The members then meet together once a week to discuss and share opinions.

The tendency to let the world go by lost in the security of our small school mentally stunts one's growth when it comes to understanding international issues. The Great Decisions program broadens our horizons and guides our views with facts, ultimately leading to increased consciousness and a greater understanding of the World we all live in.

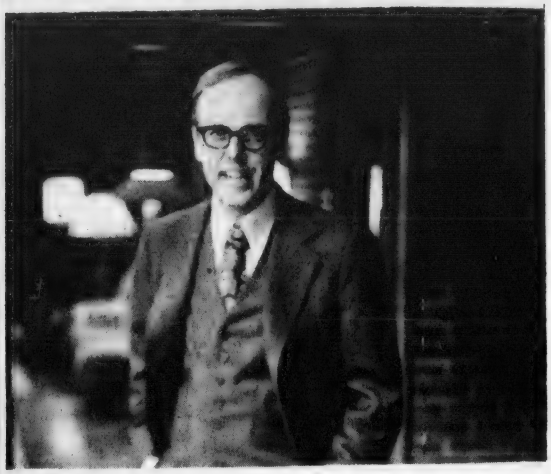
This week's Great Decisions topic: The Middle East Cauldron

Concert Choir Hits The Road

The Maryville College Concert Choir has announced its itinerary for the 1977 spring tour March 11–21. The MC choir's 27th annual tour will cover five states including Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, and marks a fifth midwest circuit for the choir. It last toured there in 1973.

On March 11 the choir, again traveling by chartered bus, will begin the tour with a fifth appearance in Harriman, TN, singing at the First Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m.

Other concerts on this year's tour include second appearances in New Carlisle, OH and Mt. Zion, IL; a third visit to Centralia, IL; and first appearances in Harrisburg, Arlington Heights and Springfield, IL, Marysville and Norwood, OH, Lexington, KY, and Logansport, IN.



The choir will give a pretour concert in Sevierville—its first appearance there—on Sunday, March 6, at 3:30 p.m. in the Sevier County Cultural Center. A home concert at Maryville College on Sunday, March 27, at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel will follow the tour.

The 1977 touring choir, 41 selected voices and three instrumentalists, will present a program of traditional and contemporary choral music appropriate to the Lenten season. The concerts, divided into three parts, will feature works ranging from German composer Heinrich Schuetz' famous "Alleluia" to arrangements of American folk spirituals.

Directed by Dr. Harry H. Harter, professor of music and chairman of the fine arts department at MC, the choir has traveled over 55,000 miles in the past 27 years to nearly 500 cities east and west of the Mississippi River. Previously, it has performed in New York City's famed

An Interview With Future President Anderson...

Dr. Anderson

Echo: How do you plan to conduct your presidency?

Anderson: I am committed to conducting an open presidency in which I would invite the various constituent groups in, to express their opinions. I can assure you, I'm not one who'd issue decrees. That's not my style. My style is a very collaborative one. I hope that people would come in for formal and informal meetings on a regular basis. I expect to play a strong role and to handle big decisions. I plan to conduct a program in which we would conserve existing resources and raise additional funds. We'll have to be as frugal and realistic as possible in our policies.

Echo: Why don't you plan to live in Morningside?

Anderson: There is more than one reason for this. My wife and I feel it would be more appropriate to live in the Maryville community. We are very interested in linking the college and the Maryville community. Also, we have two children aged 8 and 11, and it would be more natural for them to grow up in a community situation rather than in a place like Morningside.

Echo: What are your views regarding the alcohol issue on campus?

Anderson: I promise to scrutinize the problem as well as I can. I want to know the prevailing views on the situation. However, it is a bit premature to tell my program or opinion without further study. I do guarantee that it will get my attention. I will bring it up in the All-College Council and discuss it with various faculty members and students.

Echo: Why do you believe that there is a necessity to revive and re-structure the All-College Council, as you said in a previous Echo interview, and what possible ideas might you have regarding the All-College Council?

Anderson: I am very much fascinated by a joint body like the A.C.C. It could be very educational, not only for students, but for everyone. However, the uniqueness of the A.C.C. isn't enough—it has to work. It has to be more than decoration. I plan to examine it carefully and see how it could be used for bigger decisions. I have not seen it work first-hand, but I have heard some dissatisfaction with the A.C.C. It has to have a bigger effect on the decision-making process, and I'd like to see how this can be improved upon. I would really like to know more about it.

Essay, The Black Element...

Since February is National Black Emphasis Month, it seems appropriate to take a look at the Black element on the Maryville College campus

This element can be seen in the Black students at Maryville College. Maryville's doors have always been open to Black students, except when the state of Tennessee declared integrated education illegal (primarily because of Maryville College's open door policy) in 1902. This law was effective until 1954 when the United States Supreme Court struck down "separate but equal" school systems. In spite of Maryville's liberal admission policies, Black students did not flock to the college. Thirty or more Black students is a rarity at Maryville. Twenty or less is more common. These low numbers are basically attributed to the high cost and the conservatism of the East Tennessee area. This, however, does not stop all Black students, for there are seventeen Black students presently enrolled at Maryville. That number will hopefully increase because of the addition of a Black admissions counselor and the recruiting efforts of Black students.

Once a Black student enrolls at Maryville College, he/she must cope with problems that a White student will never know. Many Black students find that maintaining their Black identity is more demanding than the rigorous curriculum at Maryville. For example, non-Western (Africa) is the only course that speaks to a Black experience. There also exists a social and cultural void between Blacks and Whites that is perpetuated by the knowledge Blacks possess of Whites and the knowledge Whites lack of Blacks.

Socially, because of the small number of Black students, there is some "crossing the tracks" (Blacks and Whites socially mixing). If this were a true southern school this would not be tolerated. The geographically diverse student body makes "crossing the tracks" possible. In the classrooms, many Blacks have experienced being "talked at" by White professors. This entails a White professor talking directly to a Black student on a Black-related topic while virtually ignoring the rest of the class. One White professor said that he did this out of guilt. Some professors cease momentarily when reminded of it, only to unconsciously resume "talking at" Black students. Also in the classroom, when Black topics are discussed, one can feel a nervousness. Several White professors and students have observed that White students are more open about Black topics when there are no Blacks present.

These voids, though very wide, are not impossible to narrow. Black students must first look to themselves to fill these voids. Black students, through the Black Student Association (BSA), sponsor programs, discussions, and social functions. These are for Black students' benefit as well as for the total college community's benefit. The total college community is encouraged to come to programs sponsored by the BSA and to visit the Black Culture Center. The Black Culture Center, located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall, is used for programs, studying, and socializing. White members of Maryville College can further help by becoming more understanding of Black culture and feelings. They should become more vocal and inquisitive, in and out of class, about Black lifestyles, the BSA, and Black programs.

Past presidents of Maryville College have received adverse criticism because they favored Black students' enrolling at Maryville. These men were strong enough to stand for what they knew was right, in the face of opposition. Because of them and other liberals, blacks are able to pursue an education at Maryville College.

Maryville's past presidents were strong. We must now be strong. The admissions office, Black students, and some conscientious Whites have made an effort to make Maryville College a better place to be for all its students. But we need more help. This can come from more people doing the things I have previously stated.

Maryville College can be almost what the conscientious Black student wants it to be. In spite of its shortcoming, Maryville College can offer the Black student an education that will prepare him/her for entry into the real world.

—James A. Yancey, Jr.

BSA: "Looking Forward"

The Black Student Association will celebrate Black Emphasis Month with a program entitled, "Looking Forward to the Tercentenary." This program will focus on the last two hundred years of African-American history with a futuristic look to the year 2076. The program will be held in the Experimental Theater on Monday, February 28, 1977 at 8:00 PM. Everyone is urged to attend and help the BSA celebrate. A discussion will follow the program.

James A. Yancey, Jr.

Editorial

Regarding the announcement that Ms. Jane Richardson has been named Dean to succeed Miss Francis Massey, one need only talk with Jane Richardson to see why she was selected. In her Echo interview, Ms. Richardson stated that she was "very excited about being a part of the growth that Maryville College will see in the next three or four years. I hope for an increased awareness of the importance of a student's social and residential life seems to be rarely stressed by Anderson Hall at all, and we feel that with the addition of a Dean who has lived with the students, the College Community can expect a capable administrator, loaded with enthusiasm, ideas, and spirit.

In our recent interview with the future President of Maryville College, Dr. Anderson, we were caught by the fact that his youthful age and spirit really comes across when speaking with him. Asking us as many questions as we asked him, Dr. Anderson left us the impression that his sense of efficiency and his designs for openness and collaboration are very sincere, very real, and very timely.

"An appreciation of differences..."

February Meetings has traditionally been termed by previous Echo's as "a disappointment . . ." or as displaying a lack of deep thought or planning. Yet for the fortunate people who attended 1977's "A Wholeness in Diversity: A Christian Perspective," can and have stated their surprise and thoughts, some examples; "The theme was good. Simple, yet complex in it's ramifications. I found the seminars very interesting." Most people the Echo talked with enjoyed and got involved with the different services. "I had never been to a Catholic Mass before. I had always wondered about it but I never thought I'd find myself enjoying a Greek Orthodox Liturgy."

Unfortunately and also traditionally, most of the students on campus did not attend and comments to the tune of "I'd rather watch T.V. They were lousey and repitious last year and I still have classes this week or I've got a lab due, were common and rampant. Yet another real disappointment lies in the fact that there were few students who even attended what will no doubt remain as the Arts event to take place on campus this academic year. The Greg Smith Singers provided a moving musical and memorable ending.Wholeness in Diversity was, for those who attended an appreciation of differences.

Essay, The Search...

College students are typically characterized as searching for true identities, or the true meaning of life. Maryville College students can be classified as searchers in many ways: during this past Interim, students traveled to England "In Search of King Arthur"; many students took time from their studies a few weeks ago to watch as Alex Haley searched for an identity in the television production of Roots. On a more personal level, the courses we choose to study reflect our need to find happiness as we plan for the future. But courses don't always fill our need and often we search for Something More.

This Something More is often a spiritual fulfillment that tends to be ignored while people are at college. Students generally find other things to do (studying, sleeping, or partying) and any religious persuasion that was received at home is removed, mainly due to a new independence and a distance factor. (How can parents persuade when they are 700 miles away?)

If you have experienced an ignoring of this basic need, perhaps you have also experienced a doubting of your previous beliefs. (Isn't it funny how religion courses can cause such confusion in some people?) This doubting process is important, though, because it will cause you to really take a look at your beliefs, and to examine what others believe. In the end, your faith will be stronger than it had been.

Perhaps you have a strong faith now, but there are points that cause some confusion in you. These points may include innocent death, the act of forgiveness, obedience, or even the presence of evil in the world. Whether you are just searching or searching for Something More as you deal with faith, you may find a helping hand in the book Something More by Catherine Marshall.

Catherine Marshall shares her questions about her faith as she tried to understand what was happening to herself and her family. She freely expresses her doubts about God's presence and love at the death of her two baby grandchildren. She openly discusses the steps she took to learn how to forgive. She brings her problems to the fore in a way that identification with her comes easily. I found, after reading the book, that I did not want to place her on a pedastal and say, "Well, she's Catherine Marshall, and that's good for her, but I'm only human." I found I could say, "She's like me! I know what she's feeling because I've felt the same way!"

Now whether I agreed with everything she wrote is not important. What is important is I recognized my need for Something More in my life and I found that my concerns were shared by someone else. I saw the need for some personal searching, but I had a guide to follow. If an answer in the book "hit" me as being reasonable and workable, I adapted it for my own use. If some points didn't sit well, I looked carefully at what she was saying, and what I was thinking, and searched from there.

The spiritual need of each person is probably the most personal part of our lives. What I believe may not be the answer for you. But I'd like to share my thoughts with you if you will let me and I'd like for you to share with me. Together we can help each other. So if you are in search of a deeper faith, read Something More. I'd like to share with you something I've enjoyed.

Unity in Christian Fellowship

Have you heard about the Christian Fellowship group here on campus? It has been going since fall term on every other Thursday night at 7:30.

This group came about from activities of last year. Small Bible studies were led by students under the guidance of the Inter-Varsity leader at the University of Tennessee, Randy Pope. The main goal behind those groups was to provide some kind of unity for those students who voiced a need for Christian fellowship on campus.

The opening days of this year's fall term were busy planning a new tactic in the way of fellowship. A group of students decided to have large group meetings and have a variety of programs of interest to students on campus.

Programs which have been held over these two terms have all been supported and have received an enthusiastic response from the students. A few examples of some topics that have been covered include: how to set goals, Christian joy, what is prayer, and the Christian community.

The format of the group is all informal and fun. There is time spent in singing and the last part of the hour is for the program. The program is always done in different ways. There might be a speaker, a simulation game, or a group discussion led by the students.

Everyone is welcomed to come on out and join us. Signs are put up a day or two before the Thursday meeting with all sorts of information about it.

Correction

Last week's Echo incorrectly stated that, "Miss Frances Massey is the first and only person in the history of the school to hold the position of Dean of Women." It should be stated that, while Miss Massey was the first full-time Dean of Women, Miss Mary Ellen Caldwell served as Dean of Women from 1912 to 1936 and as Dean Emeritus from 1936 to 1945. We apologize to Miss Caldwell's family for this mistake.

Star-gazing Environment:

The anticipation of warm nights and windy days has long been underway. The boredom which coincides with the annual isolation of the Maryville inhabitants must draw to an end soon; often the end is nowhere in sight.

Quite probably this is due to the fact that one's eyes are eternally fixed to the ground for just one slight sign that the earth is re-awakening. We have certainly been misguided. Why must we be bound to the ground on which we walk? Can we not walk and yet look to the sky? The coldest of nights somehow produce the clearest of stars. This is the season in which to view a number of familiar constellations, most of which appear in the eastern skies.

The routine of Winter Term is inevitable but this can be remedied if we only search elsewhere for our necessary reunion with nature. Simply look overhead for what we have overlooked.

Humanities 101 will be offered this spring term for the final time as a required course.

According to Claude Stewart of the Philosophy Religion Department, any studnet needing the course for his/her core requirement should enroll at this time. This includes all students who began at Maryville College prior to the fall of 1976.

Humanities can be taken as a elective. Stewart stated that this will be the last offering of the course in the present curriculum.

If you have any doubts about whether you should take Humanities, consult with the registrar or your faculty advisor.

An Interview With Future Dean Richardson...

Recently, the Echo conducted an interview with the new Dean, Jane Richardson.

Echo: What are your first priorities as the new Dean?

Richardson: "I want to get to know as many students in as positive a way as possible. I want to get to know them as people not as problems. I know many underclassmen already and in the coming weeks I hope to meet many more."

Echo: What about your experience as Dorm Head Resident?

Richardson: "Being in the dorm, you can see and feel the students frustrations. How, for instance can you study when you're homesick or have fun when you're bored? Just being away from home is often disturbing. Living in the Dorm with the students has given me a different view of their life which I never could have gained if I came on campus cold."

Echo: How do you feel about your new post?

Richardson: "I'm very excited about it. Maryville College will be seeing a lot of growth in the next three or four years, and it's exciting to be a part of it all. Dr. Anderson has stated his desire to make Anderson Hall more accessible and I believe that the atmosphere of the new administration will be one of increased openness toward the campus community. Mr. Stewart, Dr. Kramer and I will work closely as a team trying to make life for the students better. I don't intend to color my feelings toward any one student because of one incident as often that student is capable of so much positive action as well. I have a great affection for students here, many I don't know yet but I like what I see."

Echo: What about your predecessor, Dean Massey?

Richardson: "I've always found Miss Massey to be a great source of encouragement and comfort, she has great insight and I add myself to the long list of her admirers."

Echo: What will be your first task as Dean?

Richardson: "I'll be spending spring term working on the selection of R.A.'s, and naturally getting to know the job as well as the college community better. I'll remain as the Head Resident of Dorm I for the remainder of this year and I'm looking forward to it all."

Several upper-class Resident Assistants voiced their views on Ms. Richardson's new position, and David Adcock thought the choice was "fantastic . . . It showed great insight in Jane's selection." Jane Monroe stated her belief that Jane is "approachable . . . A very capable person, she has a unique ability to relate to all kinds of people."

Sharon Bailey cited, "Jane's youthful spirit and concerned attitude makes her ideal for the new dean." Senior Paul Bailey summed up the attitudes of the residents interviewed: "Living with the students has given her a different insight into the students that others might not get. I'm sure she has a lot of new ideas. She'll give a new outlook into the school and student relationships."

Wrestling...

The wrestling team is loaded with talent this year. This is evident in that Coach Don Elia will try to take a ten man team to the Nationals.

Bob Valentine and Wayne Dunn, both All-Americans last year, seem ready to repeat their feat again this year. Both have very impressive records; Dunn is 22-3-1, while Valentine is 19-2. Valentine says that "the team is loaded with lots of potential that only needs mat experience."

If what Bob says is true, the other wrestling squads in the tournament will definitely have to look out for the squad from Maryville.

Intramural B-Ball

Highlights of this week's intramurals occurred Tuesday, Feb. 15, as Eddie Brea of Land Stars scored 32 points and Sutton Science Center knocked off previously unbeaten Striders 58–52.

Scrubs edge Land Stars 46–42. Brea's 32 points was the highest point total this year.

In other action, Bottoms Up defeated Huns 57–20.

Blitzed Crew 33–NORML 28. Mainstreamers got by Bottoms Up 40–37.

Striders 76–Scrubs 51.
Southside 52–Red Man 47.
Blitzed Crew 54–Potters 47.

R -ball

For Bob Schmidt the thrill of victory: For Ron Shadduck the agony of defeat. Three years ago it was Ron who first taught Bob to play raquetball. Thursday night Bob Schmidt defeated Ron Shadduck 21–14, and 21–20 for first place in the Intramural Racquetball Championship.

Girls Basketball...

The Lady Scot's handed the Milligan Buffaloes a rather harsh, 101–41 defeat. Six of the Scot's scored in double figures, led by Sharon Youngs and Joel Thompson with 20 and 19 points respectively.

The game was never in much serious doubt as the Lady Scot's pushed another game into the win column. The women are now 8 and 10 for the season, and with three games left, they have an excellent chance of breaking .500 and taking a respectable record into the state play-offs.

This should be very gratifying for the seniors to know that they will be going out as winners.

Scots Wrap Up Season Friday Night.

Maryville's men's basketball team has had a very long spell of bad luck. The "fighting Scot's" are 4 and 19 for this campaign with only one contest remaining for the year.

The team has many shortcomings, all of which everyone interested in basketball knows about. For that reason the good points only shall be mentioned in this piece.

Let's now talk about the seniors players.

Ty Limbaugh—good strong man under the basket. Ty has a nose for the ball and the basket. Ty is a senior and is also the best defensive "big-man" on the team. Ty came back from a fractured foot to give us an effective Duo underneath the basket. His offensive ability is also a very big plus for the Scot's. He will be missed by the members of this basketball team when he turns in his uniform for the last time Friday after the Sewanee game.

Kevin McKinstry—point man, Dr. M. is also a senior. Kevin did not start at the beginning of the year, and he did not mind coming off of the bench to help the team. When Kevin did get the starting nod, he was not bashful about playing, each game he became better. It was too bad for the team that an injury kept him from further play. Kevin will also be missed.

Maryville hired a new coach to try to instill a winning program at Maryville College. That is history. This coach accepted a challenge and he worked hard with the basketball team. Even though the team was not blessed with exceptional height (anyone over 6'5"), it was blessed with three fine offensive shooters. It was also blessed with good passing guards. This was not all that Coach Henry had in his favor. He also had fine leapers

The point of this article is to show that a losing season can happen to anyone, no matter how gifted you may be. The basketball team of Maryville College has some fine players on it's squad. However, (because of some unexplained reasons), they just have not been able to get it together. There is always hope for next year with the addition of Jeff Draper and other recruits.

Thanks are in order for the trying effort put out by the basketball team, coaches Henry and Byrd, and especially "Doc", who worked just as hard as the rest of the team. Special thanks goes to the Hooters and our few faithful fans.

—Phil Loyd

Spring Sports

As the men's basketball and wrestling, as well as the lady's basketball seasons come to a close, it's time we look toward the Spring of '77. The men's soccer, baseball, and track teams look forward to promising spring campaigns.

The soccer squad, under the direction of Dr. David Young and Bucky Buckwalter, look forward to their 12 game schedule. After stopping UT(2) for the tournament title last fall, the team gained support and confidence. The season opens March 26 against a new opponent, Johnson Bible College, the game will be played in Knoxville. The booters first home game will be April 2, when they play Tennessee Temple.

The Scot's Baseball team team opens their season March 22 at Tusculum College. The Scots, under the direction of coaches Henry and Stennet, have one of the longest schedules of all time. They will be 36 games—18 home and 18 on the road. The Scot's, who missed a play-off berth last year by a single game, have experience and determination. They will be counting on 16 returning players plus some freshman talent in an effort to gain a play-off berth this year. Their first home game is planned for March 28 against Ohio University.

Thousands of young people did.
In fact, last year there were over 200,000 enrollments in college courses, by people in the Army. They attended classes on post. They studied at nearby colleges and universities. And the Army paid for up to 75% of their tuition and fees.

'Impressions' deadline extended

Impressions now has a new deadline of March 11. All submissions should be turned in to Box 2860, preferably typed.

A contest is in progress for the cover drawing. Any participants who can submit a line drawing should have their work to the Impressions box by the same deadline.

The staff has been working to get the magazine ready for publication late in the spring term.

To make Impressions financially possible, staff members have gone to the faculty and other interested people and asked for pledges. These pledges, which will be collected at the first of spring term, will aid in the printing and publishing costs of Impressions.

The Admissions office recently donated $100 in return for volunteer help from the Impressions staff. The money will be put towards publishing costs.

A tentative budget has been submitted to the Administrative Vice-President for next year. The staff is hoping that a budget of "More slash than cash"

Carter to cut aid $582 million

by Helaine Lasky

(CPS)--President Jimmy Carter's fiscal 1977 higher education budget is essentially a copy of former President Ford's budget proposal and will continue most of the funding policies established by the last administration.

This news is being called "disastrous" by higher education officials since the budget represents more slash than cash. In effect, Carter's 1977 budget request would cut campus-based student aid by $582 million and reduce the number of awards available by 885,000.

By law, $130 million is the minimum amount to be slated for the Supplemental Equal Opportunity Grant (SEOG) Program. This was the amount settled on by Carter's budget proposal and was $110 million below the current level, representing a loss of 220,000 grants. The Office of Education apparently reconsidered the amount and has appropriated the full $240 million for SEOG for the fiscal year 1977.

The only other plus in the otherwise negative budget situation is the Basic Equal Opportunity Grant (BEOG) Program for which the Office of Education has requested $1.9 billion, representing an almost $600 million increase over the 1976 level. A full BEOG award will give a student a maximum of $1400.

There will be no money for National Direct Student Loans (NDSL) this year, a severe cut from the 1976 level of $332 million. As a result, 335,000 students will lose their awards if not their education entirely.

The American Council on Education has charged that this is a violation of a law which requires a minimum federal capital contribution to student loan funds of $286 million. Because of an alleged decrease in NDSL demand, Leonard Spearman, acting deputy commissioner for postsecondary education, has defended the cut. He says that the revolving funds in the program as well as Guaranteed Student Loan funds will meet the demand for NDSL requests.

Further plans are in the works for the College Work-Study programs. The $250 million which Ford originally requested before leaving office would have represented a 40 percent cut from last year, and roughly 330,000 fewer jobs. The Office of Education took heart and replaced the $140 million bringing the budget for College Work-Study back to the $390 million level.

Maintaining funds, not increasing them seems to be the situation for State Student Incentive Grants (SSIG) as well. The $44 million requested will permit only about 25,000 new awards because the no-growth status of the SSIG's will require priority for funding renewal grants for about 150,000 students.

In the wake of tuition hikes across the country which are bringing tuitions to an average of about $4,000 a year, students are facing a tougher battle now than ever before. Paying the bill will require help and the government proposal this year offers little. Instead, it mirrors former meager budgets by Republican presidents Nixon and Ford. The University of Minnesota, for example, has

Art club sponsors show

Lascaux, the Maryville College association of artists, was recently created from the inspiration of Elaine Parker who saw the need for unity among art majors.

The group chose the name Lascaux from the name of a cave in France where prehistoric paintings were found this century.

Keith Frederick, speaking for the group, listed several of its concerns. "We want to enlighten the school about its art majors and its artistic talent; promote regularly scheduled planned shows to keep the campus aware of talent; eventually have artists come in and have the gallery in constant use; build a sense of support among the art majors; build respect for art majors through their work."

Meetings of Lascaux occur every other Thursday night and are open to all art majors and persons genuinely interested in art.

Lascaux is currently presenting a show in the Fine Arts Center Gallery. This production, which will run until 5:00 P.M. on Friday, introduces works by M.C. art students. Reactions to this presentation should be addressed to Lascaux members.

Gannon, Weaver are new editors

Bill Gannon and Laird Weaver, two Maryville College sophomores, were selected last Monday by the Communications Committee to be co-editors of the Highland Echo starting this spring term and continuing through winter term next year.

The Committee's action followed five committee meetings where candidates were interviewed and issues discussed. Eight of the Committee's sixteen members cast votes by secret ballot to select the editor. Only the members present at both the applicants' interviews were allowed to vote.

Both Gannon and Weaver are history majors, sophomore aides, and hold offices on dormitory house councils. Gannon is a member of the Christian Fellowship and the All-College Council Judicial Council. Weaver is a member of the Maryville College Concert Choir and the Interim Committee. Both have worked on high school newspapers.

Vera Gilmore, Communications Committee Chairman, said the Committee faced a "very hard decision" in selecting Gannon and Weaver over Echo editor Tim Rahn, who submitted a trial issue for a second year as editor. Gilmore said

Janis Galley

Galley serves as new Saga manager

A new face has appeared on the Maryville College campus that is enhancing the dining hall. Janis Galley, Bob Miller's new assistant, is training with him to be a director of food services with the Saga Corporation.

Ms. Galley has an extensive background in food preparation, including a master's degree in Home Economics from the University of Tennessee where she was recently a freshman advisor and instructor in Home Economics. She received her B.A. in Home Economics Education from Wayne State University in Detroit where she taught courses in foods and nutrition as well as textiles and clothing for several years. Ms. Galley also added that she worked for Saga while in school.

Ms. Galley's job covers many areas. She supervises the preparation and serving of meals, going over the menu with the cooks to decide what will be served. She is also becoming acquainted with office work and the business aspects involved with the food service.

In short, she has to be exposed to all the jobs to know if they are being done correctly.

Commuting from Knoxville, Ms. Galley has been at the college slightly over one week. She enjoys working with college students and says she's found those at Maryville College "friendly and pleasant." One of her main objectives is to become acquainted with the student body, and she hopes that students will come to her with suggestions about meal preparation and presentation.

Varying hours are a result of the total job experience, and Ms. Galley usually puts in 10—12 a day. Another of her main concerns is sanitation, and she's interested in following state and federal regulations dealing with food preparation. She's counting on students to help this procedure by keeping animals out of the dining hall.

A new face in the dining hall may give a new face to the food that will be served. Ms. Galley's experience at Maryville should be a pleasant experience for everyone.

Admissions recruits personal touch

As a result of the Stuart Weiner Report the admissions policy of Maryville College is becoming more involved with a personal approach to the problems of student enrollment.

John Klockentager, newly appointed Director of Admissions, told the Echo in a recent interview how the Admissions is reacting to Weiner Report findings, saying, "Maryville College is engaging in a system approach to the problems of admissions, an entire approach."

The College begins with a list of potential prospects. These could be from the standard lists that colleges use in finding students, or they can be referrals from students and alumni. These potential applicants are sent general information inviting them to look at Maryville College.

All letters received will be answered personally. Those who express interest in a particular department will receive a letter from that department.

Following this, an admissions counselor will call the prospect and send him more detailed information. All written correspondence will be more personal in nature than standard form letters. Very often the counselor will include a handwritten note.

Pat Johnson, an admissions counselor, said that the admissions policy has become "more personal."

Johnson feels that the admissions counselor is now better able to counsel. "The emphasis of the program is to help the student find a college that is right for him, and not to sell Maryville College."

Klockentager stressed the importance of referrals. "The best source of finding and recruiting prospects is through our students and alumni. Some of our best students have come to us in this way. Anyone should feel free to suggest a name to us at any time."

In concluding, Klockentager placed emphasis on "better and more effective communication with prospects. Our job is to help a student find a college that is suitable. If that college is Maryville, fine; our job is not necessarily to sell the college and certainly not to oversell."

Poems to be read aloud

"Aloud---Poems Should Be Read," is the title of a poetry reading this Saturday, March 5, at 8:00 P.M. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. It will be free to the public.

Organized as a result of the success of David Powell's poetry reading in late January, this reading will feature approximately ten readers. Readings will be chosen by the individual readers, and will cover a large number of poets both traditional and modern.

Presently David Powell, David Young, Kathy Dunmire, Tim Rahn, and others are slated to read. Additional readers are needed and welcome. The only requirement is that the reader contact Tim Rahn prior to the performance.

Refreshments will be served following the reading.

Master Builder is an overall success

Photos by Jim Stewart, Review by Charles Craven

Henrik Ibsen's The Master Builder, a tragedy featuring depressing characters, is a difficult play for any acting company. A group of amateur performers could easily content themselves with presenting stereotypes, as Master Builder offers little chance for an actor to portray an admirable person—all the leads have mental problems, either in letting emotions ruin their lives or in being unable to face reality.

However, through the Master Builder cast, the audience saw the characters as human, understandable people. Their fine portrayal was a tribute to the actors' theatrical skill, and to their sensitivity and perception. They were close to becoming the characters during performance.

The diction was strong and clear. Only rarely did words fail to come through clearly.

Liza Howe, a newcomer to the Maryville stage, gave an outstanding performance, bringing to the role of Hilde Wangel a sense of buoyancy and radiant optimism that lifted the audience as it did Halvard Solness. We look forward to seeing her in future roles.

Ronald Fagan gave a conscientious and on the whole successful performance of Solness, the Master Builder. He evoked sympathy from the audience, reminding Hilde that he will have "no happy children, no contented wife, no home—never," and occasionally disgust, as in his refusal to talk about what bothers his wife: "Let us consider the subject closed." Once or twice he stumbled on his lines, but picked them back up so quickly that it was hardly noticeable.

Ruth Cartlidge brought life to the role of the miserable, trapped wife of the Master Builder, who cloaked her natural impulses and feelings under the repeated phrase, "It is, after all, my duty to accept it—and to thank God for it."

The only disappointment one could have with Philip DerPilbosian's presentation of Knut Brovik, the elderly architect, would be that he had only one brief performance in Act I. So rarely can a young actor show characteristics, mannerisms, and health problems of an old man near death (he even had the emphysematous wheezing down pat).

Two other newcomers to the Maryville stage handled their parts with poise: Elizabeth Parkhill as Kaja Fosli, the bookkeeper, and Timothy Stuart as Ragnar Brovik, the young draftsman. Both managed to avoid many of the shortcomings common to beginners: they spoke their lines clearly (except for a few places when, in attempting to speak more softly, words became unintelligible); they both appeared at ease in front of an audience, and they obviously gave sincere effort to their parts. With more practice and experience, they should develop into polished actors.

The stage set, a work of art, contributed almost as much to the Victorian atmosphere as did the performers. The set was so thoroughly detailed and reflected so many man-hours of construction time that one listener, commenting on the striking of the set, said it was about like seeing a fine old Victorian mansion being torn down.

From the background came noises that sounded something like distant seagulls in a wind tunnel, intended to underscore some of the lines. Unfortunately, many listeners were confused as to what the sounds were, or what they represented.

Thus the Maryville College Playhouse can consider Master Builder an over-all success. Members of the cast are to be commended for their discipline in taking such difficult roles, and portraying them so that an audience could understand the plights of the characters.

Both sides of the fence

Carter education cuts demand close look

President Jimmy Carter's proposed economic policies include plans which, if enacted, would affect the U.S. educational system. One of Carter's suggestions is to cut off any additional funds for the National Direct Student Loan program.

Opinions differ on the possible repercussions of such a curtailment. Definite problems exist on both sides of the issue, and both the good and bad aspects of the program must be considered.

Several state legislators are indignant at the proposal, saying that doors to post-secondary education will be closed to many. However, Carter's proposal would cut off only additional funds for the NDSL program. Schools would retain existing funds.

It is the opinion of several that Carter's proposal would not have serious consequences. The case of Maryville College may be used as an example. Currently, Maryville controls approximately one million dollars for the NDSL program. These funds would be retained regardless of whether or not Carter's program is passed.

The program is also self-perpetuating; as National Direct Student Loans are repaid at three percent interest, Maryville can "re-loan" the money to incoming students. Therefore, the NDSL program continues indefinitely.

A problem does occur in the area of repayment, however. In recent years, an increasing number of students have defaulted on these loans. The burden of repayment then falls upon the taxpayers. This problem is real and is becoming serious each year.

It is obvious that both sides of the situation must be carefully considered before action is taken. Enactment of such a proposal could possibly bar many students from colleges and universities in the United States. It seems unfair that future students should bear the responsibility for a problem which they did not create.

Yet the number of defaults on these loans increases each year, placing a greater burden on taxpayers. It is highly improbable that this problem will correct itself. It remains to be seen who will be forced to bear the reverberations of the situation.

Letters to the 'Echo'

Note:

The editors did not receive the first of these letters until two weeks ago today. While many may find that we are stirring up old dust, it is the policy of this paper to print letters (unless the writer wishes otherwise) when they raise a point such as follows.

The other letters were either cut from last week's trial edition or were not received in time for publication.

Tim Rahn

Dear Editor:

We make every effort to overlook nominal mistakes, slightly erroneous information, and occasional misinterpretation of statements in The Highland Echo because we fully understand that the Echo is an informally operated student newspaper with no professional assistance; however, we do not think that the campus newspaper should be used as a tool for character smear or for personal vindictive opinions. We are referring to the article entitled "Kees, Shoemaker are new Chilhowean editors." The first section of the article was quite adequate to describe the present situation, and the optimistic statement by Ms. Shoemaker would have been an excellent way to end the news story.

Unfortunately, the reporter then chose to relate past experiences, replete with quotes from unnamed sources, that contribute nothing to our understanding of the present situation with the Chilhowean and are obviously intended to express the emotions of the reporter. The expression of these emotions should have been reserved for the editorial page so that the reader would understand that this information is opinion rather than reported fact.

The last sentence of this article was especially poignant. By stating that Huffman could not be reached for comment, the Echo admits that it has the ability to accuse without rebuff. We also find this statement difficult to believe in light of the fact that Ms. Huffman works in Fayerweather Hall, lives one block away from the campus, and is (or maybe, was) a personal friend of the reporter and the editor. If anything, the sentence should have read, "Huffman was not reached for comment."

The validity of the emotions of the reporter or the seriousness of the problem is not an issue, and we do not question the judgment of the Communications Committee in releasing Ms. Huffman. The issue is the proper use of the campus newspaper and whether, in all seriousness, a picture of an empty room is newsworthy in a weekly, one-sheet publication.

Dear Ed, this article was really a cheap shot.

Tom Taylor &
Ellis Bacon

To the Editor:

Last week's fine editorial on Dean Massey's retirement stated that she was the first dean of women at Maryville College. Since I was responsible, in talking with a member of the Echo staff, for making that statement, I want to take the responsibility for clarifying a misconception that might have resulted.

When Miss Massey first came to Maryville, President Lloyd pointed out that she was the first full-time dean of women. She was thus to have leeway to develop the position according to her own conception of it. As the editorial pointed out, she succeeded admirably in doing so.

In fact, however, Mary-

Correctives for the ACC--two views

ACC must achieve understanding of itself

After beginning the 1976-77 school year with a tremendous amount of promise, the All-College Council now seems to be deftly headed for an uneventful and unproductive year. This is sad when one considers the potential of the ACC, and especially the talents of this particular Council.

It is only curiousity that can force the seasoned observer to attend the seemingly needless meetings. One of those meetings was last Wednesday when the Council concluded its business in 45 minutes while its members ignored the opportunity for the dialogue which it so desparately needs.

In pointing out the problems of the ACC, the Echo is not laying the blame on any individual or group on the council. We recognize the situations that the Council is currently faced with.

There are three matters that are detrimental to the progress of the All-College Council at this time. These three matters are listed below.

1) Dr. Copeland—While Dr. Copeland is attacking matters in the last months of his presidency with gusto, we cannot help but think that as a lame-duck president he is inhibiting, unintentionally, the innovation of the Council

2) Innovation—In the same light, the ACC is presently operating under the misconception that it cannot innovate. Instead the Council serves mainly as a catch-all for the petty business of the college.

3) Apathy—A lack of interest on the part of non-member students, faculty, and administration and staff is contributing to a misunderstanding of the Council's purpose. This and the Council's apparent lack of direction are contributing factors to the Council's apathetic state.

The last meeting raised another point that must be weighed into the end result of the Council's performance. That is the ability of the All-College Council committees to function responsibly and successfully.

In the discussion last week, the Main Council came very close to getting at the heart of the problem with its committees. Opportunity existed for frank and honest evaluation of the committees, however, the Council inadvertently overlooked this possibility for evaluation.

The Council did discuss both the Religious Life and Communications Committees, two committees that are operating well at this time. The Religious Life Committee is working with a self imposed flexibility and without a committee co-chairman. The Communications Committee has bounced back remarkably after it suffered from chaos earlier in the year, the result of few student members and a lack of continuity.

While these are not quite model committees, they do show what innovation, leadership, and communication can do to strengthen a committee.

Yet other committees flounder miserably—either that or they speak very softly—and the Main Council is rendered into a "sit-upon-body." With in this group the students try (sometimes), the faculty serve honestly yet dazed, and the administration and staff linger somewhere in between. This sit-upon-body cannot exist.

There is still time left in the year for the Council to recognize its potentials. To do this the leadership must note the present dilemma, and deal with it openly and honestly. At the same time, individual members must be endowed with equality in order to stimulate this openness.

Yet the most important things that the Council must do are achieve an understanding of itself and come to truly represent the college community.

Council needs leadership, not domination

Unfortunately, the All-College Council, again, has not been able to grasp the reins of effectiveness as Maryville College's governing body. This is due to many reasons.

The Echo editor has pointed out several reasons which are difficult to dispute. First, the lack of interest in the ACC has had a detrimental effect on its working. Disturbing comments, non-funny jokes, and severe criticism are constantly directed at the Council. Yet few people come forth to help cure the Council's ills. Even more disturbing is that the same jokes and negative comments are made by some Council members. It seems that some of the Council members do not take the ACC seriously. If they do not believe in the Council, who will?

As for "the Council's lack of direction," this seems to stem from what I consider to be an absence of a clear statement of responsibilities and authority to the Council from the Board of Directors. Council actions, thus far, have depended on past precendence, for the ACC does not have a set of formal guidelines.

The Council does concern itself with matters that are not in the ACC's jurisdiction, often leading to discussions that get bogged down in unnecessary rhetoric. This is yet another sign that there is need for improvement.

The ACC committees, the backbone of the Council, generally are not working very well. This problem is mainly due to the total lack of responsibility of some committee members and the need to keep committees stimulated.

As pointed out by the Echo editor, the Religious Life and Communication Committees are working well. The Religious Life Committee's lack of designated chairpersons has not hurt it; it may have helped it. The activeness of the Religious Life Committee has raised a question: Could other committees benefit from this type of non-structure? It could be worth a try.

The Reverend Pat McGeachy, one of this year's February Meetings speakers, said that Presbyterians are too structured and inflexible. As we know, Maryville College is a Presbyterian institution. Could McGeachy know something about the ACC committees that everyone else should know?

The Echo editor has also said that "If a committee fails it should either be corrected or eliminated." One wonders if this happens in light of the ACC's efforts to scrape up enough people to fill committees on which virtually no one wants to serve. The Council must decide on what committees are truly needed.

As to the charge that Dr. Copeland is an "inhibiting factor" because he is "a lame duck president," this writer must disagree. Being "a lame duck president" has no bearing on Dr. Copeland's inhibiting the Council's innovation.

It does seem, however, that Dr. Copeland sometimes dominates the Council meetings. This charge has been made by two previous Echo editors. After being on the Council for a year, I feel that this accusation is accurate.

In order to work more effectively, the Council needs leadership, not domination. Other Council members have felt intimidated or dominated in the ACC meetings. Every member must feel free to express his views without these feelings.

The ACC definitely has a future, but to reach the heights of effectiveness, it will take some work. Although I do not have any suggestions to automatically improve the All-College Council, I am searching for some ideas that will hopefully make the ACC a more viable body.

ville had had a dean of women from 1913 until her retirement in 1936, eleven years before Miss Massey's arrival. She was Miss Mary Ellen Caldwell, known to generations of students as Miss Molly, and was one of the most colorful personalities Maryville College has ever known. She carried out the duties of dean along with other responsibilities. If even half the stories told about Miss Molly are true, she deserves an article—or perhaps a book—of her own.

This in no way detracts from Dean Massey's unique contribution to the College. I simply want to keep the record accurate.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I hardly expect this letter to reach the printed stage because of my own "personal self interest." I agreed, in part, with your editorial on January 19, 1977. But I write this primarily because of Mr. George D. Webster's reply in the February 9, 1977 issue of the Highland Echo. Let Mr. Webster speak for himself and not "for all of those who served their country honorably." Let us not try to equate the Second World War with the Vietnam War. I am "one of those who served our country honorably" and was not offended by the pardon. If another Vietnam type war should occur we might have to add an RSVP if we so choose to become involved. But should our own country be attacked I don't think there will be any question about its defense.

Willard F. Rahn, '51

To the Editor:

The Communications Committee's selection last Monday was the least understandable, most unexpected, and most disappointing decision I can recall being made by a group of people in my six and a half years at Maryville College. Indeed it would seem that the campus' attitude toward what they want from a newspaper was made clear: that standards of journalism—the desire to make our campus newspaper as close as it can be to a professional newspaper—is not what this campus wants.

"But"—I can already hear screams from committee members—"Tim Rahn was not treated unfairly; this same committee gave him the job last year. And besides, Rahn learned to do a good job in a year; why can't another student? Are we to tie up this job with just one student when another one wants to try it?"

That statement does indeed deserve consideration. And actually, the more I think about it the more sense it makes. It is only fair to take turns; didn't our mothers tell us that when we fought with our brothers for the next turn on the new bycicle?

Maybe we haven't been sensitive enough in the past at Maryville College about letting people take turns; maybe the entire campus stands to learn from our pioneering Communications Committee. For one can certainly look beyond the Echo editorship to see positions on campus that have long been "tied up" by one person.

So let us talk about how we may specifically use the insight our enlightened Communications Committee has given us. So many individual cases cry for attention; it is difficult to choose just one.

But I will try. Dr. Arda S. Walker has taught history at Maryville College for almost twenty-nine years, and has been chairman of that department for eighteen. Only a few would disagree that she has been and still is an excellent teacher and a very capable department chairman whose positive influence on students and the college cannot be measured in words.

But, as Communications Committee members have taught us, we must learn to be fair, hard though it may be. No young people looking for employment face a more difficult challenge than the scores of history graduates looking for a job connected with their major. Even those who earned their PhD with honors cannot plan to teach history on the college level any time soon; the waiting lists are just too long.

Thus Dr. Walker holds a position most enviable in the eyes of even the most highly awarded history graduates. Is it fair for her to continue to hold it when equally qualified and gifted persons may never have the chance for it? Surely it would be fairer to these capable persons to let one of them have Dr. Walker's duties. After all, she had not had college teaching experience before coming to Maryville; there's no reason why a recent PhD graduate wouldn't be as successful as was Dr. Walker in her first five Maryville College years.

To realize the validity of a new way of thinking can bring great personal satisfaction after the initial shock of adapting has worn off. But even more pleasant is to share my new experience with others. For this reason, although I know that it is impolite to gloat, I am eager to get the compliments from history majors, who, with their understanding of Enlightenment, will surely grasp the new philosophy of our Communications Committee, and agree with me that such a change in the history department would make a phenomenal difference.

Yours for understanding,
Charlie Craven

Another Saga connoisseur awaits a meal.

Swim meet is a success

The intro-collegiate swim meet, held at Maryville College this past weekend, had competition by class division. In the men's division, the seniors took first place with 60 points, followed by the sophomores with 31 points, the freshmen with 26 points, and the juniors with 24 points.

In the women's division, the sophomores took first place with 28 points, the juniors took second with 27 points, the freshmen took third with 26 points, and the seniors took fourth place with 10 points.

Leading the senior men to victory were: Chip Krug who was a triple winner with first place finishes in the 25 yard backstroke, the 25 yard fly, and the 50 yard fly. Other strong senior swimmers were Gary Elrod, David Adcock, and Curt Stodghill. Curt took first place in the 50 free and 50 breast.

Strong swimmers for the sophomore class included Mark Mortensen who won the 25 free, Joe Morton, and Dan Taylor. David Osborne, outstanding swimmer for the freshman class, was a triple winner, scoring first place in the 100 IM, the 50 back, and 100 free. The junior class was led by Mark Thedford who took a second in both the 50 breast and the 100 IM.

Barbara Kees was an outstanding swimmer for the sophomore class; she took first place in four events: the 50 free, the 50 breast, the 100 free, and the 100 IM. Suzanne Schoen led the junior class while Janet Rickell led the freshman class with a first place in the 50 fly and the 200 IM. Cindy Murane was a strong representative for the senior class.

Trophies went to the top team in the men and women's divisions. The men's trophy went to the senior class; the women's trophy went to the sophomore class.

'Small is beautiful'

Schumacher seeks grass roots remedies

by Daniel W. Lindley

(CPS)—Dr. E. F. Schumacher, London no-growth economist and author of Small is Beautiful, currently is promoting his philosophy of "appropriate technology" in a two-month sweep of the U.S. in an effort to reach an audience beyond his natural collegiate constituency.

The 67-year-old economist, a Rhodes scholar and former German banker, advocates a cheap, efficient "intermediate technology" which could be utilized by small businessmen and farmers, whom he says are being bankrupted by huge, capital-rich corporations. These same energy-intensive businesses, he warns, will be crippled by the next major energy crisis, which he compares to a "second heart attack." Then, he continues, decentralized, practically self-sufficient communities which use little energy will be more economically feasible.

Peter Gillingham, director of the Menlo Park Center for Appropriate Technology, in California, and organizer of Schumacher's current tour, noted that though the economist is scheduling some campuses in his agenda, he is interested more in reaching what he terms "the A–B–C–D" of society.

In the "A–B–C–D" of society "A" pertains to government administrators (Schumacher observes that "they can't do much, but they can stop everything, so we'd better have them on our side"); "B" signifies businessmen ("the hand that feeds"); "C" includes communicators, researchers, and academics; and "D" applies to "democratic organizations," which account for the rest of society.

"We're trying to stay away from talk-talk audiences," Gillingham replied when asked if Schumacher was aiming his lectures at college audiences. "Many times, college audiences will criticize, but they won't act. It's like high-class TV. We're going after local people and their organizations instead."

"I'm no longer in the entertainment business," Schumacher remarked when asked the same question. He was apparently referring to his previous, more limited tour of the U.S. in 1975, two years after Small is Beautiful was published. "It's time for action. I'm in the midwife business now," he quipped.

"Certainly, the awareness wasn't there amongst students in the sixties," he continued calmly. "Shouting matches may have been necessary, but it's certainly more agreeable to have reasonable debates."

Schumacher often seems to be projecting the role of a grass-roots environmental and social activist, asks a rhetorical question of his audience: how are things connected? His reply is that "they aren't connected anymore." As an example of government problem-solving effectiveness, he points to the extreme drought in London last year. The people looked to the government for help, he said and the government reacted by appointing a Minister of Water. Finally it rained, and the Minister of Water was promoted to the House of Lords because he had accomplished his job successfully.

"The people are 'waiting for Godot,'" Schumacher charged. "Government can't solve all the problems. Once the people get together and do the networking, all things will become possible."

Eight grapplers in NCAA III

by Robert Boone

Paced by two 1976 All-Americans, Wayne Dunn and Bob Valentine, six other Maryville College wrestlers will test their skills at Binghamton, New York in the NCAA Division III Championships March 4—5.

Over 159 colleges and 426 individual entries have met qualifications for the contest. Qualifications include having a .600 or better winning percentage in dual meet records and placing in the top three of Association places. The top six places of each weight class are bestowed with All-American honors.

Two coaches, Don Elia and Dave Held, along with the eight grapplers will leave Maryville Tuesday, March 1, after practice and return from New York Sunday, March 6.

Wayne Dunn and Bob Valentine have been there before and know what it's like to be amidst fiery competition. While Dunn will face one returning All-American, Valentine must face 3 other returning All-Americans in his weight class.

Dunn stated, "There's a lot of confidence in coming in as an All-American and people are out to get you. You have to be confident and have it in your heart to win. I've been there before and know what it's all about."

Because of injuries two Maryville wrestlers, Bob Von Mitch and Mark Thedford will miss the Division III finals.

The 8 matmen representing Maryville this week are:

Tom Bonner, 118, third in Mid State Tournament; Ralph Melia, 126, second in Mid South Tournament; Ed Davalos, 142, third in Mid South Tournament; Steve Thedford,150, fourth in Washington and Lee Tournament; Everett Sayers, 158, third in Washington and Lee Tournament; Wayne Risko, 167, third in SEIWA last year; Wayne Dunn, 177, first in Mid-South, first in Washington and Lee Tournament (All-American). Bob Valentine, 190, first in Mid-South, third in SEIWA (All-American).

The 1976-77 tri-captains have been Wayne Risko, Wayne Dunn, and Bob Von Mitch.

And these guys wrestle? These seven wrestlers and one other left yesterday for the NCAA III Wrestling Championships.

Scots drop finale at Sawanee

by Robert Boone

Coach Bill Henry's Scots ended up with the short end of the rope 89—79 at Sewanee Friday, February 25, in basketball finale.

Maryville had a cold first half and shot only 42% from the field in the game.

After the first 4:00 the game was never really in doubt as Sewanee registered a 20 point 53—33 half-time lead. A hot-shooting first half and the dominant play of twins Larry and Harry Cash accounted for the Sewanee sprut. Sewanee's big men and hot outside shooting racked up points while Maryville could not not get their inside game going. Mark Stinnett's 12 points in the first half however kept Maryville within range.

A second half rally led by the tenacious play of senior Ty Limbaugh, (17 points and 11 rebounds,) almost made a comeback. Wayne Emme's jumper from 15 ft. cut the gap to 9 points with 6:00 remaining but Maryville could not maintain the short lived momentum.

At this point Emme was called for two charging fouls and fouled out. Not much later Wade Edmund was ejected from the playing floor and pointsman Joe Beals left with a re-injured knee. Sewanee continued to build its lead and held on for the decision as Maryville dropped to 4—20.

Emme's 18, Stinnett's 18, and Edmund's 14 paced Maryville in scoring. Sophomore Paul Green saw considerable action and played well for the Scots. Every player who made the trip saw action as the Scots concluded the 1976-77 season.

Lady Scots have winning season

by Robert Boone

Coach Sharon Brown's Lady Scots assured themselves of a winning regular season Saturday by triumphing over Morristown College 59—49 in their final game of the season.

The squad's record is 11—10.

Maryville jumped out to a 30—20 half-time lead as Kaplan and Youngs consistently hit from the outside to lead Maryville's first half show. High scoring Sharon Youngs hit 14 of her 22 points in the first half to boost Maryville.

A second half rally by the Lady Knights cut Maryville's lead to 47—46 with 4:00 remaining in the game. Had Maryville cashed in on more of their missed lay-ups the victory would have been easier. But the Scots came through when it counted.

Led by Chris Curran and Youngs, the Lady Scots controlled the tempo of the game as time ticked away. Youngs hit two free throws and followed with a big bucket to give Maryville a 51—46 edge with 2:57 showing on the clock. Another 10 footer by Youngs provided more breathing room as Maryville led 53—47, while time ran out for Morristown.

The one-two punch of Curran and Youngs guided the Scots to final victory.

Baseball team continues practice

by Robert Boone

Baseball season is just around the corner and Maryville College is optimistic about the upcoming season which begins March 22 at Tusculum. March 28 the Scots open their home season with Ohio University.

Coach "Geech" Stinnett has had prospective players practicing for three weeks, while his pitchers have been working out for four weeks.

Thirty players are out for this year's squad and ten of those are pitchers including senior returnees: Danny Thomas and Kevin McKinstry. Other seniors are Joe Moffett, Paul Bailey, Vince Fucci, Johnny Walker, Wayne Risko, and Ken Hanna.

Aiding Thomas and McKinstry on the mound will be two sophomore trans-

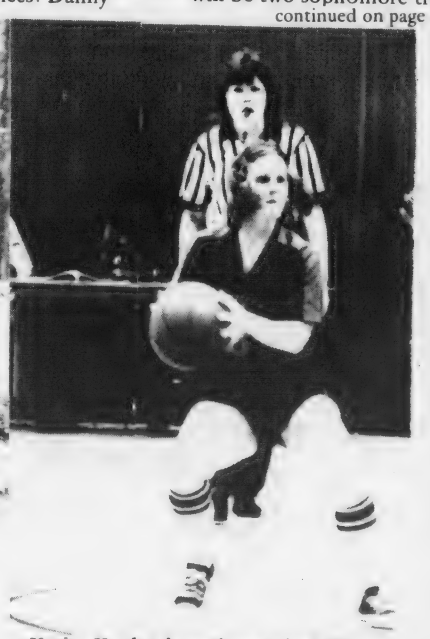
Thinclads prepare for season

The track team, under the direction of Dick Taylor, looks forward to a rewarding season.

The schedule includes 10 meets plus the National Championships on May 26. According to Coach Taylor, the squad is almost double the size of last year's and holds some promising talent and attitudes.

Taylor will rely on Steve Harrison (100 yd. dash), Tom Duling (discus), (both of whom hold school records), Bill Straher (middle distance), and Joe Whitehead (long distance), as well as a number of freshman this year.

The Scots open their season March 28 at Emory and Henry. Their first home meet will be played at Maryville Junior High, which will be on April 18 when they host Mars Hill.



The thinclads have already started individual training, competing with several schools in the Tennessee Invitation on February 18.

Members who participated and their events were Jim Richard (long jump and 880 yd. run), Gabe Thorpe, Terry Gardner, Pete Gardzina, and Dan Murphy (mile relay).

Dan Murphy (600 yd. run) ran a 11:18.4 and took first in his heat and placed sixth in a field of 35 runners.

Head Coach Bill Henry has 36 games scheduled and is working for some more. His squad comes back from spring break with 6 away games scheduled for the first week of spring term. The Scots will sport new uniforms as an addition to the upcoming season this year.

called the budget a "loss of respect and faith in higher education" by Carter and expects it will have "catastrophic effects."

"Catastrophe" and "disaster" are not endorsements by any means. The American Council on Education said in a Feb. 4 memo:

"The results as we have them, are disastrous: signaling an apparent reversal of the federal commitment to expansion of educational opportunities by endorsing some of the worst Nixon-Ford cuts which Congress has repeatedly rejected and by ignoring the Democratic Platform pledge to fund the campus-based student aid programs.

"The recommendations also make a mockery of Secretary Califano's stated desire to provide relief from the costs of higher education for middle-class families . . ."

The solution to the cuts may lie in lobbying efforts by the students themselves. Says the Minnesota Daily at the University of Minnesota,

"Since Congress may be more reluctant to overturn a Democrat's budget, lobbying from the nation's colleges will be needed more than ever to save the futures of students who need federal money to attend college."

$150, about one eighth of the magazine's total cost, will be approved.

The staff will soon decide on the magazine's size. It will be either 7" by 8½" or 8½" by 11".

After all entries have been submitted, an editorial board will select the ones which have sufficient merit to be included in the magazine. As the selection will be based solely on the work's quality, writers' names will not be known to the editorial board.

The editorial board consists of Adrienne Bennett, Kathy Dunmire, Bonnie Holsinger, Tim Rahn, Ricky Smith, and Debbie Welch.

committee members "were pleased with the work Tim had done," describing him as "a very dependable person who had improved the paper," but felt it important "to give the opportunity to someone else."

Gilmore went on to say that Committee members are hoping more people with journalistic experience will be interested in applying for the editorship in future years.

She also told of the Committee's plans to supervise the new editors by working with their faculty advisor. Gilmore says the new editors are still in the process of locating an advisor, and plan to announce one within a week.

Ladyscots, cont.

Youngs pumped through 22 points and had 9 rebounds while Chris Curran hit 12 points and grabbed 16 rebounds. Kathy Kaplan added 10 points to the total.

As a whole the team hit 39% from the field and compiled 41 rebounds. Coach Brown's squad will see action next in a state Tournament March 3—5 to be played at an announced site.

variety of techniques to improve reading speed, comprehension, study techniques, examination preparation, and vocabulary development. The course is designed to assist students in improving reading efficiency while providing an opportunity for greater success through reading.

Registration for the course will be in the Registrar's Office during the Spring Vacation and starting on March 24. Cost will be $30.

A view of the temporary of Overlook, Blount County's Mental Health Center, formerly the Lamar Hospital.

Overlook uses old infirmary

The old infirmary is in use again—this time as the temporary offices of Overlook, Blount County's Mental Health Center.

The building is being rented by the college for a period of six to eight months, depending on when Overlook's permanent offices are ready for use. According to Neil McDade, administrative vice-president of Maryville College, the rental is part of the college's attempt to put its vacant buildings to good use.

McDade also added that although there are no long-range plans for the old infirmary, the college would like to continue using it after Overlook moves its offices.

Bob Netherland, co-ordinator of Overlook, told the Echo that the Blount County Mental Health Center is part of a larger network for this area with headquarters at Lakeshore in Knoxville, formerly known as Eastern State Psychiatric Hospital.

Although Overlook has been in Maryville a year, it is only beginning to acquire the staff it needs. Soon it will offer counseling for a wide range of emotional problems, as well as helping children, the elderly, and those with drug and alcohol problems. It also offers follow-up care for

In addition to coordinating the Menninger Foundation School of Psychiatry and interdisciplinary studies program, Pruyser has directed the education department and served as a clinical psychologist since 1956. He is a fellow of the American Psychological Association and past president of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.

A native of Holland, Pruyser has studied at the University of Amsterdam. He earned his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Boston University in 1953.

His speech will be delivered later at the award-winning Cole Lecture series at Vanderbilt University.

ACC discusses 'Echo,' continuity

The All College Council considered a proposal about the editorship of The Highland Echo, discussed the continuity of Council membership, and formed two ad hoc committees in regular session on Wednesday.

The Council heard a proposal from Keith Frederick, representing a group of concerned people on campus asking that the recent decision to change the editorship of the Highland Echo be reviewed. The proposal asked that the review be made keeping in mind the importance of the continuity of the ECHO.

The proposal read in part: "In light of the fact that this year will be a transition year for the offices of Dean of Students and President, it would seem that continuity would be extremely important in the coverage by The Highland Echo."

After discussion, and consultation with members of the Communications Com-

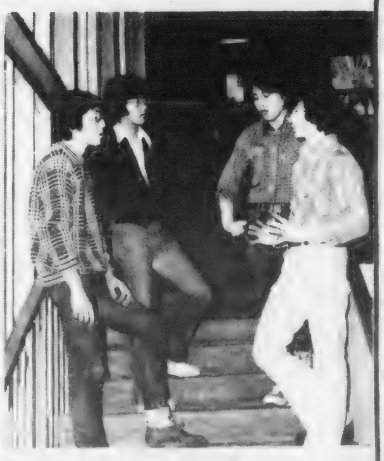
Dewhirst bound for Tokyo next week

by Veronica Sawdon

Inviting twelve Japanese students to Maryville College was a step that fulfilled one half of the East-West Foundation's purpose. The organization, situated in Atlanta, aids Japanese students who are interested in pursuing their college work in American colleges and universities.

Later this month, junior Jim Dewhirst will travel to Japan where he will serve from April to July as the first student assistant representative for the Atlanta-based Foundation.



While in Japan, Jim will work in the Inzai public schools near Tokyo where he will teach English as a second language to junior and senior high school students. As he does not speak Japanese, Jim will concentrate on Conversational English designed to enhance the students' understanding of the spoken English word. As Jim puts it, "I'll help them with the English language, and they'll show me Japan."

Although the experience will be new and include much responsibility, Jim seems confident. "On the one hand I'm afraid, and on the other it'll be a challenge. I'm looking forward to it."

In addition to his teaching duties, Jim will act as liaison to some 250 Japanese students who will travel to America in July to participate in the Foundation's orientation program, held in advance of their enrolling in 37 U. S. schools next fall. Jim will meet with them in Japan during his stay there and will accompany them to the states early in July.

Dr. George Kramer, dean of student relations and coordinator for the Foundation on the Maryville College campus, stated, "Maryville College will be watching this initial endeavor in Japan closely and assessing its effectiveness so that, hopefully, we can provide this kind of opportunity for more of our students during the next several years."

Jim's experience in Japan should be helpful in extending the College's relations with the East-West Foundation in the future, and may prove a doorway from Maryville to Japan through which many may pass.

Tuition increases to hit hard

by Steve Lemken

(CPS)—In the wake of the announcement of Carter's budget for higher education which slashed campus-based student aid by $582 million and reduced the number of awards available by 885,000, the nation-wide tuition increases are hitting students like a funeral hits the closest of kin. Students are going to have to dig harder and deeper for the cash or many may have to quit until, or unless, funds become accessible.

Up in the Big Sky country of Montana, non-resident tuition fees were upped $400 while residents will have to pay one dollar more for each quarter hour of credit. At the University of Montana, the non-resident student will be paying $1,921 and many of them will be hard-pressed to come up with the additional funds.

Many of the students polled by the campus newspaper felt that it was unfair that the non-resident fees were increased so much more than resident fees.

Tuition hikes across the country range from six to 20 percent. Many reasons are cited for these actions, but the prevailing cause is that maintenance, fuel costs and salaries for faculty and other employes have skyrocketed, with university officials holding little hope for relief. Contractual agreements at many schools, combined with an unwillingness at the state and federal level to loosen the cash flow to higher education leave administrators trudging a familiar road looking for funds. The costs are, quite simply, being passed on to the students.

At the University of Chicago an eight percent increase has been recommended, which would be, in tuition costs, an additional $100 over this year's fee of $3,527. The suggestions for that school's budget also include a further reduction of faculty.

Stanford University in California will increase tuition to $4,695 with basic room and board charges upped to $1,970. This represents an overall increase of nearly 10 percent.

Williams College in Massachusetts says its operating costs will climb from $17.5 million this year to about $18.3 million next year. Students there will probably see a 7.7 percent hike which totals $5,955 for 1977-78. The added fees are expected to be used for faculty salaries and scholarships.

Pennsylvanian students have been told that the governor's budget will be an austere one and they face a $50—$100 increase in the Work applications must be filed

Work applications for the next school year are now available in the Financial Aid Office. All student workers must reapply for jobs for 1977-78.

It is especially important that all interested in work in the College Library file applications right away. The Financial Aid Offices asks that you try to do this before you leave for spring break.

The Director of Financial Aid, William A. Ribble, also wishes to remind students that the Parents' Confidential Statement and the application for the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant must be resubmitted for each academic year. No financial assistance is automatically continued from one school year to the next.

"Oh Prudence, won't they ever leave us alone?"

To give aspiring photographers a chance to learn camera and darkroom skills, Maryville College Chaplain Jim Stewart has organized a photography class to be offered under Art 303 (Advanced Studio).

Entitled "Image Design through Photography," it will be taught, like other advanced studio courses, over two terms, beginning in the spring and continuing through the fall term. Those wanting to take the course should sign up with the Registrar, pay a $25.00 studio fee for darkroom chemicals, and plan to meet Mondays and Thursdays at E hour.

A student must have a camera and be prepared to buy film and developing paper. The camera need not be anything special, though Chaplain Stewart says, "Instamatics are out!" The shutter speed and lens opening must be adjustable.

Stewart has designed this course for any student interested in learning new skills, but he especially recommends it for those planning to be artists. The course will help students visualize design and composition as they prepare a portfolio of pictures taken for evaluation by future employers.

Stewart's experience with photography began in New York City where he was a commercial photographer. For the past eleven years he has done creative, technical, and commercial photography on his own. He taught photography in Beruit, and his most recent teaching experience was at Maryville College last Interim.

As a goal for this course, Stewart wants to "develop the concept of design, in the fullest sense of the word." But, he said, "a student may work at his or her own level." Thus both beginners and old hands will have a chance to develop new skills and smoothe out rough techniques, as well as develop a sense of composition, balance, and design.

Three Great Decisions made

The Maryville College chapter of the nationwide Great Decisions program has to date discussed and taken stands on three topics of worldwide concern: the Spread of Deadly Weapons (both nuclear and conventional), Southern Africa, and the Middle-East cauldron of problems between Arab and Israeli powers.

Organized by the Community Outreach Committee, the 25 participants, including students, faculty, and townspeople, are divided into three groups of eight to fifteen. The groups study and discuss assigned topics and fill out ballots that are sent, along with thousands of ballots from across the country, to Columbia University for tabulation. The results are forwarded to members of Congress and the Carter Administration.

Dr. Harry Price, co-chairman of the program, calls Great Decisions "a self-teaching operation," pointing out that groups read about ten pages of factual information on each subject. He commented on the set-up which makes "students' opinions just as important as faculty or townspeople's views."

Views that group members have clearly supported are that the United States should *ban sales of conventional weapons to all foreign nations, except when the President and Congress find it in the national interest to do so;

*control nuclear weapons and nuclear power by

1. giving first place in the foreign policy agenda to controlling the spread of these weapons,
2. banning the sale on nuclear technology and fuel to non-nuclear weapons nations,
3. concentrating on developing nonnuclear energy sources, even if it means a slower growth rate for the United States;

*continue mediation directed towards a black majority rule of Rhodesia, without becoming militarily involved;

*sever political and economic ties with South Africa until it abandons apertheid, and continue to exert diplomatic leverage to secure Namibia's independence from South Africa.

Views on the Middle East situation were more divided and uncertain, with the majority feeling that the United States should *use diplomatic influence to maintain peace in Lebanon, and be willing to serve as mediator if asked by the major parties involved;

*encourage Arabs and Israelis to reach a settlement in direct negotiations, be willing to act as mediator, and move to reconvene the Geneva conference.

The groups, which welcome visitors, meet in the Library fiction room at 7:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 4:00 p.m. Thursdays and in the Fine Arts Center lounge at 4:00 p.m. on Thursdays.

"Playmates seem to come out of the woods"

by Julie Adams

The ten children who live on the Maryville College campus provide a refreshing sight. After students spend a harrowing day in classes with noses in books, it is fun to see Fred Stewart barreling down the sidewalk on his little bicycle.

"I like living on campus," says Fred, as he bounces his tennis ball back and forth on Pearson's patio. And the older students like having him around. He throws his ball at the dogs and says, "I don't have a dog, but I like to play with these dogs."

What else does Fred do with his time? "I go to drama class over there," he explains, pointing toward the Fine Arts Preparatory School. "Now we're learning up these big words and then we're going to do a play."

Fred, seven, also goes to Fort Craig Elementary School. Babs McGuire and the Young children are his campus playmates.

Fred's sister, Caroline, is thirteen and attends Maryville Junior High. Both children are quite independent and walk or bike to school alone.

"It's a fantastic opportunity for them," says their father, Jim Stewart. Fred and Caroline use the pool, library, and make friends with the college students. Caroline's college friends " . . . give her a whole extra set of adult models," says Stewart.

The Stewart kids, who lived in an urban situation in Beirut, have not felt isolated at House-in-the-Woods. Stewart says, "They're conscious of what goes on in the woods and of ecology." They find plenty of playmates off campus as well as on. Stewart's only anxiety is the several large, stray dogs on campus.

Stewart has a positive feeling about his family's frequent moves. "Kids that have been exposed to many places can make it just about anywhere," he claims.

Another family residing in the college woods, in the guest house, is Mr. and Mrs. Pete Thompson, comptroller, and their two sons. Mark, twelve, goes to Maryville Junior High. What does Mark do on campus? "Everything I can!" he explains. He enjoys racquetball, basketball, track, and swimming.

Wynndel Thompson, fifteen, uses the gym, library, science building, and theatre. "I'm interested in drama and creative writing," says Wynndel, who had a part in The Master Builder.

"I like it here. We have access to a lot of facilities that we wouldn't ordinarily have," points out Wynndel. He attends Maryville High School.

Mark and Wynndel's mother is glad to be rearing her sons here. "It's great," she says. "I wish we'd been here since they were small. Everything they need is here."

Mrs. Thompson says that the boys are not secluded from playmates, as one might expect on a college campus.

"Friends come home from school with them, and there are kids on Court Street to play with," she states. "The college kids are nice to them, too. They help them in the pool and racquetball courts. I think Dr. Anderson's children would like living on campus—playmates seem to come out of the woods."

One of the most popular young women in Dorm III is Babs McGuire. Babs, who just had her eighth birthday, is in second grade at Fort Craig. She keeps busy with an art class at the Prep School and roller-skating with her family. She finds plenty of playmates, including Laura and Emily Young, Fred Stewart, and friends from school. Her Siamese cat, Kitty, is a part of her family, but Babs also wants a brother or sister.

Bab's father, Rick McGuire, head resident of Dorm III, says, "She seems to enjoy the fellows. She'll pick out a favorite every few weeks." The only problem with dorm life is the noise at night that keeps Babs awake. Rick also says, "It's hard for her to share her parents with 100 brothers."

Willard House, beside Davis Dorm, was formerly a lonely house until the David Youngs and their five children moved in last September.

The two oldest, Nancy, fifteen, and David, twelve, both go to Maryville Junior High School. As David climbs dripping from the college pool, he says he likes using the school's facilities. "I come to the gym on weekends and play basketball," he says.

David serves the soccer club as ball boy. His other activities include model rockets and a paper route. Nancy plays flute and piano, and eight-year-old Laura takes piano lessons at the Prep School. Emily, age five, goes to St. Andrew's Nursery School and helps her mother take care of Cameron, age two.

"They've lived on this campus all their lives," says Mrs. Young. "Since we don't have a neighborhood, there aren't many other children nearby."

David says that he does not mind living in the midst of dormitories. However, he says, "I liked living in the woods better."

Mrs. Young says, "The kids don't have much contact with the college students unless they come to the house. The college kids act like they haven't been around children in awhile—that's a drawback of being away at college."

Emily sometimes plays with sophomore Eleanor Palm, who lived in Willard house when she was a child. Shy Emily indicated with nods and pretty smiles that she likes living at Maryville College.

The Maryville campus is fortunate to add age to its list of diversities. And any place is fortunate to have around the bright faces of our youngest generation.

A question of quality

The 'Echo' still does not know "Why?"

At the March 9 meeting of the Maryville All-College Council, it was proposed that the ACC recommend a review of a recent Communications Committee decision. This decision concerned the selection of new editors for the 1977-78 Highland Echo.

If clarifying the criteria used in the recent selection was the purpose of bringing this issue before the ACC, it is the opinion of the present Echo staff that the discussion was a miserable failure.

Now more confusion than before surrounds the guidelines used by the Communications Committee in making this decision. Committee chairperson Vera Gilmore was quoted in last week's Echo as saying that the Committee felt it important "to give the opportunity to someone else." However, Gilmore stated before the ACC that this was not the overriding reason in making the choice. Unfortunately, it was never brought out at the March 9 meeting what the criteria in making this decision actually entailed.

Admittedly, the Communications Committee spent a great deal of time in making its choice; however, doubts remain as to how that decision was made. Perhaps if the reasons for the choice were made known these doubts could be erased.

Retaining continuity in campus publications should have been an important factor in making this decision. Communications Committee members at the ACC meeting suggested that continuity would still exist, saying that the present Echo staff could easily shift to working for the new editors. But one major reason makes difficult at best the retention of any such continuity.

Granted, this year's Echo staff thinks of Tim Rahn as an excellent editor, but that is not the reason why we doubt there will be continuity. We are loyal but not elitist; the Echo is not a closed group. Three members have, in fact, been added in the last month.

But the twenty staff members who are very much interested in what happens on the Echo cannot be expected to rejoice over having our work rejected without reason. And when such a decision is made with no concrete reason given, we can only assume that our work has either gone unnoticed or been considered unimportant.

Thus, far from thinking we are a "special society the Echo staff cannot see that the Communications Committee considered our abilities at the time of decision, and now, when called to task, are not giving reasons for their rejection. Having spent a year working unceasingly for journalistic results of the highest order, how can we be expected to continue after that kind of treatment? We think we have done a good job, and are now being sent to work for new people without being told why.

Stardate: As the curtain closes?

An editor's thought dream seen

It is difficult to measure success. It is even more difficult to measure that same success in light (or darkness) of failure. But the time has come (or is quickly coming) when I must lay claim to all things visible and let dreams remain dreams.

Life teaches us many things. I have found respect, love, friendship, and responsibility to be chief among these things. Each seemingly pushes the other; one or another is always struggling for prominence , yet in the mind, honest confrontation places an equal value on each.

Charlie Craven and Ed Loper

It is no small task to put these last ten days in perspective. During this time my values and sense of reason have been put to a severe and often excruciating test. I know—somehow—that my time as editor may be up. When all avenues and approaches for a review of the Communications Committee decision are closed, then I will relinquish my duties as editor.

Yet this is not the important thing now. What is important is what kind of an effect the editorship of the Echo has had on me. There must be some point of departure, an epilogue before the curtain has closed. Whether this is it or not I do not know.

I am quite sure that being editor had little negative effect on me—instead it has strengthened the values I hold so dear. I have no quarrels with the administration, no bones to pick with the faculty, and I have even become slightly sympathetic to the apathy of my fellow students.

Yet I have experienced some phenomenal growth within myself these last twelve months. This is the accellerated growth towards the understanding of friendship and what values are all about.

So it is with no bitterness that I can review this past year and honestly tell the campus community what this Echo has been all about. It has not been just Tim Rahn's paper either. Anybody who thinks that is the case has not followed this paper over the last year.

The Echo stands as a tribute to the 35 or more strong willed people who at one time or another saw the same goal as I saw. Various places along the way people have

To the Editor:

In last week's Echo Charlie Craven wrote a letter to the editor concerning the Communications Committee's decision. I found this letter very well written and to the point. But I found myself explaining to at least ten different people that he was not finding fault with Dr. Walker. Indeed, no person on campus respects this lady more than Mr. Craven. I believe these errors were made by people who only read half-way and drew instant conclusions without finishing the letter.

Granted, the letter was written as satire, but no one reading it in its entirety could miss the point. Mr. Craven's gripe is not with history professors, old age, or any of a host of topics that people thought he was writing about.

His point, a valid one, lies in the question: Is the purpose of a newspaper to provide an educational experience, or is it to give the campus community an effective voice? In other words, is the Highland Echo to be a good paper journalistically, or strictly the means for an education? Mr. Craven stands on the ground that it should be a good journalistic paper, not just an education for the editor. Good point, Charlie, I agree.

In order that there be no more misunderstanding of his letter, or mine, let me emphasize what Mr. Craven is saying from a slightly different standpoint. The editor is paid half tuition. This money, plus the money to publish the paper, comes out of the students' pockets. It boils down to this: I don't mind paying for a good paper, but why should I pay for either Tim Rahn's or Bill Gannon's education? If I am paying the editor for doing a good job, that's OK. If on the other hand I am paying for his education, then I grossly object.

Five chosen for honor society

Five Maryville College seniors were elected members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Scholarship Society last February 11. They are Sheri Mai Bone—Recreation, Mary Weiler Gundlach—Biology, Linda Grey Savage—Art, Linda Louise Stritter—Elementary Education, and Mary Catherine Williamson—English.

These five will participate in the election of six additional members. All eleven will be formally inducted into the Society at a special Community Issues and Values program in April.

Alpha Gamma Sigma, established at Maryville College in 1934, has similar membership requirements to Phi Beta Kappa, the oldest national scholastic honor society. To be a member a student must have at least a 3.33 grade point average and be a senior by the beginning of winter term. Only ten percent of a graduating class can be elected in an academic year. Up to two juniors of exceptional ability may be elected by a unanimous vote of the active membership.

What college means in dollars and census

(CPS)—Confirming well-established patterns with new information, the U. S. Census produced a new study showing that median family income is highest among families in which the head had four years or more of college.

The report, available from the U. S. Government Printing Office in Washington, D. C., makes the following observations:

Four years or more of college will yield a median income of $21,961;

One to three years of college will yield a median income of $16,579;

High school graduates can expect to earn an average of $14,729;

People with eight or fewer years of school will probably make a mere $8,472.

Bender: society must make genetic decisions

by David Boyd

"There is no right decision or wrong decision. It's a right decision if you make it and you're willing to live with it; it's a wrong decision if you're going to make it and you're not willing to live with it."

This was Harvey Bender's response to a query, in an interview with the Echo last Wednesday. Bender was speaking about his faith in people to make the right decision when confronted with a genetic disorder.

Bender, a geneticist from Notre Dame, was on campus to present a Community Issues and Values Program. He also addressed the campus through several seminars throughout the day. Bender highlighted several issues that have been raised by modern genetics.

In an article to appear in the February issue of Notre Dame Magazine, Bender explains that genetics "is a very young discipline, a child of the 20th century seeded in a 19th century garden plot." He goes on to say that only in recent years has man learned significantly about how genes function and undergo modification.

During the CIV, Bender pointed out that man does not play a passive role in his inheritance and in the future, man will play an even more active role. Man may then be able to change his own genetic material and modify the environment in which a gene functions, thereby affecting the expression of that gene.

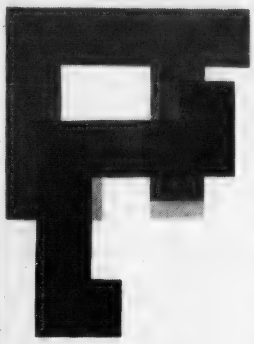
Bender emphasized that man is actively involved in both modifying his genes and in manipulating the environment. Man's genes, he says, are being affected by exposure to radiation, primarily to x-rays, and by increased pollutants and pesticides in the environment, and drugs.

Bender stated that man is now effectively modifying the environment in which a gene functions. This modification is used in treating diabetes, glactosemia, and several other genetic diseases.

Through these modifications, with the improved medical technology that they bring, man has upset the balance of harmful genes within the gene pool. Bender asserted that this problem poses a real threat and that we are now faced with the complex problem of what to do.

Proposing three alternative solutions to the problem, Bender first explained eugenics and its implications, such as who would be the person or group of people to decide which traits were desirable which were not.

Negative eugenics was the second alternative Bender discussed. He stated that this technique was more readily acceptable because people could generally agree on which traits were undesirable more often than on desirable traits. Yet, Bender pointed out that this technique involves sterilization, a method of control that is not acceptable.



Harvey Bender in a seminar with students two weeks ago yesterday. Bender, a geneticist, spent a full day on the MC campus and delivered the CIV program in the morning.

Thirdly, Bender discussed genetic surgery which seeks to correct genetic disorders by physically altering the gene itself. The research involved with development of this technique employes the use of Recombinant DNA and has aroused considerable controversy.

In the article from Notre Dame Magazine, Bender stresses as he did in the CIV that research will have to continue if we are to learn how to modify genetic information. Yet, the threat of producing a lethal organism which could prove extremely harmful to man exists; thus Bender thinks that this factor to should enter into a decision about further research.

Bender concluded his program with several personal opinions concerning the implications of modern genetics. He stated that man has come to depend more and more on intellect and technology, and that coupled with nature, "man's explosive ability to change his environment may offer as much threat as promise."

Finally Bender stated that if there was intelligent life on earth and if this life was man then "he should be able to replace the blind force of natural selection by conscious direction, based on knowledge of nature and based on his own values."

Lascaux show inspiring and enlightening

by Joel Flint

Lascaux's art show last week was inspiring for a student's ambition and initiative. It was good to see the art majors on the Maryville College campus present their work for critique. And it is an enlightenment that the college community be able to see what the art majors are doing.

The artists themselves should derive inspiration and an open mind after viewing a show such as last week's. By viewing other's work, students are able to broaden their creative mind.

Nancy Millner

The theme of the show was "The Birth of the Artist Association." For the opening, the artists modeled very original costumes. The costumes, like those worn by Greg Rodgers (a diaper) and Elaine Parker (a baseball uniform) gave the artists and the show a cohesiveness and levity.

The art itself showed the variety of interests in different medium, together with a diversity in skill and technical ability. As awhole the arrangement of the gallery was well balanced, and effectively displayed the works.

I object, however, to the unprofessional attitude in the presentation of several works. This distracts from the overall show where other students took the time to present their work in a professional way. This attitude is a disgrace to their works.

The show was at a disadvantage displaying mostly large works; this meant that some students were not represented. Jewelry and other similar works of art could not be shown due to a lack of a suitable display area and adequate security.

Despite any quibbles one may have with the show, the artists should be commended for both their ambition and their efforts in improving the arts atmosphere on campus.

Talk it over with yourself

(CPS)—Do you think you're crazy because you've been talking to yourself lately?

According to a new book called The Selves Inside You (Exploration Institute) talking to yourself correctly may enhance your control of your life as well as your mental health.

The book's authors, Stewart B. Shapiro of the University of California at Santa Barbara and James Elliott of Berkeley, suggest that people identify and get to know their inner voices, and then act as moderators in ensuing dialogues.

"This form of self-talk enables us to become accurate observers of ourselves and others, and to begin taking charge of our transactions instead of merely being victimized by them," claim the authors. They continue that "guided self-help talk can distinguish between irrational self-torture coming from old, out-worn and inappropriate morality versus the voices of one's ideals and constructive moral standards."

Track to start March 21

All students planning on participating in track during the '77 season should report to the physical education building at 4:00 p.m., Monday, March 21, for an organizational meeting and work-out.

Anyone interested in the track equipment manager's position should see Coach Dick Taylor as soon as possible.

fall. Students were also warned that there will be less educational assistance money which is usually increased whenever tuition is increased. A director of the statewide student association said that the tuition increase "is no service increase" and that it is only an attempt to maintain the present situation. Officials fear that enments will drop, adding to the current anticipated lack of resources.

In Ohio, students may get an increase even though the governor has included in his budget an increase to state-supported colleges and universities. Added costs due to the severe weather this winter are making college officials and state representatives skeptical as to whether or not the budget is adequate.

In at least one area students are gearing up to fight back at attempts to hike tuition. In Oregon, lobbyists from the Oregon Student Lobby (OSL) are vying for a six percent decrease while the state's Educational Coordinating Board recommends a six percent increase. The student lobby is calling for the decrease to bring the cost of higher education in Oregon more in line with the national average.

Kirby Garrett, coordinator for the OSL, said that since 1969, Oregon educational costs have increased 66 percent, while the national higher ed price index increased 55 percent. Yet, Kirby points out, student instruction fees (tuition) has increased 83 percent and he considers that an unfair proportion. The OSL Board of Commissioners has also recommended a tuition freeze on resident graduates and non-resident undergraduate fees.

Garret is optimistic about the goals of the OSL. He said the students are concerned and supportive. The OSL is beginning a grass-roots campaign to inform students and urge them to write and phone as part of a coordinated lobby effort.

But again, as always, students have little say in the budget recommendations of most state legislatures. Higher education is usually considered a frill, and with the taxpayers breathing down their necks for less spending, there is a tendency to start the trimming at the colleges first.

Lady Scots place third

Coach Sharon Brown's Women Scots ended a Successful season March 3, 4, and 5 by finishing third in the State Tournament in their Non-AIAW Division.

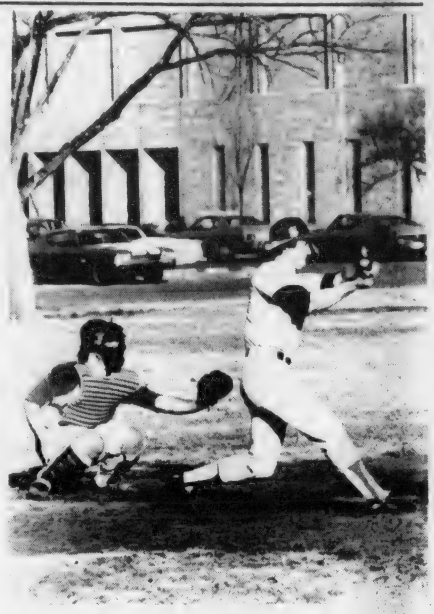
Adding the Tournament record to Maryville's regular season record gives the Lady Scots a winning campaign of 14—12.

"It's been a great season for us. A lot of people thought we wouldn't have a winning season. The girls deserve a lot of the credit. They came back and won our last four games." Coach Brown said.

In tournament action Maryville won its opener with LMU 60—44 but was nipped by Tusculum the same afternoon 49—44. Things looked good for the Lady Scots with 10:00 remaining because three of Tusculum's starters had four fouls. But they failed to draw the necessary fouls. Sharon Youngs with 26 and Libby Lowry with 14 led Maryville's offense to the opening victory over LMU.

Against Tusculum it was the combination of Youngs 17 and Curran's 10 points along with Lowry's 15 grabs from the boards which sparked the Maryville effort.

The Lady Scots battled through the losers bracket and crushed Knoxville College 82—53 and later Southwestern at Memphis 69—48 in an afternoon affair.



The excellent play of Sharon Youngs, 46 points and 25 rebounds, was a big decisive factor in Maryville's two wins. Lowry added a total of 27 rebounds and Joel Campbell, 18 points, and Karen Burkhart, 14 points, were other high scorers.

To decide second place Maryville took on Tusculum in the finals of the Losers bracket but lost 74—46. Too many floor errors, insufficient rebounding, and mounting fatigue were evident. Consequently Maryville had to settle for third place. Chris Curran and Youngs hit 12 and 11 points for Maryville.

Brown stated that Sandy

Henry: we could be better

Monday, March 7, was Bill Henry's first experience encounter as Maryville College baseball coach as he stepped out to watch his Scots scrimmage Hiawassee of Madisonville.

Coach Bill Henry learned a lot from Monday's scrimmage with the neighboring Hiwassee team even though the outcome of the game was not important. Hiwassee put across more runs than Maryville, but Henry got a quick look at almost all of his players. "I have a good idea of who can best play which position now," stated Henry.

"I know right now we're not nearly as good a team as everybody says we are. We can be good and after today we know how hard we've got to work to get there."

The team has plenty of experience and returns almost every player from last year's roster which narrowly missed the Division III play-offs by a single game.

That includes three baseballers selected for 1976 NCAA honors. Vince Fucci, junior second baseman, was selected to the NCAA's third team All-America squad. Danny Thomas, also a junior, and Dave Greenawalt, a sophomore, were selected as All-Division players.

Coaches Henry and Stinnett will be hard at work preparing the Scots for a successful season. Hard work and plenty of ambition is a must for the talented and experienced Scots who open their season March 22 at Tusculum.

Three grapplers nab honors

Wrestlers and coaches representing Maryville College returned with pride Sunday March 6 from the NCAA Division III Cahmpionships in Binghampton, N. Y.

Coach Don Elia was all smiles as his eight MC representatives captured tenth place with 37½ team points and three lucky grapplers nailed down the coveted title of NCAA Division III All-Americans. Maryville College's All-Americans are Wayne Dunn, Bob Valentine, and Ralph Melia.

Dunn (177 lbs.), a junior from Rockway, N. J., finished third and won All-American honors for the second consecutive year. Dunn stated, "I'm happy with how I did, but next year I think I can get first place. This year wasn't as hard as last year but the pressure was greater."

Valentine (190 lbs.), a sophomore also from Rockway, N. J., finished fourth and also repeated as an All-American. Both Valentine and Dunn attended the same high school and competed in the Jersey Hills Conference.

Valentine said, "I did it for Janet. It was good that we each pushed each other. I'm really happy that the team finished tenth but from here on it's all up hill." Half way there, Valentine has an excellent shot of four consecutive All-American honors.

Melia (126 lbs.), a sophomore from East Hanover, N. J., came through in the clutch and nabbed All-American honors with a fourth place finish. "Stump" was a pleasant surprise and added extra balance to Maryville's performance. Melia said, "It takes a lot of luck and work to get where we're at."

Competition was fierce as Dunn, Melia, and Valentine had eight matches within two days. Brackport State of New York and Humbolt State from California finished first and second respectively.

Rebuilding year for tennis

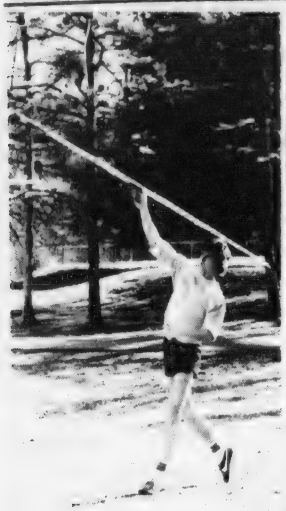
The 1977 Maryville College Intercollegiate Tennis team will be rebuilding this year and returns only three lettermen from last year's winning team.

Top seeds lost on both men

Maryville lost to graduation its three top seeded players Craig Larsen, Sutton Brown, and Mike Webster who competed in the National Championships last year.

Leading the team through the 1977 campaign will be three returning lettermen Scott Garren, George Reigelsperger and Joe Rigell. Curt Leonard, Jun Kasuya, Kevin Lynch, David Carrick, and Arlene Ignico round out the roster.

Compared to last year's 24 matches has only 10 matches scheduled this spring. Unfortunately there will be no Florida trip this year. Not going to Florida will hurt, because the team will miss the stiff competition and experience which has been profitable in the past.



Everyone has improved since last year but the top three seeds will indeed be missed. Upstart coach, Rick Byrd, will lead the netmen through the upcoming season.

and women teams

It will be a rebuilding year for the Lady Scots tennis team who lost two top seeded players, Betsy Bauer and Lisa Harawood, from last years 6—3 team.

Coached by Miss Sharon Brown, the girls began practice last week in preparation for an eight match season to begin spring term.

Presently, the top six seeds are: Lee Henderson, Debbie Ackerman, Kay Munn, Holly Eckert, Lea Adcock, and Lynn Rogers.

No, not all terms end this way. Two tracksters took time out Monday to show the Echo how things should not be done. Track season gets under way the first week of spring term.

Chambers and Margaret Fitch showed much improvement this year. Maryville loses three seniors: Pam Osborne, Sandy Chambers, and Captain Libby Lowry, who contributed fine leadership on and off the floor.

Maryville's leading performer and point producer, Sharon Youngs, was named to the All-Tournament team.

Recruiting will be Coach Brown's next concern as she looks ahead to next season.

In addition to keeping a portfolio of what has been created, the student will be expected to do some reading on design, composition, effective use of a camera, and other technical aspects of photography. The student will also learn to develop film and make prints. Stewart plans to have an exhibition of the best work done.

grin that "All three All-Americans are returning next year and that some younger guys could have done better. This year's national exposure will help them to be more competitive next year."

Coach Elia expressed a note of appreciation for the assistance from the Administrative Office, Athletic Director, faculty members and the 50 fans present. Thanks also goes to support of the student body. He hopes everyone will continue to support them in the nationals.

mittee, the Council decided that it would inappropriate to send back to the Committee the decision to change editorship. The decision was not in any apparent violation of the Committee's constitution or guidelines and was allowed to stand by consensus.

The proposal, however, did lead the council to ask the Communications Committee to review its procedure for selecting editors to insure the continuity and quality of student publications.

The Council then moved to a discussion of continuity of student and faculty staff members of the council. After initial discussion an ad hoc committee was formed to discuss the matter further. The members were Keith Frederick, Bill Dent, and Carolyn Blair.

A second ad hoc was formed to determine the participants of the Tennessee Intercollegiate Student Legislature this fall. Membership consists of Bob Ramger, Bonnie Holsinger and Deannea Kees.

No reports were heard from the areas of Religious Life, Social or Academic.

siderably to the initial successes of the Echo.

Janice West and Ruth Wilbnaks (who did not make it back to Maryville this year) have made the editorial section of the paper strong in both writing style and content. Veronica Sawdon, and before her Debbie Welch, coordinated the many features that have appeared within these pages.

When this staff began its term on the Echo, the business aspect of the paper had fallen. Through the work of Jim Dewhirst and Karen Amos the Echo has now begun to attract steady advertising again, and used the extra money to improve the physical facilities of the Echo.

Robert Boone has been the man behind the sports. In fact for the seocnd week in a row Robert has written the bulk of the sports on page seven. Assisting him in the past have been Dave Osborne and Jack Turregano. Between the three of them the sports coverage has become adequate to the demands of the college.

Finally, no paper can exist without a group of regular news writers—the back bone of the staff—to report the happenings in the college community. Julie Adams, Kathy Dunmire, Scott Denney, Bonnie Holsinger, and Toodles (Rose) Wing are the people who have reported regularly or when called on in a pinch. Alan Regenbrecht has done just about everything imaginable while on the staff—writing, folding, and distributing the Echo.

Others have written special stories for the Echo, these people cannot be forgotten but are too numerous to mention in this space. Like I said of Ed and Charlie, had it not been for these people there would be no Highland Echo as there is today. My deepest thanks goes to each of this staff.

And what can one say about a staff that has gone to the same limits as I, worked with the same values as I, and shared the same rewards and sorrows as I. So often this Echo seemed like such a grand thing that it was hard to believe that it would ever end—too hard in fact.

The majority of personal acknowledgements I need to make are elsewhere in this Echo. There are two people, however, who demand a special recognition not only for the time they have spent insuring the quality of the paper, but because they are genuine human beings.

Therefore, it is a rich tribute to both Ed Loper and Charlie Craven that this final Echo appears, for without their personal feelings towards journalism this Echo would not be what it is today.

Between the two of them I have learned a lot about values. Besides that I doubt that any other editor could find somebody to print pictures on a last minute notice as Ed has done. And I doubt that anyone would find a better historian of the Echo than Charlie. (The other things they have done are too numerous for this space.) My hat is off to them.

This Echo is dedicated to both Ed and Charlie and all the others who have made working on this paper such a rich and satisfying experience—they deserve the entire campus' applause and thanks.

I thank you,
Tim Rahn

Let the Army help you with college

Thousands of young people did.

In fact, last year there were over 200,000 enrollments in college courses, by people in the Army. They attended classes on post. They studied at nearby colleges and universities. And the Army paid for up to 75% of their tuition and fees.

Our educational benefits are in addition to the job training you'll receive, the salary you'll earn, and the travel opportunities you'll have.

If you'd like to find out more about all the educational benefits the Army has to offer, call your local Army Representative.

Vol. 62 No. 20 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | March 30, 1977

LAMAR MEMORIAL LIBRARY MARYVILLE COLLEGE MARYVILLE TENNESSEE MAR 31 1977

The 1977 Maryville College Concert Choir.

Harter's Charter Returns

It all began one rainy March afternoon after a hard day of classes, when the rest of the campus headed for the sunny shores of Florida. 43 students piled on a chartered bus nicknamed Harter's Charter and set off ready to sing their hearts out to audiences in five states east of the Mississippi. The first of 17 concerts was in the grand old state of Tennessee, followed by programs in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky. There were two types of concerts performed on tour, a program for church audiences consisting of mainly secular music and one for high school students including a choral selection from the popular musical Pippin.

The choir members stayed with families from the host churches in each community. The names were drawn from a hat, much like a raffle which meant that the student stayed with a different person or, in some cases, dif ferent people every night. Many members of the host congregation were alumni of Maryville College, therefore many interesting things were learned about "back in the Good old days" of the college.

The choir was followed by an expert panel of judges that rate each performance on a scale from 1 to 10. The choirs ratings ranged from a 9.3 to a 10+ at the concert in Norwood, Ohio. Each concert had its little flaws and mistakes, but only those the choir or Dr. Harter might notice.

After the program the choir stood outside the Norwood church and sang the Alma Mater ending with a 7 chorus Amen, then loaded on the bus for the last time and headed back to Maryville.

The bus finally arrived at Wilson Chapel at 4 a.m. on March 22 after a long and tiring bus ride. The choir piled out and sang the Alma Mater for the last time on their tour.

The Home Concert this past Sunday night (on March 27) marked the official end of the Maryville College Concert Choirs 1977 spring tour.

Thanks to the loyalty and support of the Maryville community and students on campus, the home concert was a great success.

Chilhowean: Better Late Than Never

The co-editors of the 1977 Chilhowean have announced that the college yearbook will appear in the fall, instead of in the usual May distribution date.

Last night the Chilhowean co-editors, Debbie Kees and Sophia Shoemaker, described to the Echo the main problems surrounding the late appearance of the annual and what is now needed to produce a yearbook.

Co-editor Kees, a senior Physical Education major from West Islip, New York, cited the late start she and her co-editor were given as the central problem the pair has had to cope with in the past several weeks.

Currently, the most serious problem plaguing the '77 Chilhowean editors is the lack of cooperation of their own class. Co-editor Shoemaker, a senior English major from Oneida, Tennessee, indicated how the cooperation of the senior class to get their individual pictures taken was the first priority of the annual staff.

Another problem facing the Pearson's-based co-editors is the lack of any additional staff people who are currently needed to do a variety of tasks. Any person interested in working on the Chilhow-

A.C.C. Run-off Friday

There will be a run-off election Friday, April 1, 1977 in Pearsons Dining Hall during lunch and dinner for the sophomores running for the Junior representatives to the ACC, and the Juniors running for the Senior class representative to the ACC and Co-Chairman of the ACC.

There were six petitions turned in from the Junior class. Thus, there will be a run-off to lower the number of candidates running in the final election to three or possibly four if there is a tie in third place. The six people who are running are Bonnie Holsinger, Jack Pearson, Tim Rahn, Lee Struble, Rose Wing, and Peter Xiques.

There were four petitions turned in from the Sophomore class. Hence, there will be a run-off here, too, since

Illustrious Passle of "Fools" to Grace MC Stage

Dr. Carolyn Blair heads up an impressive panel of judges for the 2nd annual April Fool's Concert entitled "Gonged With the Wind" to be presented Monday Night, April 4 at 9:00 P.M. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. Her cohorts on the panel are Mr. William Ribble, Director of Student Aid, Dr. Charlotte Beck of the English Department, and Tim Kelly, senior Business Administration Major. The show, modeled after Chuck Barris' GONG SHOW (WATE-TV 6—4:00 P.M., Monday—Friday) features a mixture of faculty and student foolishness which, according to all reports, must be seen to be believed. MC Charles Averill, theatre instructor of the Preparatory School, will present a "trophy" awarded by the panel of judges to the most foolish of the fools.

The Show is sponsored jointly by the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts and Delta Omicron. Admission is $2.00 for faculty and staff, and $1.00 for students with the proceeds going to the scholarship fund. Tickets on sale in Pearsons Dining Hall, in the FAC office, in the Preparatory School office and at the door.

Editorial: Settling In

This is the first issue of The Echo under its new co-editors. Our trial issue was judged by the Communications Committee. Now we expect it to be judged weekly by you, the Maryville College Community. Student evaluation of the paper and the new staff is in its beginning stages. We hope to either confirm your favorable opinion or improve The Echo through acknowledging your adverse opinions and working for possible change.

It is our desire to keep this paper as reflective of the campus community as possible. We intend to maintain as high a journalistic standard as possible, however, what good are these standards if the paper is not read by the students? We will cover the campus news we feel to be important as well as bringing you special features from all areas of the college community.

Everyone has an idea of what The Echo should do, what should be written, and how it should be written. If you find yourself dissatisfied with your paper and would like to work for change, we invite you to join our staff.

Throughout the coming year we hope to work with the campus community for change, whether that change be in regard to alcohol or some other issue or policy we feel needs looking into. This will be done through investigative reporting and editorials.

Naturally we will be making mistakes. You can help us by giving us your comments and your time. What do you want from your paper? We think that this is a question that is long overdue.

If we all put aside our differences, we can work together not only to bring you the news, but we can work for change which is so badly needed in areas of this college. Our main goal is to present as representative a paper as possible, involving as many people as possible, and staying on top of and informing you of the news effectively, keeping all avenues of change open.

Letters to the Editor...

The Chilhowean Staff made several attempts to have senior portraits taken. We have had very little response from seniors. It is now your turn. You must get in touch with one of the yearbook photobraphers to have it taken by April 8. If you do not have it taken by then, it can not be in the yearbook. Its designated pages will be filled with other pictures. We want all seniors to be in the yearbook, but need your cooperation. The photobraphers are: Carl Reardon, Joe Showalter, Joe Carnevale, Grant Bartelt, Stan McCleave. You may also submit your own black and white portrait if you wish. Please help us have a good yearbook.

Sincerely,
Debra Kees

Dear Students,

As an employee of Saga Foods, I would like to say, it has been a good year. I, personally, have enjoyed meeting so many of you while working at the sandwich bar. We have some of the best college students on campus that could be found anywhere.

Working with the students in the kitchen and dining hall has been a real treat. We find them to be cooperative and a fine group of young men and women. Without their help we wouldn't be able to run the kitchen and dining hall.

I would like to ask a favor of you. (Isn't that just like people, tell you all the good points before lowering the boom.) The favor is, Please put your food and paper in the right container as you take your tray to the dishroom. It is a mess to pick the paper, silver, plates and etc. out of the food scraps. We would certainly appreciate it, and I'm sure those ol' pigs would too. The farmer has to feed them alka-seltzer for their upset stomach. The silver is extremely hard to digest.

Thanks a bunch,
Peg (the sandwich lady)

note

Every student from Tennessee who qualifies for financial assistance of any kind should apply for a State grant for 1977-78. The maximum award is $1200 for the school year.

For the 1976-77 school year fifteen students at Maryville received the maximum award.

The deadline for applications is 15 May. We have a limited number of application blanks left in the Financial Aid Office.

only three candidates can run. The four students in the run-off are Lisa Cearalo, Alvin Nance, Chris Rigell, and Genie Varker.

There will be no run-off for the Freshmen running for the Sophomore representative to the ACC, since only two petitions were turned in and there is only one Sophomore representative to the council. The two candidates running for the position are Debbie Ealy and Annie Harris.

Remember only Sophomores and Juniors vote Friday in the run-off.

Donahay Undergoing Chemotherapy

Bette Anne Donahay, a senior math major, is undergoing chemotherapy at the Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, Florida following surgery last week. College staff and friends who have been in frequent contact with Bette and her family report that she is feeling much better and plans to participate in Commencement with her classmates. She would be happy to hear from her friends by telephone or through correspondence. The hospital telephone number is 305/325-7429 and upon request they will transfer the call to her room. Cards and letters may be sent to Bette's home address: 1370 NE 156 Street, North Miami Beach, Florida 33162.

Piersol's Interior with Plants

An exhibition of paintings and drawings by Dan Piersol, an instructor at Dayton Art Institute, is being held in the Fine Arts Center. The show opened March 21 and will remain open until this Friday April 1.

Mr. Piersol reflects the attitude of the early expressionist painters. He states,

"Purpose of Art: express feeling..."

"to me, the most worthwhile purpose of art is to express personal feeling."

The Fauves (early expressionists) tried to arrive at the emotional essence of the subject rather than the visual appearance. Mr. Piersol does present the essence of the 'ordinare' without a literal interpretation as can be found in the works of Cezanne. Like Matisse he uses patterned design to balance his compositions.

Distortion, another expressionistic quality, may be related with Matisse and Gaugain. Piersol's use of flat areas of cool, exaggerated , and complimentary coloring gives his work this flavor of Cezanne and Gaugain. The bold border line to separate patterns is also an expressionistic device.

Deviating from the expressionistic style, however, he paints a smooth canvass which is the reverse of the heavy textured canvass of a Van Gogh. The style of the Fauves was decorative, colorful, and spontaneous. They believed a painting was a success when the artist was able to communicate an emotion to the viewer.

In this light, Mr. Piersol's work may be a success. In certain technical areas, however, he begins to waver. In the painting Interior With Plants his use of color gives a nice flow and movement to the painting. Yet the lines of the window sill and broom handle lean to the left. This, complicated with the position of the sink and heavy foilage, creates a heavy corner and tends to lead the eye off of the canvass. This is evident in other works, as the leg pointing to the right hand corner of the Female Nude demonstrates.

I would like to thank the Preparatory School for the Arts and Michael Coster for bringing the Piersol exhibit to Maryville College. By this, we have been given another opportunity to broaden our perspective. I think it is worth the while for everyone on this campus to view this show and judge it according to his or her own understanding of art.

In viewing the overall show, I personally would like to see more of his work, especially his line drawings. Their simplicity is very appealing and also suggests an essence of an object.

The important aspect of the exhibition is that Daniel Piersol has achieved the freedom and spontaneity of the Fauves. With the improvement of the mentioned technical problems, Piersol could lift his work to a more accomplished level.

Dorm III: Life at the Zoo

As dorm parents of Dorm III, we realized that one of the strangest experiences that we have had was becoming accustomed to the silence in the dorm over this past spring break. Normally, we are accustomed to almost constant noise in the building. Most evenings we have to watch the same T.V. programs as the men in the dorm, their T.V. being so loud that it is impossible to hear our own over their's. After all of the students had left for spring break, it was too quiet.

There are many things that interrupt a head resident's sleep. Frequently this may be a phone call from the courthouse with an urgent request for bail money from one fo the fellows who managed to find his way into jail. The first thing that the freshmen at Dorm III learned was the head resident's phone number in case of such an emergency.

Last Thursday we did manage to sleep through the noise made by two fellows in the room above our apartment. Someone had carefully stacked 19 chairs in front of their door, and they were trying to dig their way out.

This year we have also learned of many new uses for toilet paper. The fellows developed several original uses for it. Toilet paper can be chewed (like tobbaco) and used to make very moist spitballs. It can also be used for decorating the trees in the front yard, or it can be frozen and used like a snowball.

We have also learned that it doesn't have to be the Fourth of July to be awakened by fireworks. We have had fireworks under doors, in the stair wells, and thrown off the balconies. Last fall, every night at 12:17 sharp, a deep, loud, and agonized scream could be heard from the third floor. At first we thought Jimmy Miller had been thrown off the balcony. Eventually, the guys got the message that the rest of the dorm did not enjoy their method of releasing tension with a "primal scream."

Then there was the time we walked out of our apartment and found Bill Sharp wrapped from head to toe with his pet boa constrictor. We found out that Bill's six foot boa was not the only snake in the dorm. Bart Rutan also had a slightly smaller boa

In Dorm III there is a great deal of competition, due to intra-mural rivalries, competition for best grades, or a particular girl. Steve Serotte is even trying to win an award for having the most surgery in a single school year.

Most of the fellows who live in the dorm do not fit the stereo-typed image of a Dorm III resident. They have many different interests like "K.O.'s" classical music, Joe Arcuni's paintings, the "clog" dances in the Phon-a-thon Volunteers Needed

Three thousand phone calls will be made and about $20,000 will be raised in the third annual MC Phonothon which began Wednesday evening. About 75 students and faculty members will be dialing for dollars during the next four weeks.

Bill Gannon is student chairman and is being helped by the student members of the ACC. Telephone calls are being made two evenings a week from four locations in Maryville and Anderson Hall.

There were 23 students and 17 faculty members who participated last year. They made 2,158 telephone contacts and raised about $15,000 in gifts for the college.

Students who would like to help for an evening or more may contact Bill Gannon or Mr. Mooney, the Director of Financial Advancement for the College.

Community Mourns Loss

The Rev. Fort Fowler, husband of Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, died March 10 at the age of 68 at Asbury Acres Health Center in Maryville. Rev. Fowler had been ill due to heart problems for a little more than two years.

Rev. Fowler had been pastor of two local churches, Clinton Memorial United Methodist and Broadway United Methodist here in Maryville.

He also served as president of Martin College, the present UT-Martin, from 1954 to 1960.

The 1977 Maryville College Baseball Team.

Scotties Swing Into Season

Sporting new uniforms and guided by a new coach, the 1977 Maryville College Baseball Team made its debut at Chattanooga, Thurs. March 24. Coach Henry's diamondmen have already played four games thus far. Here's a look at action in the three double-headers:

U.T.C. 2, M.C. 0. The Mocassins of U.T.C. shut out M.C. in the opener of the regular season 2—0 behind the two-hit pitching of Jay Sparks. The Moc's outhit Maryville 6—2 as Paul Bailey and Tony Ierulli collected Maryville's only hits. Mike Flagler (5 strike outs) was the losing hurler for Maryville, but pitched good enough ball to win had he gotten some hitting to back him up. For Maryville, it was 0 runs, 2 hits, and 1 error.

M.C. 4, U.T.C. 3. Led by the play of Sophomore outfielder Dave Greenawalt (2 for 3, 1 RBI, 1 run, and game winning single), the Scots put an end to U.T.C.'s 8 game winning streak in the second game 4—3. It was Greenawalt's single in the seventh that scored the decisive run and gave the Scots their first win.

A hot M.C. second inning consisting of triples by Todd Kohlbusch and Mark Stinnett and a double by Ken Hanna saw Maryville score two quick runs. Hanna led off with a double and designated runner Steve Wright scored on Kohlbusch's triple off the right wall. Stinnett's triple with two outs scored Kohlbusch.

In the third, Greenawalt singled, stole second, advanced to third on an error, and scored on Moffitt's line drive hit to tie the game 3—3. Greenawalt's single in the seventh broke the tie and drove in the Scot's winning run.

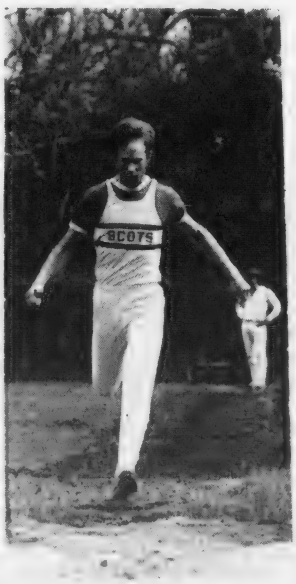
Johnny Walker started the seventh with a single and advanced to second on "Beetle" Bailey's bunt single over the pitcher's outstretched glove. Designated hitter Tony Ierulli sacrificed him to third before Greenawalt escorted him home. Barry Mathis came on to relieve Kevin McKinstry for the Maryville win.

M.C. 8, Lee College 3. The Scots swept a doubleheader from Lee College at Cleveland Friday, March 25 to up their early season record to 3—1. Southpaw Wayne Williams was the winning hurler for Maryville, but he had plenty of help from his hitters. Dave Osborne's 3 hits and Kohlbusch and Greenawalt's 2 hits led Maryville at the plate. Joe Moffitt and Dave Osborne chipped in two RBI's each.

Osborne and Greenawalt singled in the first inning and Joe Moffitt's sacrifice scored Osborne to give Maryville a quick 1—0 lead. The game was never in much doubt as the Scots scored 3 runs in both the second and seventh innings and accumulated 8 runs on 9 hits. Big hits by Maryville included doubles by Osborne and Greenawalt and a triple by Moffitt.

M.C. 5, Lee College 3. Maryville's second win over Lee did not come as easily. With Lee up 3—1 in the top of the seventh with two out, things looked bad. However the Scots had fate on their side. Hanna hit a sharp single that whizzed by the third sacker and plated Dave Osborne to make it a 3—2 Lee. Designated hitter Tony Ierulli stepped up and swatted a single to score Joe Moffitt who had previously walked to tie the game 3—3.

In the eighth inning Lee's pitcher had problems finding the strike zone and walked in 2 runs to help Maryville to a 5—3 victory. The wild hurler from Lee walked a total of nine batters.



Walker slapped 2 hits and Hanna had 3 RBI's to lead the Scots. Third baseman Jack Turregano tried his hand at second base and turned in a fine field performance as well as collecting a big eighth inning single.

The Scots next home games are Friday at 1:30 against Bryant College and the 1:30 Saturday game against Tennessee Wesleyan.

Track Meet Today

Maryville is going to be tough to beat in track this year. With a good mix of seasoned veterans and enthusiastic freshmen, the track team has the look of a winner. With the first meet Wednesday, against Emory and Henry, Maryville should be getting off to a winning start. Members of the team to watch for are: Bill Straher, Jim Richard, Steve Harrison, and Gabriel Thorpe, to name a few.

This past Saturday, the track team held an inter-squad meet. The team was divided into the Garnet Grabbers, captained by Tom Duling, and the Orange Ogres, captained by Gary Elrod. The Ogres came out on top, mostly by the power of the long distance runners.

Bill Straher practicing.

Spring Soccer Kicks Off

The Maryville College Soccer Team opened its spring season this past Saturday with a 4—1 victory over Johnson Bible College in Knoxville. The team played a well grouped game, keeping pressure on the J.B.C. goalie throughout the game. The Scots dominated first half play with three goals. These goals were scored by Scott Godwin, Will "Milky" Way, and Doug Hardy. In the second half, Gus Horcasitas scored the final M.C. goal.

Goalies Bart "Cat Man" Rutan and Larry Wright each played well in the goal. Joe Carnevale, Shin Tanaka, Barb Kees, and Kurt Markgraf played well for the offense. The defense standouts included Scott Cook, Tim Kelly, Chip Krug, and Dave Franssen.

The Scot's next game is today against Cleveland State in Cleveland, Tennessee. The Scots open their home season this Saturday against Tennessee Temple at 2:00 on Honaker Field.

Tennis

The Maryville College Men's Tennis Team is scheduled to begin its season today in its first match at Cumberland College. The squad, captained by George Reigelsperger, returns with only three lettermen from last year's winning team. With only ten matches scheduled for the Spring Term, the pivotmen may face serious problems.

The Maryville College Women's Tennis Team, captained by Lee Henderson, returns to the court with nine matches scheduled for the season. Its first match is 2:00 Tuesday at Carson-Newman.

A.C.C. Terms Changed

Several changes were made in the membership of the All College Council at the last meeting on March 30 in Anderson 304. The author of the proposal, accepted (with minor changes) by the Council, was Dr. Dent.

The main reason for the changes in the length of some of the terms of membership was a desire for continuity and a carry over of half the members into a second year. This is provided for, by two year terms for three people, in each of the areas of faculty, staff and administration, and student members.

Faculty positions are arranged with provisions for: a two year term for a faculty member who has been with the college six to fifteen years; a two year term for a faculty member with over fifteen years at MC; and the position of Faculty Secretary is to carry over each year.

Also, a faculty member must be off the Council for the same number of years served before serving another term.

Staff and Administration positions have only one change, that one administration member serve a two year term. The other carry-over positions are those of Academic Dean and President.

Any staff or administration member (other than the Academic Dean and the President) must be off the Council one year before they are eligible to serve another term.

The student representation changes are on the sophomore and junior levels. The sophomore position is now a two year term, thus only one junior representative will be elected as a junior, that position also having a two year term. Only one senior representative will be elected as a senior.

The Co-Chairmanship of the Council will be filled by the person elected as a senior, unless the junior/senior representative chooses to run for Co-Chairman. In the case of a junior/senior representative winning, the senior elected fills the position thus made vacant. If the junior/senior representative loses, the senior with the most votes fills the Co-Chairman

Math People Trip Out

Early on Friday, April 1, Dr. Nichols and eight students left the Maryville College campus bound for Huntsville, Alabama where they attended the joint meeting of the Southeastern Section of the Mathematical Association of America and the American Mathematical Society. The meeting was held on the campus of the University of Alabama at Huntsville.

The purpose of the gathering was to provide a chance for various mathematicians to present their findings in areas of special study to fellow mathematicians and interested students and educators. Ken Dickens presented his conclusions on the Characterizations and Combinatorics of Particular Inverse Subsemigroups of T_X. Dr. Nichols spoke on an illustration of a Covering Theorem for the Semigroup T_X the research for which was done by Bette Donahay who could not attend the meeting due to illness.

At noon on Saturday, April 2, after attending several more presentations, the group from Maryville left to return to their own campus. Also in the group were Myra Kerley, Bev Woeber, Jenny Andrews, Dan Coley, Ann Kinsinger, Masayuki (Mark) Kishimoto, and Tony Norris.

Run-off Results

The slate of candidates for the offices in the 1977-78 All College Council is set. This group includes students, faculty, administration, and staff.

The positions of Senior Representative and Co-chairman are being sought by four people. The candidates, who were determined by the run-off election last Friday, are Bonnie L. Holsinger, Lee Struble, Toodles Wing, and Peter Xiques. Bonnie L. Holsinger is an English major from Holdredge, Nebraska. She has served on the ACC as Junior Representative this year.

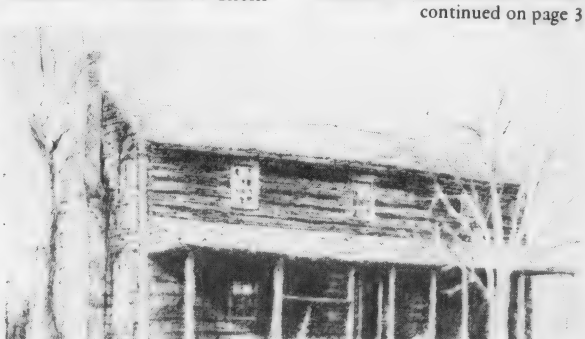
Nominees for the Junior Class Representative are Lisa Ceraolo, an art major from Clearwater, Florida; Alvin Nance, a Chattanooga, Tennessee resident who is a business major; Chris Rigell, a chemistry major from Baltimore, Maryland; and Genie Varker, a music education major from Columbia, South Carolina. Of these four, two will be chosen.

Two girls are running for Sophomore Class Representative. They are Debbie Ealy from Utica, New York and Annie Harris from Marietta, Georgia.



The Faculty nominees are divided according to the number of years they have been with Maryville College. In the one to five years category, Harry Howard, Instructor, Instructor in Political Science, and Dr. Robert Naylor, Assistant Professor of Chemistry are running for the position of representative.

Dr. William Dent, Associate Professor of Mathematics; Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, Associate Professor of English; and Dr. Gale Rhodes, Assistant Professor of Chemistry and Chairman of the Chemistry Department, are the candidates in the six to fifteen years category. Two will be elected from this category.

The Ethics of Organ Donation

The Maryville College Policy Guide for Student Publications states that one of the aims of the Echo is "to act altruistically in sponsoring original programs of public service to the college community." It is with such justification that the Echo presents the National Kidney Foundation Organ Donor Program.

By the time you have gotten around to reading this editorial you have probably already discovered the National Kidney Foundation Organ Donor Pamphlet and card placed in each Echo. An anatomical gift or organ donation is, by its very nature, a very personal decision, one not to be made hastily.

In looking over the pamphlet the reader will note many questions raised and answered, ranging from the ethics of organ donation to the practicalities of how to become a donor. Yet perhaps the most interesting question and the subject of this editorial is in regard to the ethics of organ donation and transplantation, to which the foundation replies: "The gift of an organ, essential to the life of another human being is consistant with the principles of religious and ethical systems overwhelmingly held."

Indeed, an organ donation is a gift of the highest order which is "an expression of the highest humanitarian ideals." Probably the reasons most people will not donate organs is because of customs, their sense of morals and values. Yet what is a more humanitarian gift, more moral than the gift of life? How painfully sad that because of accepted "custom and norms, a child will remain to be deprived of sight after our death, or an aging parent will remain immobile—confined to their room because life support technology is needed to keep them alive.

Obviously, after reading the pamphlet, the final decision is up to you. Organ donation is not for everyone—it's a choice. Think it over and talk it over with other people and decide for yourself. Hopefully you will take the step towards saving lives.

Dear Editors,

I've come to the conclusion that there a conspiracy against all people trying to study water hyacinths, or else a very bad problem with people stealing magazines from the library. It seems that on April 4, the only two magazines with articles on water hyacinths were missing, one from the closed stacks of the main library, the other from the science library.

I know there must be other people who have run up against the problem of stolen magazines and books, so please, please, whoever has taken those two magazines with water hyacinth articles, or any other magazines and books, please return them.

Other people need them too.

Heifer Sisters Take the Plunger

Heifer sisters belt out a tune.

Once a fool, always a fool! Several hundred people proved the saying true Monday night as they viewed or participated in the first annual "Gonged with the Wind" show in the FAC music Hall. Old stars in new roles managed to keep the packed audience amused for the duration of an hour.

Gonged's master of ceremonies, Charles Averill, accurately announced each presentation which then became the prey of a select panel of judges. Tim Kelly, Carolyn Blair, William Ribble, and Charlotte Beck were forced to stop or score each act. Several were gonged as the saturation point of the participating audience became lower.

Superior acts—those not receiving a blow from the mallot—included: renditions of "the Budweiser Song" and "Scotties" played on empty beverage containers; a trio called the Dogwood Trots—Nymphs on roller skates; and a boisterous group who sang a ballad about a very nice lumberjack.

The winning diversion, however, was the trio called the Heifer Sisters. Carol Paris (piano), Mary Arnold (guitar), and Betty Carol Zinavage (Voice?) stole the show with their country-twanged version of "I Think I've Been Had." Their trophy—a plunger or whatever it was-disappeared with them off stage.

Although many promising acts were nipped in the bud, the flowering participants of the 1977 "Gonged with the Wind" show demonstrated that there's no business like show business. Better luck next year!

February Meetings Discussed

Anderson 304—Several topics were discussed at the last ACC meeting on March 30.

First on the agenda was Rev. Stewart's plans for the Holy Week services. There was much controversy following, over the effectiveness of February meetings.

No real decision was made, however, and it appears that this year's format will be used next year.

A motion was passed to allow the worship Committee's structure to remain untouched for this year, with possible restructuring next year.

Dean Richardson spoke briefly on the need for more social and recreational activities on campus. Mention was made of the need for more activities without a fee attached.

A discussion followed concerning the need to have annual Committee reports. Bonnie Holsinger was placed in charge of coordinating the reports.

The final discussion concerned the possibility of course credit or financial renumeration for future ACC Co-Chairmen. This is one of the topics to be discussed at the next Town Hall meeting, scheduled for April 13 following CIV.

(Dr. Dent's proposal for changes in the ACC is discussed in a seperate article.)

of Women; and Dr. James Stewart, Chaplain.

The staff position has two candidates, of which one representative will be elected. Jean Jones, Director of Career Planning, and Libby Rankin, Director of Alumni Affairs, are the nominees for this post.

Speeches by the candidates will be made on Wednesday, April 13, 1977 at 9:20 a.m. Elections will be held on Thursday, April 14, 1977. All students, faculty, administration, and staff are eligible to vote.

Deadline Set

The Communications Committee of the ACC has set April 22 as the deadline for applications for the editorships of the 1977-78 Chilhowean and the 1978 Impressions magazine. The Committee plans to announce the selection of the Chilhowean editor on April 27 and the Impressions editor on May 4. Application blanks and information as to eligibility requirements will be available next week after the ACC Town Hall meeting.

Secession?

Two Massachusetts state legislators T. McCarthy and John Conway, representing Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Island, filed a bill of secession that would sever the two islands from state control. Officials of the islands joined the protest of a redistricting plan that would deny the islands representation in the state house. They said the islands' grievance would be satisfied if the house compromised and gave the two islands at least one representative.

position, and the person elected as a junior retains their normal position on the Council.

Other important provisions are for eligibility to be checked by the Elections Committee, and in certain extreme cases, there may be special elections to fill vacancies.

The following chart (patterned after the one drawn up by Dr. Dent) explains further the positions and the changes made.

Santa Cruz de Tenerife—570 people died in a fiery collision Monday, March 28, between a Pan American 747 jumbo jet and a KIM Royal Dutch Airways Boeing 747.

The collision occurred on the fog shrouded runway after the Dutch plane began to accelerate down the runway for take off, before it had been cleared to do so. The crew of the Pan Am flight did not see the lights of the Dutch plane, until it was too late. The Pan Am flight tried to swerve off the runway just before impact. All 225 aboard the KLM flight were killed along with 345 passengers from the Pan Am flight, making this the worst air disaster in history.

It is seal season again, and, with the price of furs, the seal population will be hard pressed to keep their skins. As the season progresses, hunters scour the Canadian and Artic landscape in search of the prized seal pup. The method of extermination is quite crude in that pups are clubed senseless and often skinned before fully dead.

President Carter has unveiled the second part of his program for Vietnam offenders. The new phase is concerned with unfavorable discharges. Each case will be heard seperately, and only if a veteran asks for a review. Those who meet certain criteria, such as wounded in action, will be upgraded routinely.

One restriction is that deserters from combat zones may not have their discharges upgraded; a deserter who comes forth is also liable for prosecution on other charges.

The 47,000 sq. ft. of exhibits in the new State Museum will illustrate the state's natural and cultural history, from prehistoric times to the present. Construction of these exhibits will be completed in eight stages, the last of which will open in 1985.

Booters get into action.

Booters Still Undefeated

The Maryville College Soccer Team won both of their games this past weekend to up their record to 3—0—0. The first game, which ended with an unfortunate accident, saw Maryville take a forfeit from Tennessee Temple. With the score tied 1—1 and only 15 minutes gone in the game a Temple player was seriously injured. When the Temple failed to return to the field, a forfeit was declared. Scoring for the Scots was Will Way.

The Scots traveled to Morristown Sunday to play the Morristown Soccer Club. The Scots dominated play and won the game by a commanding 8—3 margin. Scoring first again for the Scots was captain Will Way. Following Will's example and also scoring for the Scots were Shin Tanaka (2), Doug Hardy, Gus Horcasitas, Dave Young, and Bucky Buckwalter. It was Buck's first goal as a Scot. Outstanding on offense for the Scots were Tim Kelly, Chip Krug, and Paul Rintye. The Booters next game will be on April 13 when they play host to Cleveland State.

Track

Coach Dick Taylor's track squad met Emory and Henry Wed., March 30, at Emory and Henry for a dual meet and later competed against Berea and Asbury College Sat., April 2, at Berea, KY.

Although the track team was outscored in both meets their times and distances have improved. Two weeks of hard practice should prepare the thinclads for their next meet April 18 at U.T. for the Great Smokey Mountains All-Comers Meet.

A strong performance by junior Steve Harrison highlighted track success at E. & H. March 30. The former T.S.D. star captured first places in three events as well as participating in the winning 440 relay team.

Tennis

The Maryville College Tennis Team lost two disappointing matches this past week. At Bryant College, the netmen were defeated 7—2. In a match with Walter State, the team lost by a score of 9—0.

Though the team was disappointed by these two losses, they are rebuilding and are anticipating better showings in the future. Its next match will be Saturday at 1:00 p.m. against Milligan College at Maryville.

Scots Take Seven

Coach Bill Henry's Scots have won seven games in a row. April Fool? Not quite. Maryville swept four home victories in two doubleheaders against Tennessee Wesleyan Friday, April 1, and Warren Wilson Saturday, April 2, to up their season record to 7—1.

MC 4, TWC 1

The Scots pounced Wesleyan in the third inning for two runs and later added two more in the sixth while Wesleyan managed only one second inning score in the game.

Jack Turregano walked and came home on Joe Moffett's line drive triple before catcher Ken Hanna's RBI sacrifice scored Moffett for a 2—0 Maryville lead.

In the sixth inning singles by Hanna and Savage, a sacrifice fly by Todd Kohlbusch, and a walk by Walker had the bases loaded. Paul Bailey reached first on a fielding error and collected on RBI as designated runner, Keith Goodwin came home . Steve Savage later scored on a Wesleyan error to end Maryville's scoring.

Maryville also swept the nightcap from Wesleyan despite collecting only 3 hits. Second baseman Jack Turregano led Maryville at the plate with 2 of those hits as well as 2 RBI's .

The magic third inning again started the Scots on a scoring spree. Paul Bailey and Tony Ierulli walked and advanced a base on Dave Osborne's sacrifice bunt. Turregano singled home Bailey, and Moffett's sacrifice fly brought Ierulli home for a 2—0 lead.

In the fourth Maryville scored 3 runs. Kohlbusch reached first on an error and was followed by three walks by Walker, Bailey, and Ierulli. The latter was accredited with a RBI. An error by the shortstop put Osborne on first and scored Walker. Turregano again ripped a single and plated Bailey for Maryville's final run.

Sat., April 2, MC 9, WWC 2

Wasting no time, the Scots bounced Warren Wilson for 4 runs in a first inning that saw 9 batters come to the plate.

Singles by Ken Hanna and Danny Thomas scored Jack Turregano and Joe Moffett, and a fielder's choice by Steve Savage brought home designated runner Steve Wright. A RBI double by Todd Kohlbusch scored Keith Goodwin, (dr), as Maryville led 4—0 after one inning of play.

In the second Danny Thomas sacrificed Jack Turregano's home, who had earlier singled.

Steve Savage then made a spectacular third inning score. The clever base runner drew a walk, stole second, and headed for third on a passed ball. Seeing home not covered and never breaking stride, he scored from first base. Likewise, Paul Bailey singled, went to second on an error, advanced to third on Osborne's single, and stole home to up the score 7—0 after three.

Maryville's batting support came from Danny Thomas (dh), two for two and 3 RBI. Playing in their first collegiate game two local Blount Countians,Ken Myers and Jim Rhyne,pounded out 2 hits. The latter doubled and the former hit a single.

Steve Savage led Maryville's offensive attack that stunned WWC 10—0. The NCAA 10 run rule went into effect after 5 innings of play with the Scots leading 10—0.

In the nightcap Savage ammassed 3 hits on 3 at bats, 3 stolen bases, and 3 RBI's. Other Scots who had singles were Osborne, Turregano, Ierulli, Bailey,and Mark Stinnett.

Wild Pitches and errors helped the Scots score 5 unaccounted runs. Maryville's winning pitcher, Wayne Williams upped his record to 2—0 following his one hit performance.

Keith Goodwin rounds third.

Young Bound For Phillipines

Dr. David P. Young, Title III coordinator at Maryville College and visiting Ford Professor at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and soccer team coach has accepted an appointment, effective in July, as consultant on planning and faculty development at Central Philippine University in the Philippines.

Dr. Young's duties will include the designing and implementation of new programs in curricula and community outreach and some teaching at the University, in Iloilo City.

The two-year appointment is arranged jointly through University President Gus Pulido and the United Board for Christian Higher Education in Asia. The United Board is an ecumenical group through which the Christian communities in nine Asian nations strive to achieve truth, knowledge, social justice and full human development.

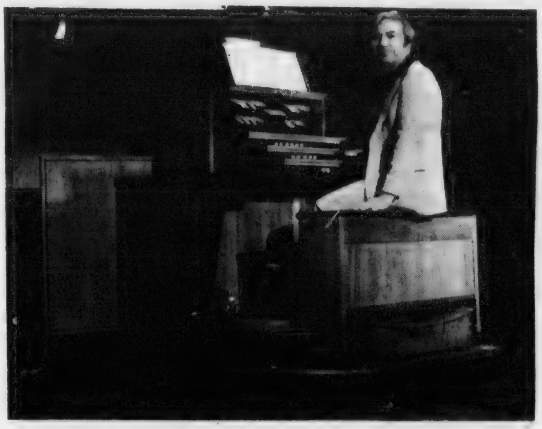
In announcing his appointment, Dr. Young stated, "Needless to say, our family is quite excited about this opportunity to experience the richness of life in the Philippines and for me to be challenged to grow in ability and service in a quite different educational setting than I'm used to at Maryville College."

Dr. Young joined the MC faculty as an assistant professor of chemistry after receiving his doctorate in organic chemistry from the University of Kansas in 1963. He became chairman of the chemistry department after only five years and revised the chemistry curriculum, organizing it around a topical approach.

Dr. Young also utilized his talents in interdisciplinary studies throughout the MC curriculum. He initiated the special challenge term as well as courses, seminars and informal discussions on futuristics (the study of change, values and alternatives for the future), biomedical ethics, 21st century pioneering, science and technology and thought, and sociology of the future. He was recipient of the Outstanding Teaching Award in 1975.

At UT this year he has helped develop and has taught in a bio-medical ethics program.

Dr. Young has published numerous newspaper and magazine articles dealing with futuristics, teaching methods, chemical research, religion and science and values and ethics in science. He has lectured on these topics frequently at conventions, seminars and symposiums throughout the United States.



In 1972 he published "A New World in the Morning," a book concerning the scientific methods of human reproduction, mood drugs, and electric brain stimulation.

Dr. Young was the recipient of numerous fellowships and research grants from the American Chemical Society's Petroleum Research Foundation, the Alcoa and Danforth Foundations and the National Science Foundation, including an NSF Science Faculty Fellowship at Cornell University in 1970-71.

In addition to his teaching duties at MC, he served as religious life coordinator for the campus in 1975-76. He served as soccer coach for five years and frequently invited students and faculty into his home for informal poetry readings, a special interest of his.

He is a member of the Institute of Society, Ethics, and the Life Sciences; Knoxville Bioethics Committee; Tennessee Center for Human Values and Health Sciences;

Lewis Recieves Grant

Dr. Wallace L. Lewis, associate professor of history, is one of 12 college teachers selected by the National Endowment for the Humanities to participate in an NEH 1977 summer seminar at Yale University in New Haven, CN.

Dr. Lewis will receive a $2000 stipend to cover two months of work at Yale. He will spend four weeks in the seminar on "The History of China, 1600-1975," July 13-August 8, and four weeks in independent study in any chosen area.

The Yale seminar, under the direction of Jonathan D. Spence of the Yale graduate history department, will pursue broad topics of "late Imperial," "Republican", and "Communistic" periods of Chinese history from the late Ming period to the present.

The 1977 grant is Dr. Lewis' second grant from the NEH. The first was in 1973 when he studied the history of socialism with Warren Lerner at Duke University. He is the first MC faculty member to receive two NEH grants for summer study.

The purpose of the NEH Summer Seminars for College Teachers is to provide undergraduate college teachers with opportunities to improve their knowledge of the subjects they teach by working with distinguished scholars in their fields at institutions with libraries suitable for advanced studies.

NEH participants are chosen on the basis of detailed applications and recommendations indicating their quality and commitment as college teachers; their qualifications to do the work of the seminar and make a contribution to it; and the conception, definition and organization of their proposed programs of personal study.

Dr. Lewis joined the MC faculty in 1962 as an instruc-

Our opinion

The Tellico Dam project has caused quite a controversy in the past years. Opponents of the project base their arguments on the question of the environmental damage that will result if the dam is completed. Proponents for the dam base their arguments on the benefits that would be derived from the project in the form of energy. Up until now, the opponents have been able to prevent the dam from being completed. However, how much longer can "progress" be stopped?

Proponents of the project are now attempting to get Congressional exemption for the project. The $127.5 million dollars that was spent on the project would be wasted, they argue, if the dam was stopped. The basic question now is whether a species of fish is worth $127.5 million dollars or not.

Another question that has been raised against Congressional exemption is the precedent that Congress would be setting for future issues of this kind. If one exemption is granted, who is to say that it won't happen again?

The Congressional exemption should not be granted to the Tellico Dam Project. The "dangerous" precedent that would be set would inevitably lead to the same issue of environmental protection which would start a trend difficult to stop.

The cost of the project does not outweigh the environmental damage that would be done. Already the snail darters have been put on the Endangered Species List as a result of the project.

If the project were stopped now, there is one thing which can be done to prevent any future dilemmas of this kind. The government should set up a consistent value system in all of their policies and decisions as to what is more important, the protection of the environment for future generations or energy for the present generation. In our minds, the environment is more important.

Pathways to Change

Are you interested in being a legislator for four days? Would you enjoy debating bills, lobbying with fellow legislators, or engaging in parliamentary strategy? If so, you would probably be interested in being one of Maryville College's 1977 Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature (TISL) delegates.

TISL, which Maryville joined last year, is a bicameral college student legislature that functions along the same guidelines as the Tennessee State Legislature. TISL holds a general assembly once a year, usually in November at the state capital, where the member schools consider legislation in the nine standing committees and in the chambers of the Tennessee State S nate and House of Representatives. The schools and their delegates may bring as much legislation as they desire.

Each TISL school has one senator and at least one representative in the House where a school's total number of representatives is proportionate to its size. Maryville will have one representative in each House.

TISL, representing over 90 percent of the college students in Tennessee, is one of the more effective legislatures of its type in the country. Ten pieces of priority legislation are chosen each year and presented to the Tennessee State Legislature. The eighty-ninth Tennessee General Assembly adopted in 1975 a House Joint Resolution urging its members to study and seriously consider the TISL priority legislation.

TISL is greatly interested in education and the general welfare of the people in Tennessee. Some of its past priority legislation has urged the Governor to support reallocation of Tennessee Tuition Grant Funds, and it has urged General Assembly to aid the development of women's athletics and to investigate and study the coal industry in Tennessee.

If this program seems interesting, you are encouraged to apply for one of the delegate positions. Applications will be available in the post office starting today. They are to be returned to Bonnie Holsinger, Box 2553 by Friday, April 22. An All-College Council ad hoc committee will then chose the delegates.

Dear Sirs,

That tennis coach got balls—finally! And what balls? Game balls for the tennis team last Saturday against Milligan College. This fact takes on significance when one realizes that the previous week, before their humiliating at the hands of Walter State, the tennis team was "running all over campus looking for tennis balls."

Shocked? Astounded? Certainly not. So the coach didn't get game balls for that one game. Who cares?

But tennis is less than a pastime for the new tennis coach, Mr. Rick Byrd. The team's first match was away at Bryan College, and the coach didn't go. Maybe he had other obligations. And maybe the fact that he has shown up for only two practices can be explained too. Sure, let's be reasonable.

However, when it comes down to money at Maryville College, no one is reasonable. Apparently the tennis coach is also the assistant basketball coach and good ole' Maryville will only pay him if he coaches two sports. That doesn't seem unreasonable, but is Mr. Byrd coaching two teams? When last year's tennis coach, Dr. Wyatt, retired, Mr. Byrd was recruited to serve as the new tennis coach. He may have been of invaluable assistance to this year's basketball team, but whatever money he receives is in excess for the minimal amount of time and effort he puts into "his" tennis team.

Maryville College has three completely rejuvenated courts with the recent addition of badly needed new nets. How about making the refurbishing complete with a new coach who will be interested in the sport for more than just what it nets him financially? The tennis team needs the unity that can be provided by a dedicated coach.

Last Saturday's match against Milligan was a bit better than the previous week's showing and where was the coach last Saturday? He was watching the baseball game, of course!

Mr. Rick Byrd has one unbelievable tennis racket, but I never see him on the courts. I think it's time for restringing.

Farmhouse Work to Begin

Historic Thompson Brown Farmhouse.

Dr. Nichols, a Trustee of the Blount County Historic Trust, announced this week that he needs students to work this weekend at the Thompson-Brown House historical site. Work on the project has been temporarily halted to allow for the formation of the Blount County Historic Trust, an organization founded to coordinate activities concerning the restoration. Students interested in assisting the project should report to the site Friday afternoon. Work will begin as soon as possible on Friday and continue all day Saturday.

The history of the preservation attempt, as well as the background for the Trust, goes back to April, 1975. At that time, Blount County exercised an option to buy 3.5 acres from the College. This was to be the site of a new Health Center. In May, several concerned students and faculty members appealed to the College to preserve the house. College officials offered to allow relocation of the house on College property, provided a citizens' group would assume responsibility for relocation, restoration, and maintenance. By June, a representative from the Tennessee Historical Commission and a local architect both had recommended that the house remain at that location, with the Center being constructed to the rear of the lot.

In November 1975, sale of the lot was finalized. At that point, interest in saving the log house was rekindled, and determined students began removing siding and interior wallboard in preparation for removal to the campus. Materials salvaged from the house were sold in March of 1976. This raised between $1200 and $1400 to be eventually used for the project. Finally, in October of 1976, a plan was October of 1976, a plan was approved to build the Health Center without removing the Thompson-Brown House.

The house is of historical note because of its unique structure and its age. While Dr. Walker of the History Department and a few students have been researching the house, nothing earth-shattering has been found. The house was built in the early 1800's, and record has been found of its sale around 1815 to the Thompsons. In the 1840's, Isaac Anderson, the College's first President, performed there the wedding of a girl born in the house some 20 years earlier. In 1865, the house was purchased by the Browns, who maintained possession until the College bought it in the 1940's. The College utilized a dairy farm on the property for awhile.

April is Charter Membership Month for the BCHT, and for students a charter membership is only $1. Just fill out the blank below. The money will go toward restoration of the house. Anyone interested in helping with the project should work Friday and Saturday or contact Dr. Nichols.

PRIME MINISTER YITZHAK RABIN of Israel submitted his resignation last week in the face of growing opposition.

The opposition against Mr. Rabin grew stronger as news leaked out that Mr. Rabin's wife, Lea, has large amounts of currency in United States banks. This is in direct violation of an Israeli currency law that forbids maintaining an account outside of Israel.

The Taipei government denies buying the Israeli Gabriel missile. According to the report, however, the Nationalists approached the Israelis after the United States had turned down the offer of selling Taiwan an equivalent surface-to-air missile.

Scots Score Season High

Johnny Walker attempts to pick off Milligan runner.

Maryville College's baseball team had plenty of excitement last week which saw the Scots win 2 and lose 3. Four homeruns were smashed including 2 grand slammers, Coach Henry's Scots scored a season high 13 points, and MC's assistant coach was ejected from the ball park after arguing a controversial call.

MC 3,
Warren Wilson College 2

The Scots gave their best performance of the season Wednesday, April 6, at Sewanee, TN., by scoring a lop-sided 13–2 win in a single 9 inning game over Warren Wilson College. Todd Kohlbusch produced his best plate performance by slamming 2 back to back homeruns, including a grand slam, and going 3 for 5, scoring 2 runs and mustering 5 RBI's. Designated hitter Danny Thomas and Joe Moffett were also big hitters. The former had a homerun and went 2–4 with 3 RBI's, while the latter was 2–4 and also had 3 RBI's.

Coach Henry let four pitchers—McKinstry, Thomas, Flagler, and Mathis—split the 9 innings. McKinstry was credited with the mound decision.

Dave Osborne got Maryville's first run in the opening inning on an intentional caught steal by Steve Wright. Osborne walked, went to second on Savage's fielder's choice, stole third, and scored, before Wright was tagged for the third out to put Maryville ahead to stay 1–0.

In the fourth Todd Kohlbusch hit Maryville's first homerun of the season to up the tally 2–0 Maryville. In the fifth "Beetle" Bailey walked, took second on a wild pitch, and scored on Moffett's RBI single.

In the seventh and ninth innings, the Scots unleashed a batting attack that brought home 10 runs. Walker started the rally with a single, Bailey doubled Walker to third, and Osborne singled to load the bases. A 2 RBI Moffett double scored Walker and Bailey and advanced Osborne to third. Designated hitter Danny Thomas then cracked a 3 run homer, as opportunistic Maryville relented with a 7–2 lead. But the Scots had more. In the ninth Osborne doubled, Thomas singled, Myers reached first on a shortstop's error, and Wright walked. With the bases loaded, Kohlbusch repeated his earlier trick and homered for 5 RBI's to end the Scots' scoring 13–2.

Saturday, April 9, matched two of East Tennessee's powers: Maryville College, 8–1, and Milligan College 16–4 and ranked 12th in the N.A.I.A., for a doubleheader.

Maryville College 5

The Scots and Buffaloes literally slugged it out in a close encounter which saw Milligan come out on top with three timely homeruns. Tony Ierulli's grand slam homer put Maryville as close as it would get in the third inning, but Milligan still led 6–5.

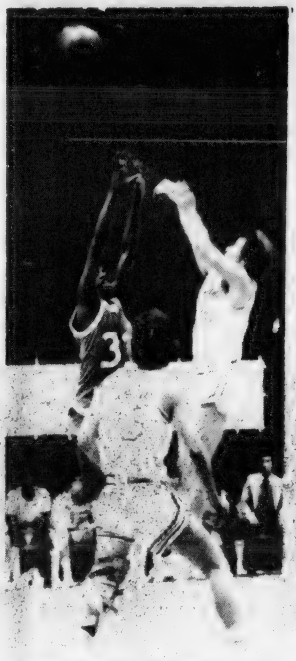
Danny Thomas absorbed the loss for Maryville, but he pitched a heroic game and collected 8 strikeouts against a bunch of class hitters. Mathis relieved Thomas in the seventh.

The Maryville offensive attack consisted of Dave Osborne 3–3, 2 runs scored, 2 stolen bases, and Tony Ierulli 2–3, 1 run scored, 1 grand slam home run, and 5 RBI's. Ierulli's 2 hits drove in all of Maryville's 5 runs.

Maryville scored in the first when Osborne singled, reached second on a passed ball, and scored on Ierulli's line drive single to make it 4–1 Milligan. In the third Ierulli's grand slam brought the crowd to its feet and emptied the bases with a shot that cleared the football bleachers. Previously, Osborne had singled, and Savage and Moffett had walked to load the bases.

Milligan 3, MC 1

The nightcap with Milligan ended in Milligan's favor, but the outcome took eight innings. The score was deadlocked 0–0 in the top of the fifth when a controversial call occurred and definitely affected the outcome of the game. Third sacker "Beetle" Bailey lashed a double and moved to third by Osborne's single. A signaled squeeze play resulted in Bailey's abruptly getting called out at home on a disputed call. The hovoc was a double play with outs on Bailey and Osborne, and later on coach Stinnett, who was ejected from the ball playing field.



Kevin McKinstry pitched a sensational game yielding only 3 hits at the end of regulation play. In the eighth inning two costly errors and a homerun locked the door on Maryville 3–0. In Maryville's eighth Greenawalt walked, Moffett singled, and Danny Thomas singled in (DR) Steve Savage to score Maryville's lone run. A double play ended Maryville's comeback hopes.

MC 1,

MC 4, Bryan 3

The Scots hosted Bryan College Monday, April 11, and split a doubleheader 1–4 and 4–3 with the Lions. The win earns Maryville a 9–4 slate. The Scots see action next Saturday, April 16, at home for a doubleheader with Tusculum College of Greenville, TN.

Emme Named All-Southeastern

Wayne Emme shoots for two

Wayne Emme, sophomore guard for Maryville College's basketball team, has been named to the N.C.A.A. Division III All-Southeastern Basketball team. Besides making the district first team, Emme received honorable mention for the N.C.A.A. Division III All-America team.

Sparking the Scots this season, Wayne's statistics were indeed impressive. The former Pennsbury High star averaged 23.8 points per game, shot 45 per cent from the field, and maintained an 82 per cent free-throw accuracy to lead the MC scoring parade. In six games he scored 30 points or better and his top performance came against Tusculum when he poured in 37 points.

Wayne was overjoyed with his accomplishment and he stated that head coach Billy Henry's encouragement kept him going all season. Wayne's recent accomplishment is just one example of the sudden upbeat of athletics as a whole at Maryville College.

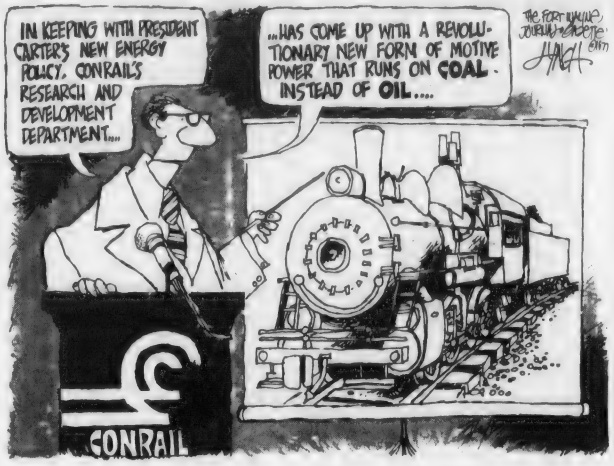
Dance Saturday

On Saturday night, the Black Student Association will sponsor a dance in the Pearsons Dining Hall at 9:30 PM. Music will be performed by a LIVE BAND, the Genuine Black Band. Everyone is invited. Admission is only $1.00. Refreshments will be served.

Our opinion



Yes, there is a social life

So often one hears that there is no social life at Maryville College. For the most part this is true, but fault does not always lie with the school. It provides many things for a person to do if that person looks for them.

Through the Social Committee, the school sponsors movies, dances, trips, and many other events. For example, this coming weekend there will be a dance in cooperation with the Black Student's Association, a trip to the Chattanooga Choo-Choo, a trip to the mountains, and plenty of sporting events.

Of course some weekends are slower than others, especially during the winter term, but if an individual looks hard enough, there will always be something to do. In the past, social events at Maryville College have been plagued by a general lack of interest. Whether this was because the events were poorly selected or not is hard to say, but the apathy shown by the students should prove something.

The events planned for this weekend are varied enough to be of some interest to most people. This at least shows that the Social Committee is attempting to deal with the most rampant complaint—the lack of social activities on campus.

Letters to the Editors

Dear Sirs,

It seems my letter of last week concerning the tennis coach, Mr. Byrd, contained some misinformation. The fact that Mr. Byrd is not getting paid for his services as tennis coach, but he is receiving payment as assistant basketball coach. This point was carefully pointed out to me by the Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, Coach Henry.

I apologize to Coach Byrd, Coach Henry, and anyone else who may have taken offense over my gross error.

Nevertheless, the error does not negate the thrust of last week's letter. The tennis team needs a dedicated coach whether he is paid or not.

Chris Rigell

To The Editors:

As a part of my responsibilities here at the College it has been my privilege to inform Maryville College students of the source of their student financial aid where there is a donor alive to thank. In this process I ask the assisted students to write letters of appreciation so that the donors will be thanked and will be aware that the funds they have contributed are being put to good use.

My purpose in writing this letter is to publicly thank those students who have so willingly written, and to congratulate them on the quality of the letters. The best thanks is, of course, making the most of the opportunity provided through the scholarship funds available, but it never hurts to go the second mile and make the thanks personal. I know the donors appreciate it and so do I.

The Third Step

The constitution of the Black Student Association (BSA) calls for Black students to make the "Black experience a visible part of Maryville College by defining, defending, and illustrating Blackness." This weekend, the Black experience on the Maryville College campus promises to be enhanced by the second Black Student Weekend.

The first Black Student Weekend was held last year. That weekend and this one grow out of the urgent need for increasing the Black enrollment at Maryville College.

The small number of Black students is a persisting void in the "Black experience" at Maryville College. Filling this void is a major concern of the BSA and the Admissions Office.

The addition of Pat Johnson to the Admission Office's staff is one step toward boosting the Black enrollment. A second step is Black Maryville College students recruiting prospective Black students. This has been done several times in the past and will be done in the future. The Black Student Weekend is a third step.

The Black Student Weekend, sponsored by the BSA and the Admissions Office, is devoted to the recruitment of Black students. Several high school students have been invited this weekend to visit the campus and gain an insight into the many facets of Maryville College. Throughout the weekend, various programs and activities will be presented for the prospective Black students.

The weekend will be climaxed by a dance on Saturday night, April 24, at 9:30 PM in the Pearsons Dining Hall. THE ENTIRE CAMPUS IS INVITED! Music will be performed by the Genuine Black Band. Admission will be only one dollar.

General Brown defends domestic spying

(CPS)—Remember the flap General George Brown, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, caused last fall by declaring that Israel was "a military burden" to the United States?

Well, the outraged Carter of October did not fire Brown once he was elected President and Brown is at it again. In an arrogant defense of domestic spying, Brown said:

"If any citizen of this country is so concerned about his mail being read or is concerned about his presence in a meeting being noted, I'd say we ought to read his mail and know what the hell he has done."

Watch for the next Brown blooper, which is scheduled for sometime in late August.

Blood Money

or How to Pump your way to Fame and Fortune

Losing blood can be a profitable experience to those who join the "anti-body beautiful" campaign. Donating blood and plasma on a regular basis yields a feeling of gratification and some extra pocket money for an estimated 20 to 30 regular and semi-regular MC men & women.

The donation program or pumping plasma or blood does have standards—see if you can qualify. Paid donors must be over 18 years of age and in good health with a blood pressure reading between 100/50 and 200/100. He or she must weigh at least 105 lbs. and have a normal temperature.

No alcohol may be consumed 24 hours prior to giving blood or plasma, and one must not have been sick (flu, cold, sore throat, etc.) the previous week.

The clinic hours in Knoxville are 8-5, Mon.-Sat. There are also evening hours on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday. Although an appointment is not necessary, it is advisable.

Blood may be pumped once every 8 weeks at $10.00 a pint minimum. The time involved for this procedure is about 10 minutes. The plasma extraction process which takes about 1½ hours, may be undertaken twice a week at $10.00 a pint. Rarer blood types may bring forth more than the $10.00 minimum.

Although the plasma pumping process involves the largest needle used on humans, the donor may pass the hours watching T.V., instead of the slender piece of steel, and enjoy a minimum amount of discomfort.

You don't have to be a star to pump your way to fame and fortune: just join the "anti-body beautiful" program and save a piece of the world and grab some dollars at the same time.

Swingers Up Record

Johnny Walker and Steve Wright hit solo homers Saturday to help Maryville come from behind to capture two victories 9—8 and 12—9 over the Tusculum College Pioneers.

Maryville trailed 8—3 in the first contest and 7—4 in the second thriller before staging comeback efforts to push their slate to 11—4.

MC—9,
Tusculum—8

Maryville's scoring spurt began in the third inning on walks by Osborne, Greenawalt, and Moffett, followed by a two run single by Danny Thomas. Ken Hanna reached first on an error which scored Moffett giving the Scots a 3—2 edge.

MC scored 4 runs in the fifth. Johnny Walker's blast over left field accounted for 2 runs. Todd Kohlbusch's RBI single brought Moffett home after the latter had walked and Danny Thomas had singled. (DR) Keith Goodwin scored on another Pioneer error to pull Maryville within one, 8—7.

A 2 run single by Joe Moffett put Maryville ahead to stay 9—8.

Starting on the mound, Danny Thomas jumped off to a good start by striking out 6 of the first 12 batters he faced. Mathis and Greenawalt relieved Thomas in the fifth and sixth. The win went to Greenawalt. Saturday's pitching chores marked Greenawalt's first mound appearance, but the outfielder proved himself capable by netting both victories and becoming 2—0 in only 4 innings pitched.

MC 12—TC 9

A controversial call robbed Steve Wright of back to back homers in the Scots latter 12—9 triumph. A ball that landed over the fence was waved a double by Tusculum's right fielder (saying the ball bounced over the fence), and the call was recognized by the umpire.

Nevertheless Wright went on to go 3—3, score 4 runs, and 1 HR and 1 double.

Wasting no time Wright homered in the first inning and was followed by Moffett's triple. Moffett scored on a passed ball. Scoring Maryville's third run, Johnny Walker walked, stole second, and scored on Kohlbusch's RBI double.

Wright scored a single run in the third after he walked, stole second and was plated on the second baseman's error to tie the game 4—4.

In the fifth Osborne singled and scored on Wright's disputed double. Ierulli and Kohlbusch followed with RBI singles to score 2 runs and tie it up 7—7.

A 5 run 6th inning for the Scots made the difference. Tony Ierulli doubled in 2 runs and Johnny Walker doubled in one. Wright punched in a single and 2 errors allowed Moffett and Walker to score.

Ierulli's 3 RBI's, double, and 2—3 at the plate aided the Maryville cause. 13 walked by the Tusculum pitchers set back the Pioneer's chances.

Greenawalt was again the winner. He relieved McKinstry in the fifth and was helped by Mathis in the 7th inning.

Copeland named President Emeritus

Some 600 alumni, faculty, students, and friends honored Dr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Copeland at a 3½ hour banquet last Thursday night in Pearson Hall. Newcombe to speak on Alcohol

Don "Newk" Newcombe, former All-Star pitcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers and a recovered alcoholic, will speak in The Wilson Chapel at 7 pm Tuesday, May 3.

Newcombe, currently consultant and field representative-at-large for the National Clearinghouse for Alcohol Information, will discuss the danger signals of alcoholism, their ultimate effects, addiction, misconceptions and his personal experience with alcoholism and his recovery.

The CIV will be co-sponsored by the Blount County Mental Health Association.

The MC baseball team will host a reception for the former major league pitching star following his talk. At the reception on the patio outside Pearsons Hall, Newcombe will answer any questions from members of the campus community. In case of rain the guests will move into the Proffitt Dining Room.

Newcombe is visiting this area May 2-4 as part of a statewide alcohol prevention campaign. The National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, the Knoxville Substance Abuse Council and the East Tennessee Substance Abuse Council are sponsoring his visit to East Tennessee.

The former Dodger pitcher was one of the first blacks, along with teammates Roy Campanella and Jackie Robinson, to break the "color barrier" in major league sports in 1949.

Newcombe was voted baseball's "Rookie-of-the-Year" that same year and was the first winner of the Cy Young Award for outstanding pitcher in both leagues in 1956. He pitched in three world series and five All-Star games and won 149 games against 90 losses in his 10-year major league career before alcoholism cut that career short.

In his present position with the NCAI, Newcombe travels widely speaking on alcoholism to business, youth, women, veterans and service clubs. He has participated in "Alcohol Awareness Weeks" throughout the United States. He is also a member of the Advisory Board of the National Council on Alcoholism.

In addition, Newcombe serves as director of community relations for the Dodgers Corporation, director of youth programs for the National Alliance of Businessmen and vice President of Enterprises Savings and Loan Association and is a member of the manage-

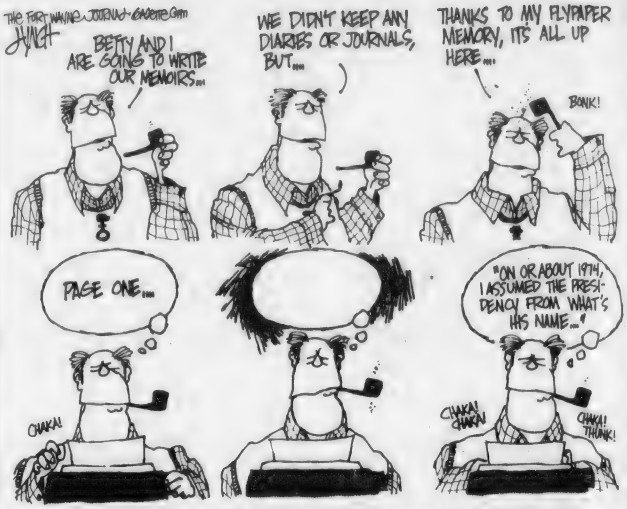
Hope Auction Slated

On Tuesday, May 17, at 7:00 p.m., Tom Taylor will call for the highest bids for food, work, and other items at the Fred Hope Auction. This annual event, sponsored by the World Concern Committee, will be held in the chapel courtyard area, and proceeds will go to the Shiite Moslems of Lebanon.

This tradition was started in 1900 by a Maryville College student, Fred Hope, who led a drive to collect $50.00 to pay the salary of a Chinese pastor. Since 1910, the project has been called "The Fred Hope Fund," with the money collected going to an overseas missionary enterprise. In years past, The Fred Hope Fund helped the Bangladesh peoples (through UNICEF) and the earthquake victims of Guatemala.

If you would like to make a contribution to help raise money for the Fred Hope Fund, contact Chaplain Stewart or Box 2807. Contributions have included baked goods, promises of work (see Grant Bartelt), steak and eggs breakfast in bed for two, pizza dinner, clothing, art works, and many other items.

Our opinion



Where's the coach

It happened again in the latest Tennis match. While the other team was warming up with their coach, Maryville College players, tired of waiting for Coach Rick Byrd, and decided that they had to go look for tennis balls to use in the match. "Coach" Byrd was not to be seen.

Nearly every match played this year has been without Mr. Byrd. Things have gotten so bad that several times, the players, who should have been warming up, had to run all over campus looking for tennis balls to play with. Is that not a responsibility of Mr. Byrd?

The fact that Mr. Byrd is not getting paid for his services as tennis coach does not detract from the fact that he did accept a responsibility which he is not following through with.

The Tennis Team's record, 1—5, may or may not be a result of not having a coach, but surely it is a great influence. If Maryville College is going to have a tennis team, it should also have a coach, not just a figurehead who is present at Maryville College Tennis matches rather than watching Maryville College Baseball games.

Senior's Perspectives Wanted

The Echo is looking for seniors who would care to reflect, condemn, or praise their experiencs at Maryville College.

During the month of May, the Echo will have a Senior Perspectives column, especially for seniors who desire to speak about what's on their minds as they prepare to leave Maryville College.

Junior's Recital Slated

Pamela Shelton and Julia Ramsey, both music education majors, will present a junior recital on Tuesday, May 3, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

A reception in the FAC Lounge will follow.

Junior recitals involve two students presenting individual performances. Ms. Shelton, a senior from Carmel, NY, will perform works for bassoon by Telemann, Weber and Luke. Carolyn Phibbs, also a senior music education major, will accompany her on the piano. A senior from Cedarville, OH, Ms. Ramsey, soprano, will perform songs by Strauss, Wolf, Bach and Dvorak, assisted by Rebecca Smith, a University of Tennessee student from Maryville, on the violin and Scott Denney, a senior music education major, on the piano.

Ms. Shelton has previously performed in instrumental ensembles at MC as a member of both the band and orchestra. She also performs with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra. A previous recipient of the Oscar Philip Steele Award, Ms. Shelton belongs to Tau Kappa Chi, honorary music society at MC, and Delta Omicron, national professional music society for women. Ms. Ramsey is a member of the MC Concert Choir and Delta Omicron.

Criterion Established

In the last meeting of the All Colege Council the Communications Committee's proposal was brought before the Council. Council members approved the new guidlines with only minor alterations.

The major renovations in all of the three campus publications were made to secure "continuity" in their production.

Some of the changes made in the Echo editor selection procedure include an interview with a comprehensive application form, an editing test, submission of a trial issue, and another interview with the Communications Committee after the trial issue. Whenever possible a person from outside the committee with experience in journalism will be obtained to assist in preparing and editing the test.

The business manager will receive 20 percent of up to 300 dollars on any adds he procures.

Applications for editer of both the Chilhowean and Impressions will be made in the spring term for the following year. Both positions are open to any non-freshman who posses a 2.0 grade point average. Applicants must have previous experience and pass an editing or layout test and an interview with the Communications Committee.

The Chilhowean editor will receive half tuition for compensation, and the assistant editor will recive 250 dollars. The Impressions will recieve no compensation, nor does the publication have a firm budget.

To date there have been two applicants for Impressions editor who are presently under consideration. No one has yet applied for Chilhowean editor and applications are still being accepted.

River Alliance Formed, Facts Presented

Editors' note: Next week the Echo will begin a weekly ecology series aimed to increase community awareness of waste, pollution, and other related topics related to the politics of the environment. Dr. Robert Ramger, Assistant Professor of Biology, will begin the series.

As you are no doubt aware from newspaper reports, a Little Tennessee River Alliance has been formed. The Alliance is composed of the Tennessee Conservation League, the Tennessee Chapter of the Science Club, Tennessee Citizen's for Wilderness Planning, Tennessee Endangered Species Committee, Smoky Mountains Hiking Club, Tennessee Council of Audubon Chapters and Trout Unlimited. The Alliance has requested Congress to initiate an Inter-Agency Study of Alternate uses for the Little Tennessee River and Valley.

TVA claims $116 million would be lost if Tellico is not completed. FACT: TVA figures show that $14 million were spent on the concrete and earthen dams and $6 million on the canal. At least $39 million were spent on wages and land purchases as of early 1976. Additional millions have been spent on roads and bridge improvements. All these expenses are already benefiting the public or are recoverable. Intensive agriculture on the bottomland in the Little T Valley will generate $130 million in revenue in 8 years at the 1975 prices.

TVA claims major losses of electrical generating capacity by not completing Tellico. FACT: TVA figures show that Tellico would produce only 0.1% of its generating capacity. The electricity generated by Tellico would have cost 11 times more than the average kilowatt now produced by TVA. If the money spent on Tellico had been invested at 7%, the interest alone would buy more than twice Tellico's generating capacity each year.

TVA claims important flood control benefits lost by not completing Tellico. FACT: TVA figures show that Tellico would reduce water flow into the Tennessee River by less than 3% in a hypothetical valley-wide flood equal to the worst local flood on the Little T in recorded history. This would mean that given these hypothetical conditions, the water in Chattanooga would rise something like 21-½ feet instead of 22.

TVA claims a worsening of the employment situation by the loss of the Tellico Dam. FACT: The 15,000 acres of river bottom land to be flooded could generate $28-30 million and 330-350 jobs annually when put back into intensive agriculture.

TVA claims industrial development in Timberlake to be the most important economic benefit from Tellico. FACT: Boeing Corporation, the Timberlake contractor, withdrew from the project in March 1975, citing the economic unfeasibility of projects of this sort. No new contractor for Timberlake has appeared.

TVA claims $1.4 million annual benefits from recreation for Tellico reservoir because of increased visitation. FACT: Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency figures from 1972 estimated economic benefits of $4.4 million from the Little T used as a trout river over benefits from the Little T dammed up as Tellico reservoir. There are already 20 reservoirs in a 50-mile radius of the project. Most people drive less than 50 miles to TVA lakes.

TVA claims it should be able to continue because it has already spent so much money. FACT: Since the Endangered Species Act was passed and the existence of the snail darter was established, TVA has spent over $65 million on Tellico, more than half of its Tellico budget.

Changes Keep 'a Comin'

(CPS)—In the tradition of "The Times They are A-Changin'," Jimmy Carter has done it again.

In Washington last week, Ernie Green started his new job as assistant secretary of labor, a position that will net him $50,000 per annum. Also last week, in Huntsville, Ark., former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus began his new job as a teller at the First National Bank of Huntsville.

Not too unusual until you consider this: 20 years ago, Gov. Faubus ringed a Little Rock high school with National Guardsmen to stop Green—then 15—from crossing its threshold with eight other black children. After 17 headline-filled days, and a two-hour showdown with President Eisenhower, Faubus capitulated.

Faubus, who said the blockade was "the only thing I could have done at the time," said he recalled meeting Green in Little Rock several years after the incident. "He probably would have been a success anyway, even if he didn't go to Central High School."

Green said that Faubus resisted integration because of "political advantages" and that he, for his part, could recall no meeting with the former governor. "It must," he said quietly, "have been one of the other boys."

Scots split with Bryan

By Fred Strohl
Maryville-Alcoa Times
Staff Writer

Strange happenings occurred during last Wednesday's baseball doubleheader at Athens between Maryville College nad Tennessee Wesleyan College. The Scots won the opener, 5—0, before the umpires declared a 7—0 forfeit victory in TWC's favor during the middle of the nightcap with no clear explanation ever made.

"In all my years of playing and coaching baseball," said MC head mentor Billy Henry, "I've never seen anything like it."

The fifth inning forfeit was declared after MC complained of two decisions by the umpires that were reversed with both benefiting the home team Bulldogs.

The first occurred on a wild pick-off throw from MC catcher Ken Hanna to third baseman Paul Bailey. One run scored with another man left on third base. HOwever, TWC coach Wayne Norfleat claimed both runners should be permitted to score and literally pleaded his point. Home plate umpire David James finally showed sympathy and agreed.

Several minutes later, the Bulldogs had another man on third and an obvious squeeze play on. Henry told pitcher Dave Greenawalt to throw to the TWC batter inside to try and prevent the bunt. Norfleat claimed Henry was ordering his pitcher to try and hit the batter intentionally. In retaliation, the TWC coach yelled from the bench for his batter to throw the bat at Greenawalt if another pitch came inside.

"That was an automatic forfeit right there as far as I'm concerned," said Henry. "That umpire heard what their coach said and should have put a stop to it right away. I was ready to pack the bags and go home after that, but the guys wanted to play it out."

A couple of minutes later, Greenawalt threw to first base on a pick-off move that appeared to be successful. Umpire Jim Walker signaled the runner was out, but then reversed himself and indicated he was safe. Henry began to argue again, but James came out in front of the plate to call the forfeit without any explanation. He then walked off the field towards his car, refusing to talk to anybody.

The MC coach is wanting to file a protest, but is not sure of the proper process due to the fact the Scots are not in a conference.

The Scots were leading the nightcap after four innings, 7—6, but the Bulldogs came back with five runs in the ill-fated fifth. A dispute occurred on one of those runs. Second baseman Andy Limone made a perfect throw to the plate for what appeared to be a force out, but the umpire claimed the runner tagged the plate before Hanna's foot did. That was the beginning of the end for MC.

Johnny Walker and Todd Kohlbusch hit home runs for the Scots earlier as MC scored during four of the five innings. Kevin McKinstry started on the mound for the Scots. He was replaced by Barry Mathis in the fourth. Mathis pitched to two batters before Greenawalt came in to wrap up the MC mound chores.

The Scots put pitching and power together in the opener. Starting pitcher Wayne Williams allowed one hit during five and two-thirds innings of work. Walker and designated hitter Danny Thomas hit MC home runs.

Williams was relieved by Mathis in the sixth after the former walked three men in the inning. The junior hurler from Melbourne, Fla., walked seven all told, striking out four in raising his record to 3—0. Mathis pitched out of the sixth inning with the bases loaded and earned the save.

Maryville College split the doubleheader with Bryan College. The Scots won the opener, 5—3, before the host Lions came back in the nightcap to register a 4—2 triumph.

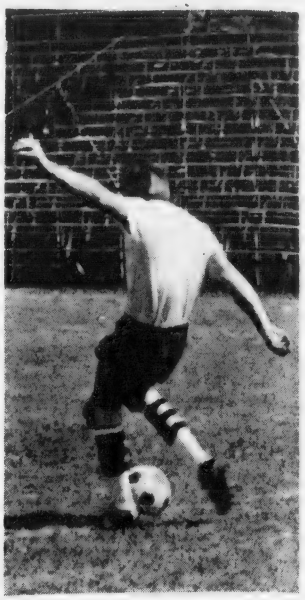
Mike Flagler went all the way Thursday in hurling the Scots to their victory. Flagler allowed three runs, seven hits, walked nobody and struck out one.

Danny Thomas and Dave Greenawalt provided the big sticks for the Scots. Each went two for three. Thomas drove in two of the Scots' five runs.

Dave Osborne got the MC run production started by leading off with a single. Osborne advanced to second base as a result of Greenawalt's single. Joe Moffett then hit a double to plate Osborne which was followed by Thomas' two-base hit that scored Greenawalt and Moffett. Todd Kohlbusch then drove Thomas home with a single for the Scots' fourth run before the former reached second an an error. Kohlbusch scored MC's final run on a single by Johnny Walker.

Bryan hurler Barry West hurled a strong contest in the nightcap to help provide for his team's victory. Pitching all the way, West gave up six hits. Bryan put together a four-run rally in the fifth inning of the second game which spelled the difference in the Lions' win. MC enjoyed a 2—0 advantage going into the Bryan fifth.

Osborne hit a solo homer in the fifth to account for the Scots' final tally of the day.



Their other run came in the second when Walker scored on a single by Ken Hanna. Walker orginally got on base with a single of his own before moving to second on another single by Paul Bailey.

MC hitting was fairly even in the nightcap. No visiting player got more than one hit.

This was also the first time this season that MC got through an entire day without committing an error in the field.

In home action yesterday against Tennessee Tech. the Scots dropped both sides of an error filled double header. Details in next weeks Echo. The next home game is Friday at 1:30 against Lee College.

Kickers lose after 9

The Maryville College Soccer Team dropped their first game of the season Saturday to a tough Tennessee Wesleyan squad. The Scots, who lost 5—2, have nothing to be ashamed of. Both teams were 6—0 going into the contest, with Wesleyan having been scored on only once this season. The same Wesleyan team beat Maryville 10—1 last year.

Scoring for the Scots were Tim Farrell, his first for the season, and Doug Hardy. The Scots, now 6—1, are on their way to their best season ever. They play Bryan College today down in Dayton, Tenn. and will host a four team tournament here Saturday.

Pivotmen Drop Fifth

Without the coach being present and having to hunt for tennis balls before the match, the Men's Tennis Team lost 8—1 to Cumberland College on Monday.

Salvaging the only win for the Scots over the much improved Cumberland College team was the doubles pair of Garren and Reigelsperger, 6—4, 6—4. Losers in doubles were Rigell and Smith, 1—6, 0—6; and Leonard and Henderson, 1—6, 0—6.

Losers in singles were Scott Garren, 1—6, 3—6; Goerge Reigelsperger, 3—6, 2—6; Joe Rigell, 0—6, 2—6; Kevin Lynch, 0—6, 0—6; David Carrick, 2—6, 2—6; and Jun Kasuya, 1—6, 2—6. The team was rained out on Friday and Saturday.

MC Orange Take Tournament

The Maryville College Soccer orange team won the first annual Maryville College Soccer Club Tournament at Honaker Field Saturday. The championship game was an all-MC affair as the orange squad beat the Maryville College blue squad 4–2.

The orange team got into the finals by beating a split squad from the University of Tennessee, El Condor Pasa, 4–1. The blue team won its first-round game from Johnson Bible College of Knoxville, 8–1.

Gus Horcasitas was the top scorer for the orange victory in the finals with two goals. Mark Deakyne and Dave Young both scored one Deakyne and Randy Pasqua had one assist each. Will Way and Charlie McGuire scored one goal apiece for the blue. One assist was credited to Scott Godwin.

Larry Wright went all the way in goal for the orange.

Defense was a key ingredient in the final. Fullbacks Chip Krug, Paul Rintye, and David Franssen for the orange, and Bucky Buckwalter, Bill Walker, and Tim Kelly of the blue all played well.

The first-round victory over El Condor Pasa was led by Horcasitas as he scored all four goals. Rintye and Bart Rutan had one and Two assists respectively.

The blue victory over Johnson Bible College was led by Way's three-goal performance. Shin Tanaka and Doug Hardy contributed two, while Godwin scored one. One assist each was credited to McGuire, Glenn Cunningham and Way;

In the consolation game, El Condor Pasa came out a 4–0 victor over JBC.

May Maddness Approaches

Maryville College's annual May Maddness will be this Sunday, starting at 1:00 p.m. behind Dorm III. The yearly "craziness" is planned by the Social Committee under director Kristie Rom. Several of the events planned are: Tug of war, frisbee throw, and greased pole climb.

One popular event is the bat back drive, as shown in the picture above. The event requires brute strength as a baseball bat must be pushed through a young coed's Back for the team to win.

Rees and Starobin Featured Tonight

Rosalind Rees, soprano, and David Starobin, guitarist, will present a collection of American and European music for voice and guitar in a performing artists concert at The Fine Arts Center Music Hall tonight, May 5, at 8:15 p.m.

Program selections will include songs and a dance arrangement from the Court of Elizabeth such as "Come again, sweet love doth now unite," "Never weather-beaten sail" and "It was a lover and his lass" by John Dowland, Thomas Campian and Thomas Morley.

The duo will also perform "Sailor Boy," a Benjamin Britten arrangement of a folksong from the Appalachian Mountains of Kentucky, along with five other folksongs arranged by Britten from the shires of England.

Other selections will include the Bouree and Gigue from J. S. Bach's Lute Suite No. 1; the Aria from Heitor Villa-Lobos' Bachianas Brasileiras No. 5; and Steps by Gregg Smith, director of the Gregg Smith Singers and husband of Rosalind Rees of the featured duo, as well as selections by songwriters Meyer Kupferman, Elliot Carter, John Cage and Barbara Kolb.

Miss Rees, who previously performed at MC with the Gregg Smith Singers during February Meetings this year, and Starobin began working together in 1973 in a concert of Stephen Foster songs performed at the Smithsonian Institute and recorded by VOX records.

A mutual interest in contemporary music led the duo to commission works by several leading American composers in anticipation of the U. S. Bicentennial. They prepared a recital of "Two Hundred Years of American Music for Soprano and Guitar" and traveled throughout Europe to perform in U. S. Embassies and American Houses in Stockholm, London, Berlin, Munich and Vienna; at the American Academy in Rome; and in the prestigious "Concerts Du Mardi" series in Paris.

The duo also made radio broadcasts for Radio France and Belgium Radio and Television in Brussels.

Upon returning to the U. S., the Rees-Starobin duo performed in a three-day festival in New York entitled "The 20th Century Legacy," which was their NY debut. Donal Henahan of the New York Times reported that Starobin "performed with exemplary technique and great sensitivity" and that Miss Rees "sang superbly, with a dulcet, unforced tone, unusual attention to dynamic subtleties and flawless pitch."

Following the success of this program, the duo recorded an album of contemporary American music for VOX records, the first in a series of voice and guitar records. They will also make a second European tour early in 1978,after which they will record, again for VOX records, "European Music for Voice and Guitar." The concert is free to all MC Faculty, Staff and Students.

Jazz Concert Set

The Maryville College Wind and Jazz Ensembles will present a joint spring concert on Tuesday, May 10, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Other members of the ensemble include Rick Carl on the trumpet, Curtis Leonard, alto saxophone, William Ziegler, piano, Jim Gray, percussion, Steve Lowry, bass, Phil Duncan, guitar, and Bonnie Holsinger, vocalist.

The concert is free and open to all.

The Environmental Crisis- a Lack of Bioethics

by Associate Professor Dr. Robert C. Ramger

One of the basic principles in animal population dynamics is that any population will continue to grow until either one of two things happens—the animals run out of food (due to overpopulation), or they are poisoned by their own waste products. In my opinion, the animal population designated Homo sapiens, is no different from other populations in this respect; and our future will be determined by such.

The idea of running out of food is directly tied into the concept of people numbers. Within the last five years or so, a group of ecologists was asked to estimate the ideal or optimal number of people the earth could sustain with a comfortable standard of living. Taking into consideration such factors as, available living space, sufficient fresh water, food growing potential and natural resources, the group came up with a figure of a little more than one billion people living at a standard which would be comfortable, but much lower than the one we presently have in this country. Interesting! We now have in the neighborhood of four billion people living (and dying) on the earth. Since the 215 million of us in this country consume almost 1/3 of the world's energy and other natural resources, where does that put the rest of the 3 billion, 785 million other people?

Most ecologists contend that if we were to come up with all the answers to today's environmental pollution problems—cleaner air and water, getting rid of our sewage and garbage properly, producing enough energy for everyone, we would still be in trouble tomorrow because of the new 60 million people that will be added to our world population by next year. And what about the 62 million new people the year after! I don't think proper education will do the trick either. I know of some highly educated people who are fully aware of the overpopulation crisis and still elect to have a large number of children.

The second limiting factor of population survival dealing with the build-up of waste products is really my favorite area of study. In my training as a fresh-water ecologist (Limnologist), I have been very aware of how quickly man is ruining one of earth's most precious endowments—clean fresh water.

Several years ago I read one of the most interesting short articles I think I have ever read, "This Watery Planet," by Rutherford Platt, in the March 1971 issue of Audobon magazine. The article deals with—the water molecule! It expresses a deep reverence for this seemingly simple and common substance. Let me share with you some of Platt's sensitivity and awareness in this area.

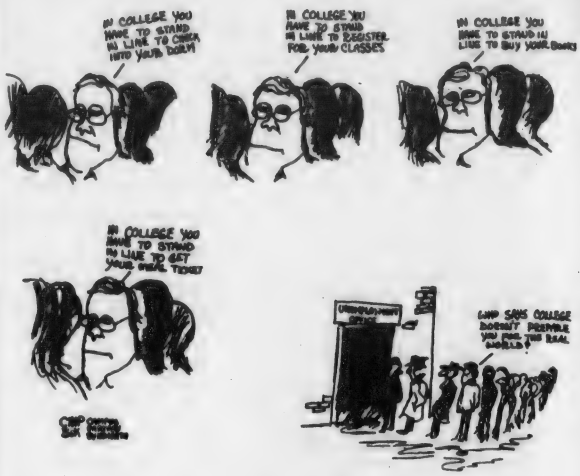
"Space scientists say that the liquid state is very rare in the Universe, that water is the only liquid that forms naturally on Earth's surface, that an H_2O molecule—there are trillions of them in a drop of water—is not simply a particle of water, but a precision instrument comparable to a transistor in the way it can organize electronic circuits that awaken energies and transform things.

Earth might look to an observer in outer space like a big drop of water because 70% of the crust is covered by oceans and lakes. In contrast to the other planets of our solar system, which are dead dry, Earth sparkles like a diamond as it swings in orbit around the sun.

On the other hand, we here on Earth have not regarded it as extraordinary. This is not because of the brilliant charade of H_2O. It is because human beings naturally have the same viewpoint toward water as do fish—it is the natural environment. This is also the land creatures' acceptance of air and forests. The media of existance are taken for granted as long as they appear to be inexhaustible."

One biological fact is that every normally functioning living cell must be surrounded by a liquid environment, hence fresh water is necessary to sustain life. Of the water in our biosphere, only about 2.7% of it is considered fresh water. Man needs that to live. But for what do we use our fresh water lakes, streams, and rivers? We presently use them as our cesspool, garbage dump, and disposal areas for out waste chemicals, insecticides, and possible radioactive waste products.

I feel one of the most challenging environmental problems facing man today other than controlling population growth and finding new sources of energy, is finding alternative ways to use human sewerage, recycling solid gargage and waste chemicals, and controlling insect pests by natural means and not by synthetic chemicals. All of there areas are seriously degrading the quality of our fresh drinking water and the ocean.



Here are a couple of logical answers to these problems, but too inconvenient for us to seriously consider on a large scale at this time. Use sewage as a farm fertilizer and source of fuel instead of depositing it into the local water way. Don't use things once and throw them away—recycle paper, plastics, all types of containers, etc. A great book to read which describes ways you and I could get involved now is, Everyman's Guide to Ecological Living, by Greg Cailliet.

To sum up my feelings on this subject, I would like to use the works of Barry Commoner, in his book, The Closing Circle:

"Any living thing that hopes to live on the earth must fit into the ecosphere or perish. The environmental crisis is a sign that the finely sculptured fit between life and its surrounding has begun to corrode. As the links between one living thing and another, and between all of them and their surroundings, begin to break down, the dynamic interactions that sustain the whole have begun to falter and, in some places, stop."

I wonder if in one hundred years from now the question will go unanswered, "Has there ever been intelligent life on earth?"

Summer in Washington?

The Washington Center for Learning Alternatives, with which Maryville College is affiliated, is offering two three-week workshops this summer, 6—24 June and 8—26 August.

Paul Duke, moderator of PBS's "Washington Week in Review," will be the leader, assisted by prominent members of the international broadcast media. Activities will include seminars and visits to centers of government and culture that affect the Washington environment and the making of American foreign policy.

Cost for each workshop, including housing in Oxford House, the WCLA facility in Central Washington, will be $299. Applications and a $25 deposit must be received by 15 May.

Maryville College will award one course credit for successful completion of the workshop. Further information is available in the Dean's Office.

For The Young At Heart

The Maryville College Playhouse will present two plays for children May 6 and 7 in the College Theatre.

The two plays, "Charlie Brown and His Friends" and "For Love of a Worm," are directed by Sharon Crane and have casts of college and community members.

"Charlie Brown" engages John Morton in the lead role with a complementing cast of Judy Thweatt (Snoopy), Grant Bartelt (Schroeder), Don Barnard (Linus), Terry Holley (Lucy), and Betsy Wood (Peppermint Patty). Heidi Parunak is the assistant director.

Ruth Cartlidge has the title role (Ooie-Gooie) in "For Love of a Worm." She is supported by Tim Stuart (Leafy-Limb), Liza Howe (Jennifer), Rene Christofferson (Slinky-Stinky), Ruth Ann Wilbanks (Aurora Belle the Red Feather Ring Digger Bird), Tillman Crane (Dapple Apple), and Judy Corliss (the Good Fairy). The assistant director for "Worm" is John Morton, and music for both presentations is provided by Kyle McComb.

Mr. Jones stated that the productions are "for children but not with children." His decision to present these selections was based on a desire to balance the school year with a contrasting element. He describes the stage as "a rainbow of color and movement" and the show as "fun for children and adults."

Performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. and tickets may be purchased at the door: $1.00 for students and .50 for children under 12. "Charlie Brown and His Friends" and "For Love of A Worm" promise to be entertaining for all—especially the young at heart.

Thinclads Take Second

The Maryville College thinclads took second place in the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Championships (TIAC) Saturday, at Memphis State with 78 points. Southwestern at Memphis was best with 130 points in the 5 team track championship.

The talent of the Maryville squad was evident. Steve Harrison took three first places, Dan Murphy took one, and Tony Scalise took second in the pole vault but tied the school record at 13'6". Harrison's 9.9 tied his own previous record in the 100 yard dash.

Saturday's results:

First place finished by Dan Murphy—440, 51.8; Steve Harrison—100, 9.9 (tied school record), 220, 22.9, shot put, 45'.

Tuesday, April 26, Maryville traveled to Mars Hill and notched a 75-64 win over the Lions.

Frist place: Jim Richard—880, 2.08.9; Dan Moelter—120 H.H., 19.2; Dan Murphy—440, 53.2; Steve Harrison—100 yd. dash, 10.0; Terry Gardener—440 I. H., .69; Joe Whitehead—2 mile run; Tony Scalise—pole vault, 12'; Spencer—high jump; Harrison—shot put.

Second places: Richard—mile run; Gardener—120 H. H.; Moelter—440 run; Harrison—220; Richard—long jump; Lasley—Javelin.

Third place: Loyd—long jump; Baumgardener—shot put; Mynatt—javelin.

Scots Take Tech

What a difference a few ballgames make. Coach Bill Henry's Scots bumped off Tennessee Tech twice Sunday, May 1, 5—3 and 4—0 after having lost two previous eight inning decisions 11—6 and 6—5 Tuesday, April 26. Ironically, Sunday's first affair with Tech was also tied after 7 innings.

Maryville dropped two agonizing defeats April 30 to Lee College 10—9 and 7—4, before ending a five game losing streak at Cookeville Sunday.

Igniting a rally that produced two important victories in the eyes of Maryville's playoff hopes, the Scots knocked off highly regarded Tenn. Tech, who had beaten UT two times last week. Scoring Maryville's first run, Joe Moffett reached first via a second basemen's error, traveled to second on Ierulli's walk and came home on Todd Kohlbusch's 2 RBI triple. Ierulli's score gave Maryville a 2—0 lead.

Tech scored 3 runs before pinch hitter Steve Savage singled, reached second on an error, and tied the score 3—3 on Joe Moffett's deep sacrifice.

Having learned a lesson about 8 inning games, Maryville controlled the extra eighth inning this time. Kohlbusch struck out, but a passed ball on the third strike allowed him to reach first. Walker singled Kohlbusch to second then third sacker Paul Bailey ripped the game winning hit, a 2 RBI double. Greenawalt's single plated Bailey to end the scoring for the day in MC's favor 5—3.

MC 4 — Tn. Tech. 0

Danny Thomas knicked an RBI single after Osborne and Moffett had walked to score Osborne, who had stolen second, for the only run the Scots needed, so it turned out. But a big sixth inning rally with 3 runs scored gave Maryville all the insurance it needed.

Moffett and Thomas singled, then Johnny Walker singled home Moffett. Bailey again provided the big stick by scoring Thomas and Walko to up the lead 4—0

MC 9, Lee 10

Having perhaps his best day this season, Joe Moffett knocked the ball crazy for most of Maryville's hits; 3—3, 3 runs, and 2 RBI. Designated hitter Tony Ierulli was also perfect with 2—2 and a solo RBI.

MC 4 — Lee 7

Ierulli again headed Maryville's batters with 2 RBI and going 2—4. Greenawalt 2—3 and Bailey 2—2 also combined for added hitting power to a losing cause.

Maryville College will carry a 15—9 worksheet to Knoxville today to test the Big Orange for a single afternoon affair. The next home game sees Emory and Henry VS the Scots Sat., May 7.

Men's and Women's Tennis

Coach Sharon Brown's Women's Tennis Club upped their record to 2—3 with a 6—3 win over Tennessee Wesleyan Monday, April 25.

Scott Garren was victorious in his singles match and Junichi Kasuya and Joe Rigell combined for a doubles victory in Maryville College's 7—2 loss to Walter's State last week.

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 62 No. 26 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 12, 1977

Coach Don Elia (standing right) with three All-Americans.

Wrestling coach Don Elia was released recently due to budget cut-backs. Mr. Elia is a former Dean of Men and was currently a recruiter and freshman financial aid officer. As a wrestling coach, Mr. Elia has founded the Mid-South Wrestling Association and has produced five All-Americans in the past two years.

Mr. Elia's record is currently 112 wins, 31 losses, and 2 ties.

A petition has been circulated with over 400 signatures at press time. Wayne Dunn, a two time All-American wrestler writes on page two in regard to his reaction to Mr. Elia's dismissal.

Brotsky to speak at CIV

Ellen Brotsky, secretary-treasurer of the US-China Peoples Friendship Association, will speak on "How China Kicked the Drug Habit" at Maryville College Wednesday, May 18.

Her lecture, set for 1:10 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall, is part of the non-Western course on China, taught by Dr. Wallace Lewis, associate professor of history and Dr. Harry B. Price, professor and chairman of the economics department.

The guest speaker will address students from the China course as well as other interested members of the campus and community at large. She will discuss drug use in pre-1949 China and how the Peoples' Republic was able to solve the drug problem.

Immediately following the class lecture at 2:20 p.m., students in the China course, assisted by "experts" from the campus and community, will host a Chinese snack bar in the FAC lounge featuring two gourmet Chinese dishes. They will sell at cost crisp spring rolls, filled with meat and vegetables and fried in deep-fat, and fried rice with ham and shrimp. All guests will receive a gift pair of chopsticks and a free cup of tea.

Prior to her afternoon talk, Ms. Brotsky will discuss "Women in China" at the MC faculty luncheon meeting from 12 to 1 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Room. The program begins at 12:30 p.m.

The guest lecturer, who is concluding a speaking tour of the southern states, has made two trips to the People Republic of China. On the most recent one in October, 1975, she visited a minority region, attended a divorce trial and met privately with the then acting head of state, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

Ms. Brotsky has been a member of the steering committee of the U. S.–China Peoples' Frinedship Association since its founding in 1974.

Conserving Energy Saves 100 G's

Efforts to conserve energy at Maryville College have saved over $100,000 in 1976 alone, according to Hugh R. Crawford Jr., business manager for the College.

Based on current rates, Crawford explained, if MC had consumed the same amounts of fuel, electricity and water that were consumed five or six years ago, the 1976 utility costs would have been $102,747 more than they were.

"This amount represents $171.25 per student and illustrates that every effort, no matter how small, made by students, faculty and staff saves actual dollars," Crawford stated.

Even with conservation, total utility costs for MC in 1976 jumped to $203,493.20 due to colder weather and escalating costs of fuel, water and electricity.

The most dramatic rise in cost was that of fuel. The cost of gas and oil for the central heating plant jumped from $42,466.81 in 1972 to $116,275.65 last year, an increase of 175 percent.

Crawford attributes the reduced consumption to the cooperation and energy conservation efforts of all MC students, faculty and staff, and especially the maintenance department under the supervision of Ralph Sullivan.

According to Crawford, MC began exploring ways to cut back consumption when utility bills began spiraling in 1971 with the additional use of several new buildings on campus. An all-out attack of wasted heat, lights and water began in 1973 when the national energy crunch focused added attention on the problem.

Efforts at MC have included everything from individuals turning off unnecessary lights to putting up with hot water for limited times only, reduced lighting in classrooms and thermostats lowered to 68 degrees.

"The drive to cut out waste is never ending," he added. "Even with our present conservation efforts, costs will continue to rise, and we will have to find ways to conserve energy even more just to keep up with these rising costs."

Senior CIV Friday

On Friday, the 13th of May, Seniors will be honored! Starting the day's recognition of these scholarly folks will be a CIV Program at 9:20 a.m. in Wilson Chapel. It is during this time that Special Mock Senior Awards will be presented to those most deserving individuals. Also, some Seniors have some talent, and they will display it here. The CIV Program will include a slide show, too. The whole porgram should be a treat, so everyone (not just Seniors) should come for fun.

Following the CIV Program will be a MANDATORY Graduation Practice. All Seniors must attend this meeting at 10:30 in the Chapel. See Dr. Lewis if there is a problem for you to meet at this time.

The evening meal on this honored day will hold some goodies for the Seniors. A special menu will be prepared and the dining hall will be decked out in honor of these special people.

Elia Released

Students react

There has been a faculty member of Maryville College released, fired, call it what you want. This man has contributed to this institution in more ways than just a wrestling coach or administrative recruiter. The man I'm speaking of is Donald P. Elia.

As a wrestling coach I will mention a few of his accomplishments since taking over the reins of a losing program.

He has never suffered a losing season while taking on such national powers as Notre Dame, Indiana, University of Tennessee, Georgia Tech, and others to name a few. In only his second year as head coach he was named the Southeastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association's Coach of the Year. The same year he founded the Mid-South Wrestling Association and has claimed that team title three of the last five years. Nationally he brought the Scots from 48th in the Nation (Division III) to 10th this past year, and a present pre-season ranking of 8th. His overall record to date is 112—31—2 and five All-Americans in the past two years. He is the winningest coach on campus today.

As a first year recruiter he brought in over 40 students, not only wrestlers, and all but 5 remain on campus today. This year he has once again stimulated such an interest to bring in over 40 more students, some who are wrestlers and some with interests in other fields. In tuition alone both years he has surpassed the $150,000 mark and I call that more than contributing.

Now what is to be done with all of this positive effort put forth by Don Elia? Is this man who has certainly opened the eyes of wrestlers nation-wide and influenced a great deal of high school students to attend Maryville College going to be released? This is a question that pains me and many others on this campus and off. My question is, what stable institution would let such a plus slip from their grasps when he has done so much for them.

But his reward for such efficient work is to be fired in the prime of his career due to a budget cut-back. My sentiments are that there is a better place to cut back on the budget than Don Elia.

Co-Chairman Stuble Speaks

Next year has the potential to be a great year of progress here at Maryville College. All that's required of us as a campus community is to realize this potential and attempt to achieve it. The past April 14th election for All College Council representatives was very successful and the new type of leadership that emerged could prove to be very beneficial, but only with the support as well as the involvement of the entire campus. This involvement will be the key to whether our ACC will be successful or not.

Serving as President Anderson's co-chairman on the ACC next year will be a great opportunity for me to exert my energies in a constructive manner. I see my role on the new ACC as being the truest representative of the Maryville College student. I hope that everyone on the campus will see in me the one true medium by which they can have their thoughts and opinions expressed in a concerned manner.

The opportunity of serving as head resident this year has given me a unique insight into the wants and needs of my fellow students here at MC. Working closely with Dr. Kramer and Dean Richardson has taught me to understand and appreciate the roles they play on our campus. Chaplain Stewart is yet another unique individual that will also take it upon himself to see that the students are represented fairly and squarely on the ACC.

In addition to these capable representatives, there is one more person that needs to be mentioned for our ACC to be effective. That person is YOU! This next week will be the time when we pick the new committee members on next year's General Committees which are responsible directly to the All College Council itself. These General Committees are where all the action is. It is through the work of these committees that the ACC hears and acts upon all the various proposals that effect us all. Without competent people filling these Committees the work of the ACC itself will be greatly hampered. The importance of these committees can not be exaggerated. If you want to see things moving next year and are truly interested in one of the following committees, please sign up next week by seeing me personally or fill out forms that you might receive at your post office box.

Elections Committee Ways and Means Committee
CIV Committee
Teacher Education Council
Academic Standards for Faculty and Students Committee
Worship and Special Meetings Committee
Community Outreach Committee
World Concern Committee
Social/Recreational Committee
Community Standards and Residential Life Committee Food Committee
Cultural Life Committee
Intercollegiate Athletics Committee
Communications Committee

Forming these Committees is the first and perhaps most important step to a successful campus government. Next year ACC will only be as successful as we want it to be. Student interest and participation will be the key to our ultimate success next year as a campus community. My first job as the new ACC co-chairman is to urge everyone to take time out next week to show your interest and concerns to help form these all-important General Committees.

The concert, set for 7 p.m. on the Greenbelt behind the Blount County Courthouse, will also include light classical works and Broadway show tunes performed by the orchestra.

The concert will feature light classical selections, broadway show tunes and a guitar concerto with Phillip Sanzone, instructor at the MC Preparatory School for the Arts, as guitar soloist.

Letters to the Editors

The Editors
The Highland Echo

It is not often that I appear in print here and when I do it is usually to publicly thank an individual or a group. This time it has to be different despite the risk of alienating friends.

In my opinion we've got to get away from our super fan antics at athletic events, including special cheering sections at courtside in basketball and directly behind the opposition's bench at baseball games. The respective practices are commonly known as "bush league" in athletic parlance, and if there is anyone who doesn't know what that means I'm sure it can be looked up in the slang dictionary in the Library.

The worst part of it is that these super fans are mostly our own athletes, either out of their season or not playing that day, and they ought to know better than anyone that little of any consequence is settled on an athletic field with the mouth. I know how it all happened. We got that kind of treatment at another institution and it was hard to take. Having experienced that treatment I know how hard it is to take. But why join the bush leaguers when it is a lot easier to show class instead?

And the two games I saw during which the super fans were in action were perfect examples of the futility of the tactics. In the basketball game the margin of victory for the opposition was, I believe, one point. Toward the end of the game we had an excellent chance to win. The referee could easily have called a technical on our super fans for intruding on the court (which they did more than once on top of obstructing the view of fans in the stands) and cost us a close game. As it turned out we got beat anyway. In the baseball game we had the spectacle of our super fans getting overly involved in a game between two other schools, neither of whom I'd root for if I was paid to do so. I had to play against them too often. The team our super fans rooted for was once our most royal opposition and the one they rooted against was the one that gave them a bad time a year ago. When it was 9—2 for our favorite, along about the seventh inning, the glee was unbounded. When the side we were heckling won 15—9 with late inning outbursts, things got awfully quiet and super fan was defeated again.

The right of fans to sit in the stands and say about what they please is pretty well established. That's where ours should sit. I love athletics and our athletes, and I pull for them every chance I get. But I love our lads and lasses much better as players than super fans.

Sincerely
Raymond I. Brahams, Jr.

Dear Editor;

The May 5th issue of the Highland Echo covered the Maryville—Tennessee Tech baseball game exclusively, but failed to mention that the pitcher, Kevin Lee McKinstry, pitched a 4—0 shut-out. Since shut-outs are not a common thing at Maryville, we think Kevin should at least be mentioned in the article's review. In addition, we think Kevin should receive special recognition for his twentieth pitching victory.

Congratulations, Kevin!
Signed,
The Kevin McKinstry Club

Nixon Explains Himself

Ed Loper

Last Wednesday, Richard Nixon ended his three year exile. He came forward to try to explain his part in the national disgrace of Watergate. It is difficult to separate purely merecenary motivation from a sincere desire to explain and be accepted. Perhaps the two are woven together.

I had expected the usual "sob story" from Nixon. [illegible] word was first released the ex-president had ed to an interview with id Frost, I had expected another "Checkers" speech. In another instant, I began to have dim recollection of teary farewells after the California gubernatorial race of 1962, and, of course leaving office in 1974. None of this, however, was evident Wednesday night.

If one looked hard enough, he could see a different Richard Nixon. Initially, I walked away from the interview with a great deal of hostility. After a few days of reflection, however, I feel something quite different. I can never forgive Nixon for what he did to the American people, but I am less quick to condemn forever.

Nixon came as close as I believe he ever will to apologizing to our nation. He admitted that he had lied; he had used bad judgement; and that he had gone to the "edges of the law." He would not, however, grovel. If a man has nothing else, he must have his pride. In his own mind, Richard Nixon still does not believe he did anything wrong.

To make any coverup a criminal affair, Nixon says, we must consider the intent. His intent, he was quick to point out, was really quite moral. He intended to prevent a messy "slopover" into the Office of the President. He wished to protect the integrity of his office and to protect the integrity of those who might be innocent. Of course the innocent—Mitchell, Erlichman, and Halderman—were as guilty as sin. The "slopover" was worse than it ever need to have been; the political game was played much too long.

What Nixon failed to do Wednesday night was to put his painfully candid remarks in perspective. As the record stands now, what he has said appears to be rationalization. At the time, he was dealing with a group of people—both allies and enemies—who work under the purely Machiavellian concept that the "ends justify the means." Evidence of this type of methodology exists with John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and even Franklin Roosevelt. Nixon knew what his people were doing as well as what the opposition was doing. Politics seems to have become a dirty business; he accepted that. The President was left holding a bag of dirty linen, and he held on to it for too long.

We might also say that the people of Watergate were incapable of handling the power entrusted to them. The old saying that "power corrupts" certainly holds true here. Nixon had the power—and he abused it. His goal was to earn a place in history by establishing world peace. He was willing to do anything to keep the power to achieve his ends. In the end, that power turned on him. His place in history, and society, is condemnation. He is not accepted by his people. Except for his family and a few close friends, he is alone.

I could see this in his eyes on Wednesday. He desperately wanted to explain and to be accepted. Isolation is painful. Of course, he left no stone unturned. The set, for example, was carefully constructed to set a mood for us. Personally, I was reminded of a speech he made about the time that Erlich-

NORTHERN IRELAND'S GENERAL strike was a failure to the Protestant forces in Ulster. Rev. Ian Paisley, head of the Protestant movement, called the strike in hopes of destroying the Provisional Irish Republican Army, and hoping to restore the protestants to power.

Many of the Protestants, numbering about one million, did not participate in the strikes, fearing that Mr. Paisley wishes to break totally with England. The workers of the major generating units in Northern Ireland, who were the main factors in the success of the 1974 strike which brought down the coalition government, stayed on the job thus ruining all hopes for success.

MORE THAN 1,400 DEMONSTRATORS were arrested last week for trespassing, after they would not clear off the construction site in New Hampshire.

The non-violent demonstrators were booked and jailed after refusing to clear off the land. After refusing to post bail until they were all released on their personal recognizance, the Governor, Meldrim Thompson, informed judges to start sentencing them. The sentence is fifteen days in jail.

The construction permits will allow TVA to complete construction of the plant, including all nuclear and safety-related portions.

Maryville College's track team, coached by Dick Taylor, concluded its 1977 season over the weekend by bowing to the University of the South at Sewanee, 75—69.

The highlight of the day for the Scots was an MC record in the pole vault set by freshman Tony Scalise. His highest vault was 14—3 that bettered his old mark of 13—6 which was the previous school record.

Soccer Wins Tenth

The Maryville College Soccer Club gained their tenth victory this spring against just two losses. The Scots beat an over-rated East Tennessee State University team 7—2 Saturday. Scoring for the Scots were Gus Horcasitas (3), Will Way, Doug Hardy, Scott Godwin, and Shin Tanaka. Gaining assists on the Way and Tanaka goals were Mark Deakyne and Tim Farrell respectively.

Also playing well were John Malozzi, Charlie McGuire, and Glenn Cunningham. Playing well in the goals for Maryville were Larry Wright for the first half, and Bart "Ralph" Rutan for the second. They finish their season this week with two away games at Cleveland State and ETSU.

Men's Tennis

The Maryville College Men's Tennis Team did not fare well in two matches against Tusculum and Milligan College last week.

man and Halderman were fired. In this instance he proclaimed that he was "no crook" with a bust of Lincoln and of Washington on either side of him, as well as a picture of Pat and the kids on the desk. He wanted us to have pity.

Of course, pity is not in order. There is no doubt that what he haddone is wrong. I am not ready to forgive, and I am personally infuriated that Frost and Nixon are making a small fortune on what should have been said in court. At any rate, the point is that there is still a lesson to be learned. Richard Nixon, as broken as he is, is a reflection of the modern political climate. His downfall has paved the way for Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, but that is not enough. America needs to look at men like Richard Nixon, Wayne Hayes and Ray Blanton and then look at the structure of their government. The candid remarks and perspectives of a man like Nixon can be most helpful. We need to know the values and morals of political politics and then alter the structure so that they can be changed. Watergate should have been lesson enough.

Scots Drop to UT

The Maryville College baseball team let the big one get away at Hudson Field Thursday, May 5, against the U. T. Vols. In a nine inning game, Maryville was down 6—4 but had the bases loaded with no outs. The Scots fortunes sank as they could only score one run and lost 6—5 to the favored Vols.

Dave Osborne put Maryville on the scoreboard early in the first inning. Osborne singled, stole second and scored on DH Danny Thomas' RBI single.

Maryville gathered two more runs as a result of an error by UT's third baseman. Johnny Walker and Ken Hanna walked, then (designated runner) Savage and Walker advanced on Wright's walk and scored to give MC a 3—2 lead after two innings.

Paul Bailey's third inning single scored Joe Moffett who had singled earlier for another run, but UT's Howard knocked a 2 run homer and tied the score 4—4.

Maryville's ninth inning upset bit fell 1 run short after it seemed that Maryville was sure to win. Wright led off with a walk, Greenawalt singled, and Dave Osborne was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Maryville's third batter Joe Moffett bounced a grounder to the shortstop who turned a double play. Only Wright scored.

The final out, a deep fly to rightfield, ended Maryville's only chance of upsetting UT this season.

MC 5 Tusculum 6, MC 8 Tusculum 3

MC blew an early 5—1 lead and lost a 6—5 decision to Tusculum, before coming back in the nightcap to win 8—3. After scoring 5 runs in the first two innings the Scots went scoreless for the remainder of the game. Johnny Walker (1 homerun, 1 single and 2 RBI) and Dave Greenawalt (2 singles) were Maryville's only offensive guns as the Scots managed just 4 hits. The Scots had a big day running the bases. In all they robbed eight stolen bases from the Pioneers. Dave Osborne had three. Senior hurler, Kevin McKinstry went the distance and was tagged with the MC loss. Maryville held the upper hand until the last inning. MC had 2 outs and a 5—4 lead, then Tusculum scored two runs on two Maryville errors.

Ironically, Maryville's first four batters got hits in the nightcap while in the first game the Scots hit a total of 4 hits. Again striking early MC led 5—2 after three innings. Second baseman Andy Limone played well offensively and defensively. The second sacker had 3 singles, 3 runs scored, 3 assists, 3 putouts and 2 stolen bases. Joe Moffett had 2 singles and 2 RBI's and Greenawalt slashed a double and single for the Scots. Two runs in the fifth sealed the Maryville win as Tusculum could not ignite any scoring power. Throwing 6 strikeouts and getting the win was Danny Thomas. Maryville's record is 16—11.

Pollio Recieves Teacher Award

Naylor and Fowler are runners-up

Dr. Marilyn R. Pollio, assistant professor of education at Maryville College, was named the College's Outstanding Teacher of the Year at this week's faculty luncheon.

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, associate professor of English, and Dr. Robert J. Naylor, assistant professor of chemistry, were named runners-up.

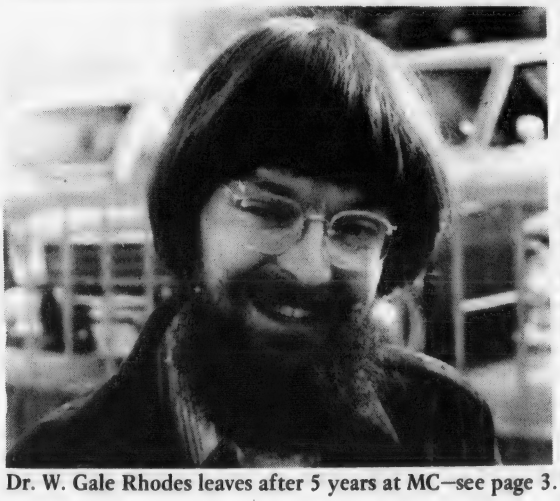
Winners were selected by decision of student members of the Instructional Program Committee after studying nominations made by members of the senior class. Seniors were asked to take into account the teacher's ability to motivate learning, sensitivity to material, knowledge of subject matter and involvement in student affairs.

This year's Outstanding Teacher joined the MC faculty in 1973. Prior to that she was assistant professor of psychology at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville. She also held the position of teaching assistant in education at UT-K and was a reading consultant for schools in Newport and Campbell, Claiborne and Sevier Counties. She taught elementary school for three years in Michigan.

Dr. Pollio earned her B.A. degree from Brooklyn College in New York and the M.S. and Ed.D. from UT-K. She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi and Pi Lambda Theta honor societies.

Dr. Pollio has published several scholarly articles on presented papers on children's use of metaphoric language, her special area of interest. She and her husband, Dr. Howard R. Pollio, UT-K psychology professor, co-authored "The Development of Metaphoric Language Usage" which appeared in the Journal of Psycholinguistic Research in 1974. She is currently involved in research on creativity and figurative language.

Several students reacted to Pollio's selection as Outstanding Teacher in many positive ways. Graduating senior Sheri Bone was very glad to hear of her selection and "found her to be very fair, practising what she teaches and I've enjoyed having her as a professor." Another graduating senior, David Adcock, added his opinion that "she doesn't have excess baggage in her lectures and there's nothing extraneous about her methods of teaching." Junior Elementary Education major Jane Monroe cited Dr. Pollio's "enthusiasm and the positive classroom atmosphere" as possible examples of why she was selected.



The Pollios have three children, David, Michele and Jonathan, and reside in Knoxville.

Dr. Fowler, who was also runner-up for this award last year, has taught at MC since 1969. She has an undergraduate degree in biology from Birmingham Southern, a B.D. in New Testament from Van-

Schedule for Alumni and Graduates

Two receive Degrees

Maryville College will award two honorary doctoral degrees to two of its distinguished graduates at the College's 158th Commencement program Monday, May 30, at 10:30 a.m. in Wilson Chapel.

Dr. Jonathan Edward "Ted" Kidder Jr., professor of oriental art at the International Christian University in Tokyo, will receive the honorary Doctor of Literature (Litt.D), and noted Pennsylvania heart surgeon Julian Jo Johnson, M.D., the honorary Doctor of Science (D.S.).

Dr. Kidder, currently the visiting distinguished Maude T. Kerns Professor of Oriental Art at the University of Oregon, is a 1943 Maryville graduate. Dr. Johnson, a pioneer in cardiothoracic surgery and emeritus professor of surgery at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, graduated from MC in 1927. He has been called "probably the finest technical surgeon the University (of Pennsylvania) has had in this century" by his associate and partner, Jonathan E. Rhoads, M.D.

Dr. Kidder, after graduating with a B.A. degree from MC, earned his M.A. from New York University in 1949 and his Ph.D. there in 1955. He joined the faculty of ICU in 1956.

In addition to his teaching duties there, he has served as director of the ICU Archaeology Research Center since 1975 and directed excavations for the Metropolitan Tokyo government in West Tokyo since 1970.

He has been a visiting lecturer and professor twice previously at the University of Oregon as well as at Yale and Washington Universities and a national lecturer at the Archaeological Institute of America.

A well-published author on the subject of oriental art, he has written 12 books and contributed over 35 articles, some 20 book reviews and several edited sections to professional journals.

He is a member of the College Art Association, Association for Asian Studies, American Anthropological and Archaeology Associations, the Archaeological and Anthropological Societies of of Japan, the Tokyo Oriental Ceramic Society and the American Association of University Professors.

Dr. Kidder's wife, Cordelia Dellinger, is a 1944 MC graduate. Numerous members of his family including three "leaving with a curious perspective"

A Senior looks at his Maryville Experience

A few weeks ago, I was leaving a Morningside reception given in honor of the graduating class. Several times over the course of the evening I heard Mrs. Copeland say, with a trace of sadness, that "it will be hard to leave, but it is good to know that we are all graduating together."

The Copelands are leaving after sixteen years of service to the college. I am leaving after three years of study, and indeed, it will be hard to leave. Despite the mobility of our culture, it is difficult to break roots that are carefully nurtured over a period of years.

Maryville College means many things. Perhaps most of all, it means people. From the day I arrived on campus, I have been impressed with the warmth and freedom I have found here. It was easy to make friends. Long ago, I became accustomed to having people walk into my life, make an impression, and then leave. Yet, all of a sudden, I find it difficult to walk across campus and look at faces I may never see again. I suppose that is a part of growing.

Maryville seems to be a place to grow. As with everything worthwhile, there have been good times and bad times. When things seem to be going well, a wall has a habit of popping up to stop everything. Yet, I have managed somehow to find the gates. As Dean Blair carefully pointed out one day, a successful life belongs to the person who can find the gates. I could not see the logic of that then, but I think I do now.

The real world is only a week away. That is really hard to believe. Six months ago I hated Maryville College and all that it stood for. Now I hate to leave—it has become a part of me and I love it.

Although I have not always agreed with college policy or the administration, I have always respected it. For this reason, it is significant that I am graduating with the Copelands. They have loved Maryville College enough to serve it for sixteen years—through the best of times and the worst of times. I respect very deeply this type of dedication even if I do not always agree with resultant policy.

This dedication is characteristic of Maryville College. Time and time again I have seen this dedication in people who really care. These people have suffered through my anger and frustrations as they patiently tried to make me understand alternative ways of seeing the world. They came from all directions. I can never express to my good friend Tim what his support has meant in the last two years. Various members of the faculty and staff—particularly the Religion/Philosophy people—have finally shown me that I do have worth of some kind.

I came to Maryville College with a curious set of attitudes and ideas. I leave with a perspective that is changed but is perhaps just as curious. I have seen by example—and non-example—what scholarship really is and what it means to be an ethical and authentic human form. The contrast is profound.

I arrived at Maryville three years ago, a frightened freshman, standing alone in the airport trembling at an unknown future. I leave as a frightened senior, still trembling at an unknown future, yet standing firm on the foundations of the past. by Ed Loper

A Call for continuing constructive dialogue on campus racial situation

Another senior, another viewpoint

Overall, my four year career at Maryville College has been a profitable one. While at Maryville, I have been able to acquire and refine basic skills such as reading, writing, and thinking, necessary for success in the real world. These fundamental abilities have developed enough to enable me to be admitted to law school.

I am particularly pleased with the opportunity I have had to advance my communications skills. I have also enjoyed the chance to gain experience in the areas of service and leadership with the Black Student Association, All-College Council, a tutorial program at a local church, and my job as Men's Intramural Sports Manager. In spite of all these rewarding things, my stay at Maryville College has not been totally satisfying.

As a Black student at Maryville College, I have experienced my worst moments. These trying times, due to narrow-mindedness and racial prejudice by many members of the Maryville College community have caused me to question my choice of colleges several times. I have stayed here because I realized that Maryville College offered an exceptional education.

Many times I have felt that I was an alien, intruding on this campus. A vivid example of this is intramural basketball. For the four seasons that I have been here, the predominately Black intramural basketball team, Southside, has been constantly harrassed, on the court and sometimes off. No matter who the opposing team was, spectators, the major problem causers, turned out to root against Southside. Maryville's intercollegiate athletic opponents are treated better.

The basically White Maryville College education though preparing me for a basically White America, leaves me with a cultural void. This, however, has challenged me to seek out information about my African-American heritage.

The situation at Maryville is not hopeless. There are some openminded individuals on this campus who help keep the Black Experience at Maryville from being a totally empty one. I trully hope that the Black Experience will continue to be present at Maryville College.

For this to happen, there will need to be some attitude modifications. This is easier said than done. I have tried to maintain an open, constructive dialogue on the racial situation on this campus with several of its members. Better understanding between the various racial groups on campus is essential for improving the atmosphere at Maryville.

I hope that many others, regardless of their race, will continue this dialogue, confident that some day Maryville College will be able to boast of an environment where all its constituents can feel very much at home.

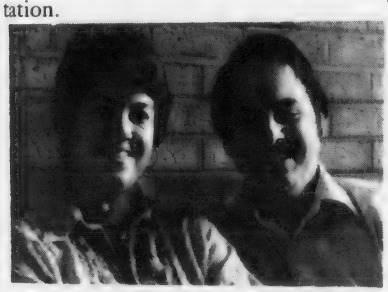
Rhodes is added to departure list

Dr. W. Gale Rhodes, chairman of the Department of Chemistry at Maryville College, has accepted a position, effective in September, as assistant professor of biochemistry at Whitman College in Walla Walla, WA.

His duties at Whitman, also a small private liberal arts college, will include teaching advanced biochemistry courses, one of his major interests.

Dr. Rhodes and his family will move to Washington after five years in Maryville. He joined the MC faculty in 1972 as an assistant professor of chemistry and became head of the MC department in 1973.

While at MC, Dr. Rhodes, who received the Outstanding Teacher Award in 1975, taught both chemistry and interdisciplinary courses including the science and religion and the philosophy of science courses team taught with Claude Y. Stewart, assistant professor of philosophy and religion. He has also frequently convened and presented discussion groups and seminars on current scientific issues such as the origins of life and the spaceship and lifeboat models as applied to world food and resources.



In addition to his teaching duties, Dr. Rhodes was a faculty member of the All-College Council, the campus-wide governing body, for one year and served on numerous extension committees of the Council. He was also a member of the recent Presidential Search Committee of the Board of Directors that recommended president-elect Wayne Anderson to succeed retiring MC President Joseph J. Copeland.

Dr. Rhodes was a recipient of an American Chemical Society small grant in 1972 and of a Cottrell College Science Grant from Research Corporation in 1974-76. He was also advisor to several student-initiated, undergraduate research projects in the MC Independent Studies program and to a National Science Foundation Student-Originated Studies project in the summer of 1974.

Mr. Claude Stewart has been a member of the Maryville College faculty for several years. As Associate Professor of the Religion/Philosophy Department, his courses have always been in the words of one of his majors, "personal. He relates materials on a very one to one personal level which majors and non-majors both enjoy." Mr. Stewart will be leaving the faculty on a year's leave in order to return to Harvard Divinity School to finish out his doctoral dissertation.

The Head Residents of Copeland Hall (alias Dorm 111, the Zoo, the Pit, the Cage), will be leaving their happy home to move to Richmond, Virginia where Rick will begin his ministerial studies at Union Seminary. In a note distributed to each resident of Copeland Hall, Rick and Pat stated their desire to remain at Copeland Hall for another year and work for improving the image and living conditions at the all-male freshman dorm.

Wrestling Coach, admissions recruiter, and financial aid counselor Don Elia was released recently due to budget cutbacks. Coach Elia is the former Dean of Men, was the Head Wrestling Coach for 7 years, and has been in the College since 1958. Elia's accomplishments are great. As a wrestling Coach he has produced winning season after winning season as well as five All-American wrestlers in the past two years.

Elia's record is an impressive 112 wins, 31 losses, and 2 ties.

When asked by the Echo if he was bitter about his dismissal, Elia replied, "I'm frustrated. The most difficult part is walking away from three All-Americans and a good crop of incoming and returning wrestlers and not being able to watch the culmination of years of effort." When further asked if he would return as wrestling coach, he replied, "It doesn't look that way." Don Elia's future is in doubt. Even he said he "didn't know yet" what or where his future lies. Whatever school is fortunate enough to pick up Don Elia is getting a coach of real devotion and dedication—a bargain at any price.

Dr. Young hits the road

Dr. David P. Young, Title III coordinator, soccer coach, and visiting Ford Professor of the Chemistry Department, leaves Maryville College after 14 years of service. Dr. Young is a man of obvious and diverse talents.

Dr. Young's accomplishments include his initiation of the special challenge term as well as courses, seminars and informal discussions on Futuristics (the study of change, values, and alternatives for the future), biomedical ethics, 21st century pioneering, science and technology and thought and sociology of the future. He was recipient of the outstanding Teaching Award in 1975. At UT this year he has helped develop and teach a bio-medical ethics program. Dr. Young has published numerous magazine and newspaper articles dealing with futuristics, teaching methods. chemical research, religious and science, and values and ethics in science. He has lectured on these topics at symposiums and seminars throughout the U.S.

In 1972, he published a book called A New World in the Morning, which concerned the scientific methods of human reproduction, mood drugs, and electric brain stimulation. Dr. Young was the recipient of numerous fellowships and research grants from the American Chemical Society's Petroleum Research Foundation and the Natural Science Foundation's Science Faculty Fellowship at Cornell University in 1970-71.

Dr. Young served as religious life coordinator in 1975-76 and as soccer coach for 5 years and frequently invites students and faculty into his home, which was Willard House this year, for informal poetry readings, a special interest of his.

Dr. Young will travel to the Philippines for a two year appointment as a consultant on Planning and Faculty Development at Central Philippines University. Dr. Robert Ramger echoed the thoughts of many members of the College Community when he stated, "We're losing a very creative mind, the faculty needs creative minds and ideas to keep us young." Indeed, Dr. Young's ideas and creativity can be found in almost every phase of College life, to say he will be missed is a gross understatement and it is difficult to measure his impact upon the individuals who have come in contact with him.

It's the Neil McDade--Dorm III Show

This time it's the old "run around"

On Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 p.m., myself along with approximately 50 residents from Dorm III confronted Mr. Neil McDade, Administrative Vice President, with a petition signed by 90% of Dorm III concerning dorm damage charges for the school year 1976-77. Our concern was that our damage fees, currently at $1600.00 with a possibility of climbing as high as $2400.00, would not be used to correct the damages from which they were assessed. In past years this has been evident. For example a senior R.A. who was a freshman here 4 years ago was charged $5.00 to have his door painted; to date this door has not been painted. Until now not much was said of this policy because it was common practice for the dorm parents to not use the accepted rate for damage repair cost. This year, however, Rick and Pat McGuire followed the handout sheet to the letter. We have no complaint about this, that point should be made clear; if we did $2400.00 worth of damages we will pay that amount. Our concern is that the money collected from us will not be used to repair the so designated damaged places in the dorm.

When asked where the money goes, Rick and Pat handed us a memo from Mr. McDade, dated December 10, 1976, concerning dorm damage charges, I quote from that memo, "When such charges are paid, they are allocated to general funds in accordance with College policy for all income."
At our meeting yesterday afternoon, which was taped with the approval of Mr. McDade, when asked if the damage charges were placed into a general fund as a school policy replied, "You are incorrect, I'm happy to say, and I think you'll be happy to hear, in part of the policy that you quoted. It is policy of the college to put the money directly back into the dormitory, uh, from which damages are paid, and, uh, I don't know how long it's been policy to do that but that is current policy; it's been done since I've been at the College, and every dollar that you pay will get back into your dormitory period...so any other policy I can't discuss." Everyone, reread the quote from the memo from Mr. McDade. The two statements by Mr. McDade are contradictory. It is obvious that Mr. McDade was and is trying to play a word game with us—it's called the "run around." Not once could we pin Mr. McDade down into making a definite committment about what will be done with the dorm damage collected from Dorm III and the other dorms. Look around at your own dorm. Do you see where your damage money isn't going?

What we propose is that a statement be signed by Mr. McDade, who has the responsibility as, to quote him, "chief fiscal officer of the College," which would guarantee that all damaged items, less of course burn holes in carpets and other major replacement costs, will be repaired with the money collected for that purpose and any other money left over from items not repaired, such as the fire extinguisher recharging fees since the extinguishers require only water n- and air with virtually no maintenance cost, be used to improve the dorm in such ways as purchasing glass cases for the fire extinguishers.

We appeal to Dr. Anderson for help as I know he will know about this situation if not upon reading this editorial, he will soon in the fall. We will not let this issue die. We refuse to be talked around. We know that Dr. Anderson would not want an administration that would do this. Up until now we had no choice. In a letter to James Madison in 1787, Thomas Jefferson said, "God forbid we should ever be 20 years without such a rebellion."

Ours is about due to happen.

Note: After this letter was written, it was agreed to by Mr. McDade that he would "check into" dorm damages at Dorm III at 3:00 p.m. today."

Letters to the Editors

Hello "Brick"

As a member of the basketball and baseball squads, I feel that your analysis of our "Superfans" is inaccurate and quite humorous. When a 100% improvement in school spirit has been achieved it is sorta silly to come down on those who have helped to make this improvement.

Did you mention in your recent criticism that Maryville's first three basketball wins came as a direct result of the moral support provided by our "Superfans"? The loss you referred to was not because of the presence of our "Superfans," but rather it was due to the distraction created by having over five faculty members present at the game. How could our players possibly concentrate with such outstanding faculty support?

Mr. Brahams, don't worry about alienation. You're welcome in room 220 anytime, just make sure that you bring your own pillow.

Don't hurry
Don't worry
Just stop and smell the flowers

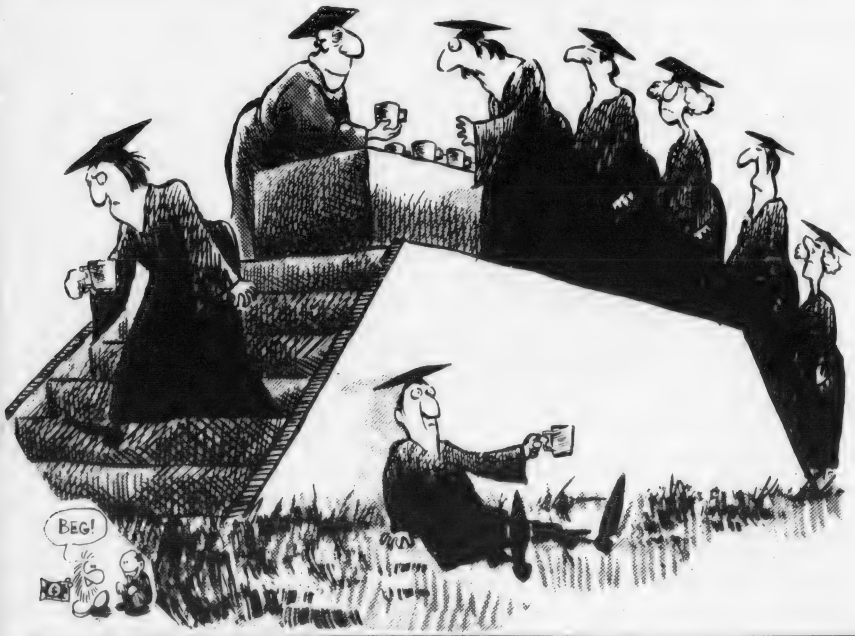
Sincerely,
Kooter



P.S. One "Hooter's Club" membership form is now being processed for you along with a bronzed name plaque, two roses, one tulip, and a cactus.

Dear Editors,

I am not a wrestler nor was I directly recruited by Coach Elia. So my opinion is strictly my own. First I would like to say that many of the aspects of Coach Elia's dismissal are and should remain quite shady. But that is not the reason for this article. This article is to express the need for more openness between the students and the administration. I am not saying that we should be informed before each decision is made, but I am saying that we should at least have a reasonable explanation for decisions that affect us.

Coach was a person who could relate to many people. He was also an effective admissions/financial officer. He was very close to the people who knew him; so close that if he is dismissed, many will leave, and many will not come. This is not because of any secret plot created by the Coach or the people who are close to him. The reason many will leave is because of loyalty to Elia and also because they are very disillusioned. This is the greatest fear; the disillusionment of so many people who have done so much and have so much to do for this school. Hopefully the school will be able to reconcile the differences so that the work of Coach Elia will not disappear next year.

Student's Summer 1977

A "Virgin" Season of Travel and Work

What happens to the Maryville College student after May 27? Many of the studious people one passes every day will step into a nearby telephone booth—or at least become new and vital people for the summer months. Summer occupations for M. C. students range from work to play, and continental to world-wide. Let's look at some examples.

Greece will be a locale for at least two M. C. students. Sophia Shoemaker will visit relatives, take courses, and work on her Independent Study dealing with Bryon. Ginny Milner, who will tour with the Long Island Youth Symphony Orchestra, will stop in Greece while also travelling to North Africa, India, Thailand, and the Holy Land.

John Rogness, a pre-med student, will travel and study in Brazil, while several of our Oriental students (Shin Tanaka, Kaoru Yoshizawa, Yuko Oka, and Nobu Shinohe) will travel home to Japan for the summer.

Several areas of the United States will receive the benefit of the M. C. influence this summer. Extremities include Noriko Meguro, Gabriel Thorpe, and Lawrence Kennedy who will travel or visit in California to Joe Reigelsperger who will act as tour guide at The Taylor Wine Company in New York. Kyle McComb will work in a backpacking store in Texas while Bekah McCredie bikes from Pennsylvania to South Carolina.

The South has not lost all its best, as several students will be staying in this area. Silver Dollar City receives our compliments with Jeff Ferrence (Bartender), Nancy Webb, and Gary Elrod joining their staff. The Smoky Mt. Passion Play has chosen Ruth Ann Wilbanks as its leading lady. Ruth Ann explains, "I'll be a virgin all summer. Mary, that is."

Also entertaining in the South will be John Morton and Judy Thweatt. John will appear in musicals for the Chagrin Valley Little Theater while Judy waitresses at the Wayside Inn Dinner Theater in Virginia. Jim Grey will play for his supper in Gatlinburg restaurants or at the Wayside Dinner Theater in Knoxville.

Resorts will employ such people as Keith Fredericks, Bill Engel, Tim A. Kelly, Martha Giles, Julie Adams, Lisa Wilson, Debbie D'Alessio, and Freda Swabe.

Another big employer of college students is summer camps. Those roughing it include Genie Varker, Ann Kinsinger, Tim Stewart, Carolyn McEver, Sheri Bone, and James Yancey.

Maryville-Alcoa has managed to retain quite a few college students in varied capacities. Ron Shadduck will dish it out at Sambo's while Alan Regenbrecht and Abby Hays will stick it our with Saga. David Vigh may work as a patrol officer for the Alcoa Police Department as Wayne Emme and Charles Washington work at basketball camps at the College.

Summertime transforms us all into different people. Check around—it's surprising what new dimensions one's summer can give.

Copelands pack it in after 16 years

President Copeland leaves an impressive record

President Copeland in 1968.

In this, Dr. and Mrs. Copeland's final year at Maryville College, it seems a fitting tribute to examine and briefly list Dr. Copeland's achievements during his 16 years as President.

Dr. Copeland came onto the Board of Directors in 1952, some 25 years ago. As President since 1961, Dr. Copeland's achievements can be found in three areas. In the academic life: 1) PhD holders in the faculty have risen from 22% to 60%; 2) Salaries were doubled in the 7 years between 1964-1971, and the board has set the objective of doubling that again in the next decade; 3) a faculty manual was adopted in 1971; and 4) Title III enrichment areas include Deaf Education Program and Faculty Workshops.

In the Student Life Area: 1) A participatory governance involving students faculty, and administrators—the All-College Council; 2) Career Planning and Guidance Office; 3) a contingency paper drawn as policy by the Board and implemented by the community (no student rebellion in the 60's or 70's); 4) successful high school admissions counselors conferences (two each year).

In the financial life area: 1) debts on the Chapel and Theatre and heating plant have been removed; 2) The following buildings constructed: A) three new dorms, B) Sutton Science Center, C) Health and Physical Education Building, D) remodeling of Pearson's Hall after the fire; 3) Dr. Copeland has been directly involved in some 90-95% of all major gifts made and paid committments now known. Both Dr. and Mrs. Copeland have devoted their lives and energies to Maryville College. With a future of travel and rest ahead of them, the Copelands leave behind them many friends and accomplishments.

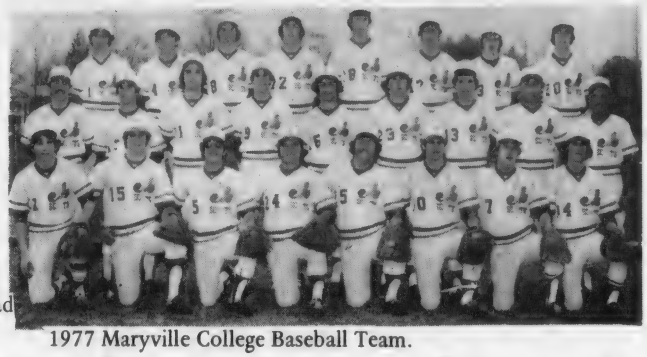
Scots take 3 from Wasps....

MC 6—E&H 5, 8 innings

A strong sixth inning that erased a 5-2 Wasp lead helped Maryville defeat Emory and Henry 6-5 in 8 innings last Wed. Collecting the win for the Scots was Barry Mathis, who finished all eight innings.



Dave Greenawalt had Maryville's big stick. The left fielder's two singles amassed 3 RBI's to lead Maryville in that category. Also getting two hits were Paul Bailey and Danny Thomas. Paul Bailey's golden glove and strong arm were fantastic as the third sacker came up with several big infield plays that stopped probable Emory and Henry base hits.

Proud of his players performance, Coach Henry stated that Kenny Myers' sacrifice was the turning point of the afternoon. In the eighth inning Myers' sacrifice bunt down the third base line scored Bailey for the winning run.

In the second game Maryville only scored in two innings, but that was enough. The Scots tallied 5 runs in the fifth and seventh innings for their second sweep 10-5. Barry Mathis, former Maryville High star, again was the winner for the Scots. Mathis now 6-3 was called on to relieve Wayne Williams who had gone 5 innings. Eight Scots had hits and Kohlbusch and Moffett ripped two safeties. Osborne's fifth inning single scored 2 RBI's.

MC 5—Emory and Henry 2

The saying "The third time is a charm," proved true for Maryville. Imitating an earlier trick, the Scots rallied for 5 runs in the third inning. Maryville did not score again after the third inning burst and stroked just three hits, but it was enough. The Scots won 5-2 and earned their twentieth win of the season opposed to eleven losses. Earning the mound decision, Dave Greenawalt gave up just six hits and completed Maryville's sweep over the Virginian Wasps in a big triple header win.

....but get outclassed in Tourney

by Robert Boone

The Maryville College Scots were eliminated from the NCAA Division III tourny over the weekend following two lopsided decisions played at Lynchburg, Va.

In the first round Maryville was shell-shocked by Salisbury State College (Md.) 25-4. The 31-9 ball club was ranked both in the nation prior to Friday's Regionals. Saturday afternoon the Scots were trounced by first round winner Glassboro State (N.J.) 12-1 to conclude their 1977 season with a 20-14 record, their best output in three years.

"I'm very disappointed in the way we played here," remarked Head Mentor Billy Henry. "We made a lot of mistakes that hurt us."

Salisbury State 25-MC 4

MC's four runs all came in the third inning. Senior third baseman Paul Bailey led off with a single, advanced to second by Andy Limone's ground put to first, and scored the Scots first run on an error off Ken Hanna's bat. After leftfielder Dave Greenawalt walked, rightfielder David Osborne punched a single to plate Hanna. Greenawalt scored on a sacrifice fly for MC's third tally before designated hitter Danny Thomas' single scored Osborne.

Senior Kevin McKinstry started on the mound for Maryville. He was relieved in the fifth by Ray Oliveri and Ken Dickens in the seventh inning.

Glassboro 12, MC 1

Against the Glassboro Profs MC tallied just one run. Greenawalt led off with a triple to deep left center before coming home on first baseman Johnny Walker's single.

Henry's starter on the mou mound was Danny Thomas who was relieved after six-and-a-third innings by Barry Mathis.

Seniors Duling, Kelly, Goodwin, and Arcos sweep Football awards at Awards Banquet

by Phil Loyd

On May 16, Maryville College held its annual Athletic Sports banquet. After an assortment of guest speakers and inductees into the Hall of Fame (Dr. Boring, John T. Stone, Joe Gamble, Ken Takahashi, and Dr. Lea Callaway). Athletic Director Bill Henry gave Assistant Coach K. Stinnett the honor of giving out the awards to his baseball players. Paul Bailey was awarded the "Mr. Hustle" award.

The awards for football were all claimed by seniors. Tom Duling won the Defensive Player award, Keith Good win was awarded the Offensive Player award, and Tim A. Kelly was awarded the MVP award. After these awards were presented the seniors presented Defensive tackle Craig Arcos with a special award for his dedication in practice and game time. A special note on Tom Duling: after many years of frustration Tom finally had a healthy season and he proved proved his capabilities admirably.

Women's Volleyball was spotlighted by Coach Brown, who gave the MVP award to an absent Pat Willin (planning her wedding), and the Most Improved Player went to Co-captain Arlene Ignico.

Rick Byrd, coach of the tennis team presented his Most Improved Player award to David "T-Bear" Carrick and his Most Valuable Player award went to Scott Garren.

Track was next with Dick Taylor awarding Steve Harrison with both the Most Valuable Player award and the Bob Throwes award, the latter award being on permanent display in the P.E. building. The team's Most Improved Player went to Tony Scalise, the pole vaulter who broke the school's old record of 13-6 with a voult of 14-3.

Finally came Don Elia for the wrestling team. He gave the Most Valuable Player award to Wayne Dunn and the Most Improved Player to Ray Oliveri.

Booters wrap up season

by Tim Farrell

The Maryville College Soccer Club closed its spring season this past week with a loss to Cleveland State and a victory over East Tennessee State University.

The Scots played Cleveland State Wednesday and suffered a disappointing 4—3 loss in overtime. Scoring for the Scots were Mark Salonika, Doug Hardy, and Gus Horcastis. Playing in the goal for the entire game was Larry Wright.

Friday the 13th proved to be the booter's lucky day as they traveled up to Johnson City and beat East Tennessee State University 2—1. The game wasn't an easy victory, and it took a lot of hustle and hard work. In the first half, ETSU was the first to score, but when Tim Farrell apparently pushed one across for the Scots, the score seemed tied. However, Farrell's apparent goal was not counted due to a dispute on how it entered the net. When the first half ended ETSU was still leading 1—0. During the second half a penalty in the box set up a penalty shot for Doug Hardy, who converted it successfully into a goal. The poorly reffed game remained tied until a fired up Maryville scored with just several minutes remaining. The goal came on a corner kick from Mark Salonika to Doug Hardy who passed it on to Gary Elrod. Elrod pushed the ball through the crease and Laurie Hill kicked it in for the goal. Playing well for the Scots were John Malozzi, Glen Cunningham, David Buckwalter, Bill Walker, Bart Rutan, and David Franssen.

The Scots wanted this last victory very badly because it is the last time most of the team will see or play for Dr. David Young who leaves for the Philippines early in June. Dr. Young has been the major reason Maryville even has a soccer team. He is in his fifth year as coach and his past two seasons have brought a record of 18—8—0. He also has collected three tournament trophies. Dr. Young will be missed by the entire team and campus community. He is wished the best by his players and friends. Thanks Coach!

Intramurals Action

by David Franssen

In last week's action, the Transfers took the lead for the second round of Softball Intramurals. The winners of the second round will play Bent Nail for the Softball Championship. The Transfers started the week off by defeating Brains and Brawns by the score of 9—7. Then the next day they defeated the Redbuds by the score of 19—6 and finally defeated the winless Budadats 20—2. Thus they remained undefeated for the second round. One game behind the Transfers is Handy Curb who split two games last week. First, they narrowly defeated the Zoo Gang 11—10, and then they lost to rapidly improving Loadstars 12—9, with John Bobo going 4 for 4.

The Last Laps led by Joe Savory split two games last week. They defeated the battered Badadats 9—4, then lost to Brains and Brawns by a close score of 6—5. In another game, the Redbuds, led by David Franssen and Scott Gross, defeated Brains and Brawns in a 10—9 come from behind victory.

Mowl is first deaf graduate

Gary Mowl

Maryville College will graduate its first deaf student in the College's 158th Commencement program Monday, May 30.

Gary Eugene Mowl, a psychology major originally from Pittsburgh, PA, and now a resident of Knoxville, TN, will receive the B.A. degree from MC in this year's graduation ceremonies which begin at 10:30 a.m.

Mowl is one of six deaf students now attending Maryville. Three others are expected to enroll next fall with three of the current students expected to graduate next year.

Mowl, who enrolled at Maryville in 1973-74, satisfactorily completed his first year without interpreters, depending solely on classnotes from friends and lipreading.

At Maryville Mowl participated in intramural basketball and softball and is currently finishing a year as president of Sigma Lambda Kappa, sign language club. He was instrumental in directing the club's campaign to raise funds to buy a teletype, a machine used by deaf persons to make unassisted telephone calls. He has also made the Dean's List several times throughout his four years at MC.

Mowl plans to continue his education and has applied to attend graduate school in educational psychology.

brothers and his father, are also Maryville graduates.

A native of Cox's Creek, KY, Dr. Johnson first moved as a boy to Richmond, VA, and later to Maryville where his father, John Robert Johnson, was minister of First Baptist Church here.

He later received his B.A. from MC in 1927, his M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in 1931 and the D.SC. (Med.) from the Graduate School of Medicine there in 1940.

Except for four years spent as an army surgeon in India during World War II, Dr. Johnson spent his entire professional career at the University of Pennsylvania medical school, primarily in cardiothoracic surgery.

His only training in this then developing field was a month's visit to Boston and Montreal observing techniques of other pioneering surgeons in this field. Following this visit, Dr. Johnson in his first 20 thorax operations bettered their mortality rate and established himself a as a founder member in cardiothoracic surgery.

He was chief of cardiothoracic surgery from 1946 to 1973 and performed general surgery as well at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital in addition to his teaching duties. He retired from teaching in 1976 after serving on the University of Pennsylvania medical school staff for 33 years.

Also well-published, Dr. Johnson has authored 165 technical papers, articles and chapters in medical textbooks. His works include "Surgery of the Chest: A Handbook of Operative Surgery," a well-known monograph, now in its fourth printing, which he coauthored with the late Charles Kirby and which has been a bible for many cardiothoracic surgeons.

A member of numerous professional societies, he is past president of the American Association for Thoracic Surgery, the Society of Vascular Surgery, the Pennsylvania Association of Thoracic Surgery and the Philadelphia Academy of Surgery. He is also a member of the MC Board of Directors.

Dr. Johnson's wife, the former Mary Christine Benn, is a 1929 MC graduate. They reside in Gladwyne, PA.

Baccalaureate services are scheduled for Sunday, May 29, at 8 p.m., also in Wilson Chapel. Retiring MC President Joseph J. Copeland will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon. He will speak on "The Now is Future."

Three ministers who are fathers of graduating seniors will participate in the Baccalaureate service. They include: Rev. Ben T. Welch, First United Methodist Church, Goldthwaite, TX; Rev. Glenn M. Sawdon, St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Saginaw, MI; and Rev. Joseph S. Rigell, Little Tabernacle Church of the Savior, Baltimore, MD. Rev. William O. McGill, Jacksonville, FL; and Rev. Robert E. Canon, Presbyterian Church of Newtown, Newtown, PA, will assist in the commencement service.

Rev. James T. Stewart, MC chaplain, will offer scripture readings at both services; and Rev. J. Lawrence Driskill of Highland Presbyterian, the prayer of invocation at commencement. Dr. Copeland will preside at commencement.

Preceding Commencement weekend activities is the College's annual Alumni Day this Saturday. MC alumni will register from 9 a.m. until noon with 11 class reunion luncheons beginning at 11:30 a.m. A special communion service for alumni, students, faculty, staff and friends of the College is set for 5:15 p.m. derbilt and an M.A. and Ph.D. in English from UT-K.

In addition to teaching English and religion courses, Dr. Fowler is chairman of the the Individualized Major Committee, coordinator of the Freshman Orientation program, faculty representative to the All-College Council and has served as Echo staff advisor.

She is the widow of Dr. J. Fort Fowler, Methodist minister and educator.

Dr. Naylor, who joined the MC faculty in 1975, will assume the chairmanship of the chemistry department next fall term. He holds a B.S. from Butler University in Cleveland, OH. He was a lecturer in chemistry there before coming to Maryville.

In addition to his teaching duties, Dr. Naylor serves as co-chairman of the Community Issues and Values Committee and faculty representative to the ACC.

He and his wife Lynn live in Maryville.

The MC Outstanding Teacher awards were established in 1975 and carry monetary awards made possible by anonymous donors.

Alumni Day, con't.

1947, 1952, 1957, 1962, 1967 and 1972 and for the Golden Scots are scheduled to begin at 11:30 a.m.

At 5:15 p.m. in the College Chapel, MC alumni, students, staff and friends may join in a celebration of the Lord's Supper. The service, using MC founder Dr. Isaac Anderson's communion vessels for the communion elements, will celebrate the College's unique life as a church-related institution of learning.

The Annual Alumni Dinner, a buffet this year, will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Margaret Ware Dining Room. Immediately following the dinner, alumni will meet in Wilson Chapel, instead of the College dining room as in the past, for this year's alumni association meeting.

The program for the meeting will honor this year's reunion classes and will include the presentation of diplomas to the Fifty Year Class and alumni citations as well as a special recognition of retiring President and Mrs. Joseph J. Copeland. A reception in the Chapel courtyard honoring the Copelands will conclude the meeting.

Members of the alumni association executive board will meet at 10 a.m. Friday, preceding alumni day activities.

The Eighth President of Maryville College.

Anderson Assumes Presidency

by Laird Weaver and Bill Gannon

Dr. Wayne Anderson, Maryville College's new president, presented his first public address in this area at the College's Opening Academic Convocation on Monday, September 12 in Wilson Chapel.

Dr. Anderson, the college's eighth president who assumed office this past July 1, discussed "Taking the Road Less Traveled By," (portions of which can be read on page 5).

Others who participated in the evening program were Mrs. Catherine Beals of Knoxville, vice chairperson of the College's Board of Directors; the Rev. James T. Stewart, chaplain; Lee Struble, co-chairman of the All-College Council; Dr. Russell D. Parker, Secretary of the Maryville College faculty; and Dean Carolyn Blair.

The Rev. Howard G. Olive, pastor of the Monte Vista Baptist Church in Maryville, offered prayers for the College. Dr. James A. Bloy, a Maryville College music professor, and the Maryville College Concert Choir, under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter, professor and chairman of the fine arts department, provided the music for the program.

Dr. Anderson's address was well-received by the campus community. A member of the Maryville College Alumni, Fred Strohl, class of 1976, stated that, "President Anderson's remarks were realistic and reflected what Maryville College is and can be. It appears Dr. Anderson isn't starting out with any preconceived ideas."

First Week Successful

Some 252 new students—including 218 freshmen and 43 transfers—began arriving on the Maryville College campus over a week ago to participate in opening week orientation activities.

Freshmen and their parents were given bus tours of the area that morning followed by a buffet luncheon in the College dining room. They were welcomed to the campus by President Wayne Anderson; Lee Struble co-chairman of the All-College Council; and Dr. Carolyn Blair, dean of the College, in an assembly program in Wilson Chapel. Dr. George Kramer, dean of student relations, presided.

Following the assembly, the Chilhowee Club held its annual reception for freshmen, their parents and the faculty in the Chapel Court.

This year's orientation for new students again included assignments to small study groups of 20 students each for regular meetings throughout the week. During this time each group discussed study techniques and the aims of a liberal education as well as personal goals and values of members of the group.

Students also took various placement tests and had a chance to become acquainted with the College and its pro-

Substantial bequest received

Maryville College has received a bequest of $158,754 from the estate of Dr. Clemmie J. Henry, according to an announcement made by the College's president, Dr. Wayne W. Anderson.

The gift will be added to the Clemmie J. Henry Fund which was established some years ago in Dr. Henry's honor. Annual income from the fund is used to provide scholarships for Maryville College students.

Dr. Henry, who died December 20, 1976, was associated with Maryville College from her childhood, beginning as a student in the preparatory department and concluding as an honorary director. From 1918 to 1952 she served as director of student help and administrative secretary, and from 1938 through 1976 was an active or honorary director, having been one of the first two women selected for this role. She was also the first woman to serve as recorder of the Board of Directors, a position she held for nine years.

Passport to Greece offered

A greater understanding of contemporary Greece through the study of art and handicrafts and the works of the Greek writer Nikos Kazantzakis and through travel in that country is the purpose of Maryville College's only overseas interim this year.

Thelma (Mrs. Anthony) Bianco, assistant professor of art, and Miss Jane Savage, assistant professor and librarian, are leading the 19-day "Passport to Greece" interim for MC students. A limited number of openings are available for townspeople and alumni who would like to join the group.

They will leave New York November 28 and fly to Athens, Greece. While there, they will visit the Greek Islands of Hydras, Poros, Aegina, Mykonos, Rhodes and Crete. Also included are tours to Corinth, Mycenae, Epidaurus, Delphi, Thebes and Sounion. The group will return to New York December 19.

While in Greece, participants will study the various regional and local styles of art and handicrafts through visits to small artisan's workshops and small shops run by Greek craftsmen as well as through visits to museums, art schools, archaeological sites and exhibitions.

They will also continue their study of Kazantzakis, one of the most famous of Greece's contemporary authors. His works include Zorba the Greek, Report to Greco and The Last Temptation of Christ.

According to Miss Savage, Kazantzakis, who lived from 1883 to 1957, devoted his life to the questions of philosophy, religion and politics. His writings reflect his great love of his homeland and its people, his hopes, his visions and his insatiable human spirit, she added.

Cost of the trip is approximately $1,200 and includes round trip air fare (from New York), all travel in Greece, overnight accomodations and two meals per day.

For additional information about the Greece interim, contact Miss Savage in the Library.

New Resident at Morningside

Morningside

The Maryville College alumni office received in July a change of address that's particularly newsworthy.

Dr. Lloyd H. Langston, business executive, former professor at Columbia University, author and 1913 MC graduate, recently moved from Rumson, NJ, to Maryville. His local address: Morningside, Maryville College.

The newest resident in the College Woods arrived early in July with 24,000 pounds of belongings, including, literally, a kitchen sink. And he's here to stay. Dr. Langston has bought the house and five acres of land from the College.

The availability of Morningside, built and first occupied in 1933, came about when MC's new president, Dr. Wayne Anderson, and his family decided to live out in the community rather than on campus. Dr. Anderson and his wife, who are interested in linking the College and the community, felt it would be more appropriate for them to live in the community. Also, they felt it would be more natural for their two young daughters to grow up in a regular neighborhood situation.

What to do with Morningside was resolved in the spring during discussions between former MC president, Dr. Joseph Copeland, and Dr. Langston.

Since then, Dr. Langston has gone through all the pains of moving from one big house to another with all the resultant confusion and rearranging due to different sized room, but he's slowly getting settled in.

Two former occupants, both now MC presidents emeritus, Drs. Joseph Copeland and Ralph Lloyd, offered helpful advice and Hugh Crawford, MC business manager, has been most helpful in getting him settled in Morningside's 26 rooms, he said.

Will the 86-year-old alumnus be involved with the affairs of the College?

"With power goes responsibility and I'm not willing to take any responsibility for the College's future. I'm too old," Dr. Langston said. But he quickly added, "Naturally, being one of the oldest alumni around I have an interest in the College; also my wife (the late Mildred Johnson Langston) was a director from 1967 until her death last year and our son (Douglas) is presently a director, so I couldn't say I'm devoid of any interest in Maryville College."

As for involvement in the community, "I'm not planning to run for mayor or anything," he quipped, then added on a more serious note, "I'm limited physically to what I can do and this restricts my movement around campus and that goes for getting around the community as well."

Dr. Langston said he expects his social activities will center around Morningside and will involve close friends such as MC directors he's known for years and the Copelands and other friends and associates of the College.

With a limited social life, what type of spare time activities does Dr. Langston have?

"No spare time," replied the alumnus who claims he hasn't retired and doesn't plan to. He remains active with his business interests which include raising timber, cattle and grapes on his farm near Athens, GA.

His farm has quite a reputation for growing grapes, he explained, and sales go up when there is a home football game at the nearby University of Georgia. Fans have to pass by the farm to get to the game and stop to buy grapes to take with them to eat. His grapes rival popcorn sales at UGA.

The former secretary and treasurer of Standard and Poor's in New York is still a director of that corporation though he's no longer an active officer. He joined the firm in 1937 and was active in it until 1967. Prior to that he taught banking subjects at the American Institute of Banking and at Columbia University for over 12 years.

Dr. Langston is the author of several textbooks on banking and economics which were widely used by banks, colleges and schools of business for many years.

In addition to the B.A. degree from MC, the Missouri native holds M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in economics and political science from Columbia University School of Business.

He has also taught on the high school level in Missouri, North Dakota and New Jersey. He also worked for the National City Bank of New York before becoming director of service and later president of the Benjamin Franklin Institute and the American Chamber of Economics.

Dr. Lloyd Langston

Over the years he still managed to find enough spare time to travel all around the world.

Although a new resident of Maryville, he's not a newcomer to the area, having owned farms in the community at one time or another. Langston remembers when he used to visit them and drive around the MC campus although the College was closed at the time because of the war.

His interest and involvement in the College was limited to those drives through campus until he had been out of school for 50 years. The College, he said, had lost him and, in fact, didn't find him. He found the College, he loves to point out.

At his own initiative, he wrote the Copelands and asked if he could come down and see the place and attend his 50-year reunion.

Following that reinvolvement, the Langstons became enthusiastic supporters of

For the first time in Maryville College History the first weekly Sunday Catholic Mass was held last Sunday at 1:30. Father James Murray was the celebrant with approximately 20 of the estimated 80 Catholic students in attendance. The Masses, which will continue throughout the academic year are a direct product of Chaplain Stewart's efforts to assist the Catholic minority at MC.

A new member of the MC Board of Directors and a 1966 graduate of Maryville College was featured in a recent issue of Time Magazine. David W. Marston, a history major who attended Harvard Law School is currently serving as a Distric Attorney in Philadelphia. Appointed by former President Gerald R. Ford, Marston is currently in The National Spotlight due to his confrontation with Democratic mayor "Boss" Frank Rizzo.

Our opinion

The 1977 academic year has begun, and in spite of the mixed emotions apparent on campus, we feel Maryville College is headed in an exciting direction. The past is over, and M.C. is finally headed along a new path.

Tangible changes are taking place. M.C. now has a new logo which can be seen on several signs and maps throughout the campus. Some of the dorms have new head residents who seem adaptable to changes in living conditions. Enrollment has gone up for the first time in years, and approximately 252 freshmen and transfer students are adding their ideas and helping to form the new trend.

New concepts have now progressed to the surface in our campus community. The alcohol issue is finally being given serious consideration by the board of directors, and it appears to have definite changes in mind.

Several people, including Dean Richardson, Dr. Kramer, Chaplain Stewart, and A.C.C. Co-chairman Lee Struble, are striving to make the new M.C. dream a reality.

Dr. Anderson is especially important in the new direction Maryville is taking. He has made himself available to students through dorm meetings and an open invitation which was given at the academic convocation.

A renaissance doesn't happen often, but if the opening week at M.C. is any indication, we feel 1977 is going to be the start of something exciting. Maryville College is truly experiencing a new birth. With a new president, a larger and more excited student body, and an animated atmosphere, M.C. is headed in the right direction.

Letters to the Editors

Dear Mr. Editor:

The Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Directors met Tuesday, September 13, 1977, to discuss the alcohol issue. Board members talked throughout the day with students, resource persons, administrators, head residents, and faculty. We were able to talk with a few of you during lunch that day and gather your spontaneous suggestions.

After a full day of participating in and listening to discussion on the alcohol issue, the Committee felt it had a much better understanding of current problems and feelings related to this issue. Each of you can help us in our probe by your response to the Survey of Alcohol Use. R.A.'s have distributed these in the dorms—if you did not complete one, please drop by the Office of Student Relations so your input can be included in the survey.

The Student Affairs Committee will meet again to continue our study of the alcohol issue on Wednesday, October 12, 1977, preceeding the meeting of the full Board on October 13-14. At this meeting, the results of the Alcohol Use Survey will:

1) play an important part in helping us to assess the current use of and attitudes toward alcohol on campus;
2) aid us in formulating our recommendations to the Board regarding the current policy on its use.

So, my friends, please do not view this current focus on the alcohol issue as just another aimless discussion—leading to nowhere. It will be raised before your Board of Directors and each of you has the chance to let yourself be heard by responding to the survey.

Let me add as a personal note that my first year on the Board of Directors of Maryville College has been an enlightening one. M.C.'s Directors, though being visible only during the Fall and Spring Board meetings, are an energetic and concerned group of people who work hard behind the scenes and are deeply committed to the goal that Maryville College succeed in all aspects of its total program. One disappointment I feel is that I am losing touch with current student concerns and feelings—and I only graduated in '76! Other members share this sentiment. So let me encourage you to grab us while we are on campus or to write us regarding any issue. We are accessible and we invite your input.

Dear Editors,

I would like to commend the person or persons responsible for the latest extension of the core requirements. While in years past no one has been foresighted enough to discern the need, some ingenious person has indeed seen the light.

Remedial Line Standing 101 should prove to be an excellent addition to the fine liberal arts curriculum here. Such a splendid new course should have been met with open enthusiasm on the part of

After four years (some said five, some six) in the vast, blank, beautiful Canyon laiden lands of the west, the cowboy came back to—

Reality . . . .the world of jobs, bills, unemployment taxes, sex play, flat tires, personal hygeine.

What's a transmisser, reverter, eye oper, changer, pisser . . .

His utopia was behind him now.

The ole' cowpuncher's nights and days of branding irons, campfire story telling, beer busts at Scot's Slippery Saloon, lonliness, months without clean clothes, room !Y at Presland III, the cemetery near the brakes, his hoss named the Little General, and his saddle named Pillow.

Yes,

Yes, his memories were his dreams.

Reality had come . . . after four years. (Pause in time)

Years four after . . . come had reality (four years after his return from the west)

The Experience, Education, Interaction were sweet, oh so sweet were his west memories,

But the sofa-sitter of now – cowboy of past, hurt.

He hurt from those four sweet years—

He hurt cause there was more Experience than he took more Education than he took more Interaction than he took

He also hurt cause he knew that,

The MC Senior's of 78

Will experience his same hurt.

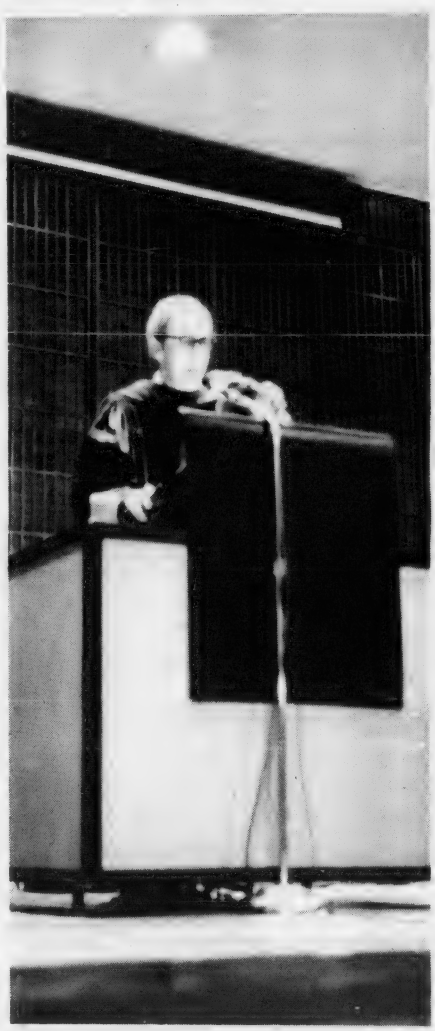
Anderson Proposes A Bold New Path

An excerpt of his Convocation Address

So we come to the third option—to try to embark on a new path, not exactly ahead and not back toward the way we came. Let's discover what this course means. It means moving toward the unknown, making a leap of faith. It means exploring numerous choices and alternative futures. It means keeping one's feet firmly on the ground and still being willing to strike out in new directions. It means promoting active, no-holds-barred discussions, in which no idea is rejected out of hand—no far-fetched scheme is automatically deemed crazy. It embraces consideration of new institutional thrusts, academic offerings, patterns of communications and responsibilities for those of us who serve the College.

What are the advantages of this effort? Here are three: The excitement of the search, the gratification if it pays off—if we find what we're looking for—and the rectitude of such a cause. That is, the opportunity to devise programs which greatly strengthen the institution and live up to the ideals for which the College was founded.



On the negative side, there is fear—fear of the unknown, fear that we might not be able to hack our way through the underbrush, fear that we might even lose our way. To be more specific, there could be anxiety that an emphasis on non-western studies might turn off students, rather than turning them on. In promoting more inter-disciplinary efforts, we might undermine our academic departments. In extending academic programs beyond the local community, we might alienate our loyal followers in Maryville and Alcoa. We might strengthen our religious connections to find that, to students, they are irrelevant. In telling more people about ourselves, we take a chance that they might not like what they hear.

Analyzing these and other advantages and disadvantages, I'm absolutely convinced that we must take the new path—the one less traveled by. We do have the people here, now, to make that trip worthwhile—people of talent, vision and dedication. Even if we don't uncover profound ideas or panaceas, the effort should boast our morale and refine our thinking.

As everyone feels a part of things, as everyone feels his or her views are worth hearing, our sense of community should swell. And, there's the gratification of successfully blazing the trail, of moving down the path, of finding what we look for. This would attract further attention and elicit additional support. We should choose options which are consistent with our religious heritage and the Christian faith on which this institution was erected—we should walk the second mile.

The road ahead may be dark, but let us remember that God's light "shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it." With a strongly held faith, we can dare to take a chance—dare to fail, and even more terrifying, dare to succeed.

To be more specific, I implore all of you personally to contribute to the widespread discussion about to unfold involving this institution. We need to examine the academic and other programs we ought to offer, to say nothing about finding creative ways of conserving and increasing our resources. Let's design ways of making sure that our courses and intellectual experiences equip us to deal with the real world, both on and off the campus. Let's find ways of meshing liberal learning and preparation for later life, recognizing that the two are not incompatible. Let's give our deserving faculty the time and opportunity to recharge their mental batteries through seminars and leaves and other opportunities.

Why don't we open up the institution to new audiences—students outside of the ages 18-21, individuals from overseas, friends living in our local area, and those living some distance away. Let's create new outreach programs, in which we serve not only individuals, but the business community which has served us so long and so well. And, why not build a management system, building on the expertise of that business community. Let's take a chance on extending our services to alumni, not fretting over the potential requests and demands to which we might not be able to respond.

Let's provide a place increasingly hospitable to people of different backgrounds, so that we can achieve a truly heterogeneous student body from which all of us can learn. At the risk of violating the latest government edicts on equal rights, let's express our special concern for the role of women, and translate that concern into actions which will attract additional women to campus. And let's adequately reward academic performance. The business of Maryville College, after all, is learning (and learning how to learn), and we should offer an incentive for all and rewards for those who do it particularly well.

In terms of student life, we invite all of you to suggest ways of making it even more stimulating and pleasant, and just plain fun. Let's use the All-College Council and town meetings and other forums to make this a vibrant and constructively swinging place. Let's create a useful and exciting intramural and intercollegiate athletic program—one of quality and balance, one that meets our standards and falls within our resources. At least for a few moments, let's inspire people to think about the little Scots rather than the Big Orange.

And, let's also work a little harder, each and every one of us. I know the price might be exhaustion, but it's exhaustion in a noble cause. Why not spend an extra fifteen minutes every day to think about how Maryville College might be improved—fifteen minutes out of the 1,440 minutes available every 24 hours. Is that too much to ask? Let's ask ourselves how a teacher might be assisted, how a course might be enhanced, how an administrator might be encouraged, how a student might be helped, how a prospective student might be recruited, how additional funds might be raised.

In conclusion, let's seek the new Maryville, linked to its magnificent past, at the cutting edge of change, equipping students for life-long learning, inculcating values which can guide all of us for the rest of our lives. Let's listen to the Ulysses of Tennyson's poem as he prepares to sail on his final voyage:

> Come, my friends
> Tis not too late to seek a newer world.
> Push off and sitting well and order > smite
> The sounding furrows; for my purpose > holds:
> To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
> And all the western stars, until I die.
> It may be that the gulfs will wash us > down;
> It may be we shall touch the happy
> isles,
> And see the great Achilles, whom we > knew.
> Though much is taken, much abides;
> though
> We are not now that strength which in > old days
> Moved heaven and earth, that which we > are, we are:
> One equal temper of heroic hearts,
> Made weak by time and fate, but strong > in will
> To strive, to seek, to find, and not to > yield.

Let's take the road less traveled by: let's set sail toward the unknown. For all of us, and for Maryville College, it will make all the difference.

Up and around

Anyone who took Non-Western studies (Africa) 301 last year and would be willing to sell 3 of their books, Return to Laughter, Things Fall Apart, and Africa Yesterday and Today, to a member of this year's class, should contact Dr. Walker or Dr. Parker in Thaw Hall as soon as possible. This year's class is much bigger than expected and copies of each of these books are desparately needed.

Mass will be celebrated on campus in the Little Chapel this Sunday. 25 September, at 1:30 p.m. Father James Murray will be the celebrant.

The Echo welcomes new staff—we' re flexible. There are always openings in sports, photography, regular news writing, and whatever your interests are. We'll find a place for you. Any inquiries should be directed to Box 2820.

All sophomores who took History 122 last year can pick up their free replacement copy of Moorehead's Russian Revolution in the History office. These have been sent by the publishing company in substitution for those that fell apart.

The movie Day of the Dolphin will be shown this Friday night. The movie which is sponsored by the social committee is based on the popular novel by Robert Merle.

For all those who are interested in playing Intramural Sports this fall: for the men, Flag Football and Tennis sign-up is closed on September 23; for the women, soccer sign-up ends October 1 and Tennis September 30. Entries can be dropped off in the Intramurals box in the Gym.

the students; however, this was not the case during registration Monday. Frustration replaced enthusiasm and criticism prevailed.

Students should realize the value of a line standing course. This course offers excellent training for the future graduate. When applying for food stamps, unemployment compensation, or welfare which any modern graduate will surely need the Maryville grad will be well prepared. Line standing in the future should make the graduate feel very much at home and he or she should not then experience the emotional trauma now associated with this new course.

Seriously, disregarding the above sarcasm, why the change? The logic of the change from two days of registration to one eluded me as I waited more than three hours to complete my registration tasks which previously had taken only minutes. I do wich, however, to thank all those who helped a bewildered, complaining me to complete registration.

Sincerely,

the College. Their contributions have included substantial gifts of art, real estate and other resources, including the time and service to the Board by Mrs. Langston. Like her husband, Mrs. Langston taught business courses, first at Simmons College, then at Long Island University and at Katharine Gibbs School in NY where she was academic dean for 29 years.

In 1974 the Mildred and Lloyd Langston Chair of Business Administration was established to honor them for their interest in the College and to recognize their deep integrity and national reputation in the business field.

Dr. Langston is now back at Maryville College full time, living at Morningside with Captain, a 7-year-old poodle. Captain is well-traveled too, according to his master and "doesn't like it if the car pulls away and he isn't in it."

Captain also doesn't like Henry, the cat Dr. Langston has acquired since he moved in. Captain won't let Henry come in the house, Dr. Langston explained, but the newest addition has a door where he can come to be fed.

"The house is big enough for this to happen," added Morningside's new occupant.

Press Release compiled by Judy Mizell

Bequest, con't.

Dr. Henry came to know Maryville College students of many generations in her capacity as director of student help. She also knew the Maryville College constituency well as a result of raising funds for the College, particularly its student financial aid program.

Dr. Henry was also a leader in church and civic activities, serving as one of the first women elders of New Providence Presbyterian Church where she also taught Sunday School; a regent of the DAR; and president of the Chilhowee Club.

In commenting on the bequest, President Anderson said, "This is a tremendous gift in support of that part of the College's program dearest to Dr. Henry's heart, and to which she gave a good part of her own life and effort. It was not my good fortune to know her personally, but I have read and heard a great deal about her. Miss Clemmie, as she was called, was one of Maryville College's great ladies. As her attorney pointed out, she left the College $1,000 for every year of its existence."

Chilhowean is naked

Our cameras are everywhere—so try to act natural!

Who are we? We are the staff of the 1977-78 Chilhowean, YOUR yearbook. We have already begun to put together this years' book, but we can't do it without your help.

The first thing we would like for you to do is show up for your class picture to be taken. In the past several years almost half the student body hasn't shown—and long lists of "not pictured" names aren't very attractive. It doesn't take long, it doesn't hurt, and it all happens September 28 and 29 for underclassmen, September 30 for seniors—the place will be announced later.

We also need any club, group, or organization that wants a picture in the annual to contact Joe Showalter (box 2183). All these pictures must be taken by October 3.

The Chilhowean also has an embarrassing problem—it's naked! We need people to submit line drawings with the word Chilhowean and 1978 on them to help us cover our bare book. All submissions should be in by October 10. We would also welcome any artwork to go inside the book. Cover and art submissions are to be given to Jenny Andrews (box 2637). We will also consider any photographs that are turned in to box 2642.

We also need people to write short articles—for more information see the poster in the post office and/or contact Adrienne Bennett (box 2642). We also want original poetry, short, short stories on campus life, etc. Turn in original works to Ricky Smith (box 2520).

The last thing we need is for any student who wants an extra copy of this years' book, or any faculty, administration, or staff people who want to order books to contact the editor (box 2642). Each book will cost $10.00, and we must have your order by October 10.

Anderson, con't.

Yok Fan-Yen, a sophomore from Malaysia, believed the address to be "inspiring" and was "overwhelmed by the spirit of the convocation."

David Franssen, a junior from New Providence, New Jersey, thought "he looked at all of the alternatives and I hope he takes the one where we would push ahead and better the school. I'm hopeful."

After listening to the address, John Graves, a freshman from Greenwood, South Carolina, stated that, "I think he'll do a lot to get Maryville up with the time."

Dr. Wallace Lewis, a faculty member in the History Department, states that, "We've learned in recent times that we can't keep spinning our wheels. I felt he spoke to the situation with an optimistic outlook and he realizes that facing the issues is the way to solve them."

Dean Carolyn Blair summed up the thoughts of people talked to, saying, "This was the best convocation in recent memory and it seems to be a new beginning for everybody."

Scots Swap Wasps

by Robert Boone

Maryville College head coach Jim Jordan had sweet dreams about turnovers Saturday night. Not apple turnovers, but Emory and Henry turnovers. The Wasps coughed up the football a total of nine times. The Scots capitalized and edged Emory and Henry 21–16 Saturday night. With the season opener neatly tucked under their belts, Maryville seeks its second win at home this Saturday night against another Virginia team, Bridgewater.

An aggressive hard-hitting defense made the difference in the Scots victory. Big plays were abundant. Free safety Charlie Wyche swiped two Wasp passed including an interception that killed a last minute Wasp drive. Punter Tom Fleisch (11 points, 42.9 yds avg.) boomed a 73 yarder from his own endzone to put the Wasps in the hole on their final possession. The punt by Fleisch was the biggest play of the game. Other big play men were noseguard Doug Smith, two fumble recoveries, and linebacker Alvin Richmond, one fumble, 10 solo tackle and two assists.

Keith Goodwin got Maryville rolling in the opening quarter with a 3 yard touchdown run. Kelly's kick had MC on top 7–0. Wasting no time Emory and Henry's placekicker Jeff Stone cut Maryville's lead to 7–3 on a 41 yard field goal. Emory and Henry then got another score by Carlos Noaks 2 yard run and Stone's conversion put the locals ahead at halftime 10–7.

An exciting second half saw Maryville score two big touchdowns. Quarterback Charlie Hixon figured in both tallies as he hit Ken Dickens with a 10 yard touchdown pass and later ran 10 yards for another score. Kelly's toe was true on both attempts for a 21–10 lead in the fourth quarter the score tightened to 21–16 when Emory and Henry's Noaks again scored. Wyche's interception locked the door on a final Wasp surge and keyed MC's victory 21–16. Maryville entertains Bridgewater this Saturday at 2:00 on Honaker Field for its first home game.

A definite plus for the Scotties this year is the addition of Lon Herrzbrun, former UT linebacker coach (1969-76). Herzbrun volunteered his assistance and has been a valuable aid for Jordan. Two other new coaches are last year players Ken Hanna and Craig Arcos.

Maryville played with starting tailback Alvin Nance and backup Ronnie Lasley. Nance was sidelined with a thigh bruise and Lasley has been ailing with a back injury.

Tony Levilli's performance on specialty teams impressed head coach Jordan. Levilli had six tackles.

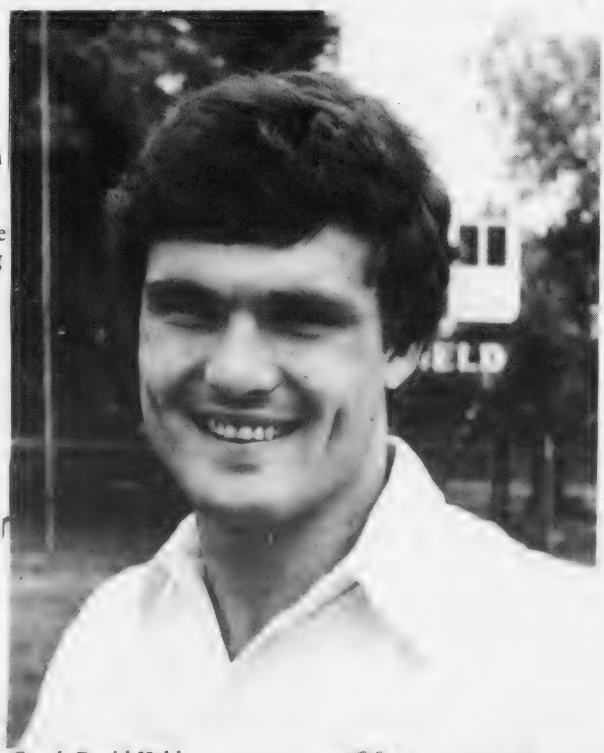
Soccer Starts



The Maryville College Soccer Club opens its home season this Saturday at 2:00 behind the gym. The new co-captains for this season are Will Way and John Malozzi. The new coach is a Maryville College graduate, David "Bucky" Buckwalter.

Held Succeeds Elia

David Held, a twenty three year old graduate from the University of the South has been named head coach of the Maryville College wrestling team. Held, who doubles as an assistant coach of the Scot football team was named to the position on July, 8 by new MC President Dr. Wayne Anderson. Held also was an assistant to former wrestling coach Don Elia, and is now the youngest head coach on the collegiate level.

Held, who grew up in Chattanooga, attended Notre Dame High School, where he was named Tennessee state wrestling champion in the 158 pound division, and was also named to the All-City football squad as linebacker. Graduating in 1972 from high school, Held attended the University of the South as an economics major. At the University, he actively participated in both the football and wrestling squads, and had an outstanding wrestling record of 76-12. Held received his teachers certificate here at MC and practiced at Doyle High School of Knox County. In addition to his athletic coaching duties, Held is also in his second year as Head Dormitory resident at Carnegie Hall.

Held is believed to be the youngest head wrestling coach in the nation on the collegiate level. Held, who succeeds Don Elia as wrestling coach, inherits a team that finished 10th in the nation last year in the NCAA Division III final rankings. Based on that finish, the Scots have been given a No. 8 pre-season ranking nationally. "I believe we can live up to that ranking and then some," said Held. "In order to do it though we need to keep who we already have and find a few more to build upon. As I see it, we're just two or three people away from being national contenders."

Scots Dump Bridgewater

by Robert Boone

Maryville College used a devastating passing attack led by sophomore quarterback, Dave Kibben, to rout Bridgewater (Va.) College 35–0 Saturday.

Usually the backup quarterback, Kibben took the controls when starter Charlie Hixon pulled a hamstring in last week's 21–16 win over Emory and Henry. The impressive Kibben connected on 16 of 29 passes for 205 yards and two touchdowns. Jeff Raby, a freshman, relieved Kibben in the fourth quarter and hit three of five attempts,including a 30 yard scoring pass to Billy Crews. The Scot receiving corps of Keith Goodwin, Ken Dickens and D an Coley had on outstanding game. Goodwin pulled in eight receptions for 103 yards and two touchdowns. Dickens finished with five grabs for eighty yards. Saturday's win was also a big defensive effort in that the defenders scored their first shutout of the young season.

On its first possession Maryville sustained a 79-yard scoring drive. Three pass receptions by Dickens led the drive which was capped off by Keith Goodwin's five yard run. Kicker Tim Kelly hit the first of his five conversions for a quick 7–0 first quarter lead.

Aerials from Kibben to Coley gave Maryville its next two touchdowns. Coley grabbed scoring passes of 23 and 14 yards for a 21–0 halftime lead.

A bit of razzle dazzle by receivers Ken Dickens and Keith brought the crowd to its feet in the third quarter. Following deep penetration into Bridgewater territory Kibben threw a strike to Dickens on the five yard line. As a defender tackled Dickens he lateraled the ball to Goodwin for the old flee flicker play. Goodwin went untouched five yards for his second score and a 28–0 lead. Billy Crew's 30 yard catch from Jeff Raby ended the scoring splash for Maryville. Kelly split the uprights on all five conversion arrempts.

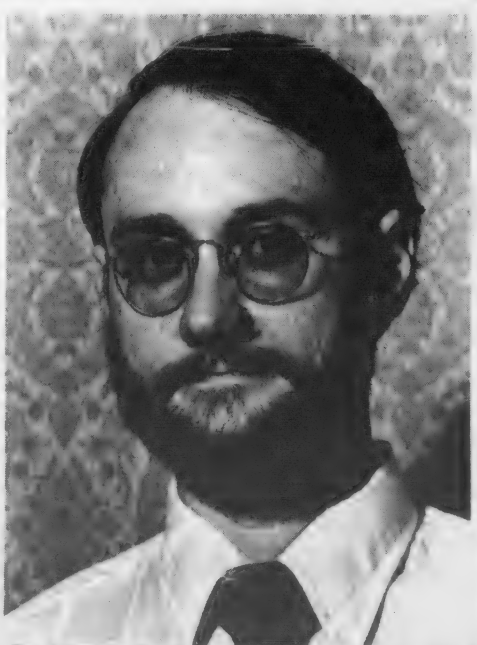
Bunde Added to Faculty

Dr. Terry A. Bunde, 30, has been named assistant professor of chemistry at Maryville College, MC President Wayne Anderson announced today.



Dr. Bunde, a native of Orlando, FL, will teach organic and biochemistry courses at the College. He holds the Ph.D. degree in biochemistry from the University of Florida in Gainesville and a B.S. in pre-med from Rollins College in Winter Park, FL.

Dr. Bunde comes to MC from the Baylor College of Medicine where he has been a postdoctoral fellow since 1975 in the laboratory of Dr. Stephen H. Bishop of the biochemistry department. While there,he did research on the structure and function of invertebrate glycoprotein mucins, the biochemical basis of shell-boring mechanisms of gastropods and amino-phosphono-proteins in invertebrates. He spent one summer in Dr. Bishop's laboratory at the Marine Biological Laboratories in Woods Hole, MA.

Following graduation from Rollins College in 1968, Dr. Bunde served in the United States Army for two years. He was awarded a bronze star for his service which included one year of active duty in Viet Nam.

He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, American Chemical Society and Society for Complex Carbohydrates and has prepared several abstracts and articles for professional meetings and publications.

He is married to the former Pamela S. Riess, a California native. They plan to reside in the Highland Acres subdivision in Blount County.

Our opinion

Well over 8 million people visited The Great Smoky Mountains National Park last year—making it the most visited National Park in the United States. Undoubtedly one of the reasons for its success in the past was that a visitor could count on and enjoy a minimum of commercialism in the area around the park.

The people who lived in the region were quiet, backwooded folk who minded their own business and respected others who did the same. The attractions consisted of a few "See the Bear" places, an occasional small and simple hotel, and of course the National Park.

But now they are in poor competition when porpoise shows, year round skiing, and an army of wax figures beckon most visitors traveling into the National Park via "Seviervul" and Pigeon Forge. Past Porpoise Island (where for $4.50 a piece you can see dancing dolphins and roller skating parrots a la Busch Gardens), past the neon lit motels and water boggins (where for 2 bucks a head you can slide on down a water filled concrete trough carved into the side of an old pasture-hill), past magic land (where, if your wallet isn't too soggy, you can explore flying saucers and pirate ships while you get soaked to the tune of $3.75 a person), past the Gen-Yoo—Wine Indian Souvenir shops and Hillbilly Miniature Golf Courses (where they club you $2.50 a game—"In The Foothills of The Smoky Mountains").

Finally, we arrive in Gatlinburg—a honeymoon and convention paradise. Take Christus Gardens, one of three wax museums in Gatlinburg (which seems to be big on wax and small on city planning). It's a religious wax museum which for $2.50 a piece is billed as a "truly inspirational experience."

Christus Gardens was such an inspiration to one conscious soul a few years ago that he opened "A Trip Through Hell," and in the manner of all area attractions, blanketed the valleys and countryside with signs that screamed "Go to Hell!" Apparently, not too many people were interested in the preview, and after an unsuccessful season, "Hell" gave way to a restaurant.

Gatlinburg's delights go on and on. At old Heidelberg Castle (which is neither old, a castle, or even barely Germanic) you can enjoy fake skiing at a fake castle for real money.

Fortunately, most of us travelling to the park have been spared the tacky tourist trail (441) which most visitors must endure.

Now, in between the Rock City barns and the "Explore the Fourth Dimension" bill-boards along 73, we can all start looking for signs advertising Townsends "Smoky World", an 18.4 million dollar theme park which is part of a 100 million dollar "tourist facility." With ground-breaking scheduled for late fall, the "facility" will be located across from the new Big Valley Water Circus and Wilson's restaurant. The theme park will include a 12-story ferris wheel and other facilities similar to Six Flags over Georgia.

Next week, the Echo will discuss the ramifications of a project of this scale and the apparent "donut of commercialism" which seems to be surrouding the Park.

Your opinion

Dear Editors:

Whenever I venture up (or down) a flight of the stairs in Sutton Science Center, I contemplate the possible cause of their excessive irregularity.

Could it be due, I wonder, simply to the questionable workmanship? A level would have come in handy, if this is the case.

Teetering down them once again this year prompts me to think that no, indeed there may lie behind these perilous steps an ulterior motive.

While experiencing the hazards of these steps, (clutching all the while to the railing) inspiration has led me to offer several possible reasons for the construction, such as it is, of these stairways.

TO:

(a) provide convenient candidates for anatomical analysis (after they break their necks);
(b) discourage the lesser dedicated student;
(c) give motivation for classwork. One perhaps may reason "If I just make it up, I'll do anything."
(d) inspire greater appreciation of the destination upon reaching it. The cognitive dissonance theory of justification comes into play here: "If I risk my life going to this class, it must be worth something."

or

(e) create a boon to the Psychology Dept., which is located *down*stairs.

Whatever the reason, these stairs constitute a health hazard to users, so my last word is Heels Beware!

Sincerely,
Ruth Allen

Struble Speaks

The Battle has begun! The same battle that faces colleges and universities across the nation is facing us today within our secluded community here at Maryville College. A battle which I beleive with all my heart and all my soul that WE can win.

At Opening Convocation for the upcoming Academic Year I mentioned, in passing, one of the leaders of this yearly outbreak of hostilities. His name is "POTENTIAL", and what's better, he's on OUR side. I expressed a deep desire at that Convocation address for the student body here at Maryville to visualize this great potential that we possess at the beginning of this particular Academic Year.

The forces of "Potential" are very ablely led by our fearless Dr. Wayne Anderson. Serving directly under Dr. Anderson are the rapable Dean Richardson, George Kramer, Chaplain Stewart and many other noteworthy leaders. The most important part of this coalition, however, is the student body. Each student here at Maryville must play an important role for the forces of "Potential" to prevail over it's arch enemy.

This evil opponent of "Potential" in our encounter is, of course, "APATHY". "Apathy" can be very deceiving. It has cancerous principles in that it eats from within and is often detected only after it's too late to recover. "Apathy" is inevetably the most difficult obstacle that any person assuming a leadership role must encounter. I sincerely hope that we will rise to this challenge as a student body and conquer this evil force of "Apathy" into total and complete submission. With a tireless concerted effort—WE WILL PREVAIL. Join our fighting ranks NOW, so we can begin to utilize, instead of just visualize, our dear ally "Potential". May the FORCE be with you!

Friedlob is no Freudian

Jim Friedlob

Previously, counseling services have been stereotyped as dark dreary offices harboring leather sofas and wire-rimmed Freudians who dwelt on the past. Not so at Maryville College this fall.

Jim Friedlob, the "counselor," is a 30 year old personable man who is an attribute to the new direction Maryville College is taking. His office is painted a bright yellow, and he doesn't even wear glasses.

Born in Alabama and raised in Tennessee, Jim is in his first year at M.C. His counseling qualifications include a B.S. in Psychology and a M.S. in Vocational Rehabilitation Counseling at U.T., where he is now working on his Ed.D. in Educational Psychology.

In describing his job, Jim says "Any and all concerns of Maryville College students apply to me: no problem is too big or too small." Any interest that is personal, vocational, related to college life, or connected with home will find a constructive sounding board in Jim's office. "All matters are treated confidentially," Jim stressed.

The counseling office is located on the second floor of the student center next to the Black Culture Center. Jim's hours are 12:00-6:00 P.M., Monday-Thursday, and other times by appointment. Messages can be left in P. O. Box 2893, in the Career Counseling Center, or on the door of the Counseling office.

The Counseling Center is open for everyone, and students should feel that "going to a counselor need not be an earth-shaking experience." An easier way to get to know Jim and how his program operates is to stop him when he's "toodling around campus," and just say "hello."

Washington Internship Available

With continued emphasis on the trend toward relevance in higher education, it was announced that Maryville College has arranged internship opportunities for students in Washington, D.C. According to Dean Carolyn Blair internships are available during Winter term in Congressional offices, Executive agencies, Public Interest Organizations, and Judicial agencies as well as in many other areas of interest such as the environment, consumer affairs, journalism, communications, the arts, and business, to mention only a few.

Internships have become an increasingly popular component of students' curricula as they provide students with the opportunity to integrate academic theory with practice in an applied situation. In addition, internships have helped to enable students to develop professional skills, explore career options, participate in the professional work "experience", and to discover strengths and weaknesses in their academic background so that they may better prepare for a career. Internships also provide students with an extraordinary opportunity for personal development with the wealth of political, historical, and cultural attractions available in the nation's capital.

The internships are being handled by Dean Blair in cooperation with department chairmen and have been developed in conjunction with the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives of Washington, D.C., a non-profit educational agency which develops the individual placements and provides internship placement, supervision, evaluation, academic courses, seminars, housing, and other support services for students from colleges and universities throughout the country. While on an internship for a full term, students remain enrolled at, and receive academic credit from Maryville based on evaluations performed by the WCLA staff and faculty in Washington.

Most interns are juniors, seniors or graduate students but some are sophomores have participated in the WCLA program to date. Placements are available in a wide range of interests and are appropriate for majors in any discipline. Students interested in pursuing the possibility of an internship in Washington, D.C. should contact the Dean's Office.

A Note of Thanks

This is only a small brief note to say thank you to all those who have greatly helped us through this difficult time. It is through times like this that one finds what wonderful people make up this world.

Personaly I would like to thank the whole football team for their "special gift", and Pearsons, for their concern and the lovely gifts, "its really great to be home." C.M.

I would like to specially thank Sharon Boggs, Grace Riley and everyone at Davis Dorm for being so kind and considerate. I really appreciate everything you've done and just can't thank you enough. W.C.

We would both like to give our regards to "Blue Goose" for saving our lives. Without its sturdy structure and wide front end–we may not have been here today.

Thank you all.

next Saturday on Honaker Field for their second consecutive home game.

Incidentally, the 1977 Fighting Scots are the first team to accomplish a seven-game winning streak in 13 years. In the school's history only three times have Maryville College football teams had seven-game winning streaks. The last time was 1963-64 when the Scots chalked up 12 consecutive wins without a loss or tie. It happened in 1926-27 under the late Lombe Honaker and in 1946 when MC went 9—0. Maryville's current seven-game winning streak began with last year's 63—2 barrage over St. Leo. Should Maryville go on to win every game this season, they would have a 13 game winning streak. It was a year ago that Maryville ended its 14 game skid and they hope to extend their winning this year.

Maryville coach Jim Jordan hopes to have backfield starters Hixon, Nance and Lombardo healthy this Saturday. All three players were injured last Saturday and did not see any action.

Choir starts humming

by Ruth Ann Wilbanks

Amidst giggles and summer tales, the members of the Maryville College Concert Choir cleared the dust out of their voices and began a new year. Thirty-eight returning members in search of new faces added their harmony to the evening Vespers at Tremont during Opening Week. After the Annual Choir Initiation and picnic in the College Woods on September 27, twenty-two new members were added, making a total of sixty fine voices from fifteen states and two foreign countries. Those represented include Tennessee (15), Florida (8), Ohio (5), Virginia (4), New York (4), Indiana (3), Georgia (3), Pennsylvania (3), Nebraska (2), Connecticut (2), New Jersey (2), Alabama (2), North Carolina (1), Illinois (1), Kentucky (1), Japan (1), and Columbia, South America (1).

Each Choir year is a busy one, filled with various engagements at church services and school assemblies. The Annual Spring Tour is the highlight.

The first appearance by the 1977-78 Concert Choir was at the morning worship service at Highland Presbyterian Church on October 2. That same evening their songs filled the halls of Wilson Chapel during World Wide Communion Vespers.

Other upcoming appearances include October 29, when the Choir and the Maryville College-Community Orchestra will perform Stravinsky's "Symphony of Psalms". On the afternoon of November 13, the Choir, Orchestra and the Oratorio Chorus presents Handel's "Messiah".

When Spring break rolls around, the Choir rolls away on the "Harter Charter"—a ten day performance tour of churches and high schools. The 1978 Spring Tour will travel to the Atlantic Seaboard states, including Eastern Tennessee, Maryland, Virginia, New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Washington, DC area, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. Anyone from these areas who is interested in having the Choir perform in their church, please contact Ruth Ann Wilbanks (Box 2740) as soon as possible.

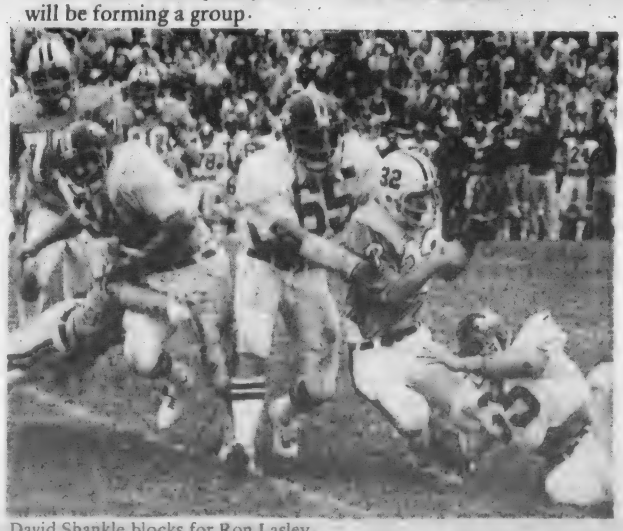
Scots knock Colonels off Centre

by Robert Boone

Maryville College won the championship of the undefeated teams on Honaker Field Saturday afternoon by knocking off Centre College 27—3.

The Scots remain undefeated at 3—0, while the Colonels dropped to 2—1. Maryville travels to Lexington, Virginia, this Saturday as they face Washington and Lee College in a Homecoming affair.

Maryville College head coach Jim Jordan termed Saturday's 27—3 romp as truly a team effort. The score remained close until Maryville's fourth quarter parade of 17 points made the contest unanimous. The offensive leaders were Charlie Hixon, Eddie Brea, Dan Coley, and Ken Dickens while the defense was paced by Phil Loyd, Wayne Dunn, and Jimmy Miller.



The Scots racked up 421 yards total offense, while Maryville's stingy defense limited Centre to 101 yards offensively.

A fourth quarter defensive stand, while Maryville led 10—3, was Maryville's biggest play of the game. Centre had the ball on Maryville's 20 yard line but failed on the first down attempt.

Tim Kelly kicked off Maryville's scoring with a towering 45-yard field goal in the first quarter. Kelly's longest collegiate field goal gave Maryville an early 3—0 lead.

Our opinion

Looking at the rubber tomahawks and plastic "injun" beads (fron Hong Kong) in Cherokee, or the was inspirations of Gatlinburg, MC'ers could always consider themselves lucky when they entered the Great Smoky Mountains National Park via Townsend. The spread of commercialism, which soon enveloped the other entrances to the Park at Gatlinburg and Cherokee, seemed to have overlooked Townsend. Whatever the reason for this oversight, Townsend was able to retain its "backwards" personality.

The Park, it seemed, was the dominant attraction when it came to Townsend's interest. The lush rolling hills, the scattered farms, and the suspension bridges all seemed to form a natural "Gateway to the Smokies." But no more.

Like Gatlinburg and Cherokee, Townsend has been swallowed up by the big "donut of commercialism" surrounding the Park. The new "Smokyworld" is planning to have its groundbreaking ceremonies late this fall. Along with the theme park, developer J. D. Lee, also a Madisonville attorney with offices in Maryville, is planning a luxury resort complex called "The Smokies." This will include twin 21 story towers and a convention center, enough to accomodate 2,000 persons. When both the theme park and luxury resort are completed, these two facilities will employ 2,000 persons, including university students.

The economic advantages of the new recreation facilities in Townsend are many. The amusement "park" plans to attract 1.1 million visitors in its first year of operation. The influx of so many tourists will obviously bring a lot of business to area merchants. Maryville College will no doubt benefit by the park's construction. The incoming tourists will probably be exposed to literature about the school, bringing in a new source of students. However, there will be a price.

The "backwards" Townsend, in comparison to Gatlinburg, will lsoe most of its congenial atmosphere which attracted all of its tourists in the past. This congenial atmosphere will be replaced with an air of commerciality which will litter its debris across the countryside.

Progress, it seems, is inevitable, but it's a shame that we have to watch it happen. However, one can still think back on the memories of a trip to the mountains before "Smokyworld" was ever discussed.

In three years, Impressions has grown from humble beginnings as an eight page literary insert to the Highland Echo to an official publication. In this, its fourth year, Impressions seeks to carry on this "new tradition" of giving the aspiring writers and artists of the college community a medium by which they may express themselves.

Tim Rahn is the editor of Impressions for the 1977-78 school year. Other staff members include Kathy Dunmire, Bonnie Holsinger, Alan Regenbrecht, Joel Flint, Kitty Shronce, Russ Jackson, Shelley Ballenger, Joan Dempsey, and Rick Smith. Faculty advisor is Dr. Charlotte Beck.

The college community—student, faculty, staff or whatever—may contribute to the magazine. Financial assistance is welcome and needed.

Budding poets, writers and artists are invited to submit works for consideration to box 2860. Written works may be in any genre, with no limitation of length or subject matter.

Artists may submit work in any printable two-dimensional media. This must be in either ink or very dark pencil, no larger than 8½ x 7". (This can vary depending on the quality of the work.

Dewhirst experiences Japan

by Veronica Sawdon

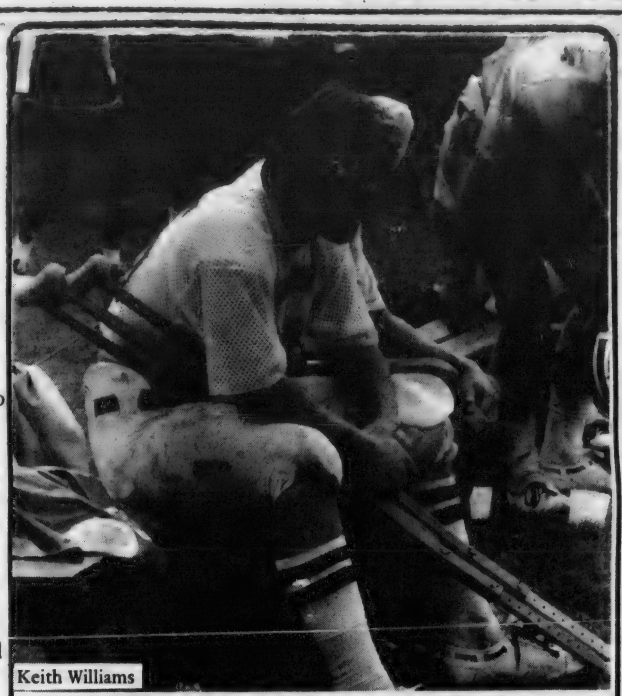
'I'll do anything once," was the slogan Jim Dewhirst carried with him to Japan last spring. From March 27 to July 8, Jim tried to "live Japanese" as much as he could while working for the East-West Foundation in Tokyo.

Jim says he "never really felt culture shock" when he got to Japan—he fit in easily. The way he enthusiastically talked about his experience, one can see why.

While in Japan, Jim lived at a kindergarten run by a Methodist minister. Located in Inzai, the city was about one hour from Tokyo. Jim's mornings began with a cheerful greeting to the children and the day moved quickly from there.

On most days, Jim drove into Tokyo where he worked at the East-West Foundation office. He did many jobs, including talking to students, corresponding, and office work.

Jim worked one day a week at a junior high in the city of Inzai. While there, he worked with the English club, helping them with pronounciation, teaching them "American," and helping them write to American pen pals.



On Mondays Jim taught 6-8 class periods at the senior high in Inzai. He read to the groups, helped with pronounciation, posed questions, and assisted them with conversation.

The experiences Jim had seemed to be more work than play, but he enjoyed it. The free time he had on Fridays was usually spent walking, playing with the children at the kindergarten, or cleaning his room. Friday evenings he took a taxi to another town and taught English to 12 people ranging in age from Jr. high level to adults.

In spite of his busy schedule, Jim managed to fit in a few trips outside the Tokyo area. He described the awesome feeling he got when he woke up to see Mt. Fugi outside his window one morning; and the beauty and gloom of Hiroshima. He also visited Kyoto, the capital of Japan before Tokyo.

During his stay in Japan, Jim saw and spoke to only three Americans, but he did listen to FEN—the Armed Forces Radio. He went to a public bath once a week, and ate Japanese food all the time. Although he knew no Japanese when he went over, Jim picked up enough to be able to understand the gist of everyday conversation. In short: he lived Japanese.

Surprisingly, Jim felt culture shock when he arrived back in the states. He says he still misses the "tremendously polite" atmosphere that is characteristic of the Japanese way of life. And does he want to go back? Need you ask?

Keith Williams

"One of the best offensive linemen I've ever coached" is how Head Football Coach Jim Jordan described Keith Williams. Williams, a junior from Melbourne, Florida, is now facing, or actually tracing, a frustrating ordeal. In last Saturday's romp over the Centre Colonels, Keith reinjured his knee—ironically the same knee he injured against the same team his Freshman year at M.C.

Keith, an R. A. at Copeland and the Co-chairman of the A.C.C. Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, weighs 220 lbs. and, at 6'1" tall, is undoubtedly one of the fastest and most consistant blockers in the Scot's offensive line. When the Echo talked to several of Keith's teammates about his ability and his role on the team. Senior "Z-back" Keith Goodwin replied that "Keith's big—it's just super having a guy like him in front of you . . . (His replacement) Gary Cooper will do a good job, it's just that somewhere along the line you're gonna miss him" Sophomore Kevin REilly stated that "He's a real team player—his position overall will be hard to fill—we'll miss him."

Editor discusses Dilemna

Last spring term, after almost a month of Mrs. Vera Gilmore (then the chairman of the Communications Committee) trying to get a junior or senior to apply for the editorship of the Chilbowean, I was asked to consider applying for that post should I not be elected to edit the literary magazine Impressions. I did not particularly want to edit the Chilbowean, nor was I qualified to do so under the new guidelines recently established by the Communications Committee. I saw from the January crisis over the 1977 book that it was important to fill this position quickly. (Indeed, much yearbook preparation is done during the summer months.) So, I offered to fill the position and withdraw my application for the editorship of Impressions—and this solution was accepted by the Communications Committee.

There has been quite a bit of complaint (mostly behind my back) about some of the decisions I have made, particularly in the case of senior class pictures. Those who have approached me directly have tended to be hostile (one person threatened to punch me out if the picture wasn't done the way he wanted) so I shall try to explain further the reasons behind my decision.

The major reason is money.

The book planned for this year is 8½" x 11", 136 pages, with a cheaper cover format than last year's book.

The current budget is as follows.

Printing	$5030.00
Class Pictures	600.00
Other Photography	450.00
Supplies	100.00
Total	$6180.00

I do sympathize with the senior class, and I understand the feeling of wanting something special, something to remember. I have tried to keep some uniqueness in the senior pictures.

To do the senior class pictures as they have been done for the past few years would not only incur photography expenses, but also a need for more pages in the yearbook. I have already set aside 24 pages for the seniors (as compared to 16 pages for underclassmen and various club sections). To add more space to the senior class section would mean taking away pages from the sections reserved for sports and organizations.

A few last thoughts—the Chilbowean is a student publication, and I would welcome any criticism and/or complaints from those who will talk to me directly, but we would prefer constructive ideas. Only through cooperation and understanding can we make the 1978 Chilbowean a yearbook to remember.

Lady Scots are outserved

The Word From Bird!

The 1977 Maryville College women's volleyball team got its season off to a bad start last week as the Lady Scots lost two games.

Coach Sharon Brown's team was defeated by the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga, 15—0, 15—5, 15—15. Milligan also beat them 3 out of 4 games, 15—13, 15—4, 15—12.

MC's only victory over Mulligan last week was sparked by Senior Captain Paula Hensley, who served eight straight times against that Lady Buffalos before breaking service. Otherwise it was a rough night for the Lady Scots.

"We are plagued with service problems" said Coach Brown. "We mis-served too much. When we get it corrected I think we will have a good team."

The Lady Scots are fielding a 12-girl team this year. The squad is composed of three returning players from last season, plus new blood in the form of five freshmen, one senior, one sophomore and two transfers.

Saturday the Lady Scots were plagued with bad luck again. First the van broke down while the team was still in Maryville. Finally they arrived at the University of the South one hour late, minus one player due to illness. Their bad luck continued as they lost 3 straight games 15—7, 15—8, 15—9. The team got off to a good start in all three games, but as they progressed, the Lady Scots fell behind. One member of the team expressed her feelings as she stated, "We just aren't playing together as a team. We've got the skill and potential to be a number one team, but unless everyone plays together this just isn't going to happen."

The women V-Ballers have been trying to overcome their problems this week in practice. A new, 5-1 offense is being learned, which should strengthen their game greatly.

October 8th the Lady Scots travel to Tusculum, hoping for their first season's victory. The next home game is October 14 at 6:30 with Bryan and Carson Newman.

Scots face Generals

Football, con't

Coley caught a quick Charlie Hixon pass over the middle and sprinted 64 yards for six points. Kelly's kick put MC in command, 10—0.

In the second period, Centre's Tim Dexter booted a 25-yard field goal for the Colonel's only score of the game.

Neither team scored in the remaining second or third periods, but the Scots hit the scoreboard in the final stanza. Hixon connected with passes to Goodwin and Dickens and set up a four-yard scoring run by Alvin Nance. Kelly's conversion made it 17—3 with 11:13 remaining in the game. Later, Tim Kelly's field goal of 30 yards made it 20—3.

Senior cornerback, Mike Thomas set up the Scots most exciting score of the game. He intercepted a Centre first down pass to give the Scots possession with 0:09 remaining. Sophomore tailback Eddie Brea swept right end, refused to be tackled, and rambled 48 yards for his first college touchdown! Although time had expired the play was good for six points. Kelly's final conversion rounded off the scoring 27—3.

Maryville's starting offensive tackle Keith Williams reinjured a knee in Saturday's win and underwent surgery this week. Ironically, it was two years ago against Centre that Keith first hurt his knee and required surgery. Jordan termed Keith as "one of the best offensive linesman I've ever coached."

Next Saturday's opponent, Washington and Lee, lost to Randolph Macon 21—13 last Saturday. Maryville will try to spoil the winless Generals Homecoming this weekend.

Statistics: MC first downs, 18; yards rushing, 192; yards passing, 229 (8-17-1); fumbles lost, 2; penalty yards, 8-80. Centre first downs, 8; yards rushing, 47; yards passing, 54 (5-8-3) fumbles lost, 2; penalty yards, 1-15.

Biden Cites Inconsistant Concepts

The youngest man ever elected to the United States Senate, Senator Joseph Biden (D. Del.), was the guest speaker at Monday's Community Issues and Values Program.

Biden, who was elected to the Senate in 1972 and is seeking re-election next year, spoke on the topic, "A Liberal Who Opposes Big Government."

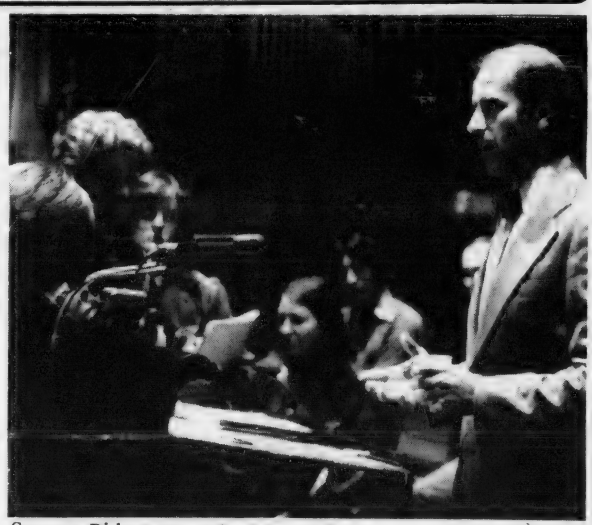
The junior Senator, considered a liberal, told the audience of approximately 100 that he was concerned with the future of this nation's social programs, but at the same time, is concerned with the increased amount of spending being undertaken by the federal government.

The Senator said that there is an attitude in the U.S. currently in opposition to the concept of "big government", but that the individual still depends on this very concept in order to preserve his or her individual wants and desires.

The speech, spotted with humor and anecdotes, cited several examples of how the public seemed to be growing weary of new programs to help disadvantaged groups because of the fact that these programs were costing too much money. Yet, on the other hand, Biden indicates that the individual often turns to government for help in cleaning the streets and looking for help in getting the elderly into federally sponsored nursing homes at no cost to the individual.

"We're the most hypocritical generation because of these inconsistant concepts we have of what government is supposed and not supposed to do," said Biden.

Following his address, Biden, who was recently named in the Washington Post as a potential Democratic contender for President following Jimmy Carter's term of office, held a question and answer session with his audience.



He said the next important issues facing the country were the method of electing members of Congress, health and welfare reform, jobs, and tax reform.

As a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Biden said he is reserving judgement on the Panama Canal Treaty, although he feels he can support it if the conditions outlined in the treaty are jointly understood by the parties involved.

Biden, who was scheduled to remain in Maryville, returned to Washington that night.

Scots Mop Up Wash. and Lee

by Robert Boone

An awesome defensive showing led by Senior Cornerback Mike Thomas helped Maryville College breeze to a 42—0 romp over Washington and Lee University of Lexington, Va. Saturday.

Mike Thomas picked off 3 of Maryville's 6 interceptions and returned one 38 yards for a touchdown. Thomas, who has 15 interceptions in four games, is among the Division III interception leaders in the nation.

Maryville's defense as in past games played superbly. Aside from collecting the second shutout of the season, the unit held the Generals to -16 net yards rushing and only 104 yards total offense. In four games MC's defense has allowed just 19 points (4.7 per game).

The game was played in a steady drizzle, but like last year, the Scots proved that they perform well on a wet, muddy gridiron. Saturday's pattern of play was simple. Maryville's stingy defense caused interceptions or fumbles (9 turnovers) and the Big-0 returned the compliment by racking up the score. After only six minutes of mud ball the Generals homecoming had been by a 21—0 trashing.

The Scots first touchdown came on their first possession. Two key third down passes of 21 and 12 yards from quarterback Charlie Hixon to tight-end Dan Coley contributed to the score. Keith Goodwin went the final three yards for the score. Tim Kelly's first of six conversions was good for a 7—0 lead.

On W&L's next series defensive strong safety and tri-captain Steve Savage set up Maryville's next TD with a stolen aerial at the W&L 33 which he returned to the 18 yard stripe. On third down Goodwin made a 20-yard diving catch in the end zone from quarterback Charlie Hixon. Kelly's toe made it 14—0.

Guest Opinion

Responsibility at Maryville

by Dr. Harry Howard
Chairman Political Science Department

As editors, we wish to involve as many persons as possible in the opinion making process of this institution. This week Dr. Howard writes his reactions to Senator Biden's speech "The Liberal Who Opposes Big Government", made at Monday's

On Monday, October 10, 1977, Senator Joseph Biden of Delaware spoke at MC as part of the CIV series. He suggested that American society must change its life style toward more self-responsibility or else run the risk of overburdening government to the point of financial and programmatic bankruptcy. Perhaps the most telling illustration he used was that of the woman in Delaware who tried to find someone, including Senator Biden, to remove a dead dog from the gutter in front of her house in the middle of the night. Why, asked Biden, could not the woman wait until morning, place the dog in a plastic bag, and put it in the garbage for pick up? In other words, if we burden government with trivia to the point that the citizenry is outraged, we run the risk of a backlash in which legitimate and necessary government programs would be victims along with the trivia.

It seems to me that what Biden said has applicability for MC as well. How often do students transfer their own responsibility for problems and failures to fellow students, faculty, administrators, or "the system?" Or, how often do faculty members hold students, administrators, or "the system" responsible for situations which are their own responsibility? Or, how often do administrators project their problems and shortcomings onto students, faculty, or "the system?" Each person, of course, is the only one who can answer these questions. The import of this is that if each of us develops the pattern of expecting the next person to accept the responsibility that properly belongs to oneself, then sooner or later the distribution of responsibility at MC will become so disproportionate as to risk our entire educational enterprise.

To the point, students must accept responsibility to study and learn because only students can do this. Faculty must accept responsibility to be sensitive and adaptive in teaching methods in order to develop quality teaching because no one else can do this for them. Administrators must accept responsibility to develop those procedures and services that are necessary to the functioning of a liberal arts college such as MC. In study and learning, the faculty and administration cannot accept the students' responsibility; in teaching, the students and administration cannot accept responsibility for the teachers; and in administration, the students and faculty cannot accept responsibility for the administrators. Without proportionate distribution of responsibility, MC runs the risk of educational bankruptcy.

Your Opinion

Dear Editors,

If "Our opinion" of Sept. 30 had been oratorical in nature, I would have classified it a "hoopskirt speech". That is what Mark Twain called public discourse that covered everything but never touched anywhere.

The "donut of commercialism" enclosing the Park is like weekend football on television. You can bank that the networks wouldn't air the games simultaneously if the audience didn't justify the action. Beyond that, each set comes equipped with a built-in censure. Although the Park situation is by no means pleasant, the tourist are being burned by the fires they stroke.

To paraphrase a standard bit of local humor, to save the task of editing: The only thing barring the successful sale of bottled bear droppings, is one courageous Gatlinburg merchant gaining the nerve to assert Davy Crockett stepped in it.

Bob McCulloch

Eds. note

We agree with your opinion that these attractions are in demand by tourists and to restate "Our Opinion" we will use a quotation from a letter to the Editor regarding the construction of "Smoky World" in Townsend from Tuesday's Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

C. B. Watkins writes, "We've heard this refrain before 'Give the people more diversion, more fun, more amusement.' . . . Some will lable this progress but we who love the naked beauty of nature have another name for it. We call it destruction—and we know it is inevitable."

Print Exhibit Opens in Knoxville

The UT Exhibits Committee will present World Print Competition '77, an exhibition of 100 contemporary prints by 97 artists from 24 countries, at the University Center in The Gallery Concourse and Gallery II from Monday, October 17 until Saturday, November 5. The exhibit can be viewed weekdays, 7:00 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.

The competition, sponsored by the California College of Arts and Crafts in association with the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, attracted more than 4000 entries this year. From among the nearly 250 prints chosen by the jury for exhibition in San Francisco, the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service has selected this large group for tour in the United States and Canada.

The intention is to give exposure to current developments in printmaking and to give artists around the world an opportunity for international recognition. All prints were singled out by the jurors: Tatyana Grossman, publisher of Original Graphics, Universal Limited Art Editions, New York; Pontus Hulten, Director of the Department of Fine Arts, Georges Pompidou Naitonal Center for Art and Culture, Paris; and Prithwish Neogy, Chairperson of the Department of Art, University of Hawaii at Monoa. Stomach Takes Fifth

Undeterred, Judge Everett Olson issued a search warrant for the "contents of the stomach" of the suspect. A soggy skuzzy cigarette was dredged up and sent to the police lab for analysis.

Even if the cigarette turns out to contain cannabis sativa, the ACLU argues it will be inadmissable as evidence. They cite a 1952 Supreme Court ruling which states that examining a person's stomach without his or her approval violates that person's constitutional rights against self-incrimination.

Wallets Stolen

Reward Offered

A tired horde of football players returned to their locker room from practice Tuesday evening only to find, or rather not to find, their wallets—they were stolen. Evidently sometime during practice, someone, finding a door open that should have been locked, entered the locker room and "snatched" approximately 30 wallets.

A $100 reward is being offered for information leading to the whereabouts of the stolen wallets. The football team is offering the reward in hopes of receiving the valuables (I.D. cards, license, etc.) inside the wallets. Anyone with information is asked to drop a note in Box 2390 as soon as possible.

At 4:00 p.m. on the same day, he will speak on God, Process, and Freedom, in conjunction with the Chaplain's Lecture Series at Proffitt Dining Hall.

On W&L's first down, Mike Thomas grabbed his first of three interceptions, then nimbly raced 38 yards for Maryville's first defensive score of the season. The extra point by Kelly was true and Maryville was off to the races 21—0. But Thomas wasn't through. In the second quarter number 40 did his trick again. Thomas came up with a fourth down W&L pass by a diving interception to give MC possession. Keith Goodwin ran for 21 yards and Dan Coley caught a Charlie Hixon pass for 24 more yards. Coley, got Maryville's next score via a 15 yard TD toss from quarterback Hixon. Kelly's fourth conversion made the tally 28—0 with 10:09 remaining in the first half.

A third quarter fumble recovery set up a scoring opportunity for Maryville reserves. Ron Marksbury, who has been sidelined all season, retaliated with the old single wing play, "student body left" for an 11 yard scoring sweep. Kelly's kick scored the count to 35—0. Mike Thomas' third interception killed a W&L drive at the MC 38 to end the third stanza.

The highlight of the fourth quarter was the Raby-Crosby combo that connected for 3 catches and one touchdown. Payton Crosby proved the depth of Maryville's receivers by catching 5 receptions. In all three previous years Crosby has not caught as many passes. Freshman quarterback, Jeff Raby fired his 11 yard strike to Crosby with 0:47 remaining in the game. Kelly's final conversion ended all scoring for a 42—0 final.

MC will participate in another Homecoming this Sat. at Jackson, Mississippi when they meet the challenge of the Millsaps Majors (1—3). Since five division III undefeated teams in the top ten were defeated last week Maryville College (4—0) will probably be ranked in the top ten this weekend. W&L's head coach Joe McHenry who serves on the committee should give MC a vote. Ironically, a year ago Millsaps College was deranked from the top ten by a Homecoming loss of 12—6 to Maryville. This year the situation is completely reversed. Head mentor Jim Jordan hopes his team does not think this Saturday's encounter is a cakewalk.

V-Ballers Match Tonight

The Word From Bird!

The Lady Scots Volleyball Team has seen a lot of action this past week. Saturday they traveled to Tusculum for a tri-match. In the first game, Maryville went against a tough Covenant team. Although they lost all 3 games to Covenant, 15—2, 15—4, 15—7, it was not a total defeat. The women v-ballers played well together, blocking several of Covenants' spikes. Their offense was the best they've had all year. Freshman Ann Outlerson contributed greatly to the Lady Scots game, with her powerful serve.

In the second game, Maryville went against an evenly matched Tusculum team. After losing the first game 10—15, the women V-ballers got fired up and beat them 15—10. Tusculum then came back and beat Maryville 15—10 in the third game. Coach Brown's team finally beat them in the last games 15—11 and 15—6. When looking back on the game, Coach Brown said, "We played like a team. Everybody was moving and knew where each other was on the court. Our offense was the best it's been all year."

The Volleyball Team traveled to the University of Tennessee, Chattanooga on Tuesday with a 1—4 record. Minus freshman Holly Harton, due to a knee injury, the Scotties seemed to never be able to get the game off the ground, as they lost to UTC 15—10, 15—6. At one point, Maryville was winning 8—2, but the Lady Mocs' spikes were more than Maryville could handle.

In their second game, the V-ballers took on Carson-Newman. The women came from behind 14—3 to beat them in the first game 16—14. Their defense was tough and Carson-Newman couldn't seem to get any good spikes. In the next games, Carson-Newman came back to defeat Maryville 15—4, 15—4. The Scotties seemed nervous and several illegal hits ruined their chances for victory. The Lady Scots record now stands at 1—6.

The V-ballers will hope to get two more wins on Friday when they host Bryan and Carson Newman. Game time is 6:30.

Dr. George Kramer

Dean Kramer to Retire

Dr. George Kramer, Dean of Student Relations at Maryville College for the past five years, has announced his retirement as of January 1, 1978. Dean Kramer, former Dean of Admissions at Rutgers University, stated that one of his reasons for retirement was that he wanted to "move out while (he's) ahead."

A graduate of Rutgers University, during which time he was the President of the Student Body, Captain of the Football Team, and recipient of Honorable Mention for All-Americans in Lacrosse, Dr. Kramer began his career in education on the secondary school level.

He taught History and English for seven years before being assigned to a position in the Navy, during which he was one of a team of five communicators attached to General MacArthur when he was at sea in the Philippine Area.

After receiving his discharge from the Navy, Dr. Kramer began his career with Rutgers as Assistant to the Director of Admissions. In 1948 he was elevated to the position of Director of Admissions, a post he held until 1967. In 1967 he was promoted to Vice Provost and Dean of Admissions. He held these posts until he came to Maryville in 1971. Dean Kramer is now Vice Provost Emeritus of Rutgers.

Throughout his educational career, Dr. Kramer has been the recipient of a number of awards. In 1976, he received the Edward Moyes Award for Outstanding Service to the College Examination Board, one of 12 recipients nationally.

Among Dr. Kramer's other contributions to the field of education include being President of the Middle States Association

International Students Round Out Campus

by Julie Adams

Foreign relations are on the rise this year. Maryville College has new representatives from Japan, Iran, Saudi Arabia, Dominican Republic, and Canada.

Japan

Once again, the East-West Foundation has brought us some cheerful Japanese friends. Yasuhiro Okamura has an art degree from a Japanese university and has come to MC to study business. He says, "I enjoy college life, and I feel kindness from American students." Yasuhiro says he hopes that Americans do not mistake Japanese quietness for unfriendliness.

The Japanese students agree that the English language is their toughest obstacle. Keiko Hosura says, "Classes are easy except for speaking English." Keiko spent her summer at Hiwassee College studying English. Mitsuko Kuwabara explains, "With the language problem, it is difficult to converse deeply with Americans."

American customs, such as dating, surprise them. Mitsuko observes, "In America, people are very open. On the first date it is normal to kiss. In Japan, never!" Kenji Komura, from the Japanese island of Kyushu, enjoys the male-female equality of American dating customs.

Student-teacher relationships surprise Keiko. "In Japan," she explains, "we must respect teachers and greet them formally." Yumi Okubo has also come this year to MC from Japan.

Tzn Wu from China has transferred to MC as a sophomore. He lives off campus with his wife and family.

Dominican Republic

Alfonso Granata of Dominican Republic is our representative from south of the border. Alfonso transferred fron INTEC in the city of Santo Domingo, to study industrial engineering.

Although Spanish is his native language, Alfonso speaks English fluently. He says, "I have travelled a lot in this country. I like the way of life here—there is more to do."

Iran

The new Iranian students include Abbas Yavari and Majdeh Shahidi. Majdeh, who wants to study interior design at UT, enjoys her classes but does not feel at home among Americans.

While Abbas does feel at home and describes his feelings as "the difference between the two countries isn't important—friendship is the same in Iran as it is here in America.

Saudi Arabia

From Saudi Arabia comes Soloman Hedaithy, who has already studied in California and Louisiana. He will eventually study statistics and return to Arabia.

Solomon finds his American education easier than the strict, British system of his high school. He enjoys the freedom of dress in America. "In Arabia," he says, "everyone dresses up. You can't wear jeans in the street or people will laugh."

Canada

Linda Zarnon comes from Montreal, Canada, and her family will soon become residents of Gatlinburg.

Acha! Foreign relations are definitely on the rise. This variety of foreign friends adds to the spice of life at Maryville College.

Board Discusses Alcohol, Enrollment

by Veronica Sawdon

Several items of business were discussed at the meeting of the Maryville College Board of Directors October 13 and 14. Alcohol and drug abuse, enrollment advances, and faculty-administrative positions were main entries on the agenda.

The student affairs committee of the Board which has been meeting on the subject of alcohol and drug abuse suggested ways in which this could be accomplished at Maryville. Until next January, when the subject will again be discussed, the statement adopted by the Board of Directors on the alcohol policy is as follows:

"Maryville College strives to create an atmosphere of individual growth and responsibility—intellectual, personal and spiritual. A part of that effort is to encourage and support the individual's ability to develop sufficient self-discipline to function constructively without substance abuse. Recognizing that drug/alcohol abuse is a major problem in the nation, we would like to call upon the College administration to incorporate this national issue into the educational process in the Maryville College Community. This may be accomplished in some of the following ways:

—incorporation into courses in several disciplines
—utilization of Freshman Orientation and Inquiry Courses —placement of responsibility on the student to do the thinking—not what is the 'right' answer, but what, in his view, is the most ethical, moral, intelligent behavior."

Enrollment was another concern of the Board. It was noted that enrollment increased this fall for the first time since 1972. The Admissions department reported that the increase to 673 students is a 3% rise over last year.

Included in the enrollment report was the fact that of this year's total, 206 are freshman and 403 are returning students. Dr. George Kramer pointed out that "New student enrollment has been fairly steady during the past six-year period but the number of returning students has decreased . . . We're delighted there is a turnaround this year in enrollment for the first time in six years but we're particularly encouraged by the increase among returning students."

Recruiting information is also showing positive signs. With the help of Stuart Weiner and Associates, professional admissions consultants, the Admissions offices have received encouraging inquiries which will hopefully bear fruit next fall.

Several faculty and administrative positions will undergo changes as a result of the board meeting. Dr. Carolyn L. Blair's title was changed from Dean of the College to Academic Vice President and Dean of the College. The title change is a result of her significant contribution to the College in general and particularly the academic programs. Dr. Blair will continue as chief academic administrator of the College, working will all faculty personnel in the formal instructional program. She will also continue to teach some English courses.

Changes in faculty include: Tom DeVaney, the new director of Tremont Environmental Education Center, is now assistant professor of education; Dr. J. W. Nichols was promoted from

Frosh Officers Elected

The new Freshman class officers have been nominated and elected. Allen Evitts from Brunswick, Georgia will serve as class President. Allen is a Dorm I resident and is currently undecided about his choice of major.

His partner or Vice President is Tom Walker. Walker, from Cincinnati, Ohio, resides in Copeland Hall and plans to pursue a major in Psychology.

Kathy Nichols will fill the secretary/treasurer alot. Kathy is from Miami, Florida and is planning to major in Math and Computer Science.

The officers all agreed that their objective this year was to plan a variety of activities and unite the Freshman Class together in order to build a strong class spirit.

Bunde Attends Symposium

Dr. Terry A. Bunde, newly appointed assistant professor of Chemistry at Maryville College, attended the Fourth Annual International Symposium on Glycocon jugates in Woods Hole, MA, September 26-October 1.

While there, Dr. Bunde presented a poster session exhibit of his work on sulfated mucins obtained from marine prosobranch snails. These mucins were isolated from the glands in the snails, purified, and characterized by wet chemical analysis and by nuclear magnetic sesonance and infrared spectroscopy.

This work was done while Dr. Bunde was a Robert A. Welch postdoctoral fellow at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, TX. The Symposium is composed of invited speakers from all over the world who work in the field of glycoprotein chemistry and biochemistry.

A Thought for United Nations Day, Oct. 24

A deafening and blinding flash, and the city of Hiroshima was one vast erupting and smouldering ash heap in an instant of time that fateful day of August 6, 1945. Burned and buried in the rubble were at least 70,000 people. But there were some survivors. Up and out from the fires and devastation they gradually crawled—those remnants of dazed, sightless, crippled scorched human beings, hardly recognizable as people.

One of those to emerge was a little girl, Sadako Sasaki. She was found and cared for along with other survivors. Her wounds gradually healed, hair came back to her head, and she seemed destined to have a reasonably normal life.

But there is this thing called Atomic Radiation. It takes its toll in devious ways, sometimes worse—than—death ways. In Sadako Sasaki it had planted the dread disease of Leukemia. Suddenly one day in the midst of play she fell down. Long days and nights followed in Hiroshima Hospital where other victims like herself lay.

Nurses were particularly gentle with homeless, hopelessly sick children like Sadako, They enticed them to take their medicines by promises of folding little Origami figures out of the squares of white paper in which their medicines came. Like all Japanese children, Sadako had already learned to make many Origami objects, but the nurses seemed always able to fold new ones. Sadako's favorite was the crane, long a Japanese symbol of good luck, faith, hope. Japan has a legend that any fervent wish comes true for him who hopefully and faithfully folds one thousand paper cranes.

So it was that Sadako began to use her little medicine papers for the making of cranes, praying for recovery. But as she saw death claim others, she began to sense that she, too, would never get well. Then her prayers were for other victims of the war, and most of all for peace, so that such suffering would never come again to any people anywhere. She composed a three-line Haiku verse which she addressed to her little paper cranes:

I will write peace on your wings and you will fly all over the world.

The nurses hung the cranes above her bed so that she could watch their movement. It was a great day when she could count five hundred. But she seemed unable to make them as fast now. As she took her medicine day after day, the little squares collected, awaiting their transformation and mission. She had made 644 when, at the age of 12, her day came.

When Sadako's story became known, A spontaneous response arose from all over Japan. Children began to fold cranes and send them by the hundreds to Hiroshima. Every crane represented a desire of the maker to help make Sadako's wish for peace to come true. The children of Hiroshima began to save and raise money for a peace tower in which these crane prayers would hang—a tower that would remind them of Sadako and her dream of world peace.

Completed in 1958, the tower stands in Hiroshima Park. On its top is a little girl in bronze, her arms stretched high above her head, holding a golden crane. Below, sheltered under the tower, but visible on all sides, hang thousands of colorful paper cranes strung into leis. They come constantly from Japanese children who wish to grow up in a world free from war.

At the base of the tower stands a black stone on which are inscribed these words:

This is our cry
This is our prayer
To establish peace in the world!

Shall we stop for a moment and make this our prayer, too, cranes—simplified ones—symbolic of our desire to help bring peace to the world.

Thompson Brown House

Historic Trust, Farmhouse Updated

History of Preservation Attempt

The Thompson Brown House, one of the oldest two story, two-pen log structures still standing in East Tennessee, has a new lease on life. Thanks to the current restoration efforts of the Blount County Historic Trust (BCHT), an organization which derives much of its membership from the ranks of MC faculty, staff and students.

The BCHT established in February of this year, has a variety of purposes, they are: "to discover, procure, preserve, improve, and maintain structures, sites, artifacts, and records which are architecturally or culturally significant in Blount County."

The BCHT was the end result of a campaign several years ago by a number of dedicated MC students and faculty to keep the "old farmhouse" (as the Thompson Brown House was also known) from being demolished.

The history of the preservation attempt, as well as the background for the Trust, goes back to May 1975, when the college announced plans to sell the farm—the house—barns and other out buildings at the edge of campus (next to Highway 73) to Blount County for the construction of a new health center.

That same month, a group of concerned students led by Suzanne Phillips appealed to administrators of the College in an attempt to preserve the Farmhouse. College officials offered to allow relocation of the old farmhouse on to adjacent college property, with the condition that a citizen's group would be formed and assume total responsibility for relocation, restoration and maintainence.

By June a representative from the Tennessee State Historical Commission and a local architect both recommended that the house remain at that location, with the center being constructed to the rear of the property lot.

By November with the sale of the lot finalized, interest was rekindled and determined, sweaty students put several "rip off Saturdays" removing exterior siding and interior wall boards in order to expose the original two-pen log exterior.

In May of 1976, the Tennessee State Historical Commission awarded the Maryville Preservation group a certificate of merit for "outstanding contributions" of time and effort to preserve the nineteenth century house.

The house is of historical note because of its' unique structure and age. It is believed that the structure was built in the early 1800's and records of its sale have been found dating to around 1815 to the Thompsons. In the 1840's Isaac Anderson, the first president of Maryville College, performed the wedding of a girl believed to be born in the house some 20 years earlier.

In 1865, the house was purchased by the Browns, who maintained possession until the college bought it in the 1940's. In the coming war years, the college ran a successful Dairy farm on the property, employing students and selling products to the community.

Current research has Dr. McNiell, of MC's Sociology Department who is serving as Charter President of the organization this year, at a stand still. Dr. McNiell has uncovered what appears to be a swap of farms between two Thompson brothers in the 1800's. The problem is locating property lines as established and described by the aged documents and relating them to current property lines.

"The house has much to tell us about what life was like in the early Pioneer days. And, to help the BCHT learn more of the story, MC will be offering a special archeology course next spring term which will be using the Thompson-Brown house as its field study project," Dr. McNiell (whose relatives once lived in the house) noted in a recent interview.

During the past summer, an archaeological survey team from the Tennessee State Historical Commission visited the Thompson-Brown House to study the structure and give advice to the BCHT restoration group, which is headed by Dr. John W. Nichols of MC's math department, regarding appropriate steps to take in the restoration process. Among the findings of their survey is that the house's current familiar front porch is actually the third one, and that all the fire places were made of brick.

The next month will be a busy one, according to Dr. Nichols, as much of the preliminary restoration work will be getting underway. One of the first items on the restoration agenda will be the application of wood preservative to the logs to help "winterize" them. County work crews, under the guidance of a skilled carpenter, will also be reinforcing the foundation and making several new window and door frames to replace ones which are in poor condition.

Students and other interested persons wishing to assist in the current winterizing restoration work should contact Dr. Nichols, while students interested in taking the archaeology course are advised to look for more information as it becomes available nearer the spring term.

"Even if students can't help in the actual restoration project or are unable to take the archaeology course, we would still like to encourage their membership in the Blount County Historic Trust. Student memberships are $1 per year and forms are available from Dr. McNiell or Dr. Nichols.

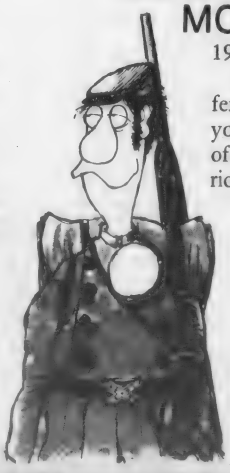
MC's Role in Civil War

Sherman Could Have Burned Anderson



Tennessee was a border state during the Civil War. With brother fighting against brother, the Cedar grove on the Maryville College Campus sheltered not only Sherman's Troops but Weaver's as well.

In November of 1863, Sherman's army occupied much of the College's property, camping on sites now occupied by Sutton Science Center and the site of Memorial Hall which was razed in the fall of 1975.

On one of the cedar trees found on the large open green between Anderson and Sutton Science Center, target practice was held and it was from this site that General Sherman sent his famous message to General Burnsides in Knoxville: "Hold the fort, for I am coming."

In September of 1864, the campus was again occupied, this time by Confederate soldiers who, under the command of Lieutenant General Weaver, aimed their shells over the downtown area of Maryville from artillery placed on the ridge by Anderson Hall. The Union forces eventually surrendered—to be taken prisoner and held on the Court House grounds.

MC Has Come A Long Way Since...

1924 Student Handbook

One of the greatest offenses was committed if young women left "the Hill" of the campus for automobile rides with "young men".

"On Sabbath forenoon, couples will return directly to the Hill. Students are not allowed to patronize the Sunday Trains."

On tobacco . . . tobacco in any form is not allowed. Maryville realizes that better work and stronger men come from shunning the weed, cuds, and butts."

Our opinion

As of January 1, 1978, Maryville College will be missing one of its most popular and capable administrators when Dr. George A. Kramer retires.

During his past five odd years at Maryville College, this campus has seen a reverse in the admissions department, when looking at the number of students entering Maryville. For other institutions this size, where their admissions level is declining along with a nationwide trend, ours is now the exception.

As far as other areas in Dr. Kramer's department go, the dorms are well-manned with experienced head residents and a good set of R.A.'s, and financial aid is running well. These are just a few of his contributions during the past years.

However, his efficiency as an administrator is not all that will be missed. Among the Dean's peers, he is recognized nationally for his contributions to education. He is a man of stature, the kind who knows the answers or where to get them.

To members of the staff, Dr. Kramer is thought of as the gap-filler between the upper-echelon of the administration and the staff. It doesn't matter who you are, when you go in to see him, he will always treat you with an equal measure of respect. No homage has to be paid to him. He doesn't issue decrees to you when he talks to you—he's an open person.

When it comes to students, one can't help but think of his unquestionable integrity. He's genuine to the point where he won't say one thing to your face and another thing to your back. He wants to see your point of view while having you see his. Dr. Kramer commands respect while making you feel at ease. But most importantly, he is and always will be the student's friend. It will be hard to find a person who will so staunchly defend the individual student's rights as Dr. Kramer has.

Although Dr. Kramer will be leaving the administration, it is hard to imagine what this campus will be like without his presence. His demanding administrative responsibilities and his full schedule never seems to stop him from a few friendly words or a pat on the back. We wish him the best of luck in his retirement.

Was bout five year gone when on October 22 . . . . . they came from Durango, the habitat of the rainbow sky, storms allround, purple haze against the background, they came . . . . Beetle showed on Thursday, no stache and lookin for Papeyes . . . . Lib on Friday. These two were guardians of a beautiful love, conceived in mystical parts, in the quiet of the day, in the star made lights of the night. They were this love. What strange subtle message brings these ole cowboys and lassies back to the West. Must be the grub. Everybody poots. (Utah makes a clarification here — a poot is a foot-stompin design made by a lasso against the canyon scorned lands norht of the west.)

There was the big rodeo down at Bluefield Deciphoring Correll. Then the square dance—Tom singing marine songs, Chip passing out wedding rimgs, A-eyes still without, Savage and Goodwin celebrating the sixth successful round-up, Mike sleeping again, somebody playin' with a Winchester 10, and Hanna and Utah wishing they still shared the same bunkhouse (Chapter five will be devoted to this and is titled—How the West Made a Friendship or Whose got the Pillow Now) when boom, bang, thunder, smoke . . . . the ground parted, cawoedling stopped—Utah shook, shivered, dropped all thoughts of Angie (just for a second Angie baby) . . . What would appear? Bart, Hale, Huttinger, or Strolling Fred, The Echo, Memorial, Brick, or none of the above, both of the above, or all the below? No—it is the great Trout in the sky, the friend of Gills. Hush fell over this shing-ding.

Changes have been made on all levels—the air is filled with a different atmosphere . . . . an atmosphere of warmth.

World Concern Committee Plans Events

The World Concern Committee of the ACC has begun setting up several programs for the Maryville College community for the current school year. The committee is taking steps to organize an International Club on campus to enable students and faculty members to learn more about the social customs of other countries. Speakers from Maryville College as well as outside speakers will be featured at the meetings. More information about this International Club will be forthcoming.

The very successful Great Decisions program will be continued largely as it was last year. There will be several discussion groups established during winter term to explore ten vital issues set forth by the Foreign Policy Association. Participants will have access to Great Decisions books that will provide information and help lead into discussions. There will be more detailed announcements made about this during Winter term.

The World Concern Committee is interested in determining which issues are of greatest concern to Maryville College students. Issues presently being considered are the world hunger problem, international peace, and political prisoners. The WCC is planning to focus on issues of great importance and interest to students. The specific program to benefit from the Fred Hope Auction will tie in with an issue emphasized by the World Concern Committee.

In order to encourage greater association between foreign-born and American students the WCC is finding the birthday brothers and sisters of the foreign students on campus. On these birthdates there will be special celebrations planned to help create deeper appreciation and understanding of cultural differences and similarities.

Co-chairpersons of the World Concern Committee are Dr. Harry Price (Box 2835) and Ms. Chris Cervenka (Box 2058). Any student or faculty member having suggestions for projects and programs for the WCC is invited to contact one of these people.

African Missionary To Speak

The role of missionaries in modern Africa will be the topic of discussion when the Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Gannaway visit the MC campus Wednesday, October 26. The Gannaways talk, which will be held in the Little Chapel at the College, will be followed by a communion service celebrating the unity of all persons engaged in the mission of the church both here and abroad. The Gannaways, who became overseas missionaries in 1965, are now serving on the staff of St. Paul United College, a theological institution of Presbyterian, Anglican and Methodist churches in East Africa. Mr. Gannaway had previously served for a special term in Egypt, where he had been pastor of the English speaking congregation in Cairo.

In this decade the United Presbyterian Church, along with a number of other churches, has entered into a new era of missionary involvement. Today overseas work is best described by the term Mutuality in Mission, i.e., American missionaries, invited by national churches, join with Christian colleagues throughout the world in working together for the mission of the church. This concept of mutuality in mission also means that churches from abroad are now sending missionaries to this country to participate in the life of the church here and to share with us their understanding of the Christian faith. Dr. and Mrs. Gannaway will discuss the implications of this new approach to mission and share with us their personal involvement in the life of the Christian church in Kenya.

The visit of the Gannaways to MC is part of a weeklong mission celebration sponsored by the 75 United Presbyterian Churches of Holston and Union Presbyteries. Opening meeting for the celebration will be a Mission Fair held on October 23, 4:30—8:00 p.m., at the First Presbyterian Church in Morristown, TN. Included in the event will be colorful missionary exhibits and other presentations of mission work around the world. Participating will be missionaries from Ghana, India, Pakistan, Japan and Kenya. The theme for the event, "A New Look At Mission," will be presented through music, drama and a brief address.

Astronomer Slated for CIV

Recent discoveries in astronomy that challenge the current, popular view that we live in an altogether "normal" region of the Universe are the topic of a Maryville College Community Issues and Values program Thursday, October 27.

Dr. Benjamin F. Dr. Peery, who also serves as the Harlow Shapley Visiting Professor of the American Astrological Society, will illustrate his MC talk with slides.

Prior to the CIV lecture, Dr. Peery, whose interests are in synthesis of the elements, stellar composition and nuclear astrophysics, will present a seminar under the auspices of the American Chemical Society Student Affiliates. Topic for the seminar—set for Wednesday, October 26, at 4 p.m. in Room 113, Sutton Science Center—is "Molecules in Space: Astrochemistry." Faculty featured in Mikado

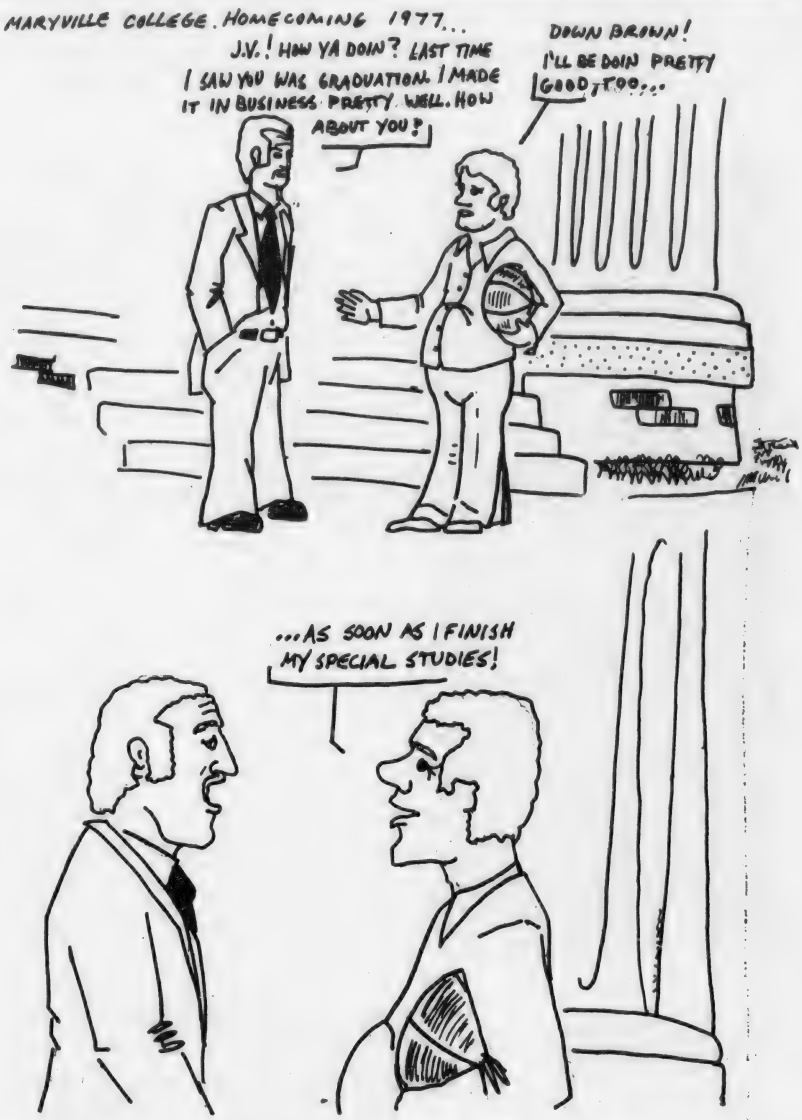
The Maryville College Playhouse will open its 1977-78 season November 3–5 with a production of The Mikado, Gilbert and Sullivan's popular operetta.

This traditional love story is set in 19th century Japan. The role of the Mikado, who's "object all sublime" is "to let the punishment fit the crime," will be portrayed by Peter Chaney, a junior transfer student at MC who has done Gilbert and Sullivan productions at the junior college level.

Dr. David Cartlidge, professor of religion at the College who has also appeared in Gilbert and Sullivan productions in a summer theater program in Michigan, will appear as KoKo, the Lord High Executioner who has been appointed to his office through "a set of curious chances."

Dr. Charlotte Beck, professor of English at MC who holds a bachelor of music degree from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville and who has appeared as a soloist in the MC production of "Messiah," will portray the Mikado's "daughter-in-law elect" Katisha who eyes KoKo with matrimonial ambitions.

Tom Banfield, a junior voice major at MC and an active member in the Concert choir, will be seen as Nanki-Poo, the wandering minstrel. Dana Harbison, a Maryville resident who operates a majorette school and who has appeared in MC productions of Godspell and Brigadoon, portrays Yum-Yum, the school girl "filled with girlish glee" with whom Nanki-Poo is in love in this musical tale.



Joe Saylor, an ALCOA employee, plays Pooh Baah and Ed Herbert, MC freshman, portrays Pish Tush, both friends of KoKo. Other members of the MC faculty, students and staff comprise the chorus to round out the cast of this pleasant adventure in romanticism.

The production's director is Thomas E. Jones, head of the speech-theatre department at the College. Assisting him as musical director is Michael Ketcherside who just joined the MC faculty as a voice instructor. Others involved in the production are Elaine Armfield, choreographer, and Mrs. Duncan Bennett, costume director. Miss Armfield, member of the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet company, has choreographed other MC theater productions, including Stop the World and Brigadoon. Mrs. Bennett has been active in summer theater programs at the College and has done special costumes for other MC theater productions.

Curtain time for all performances in the Theater, is 8:15 p.m.

Tickets are available at the theater office. Cost is $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Season ticket prices are $6 for adults and $3 for students. Patrons season tickets sell for $7.50

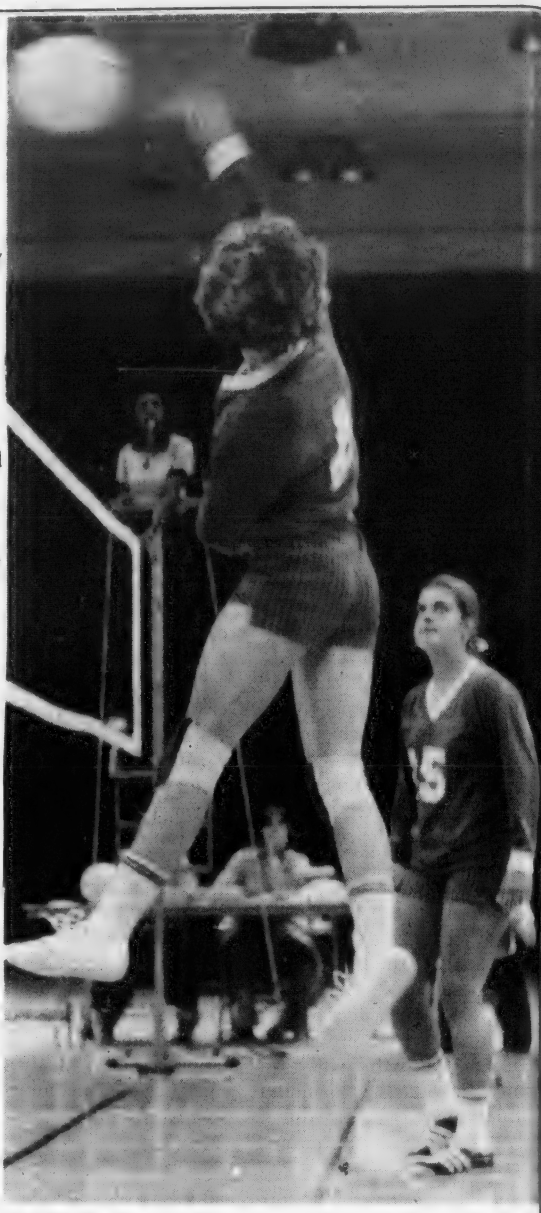
Lady Scots Lose Despite Efforts

Lady Scot tips it over for one.



The Word from Bird

The agony of defeat was felt again by the Lady Scots Volleyball team as they lost both matches Friday night. The V-ballers were defeated by Bryan 15—3 in the first game. The Scotties made several good plays in the second game by Bryan defeated them again 16—14.

Carson Newman was Maryville's next opponent. Maryville played well against their rivals. Their new "Jose" play—the Center Spike worked well as Elaine Hicks set to Bobby Jo Sallade, who in turn spiked it through 3 Carson Newman players, scoring for Maryville. Paula Hensley had an excellent defensive game as she "saved" the ball several times. The V-ballers won the 15—9 game. The Lady Scots fell short when they lost the next two games to Carson Newman, 15—6, 15—5.

The women's volleyball record now stands at 1—8, but this does not paint a true picture of what the volleyball team is like. Their capabilities and quality is better than what the volleyball teams in the past here at Maryville have been. Its true that the record isn't that good but it could be better if the women got the support of the students at Maryville. If people would cheer for them and watch their games, the team would do better. Lack of support is not the only problem. The team is facing a re-building period and only time will compensate for their inexperience.

The Lady Scots have a busy week ahead of them. Tuesday they travel to Carson Newman and Thursday they will visit Bryan. Homecoming weekend the V-ballers will be away at the Emory-Henry Invitational Tournament. Their next home match will be in two weeks.

A V-baller spikes it.

In the first game the Hackers led by Steve Wright and a long bomb thrown by Ken Hanna defeated the Downyonders by a score of 20–0. In the next game the Mongolian Stompers defeated Nadine's Nookie 18–0. The Stompers were led by Tim Handler, Scott Garren and Bob Valentine.

The game following Nadine's Nookie defeated the Southside Soul Burgers 24–12 in a battle of freshmen teams. Nookies were led by Nick Sebasto and Bill Clarke who had 2 interceptions.

Also that the Hackers defeated the Soul Burgers 24–0. The Hackers were led by Ernie Arcos, Ray Oliveri and Utah.

Nadine's Nookies made the second time around alot closer, 20–12. Nookies took the early lead with touchdowns scored by Larry Scheely and Jim Reese. But the tough Stompers came back with 3 TD to overcome the upset. Rich Ramos and Pete Gardzina had key interceptions. Captain Mongo had a superb game up front with good blocking techniques.

Nadine's Nookies came up with another win over the Downyonders in a battle of two young ball clubs. The Nookies again took the early halftime lead 13–0 with TD scored by Larry Scheely and Jim Reese. The Downyonders came back with 3 TD in the second half. Leading them were Pat Doyle, Bob Kiss, and Mike Valind. The Nookies came back late in the game with a keep pass reception by Bill Clarke and later Nick Sebasto ran in the winning TD.

At press time two undefeated ball clubs will meet on the field of battle. Mongolian Stompers defending champs will take on the Hackers.

This proves to be an exciting game with the winner the probable favorite to win the League. Captain Mongo feels the Stompers are the better ball club and will rise to victory on Friday. Kooter countered by saying: Don't count the pop, till you've been on top.

The Men Behind the Masks

by Robert Boone

Offensive and defensive linemen never get their names in the paper. They do all the hard work, open holes for running backs, and hold off defenders; while backs, ends, and quarterbacks are the stars with publicity. The line of scrimmage is where battles are won and lost. It is around offensive and defensive lines that a teams foundation is built to achieve winning seasons. These unheralded heroes determine the winner of each game and should be recognized. Praise be to you offensive and defensive linemen.

Scots Slug Saps

by Robert Boone

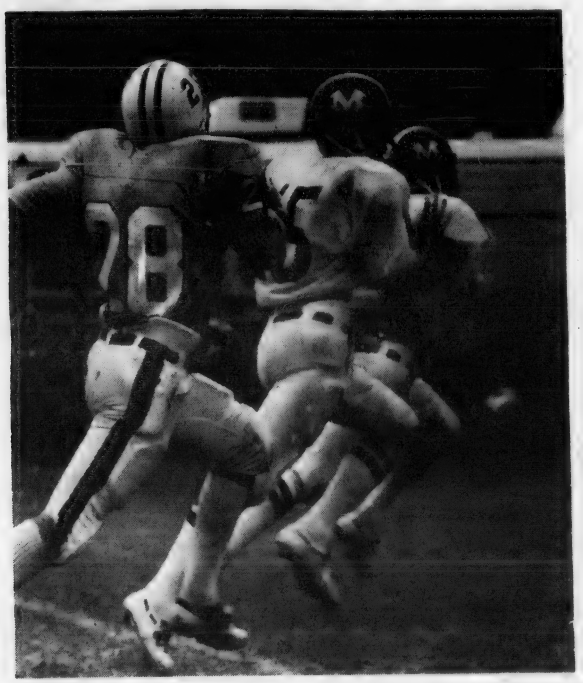
Maryville College had to come from behind to defend its unblemished 5–0 record with a 17–10 triumph over Millsaps College of Jackson, Miss. Saturday.

The Majors led 7–3 going into the fourth quarter before a spectacular play by tri-captain Steve Savage put the Scots ahead A fourth quarter defensive stand by the Scots limited Millsaps to field goal instead of a go-ahead touchdown and evened the score 10–10.

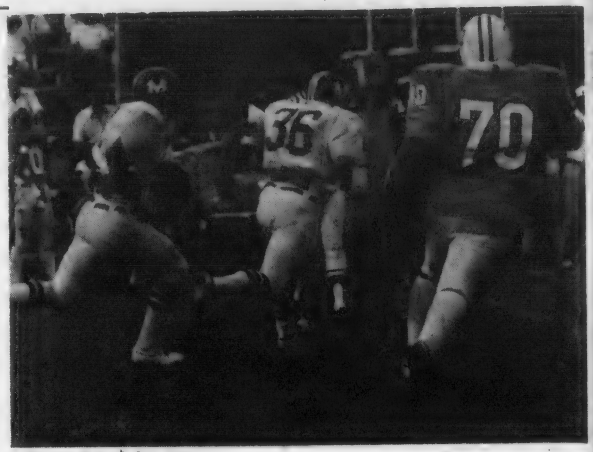
The undefeated Scots got off to a sluggish first half start before retaliating with a 14 point fourth quarter surge. Following one MC fumble Millsaps Terry Wallace caught a 12 yard scoring toss from quarterback Tom Siler and Greg Neiburg's kick put the Homecoming Majors ahead of favored Maryville 7–0. No more scoring occured in the first half.

In the third stanza following an awakening locker room pep talk, the Scots sustained a scoring drive which climaxed with Tim Kelly's 33 yard field goal to narrow the score 7–3 in Millsaps favor.

The fourth quarter was the stage for the biggest play of the game by performer Steve Savage. Savage stormed through the Millsaps line, blocked a punt, and then picked it up and rambled 25 yards for Maryville's go ahead score. Tim Kelly's consistent toe converted the score to 10–7. The battling Majors marched back up field on a scoring drive before a valiant Scot defense stifled their drive at MC's 15 yard line. Millsaps Greg Neiburg booted a 25 yard field goal tying the score 10–10.



The Scots winning score was sparked by a 50 yard pass play from quarterback Charlie Hixon to tight-end Don Coley to the one yard line. Hixon then sneaked over from the one for Maryville's clinching six extra point kick for a 17–10 finale.



Last Saturday's 17–10 decision over Millsaps College ran the Scots winning streak to 10 games which is the second longest Division III winning streak in the nation. Wittenberg College of Ohio boasts the longest winning streak in the Division III with 11 consecutive wins.

Maryville's 1977 team is two games short of tying that all time winning streak of 12 consecutive victories. If MC wins its final three games that record will be broken.

The nationally released Division III statistics of October 12, 1977 lists Scot Mike Thomas as second in the nation with 5 interceptions. Maryville College is ranked sixth both in total offensive scoring and defensive scoring and was named in the top 10 honorable mention list.

Maryville's 1977 Homecoming game is this Saturday as the Scots host Bluefield State (0–6) 2:00 on Honaker Field for the final home game.

Scots head for TD.

Booters Take Two

The Maryville College Soccer Club came back last week and recorded two consecutive victories. Last Tuesday they took on a Tennessee Temple team and defeated them 2–0. David Osborne was outstanding in the goal, recording a shutout and stopping two penalty shots. The offense was sparked by Abbas Yavari and Scott Godwin who sent in two goals.

On Saturday the club journeyed to Dayton, Tennessee to take on Bryan College. Bryan scored first on a corner kick, but Maryville soon took control. Abbas Yavari scored a goal midway through the half and then Mark Solonika blasted one home at the ten minute mark before the half and the Scots were ahead 2–1. After the half, the Scots scored first. Abbas Yavari netted one and Maryville lead 3–1. Bryan came back and scored a goal on a breakaway making the score 3–2. Then Saleiman Hedaithy, with a brillian burst of speed, headed the ball through the defense and scored, making the score 4–2.

Maryville's halfbacks controlled a lot of the play by not allowing the ball to get to Bryan's forwards. The club is just starting to mesh together and play to its potential. On Wednesday, they will play UT at home in what is expected to be a hard fought battle.

Captains Set Examples

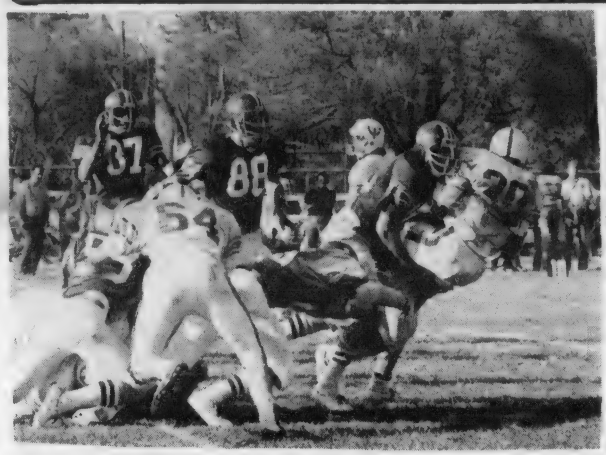
by Phillip Loyd

One mark of a good ballclub is when there are many people qualified to be leaders. This is the case of the Fighting Scots; this year the team has three team captains. From the offense there is Dan Coley, and Ken Goodwin. The tight end and slot-back respectively. From the defense the team has selected Steve Savage.

Dan Coley is a transfer (75), from Austin Peay University, he is a math major. When Dan first came to Maryville, it was the year that the team was 0–9. The next year Dan was switched to tight-end and from this position he has excelled, coming through in tight spots on many occasions. Dan is also the spiritual leader for the Scots.

Keith Goodwin is an English major from North Fort Myers. Keith is a good solid ball-player who while being the smallest man on the offensive line is a very excellent blocker. And he also is one third of a deadly pass receiving corp. Keith is also the type of captain who gives others an excellent example to follow. Like Coley, Goodwin will surely be missed next year.

Last, but by no means the least is Steve Savage, a senior from Georgia. Savage is the Defensive captain, and a more competent captain could not be found. Savage has the keen ability to homogenize and soothe the many temperments of the defensive unit. Steve demands excellence out of himself, and he also demands, and receives excellence from his defensive people.



All three captains are "follow me" type captains. And they give the football team all of the examples it needs. As stated earlier a mark of an excellent ball club is when there are many qualified people to choose for captain. This year the ball club has three excellent ones and the record proves it. For the whole football team I say to our three captains! Thank-you!

Scots Ranked Ninth

by Robert Boone

For the first time this year Maryville College is ranked among the top 10 teams in the Division III ratings, based on certain votes from Division III coaches around the nation!

The Scots, undefeated with a 6–0 record and 11 game winning streak, are ranked No. 9 this week in the NCAA Division III poll.

MC's homecoming conquest over Bluefield State of West Va. last Saturday can be termed as an illustrious mark in the team's football fortunes this year for several reasons. 19 emotional seniors stepped on Honaker Field for the final time, but afterwards came away all smiles. The homecoming was highly successful thanks to unusual college morale and the 42–0 whipping. For the first time in several years many awed and curious local fans (about 4,000) came out to see just what the Scots had that was causing all the stir. WATE-TV channel 6 also made it a point to be there. Saturday could have been the big turning point for MC's football program. The nc. 9 Scots travel to Memphis this Saturday for an important confrontation with Southwestern, a 6–1–1 ball club.

MC played another outstanding game against Bluefield State gang. Sophomore tailback, John Downs, playing in his first game ever, romped for 122 yards on 25 carries and scored two TD's. Quarterback Charlie Hixon threw two TD's to Ken Dickens and ran for one more. Senior split-end Dickens snagged 4 catches for 96 yards. Leading the Scots defensively were Mark Conover (2 fumbles) and Alvin Richmond (13 tackles).

Hixon had a hand in MC's first 3 touchdowns. With 7:51 remaining in the first quarter the Hixon to Dickens tandem connected for a sensational 10 yard scooping catch in the corner of the endzone for a

Memorial Concert Slated

Musicians from the community and Maryville College will join talents to present a joint orchestra and choral concert Saturday, October 29, at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

The concert will feature the MC-Community Orchestra and the MC Concert Choir. Also featured will be Delores Ziegler, voice instructor at the MC Preparatory School and frequent featured soloist in University of Tennessee-Knoxville productions where she is a graduate student.

Mrs. Ziegler will join with a special men's chorus—consisting of selected members of the MC choir and faculty and singers from the community—in presenting in German Johannes Brahms' "Alto Rhapsody."

Other concert selections will include Areangelo Corelli's "Concerto Grosso" and Igor Stravinsky's "Symphony of Psalms."

The entire concert will be in memory of Kenneth G. Marmon, a Maryville resident who died this past September. Marmon, who played violin for the College-Community Orchestra, had been a member since 1956. His grandson, Steve Marmon, a Maryville Junior High student, plays cello with the orchestra now.

Members of the men's chorus include MC faculty members Michael Ketcherside, Victor Schoen, David Cartlidge; Stan Tucker, MC Preparatory School faculty member; MC students Stan McCleave, Tom Banfield and Mike Jacobus; Ut graduate student Steve Clark; and local residents Mark Mertz of Alcoa, Bill Howell, Charles Ball and David Rogers of Maryville.

A reception, sponsored jointly by the Maryville Music Club and Delta Omicron, professional music fraternity for women, will follow the concert in the Chapel Colonnade. The public is invited.

The concert is free and is open to the public.

Messiah Honors Prof.

The 45th annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" at Maryville College November 13 has taken on added meaning.

This year's performance of the celebrated oratorio will honor the late Professor George D. Howell Sr., who taught chemistry at the College for 44 years; and Prof. Howell's three grown children will participate as soloists in the special memorial performance for their father.

Prof. Howell, who died July 8, 1977, was an avid supporter of MC's fine arts programs, particularly in music, and served as chairman of the Artist Series Committee at the College for a number of years. He was also an amateur organist.

A graduate of MC, he joined the faculty there in 1922 after receiving his B.A. degree in chemistry. He took a leave of absence to work on his M.S. degree which he earned from Vanderbilt University in 1925. He rejoined the faculty at Maryville as a full professor at that time and also served as head of the chemistry department until his retirement in 1968. Prof. Howell and his wife,

Our opinion

Are you the kind of student who usually studies hard before going to bed, or the kind who goes to bed, sets the alarm for five or six o'clock and then crams? If you're a pre-sleep studier, GLAMOUR Magazine reports you may be getting better grades as a result of your study habits than someone who does the work afterward.

Recent research into sleep and study habits shows that sleep prior to study disrupts memory significantly, unless considerable waking time is allowed before digging into the material you want to learn. The shorter the period of sleep that precedes the studying, the more this sleep disrupts learning. Sleeping four hours or less was found to be highly disturbing to memory; sleeping six hours distrubed it less.

Researchers aren't exactly sure how sleep disturbs the memory process, but they believe it might involve hormones. In laboratory tests on mice, the hormone somatotrophin, produced naturally during sleep, severely affected the memory of mice injected with it.

With the close of the Fall Term approaching rapidly, many students will be pulling "all-nighters." Most researchers advise early preparation in studying for exams, but if you do get in a bind, there are steps for improving your memory

If you have a test to study for, study first instead of putting it off until the next morning. Better grades might be your reward.

ON ATTITUDE, MORALE AND SMALL THINGS

Utah Chapter 5

Note: The topic for this week dealing with the Purple Pryamid and Coach has been postponed till next week due to Utah's personal feelings.

Roxbury spoke, "Coach could I play for just a few plays? Oh there's another player who has been here longer, put him in before me." Bobo spoke, "Coach, know the ball isn't coming to my position, and when it isn't. I'll be glad to rest the regular." How can a junior varsity football game show in itself the feeling that has spread over the Maryville College Campus. The above quotes show this feeling. The junior varsity lost to Carson-Newman 16—12 on this past Monday. But a loss is not the right word. When a whole team is pulling together to win, no matter how big a part each individual has, there is something going on. When substitute players give 110% effort, whether playing or not, something is going on. Upperclassmen who have been designated to the junior varsity, play each play as if it were the last, something is going on. Top was irratated, but not his effort. The defense was out abilitied, not out desired. Something is going on. Dr. Anderson ya stepped in at the right time. The faculty and staff that helped mold this something going on—we're thankful. Those who ast on their poopers, check yourself-especially the ones who sid football is a financial hinderance. Dam, how many of us have seen a science test build school moral? If we have folks who thing Utah is jumping on totally dominated academic folks—they're right. Take away athletics—MC would be northerner slum. Something is going on. Ya'll lower classmen keep this up. All upperclassmen—Utah says—just glad to know ya'll and be a part of this something going on.

Unselfishness, desire to do something positive, proud to be a part of a group—This is what is going on! Thank you junior varsity.

Homecoming Weekend is Successful

Quarterback Charlie Hixon with Coach Jim Jordan.

A jammed weekend of excellent weather as well as well planned and successful activities highlighted the 1977 MC Homecoming. It all seemed to begin last Friday to the tune of "We are crazy, we are nuts . . .Happy little morons, happy little morons. . . Blllllll, Blllllll, Blllllll" when Copeland Hall's float (which interestingly enough seemed to endure severe damage before finally falling apart) singingly arrived to join the parade line. The Homecoming Parade–one of the best attended and participated in events seemed to enjoy a complete success. Retiring Dean of Students, Dr. George Kramer, was the featured Guest of Honor while a kilted MC Band and a host of other floats and groups followed the town and campus route.

At 2:00 p.m. at Honaker Field on Saturday the bleachers were packed, while television crews shot coverage of the game which would bring the Scots to their National Ranking of 9 among Division III colleges.

The Homecoming Dance was enjoyed by all as they danced to the tune of the Balls Brothers Band–an Atlanta-based group.

Cartlidge Lectures at Holston

Dr. David R. Cartlidge, associate professor and chairman of the philosophy and religion department at Maryville College, is currently lecturing at the Holston Academy in Johnson City, TN.

Holston Academy is a group of clergy and Christian educators who have joined together to further their own education. They invite seminary and college professors to lead them in discussions of interest to the group.

Dr. Cartlidge is discussing "Images of Jesus in the Poetry of the Early Church." He is using New Testament passages to explore the relationship of aesthetic concepts to the theology and life of the Church.

The group meets on the third Tuesday of each month at the Catauga Avenue Presbyterian Church in Johnson City.

Bunde Attends Conference

Dr. Terry Bunde of the Chemistry Department recently attended a 3 day conference of the Pre-Medical advisors in Pine Isle, Georgia. "The Conference of Pre-Medical advisors for colleges of the southeast "was administrated by the Tulane Medical School under the auspices of the Johnson Foundation.

It's purpose was to deseminate information about medical schools and their requirements for entrance.

Historical Drama Featured

Faculty from the Departments of History and Sociology will be on hand to open Thaw Hall, Room 210, each Thursday night for student and faculty viewing of Public Television's eight-segment historical drama, "The Best of Families."

This carefully researched and critically acclaimed series traces the vicissitudes of three families–the Irish immigrant Raffertys, the middle class Lathrops, and the upper crust Wheelers–as they cope with industrializing society in New York City in the 1880's.

The show premiered in a two-part special (WSJK-TV, Channel 2, 9-11 p.m.) last night. Hour-long programs are scheduled on successive Thursdays.

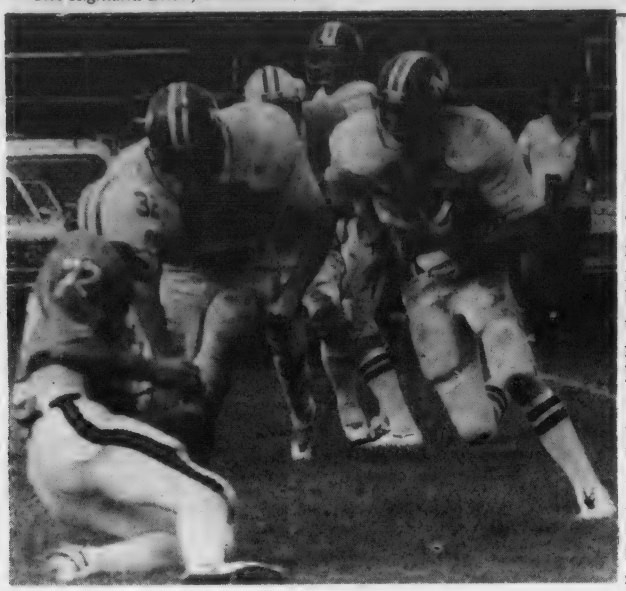
The elderly are a strong political force in Washington. Their influence has been shown by overwhelming passage in both the senate and House of legislation barring mandatory retirement before the age of 70 for most workers.



Wall Street is awaiting a signal that according to one school of the market, would "confirm" that a bear market has killed the bull market. The sign is the Dow Jones Transportation Index, which last week hovered just above the critical point of 203.85. According to Dow theory if that index drops below that mark-investors are advised to sell.

Eyebrows were raised in Washington when members of Congress, required to file annual reports on how they spend their $2,000.00-a-year allowance for expenses in their home districts, told of such things as: tuxedo rentals, office Christmas parties, liquor for constituents, annual dues on credit cards, personalized calling cards and tickets to shows.

touchdown. Tim Kelley's first of six extra points split the stakes for a 7—0 lead. The Scots scored 21 points in the third quarter. Hixon faked a sweep right and bootlegged left to fool all the Blue players and scored from 10 Yards. Kelley's kick upped the count to 14—0. A Hixon to Dickens 69 yard pass play and some fine running by the latter after catching the ball gave MC its next score. Tim Kelley's third conversion made it 21—0. Maryville's next score was set up by a nifty 73 yard punt return to the two yard line by gifted senior runner Keith Goodwin. John Downs bulled over from 2 yards then Kelley's conversion gave the Scots a 28—0 halftime lead. In the second half Maryville's final two sxores came Joe Lombardo's 3 yard run and Down's 4 yard touchdown. Kelley's successful conversions ending the scoring 42—0.

The Scots have been formidable on Honaker Field this year (3—0) outscoring opponents 104—3. To conclude the homecoming victory celebration the game ball was awarded to retiring Dean Dr. Kramer in appreciation for his support.

V-Ballers Up Record

The Word from Bird

The Women's Volleyball Team has seen a lot of action in the past week. Bryan and Carson Newman both traveled to Maryville last Friday. The Lady Scots were defeated by Carson-Newman 15—9, 15—6, and Bryan beat them 15—3, 16—4. Tuesday the V-ballers played Carson Newman again, losing 15—13, 15—13, 16—14. They were close games and the Lady Scots could ahve won them if they got their serves in.

Thursday the Volleyball team travelled to Bryan to play Bryan and Middle Tennessee State University. Maryville played an excellent game, defeating MTSU 15—9, 15—11. MTSU couldn't handle the Maryville offense. In their second game, the v-ballers lost to Bryan 5—15, 10—15.

This past weekend the V-ballers got 5th place in the Emory & Henry Invitational Tournament. They defeated Lynchburg 15—6, The girls has several good spikes along with a tough defense. They were defeated by Emory & Henry 15—5, 15—2, and Virginia Intermant 15—1, 15—9.

Tuesday the Lady Scots boosted their record to 5—12 as they defeated Sewanee Tusculum.

This weekend, The Lady Scotts will travel to Milligan for their invitational. The next home game is Nov. 5.

Intramurals

This past week saw some very interesting intramural action. In the big game of the undefeated teams, the Mongolian Stompers prevailed victorious over the Hackers, 12—6. The game started off good for the Hackers as they scored on the second play of the game, on a halfback option from Ken Hanna to Vince Fucci.

Controversy seemed to plague Monday night's game between the Nookies and the Down Yonders. This game was also a defensive battle as the D.Y. prevailed to a 6—0 lead. Bob Kiss scored the only T.D. only a 25 yard scoring play. The game saw tempers flying with a couple of players ejected from the game. Lets clean up our act, players with come cleaner playing next week.

Scots Drop to King

by David Franssen

The Maryville Soccer Club was supposed to have had two games. However, UT did not show up for the match last Wednesday. The no-show was a big disappointment for the team as well as the fans.

In the game the club did play they were beaten by King College 6—1. King scored first on a scramble in front of the net. Then with three minutes to play in the half, Mark Solinaky scored on a fine shot form 20 yards out. The half ended in a 1—1 deadlock. Most playing felt that they had just played the best half of the year.

In the second half the team played well for the first 20 minutes. Then they fell apart. The super speed of King took over. The flood gates opened, King scored five goals in about 20 minutes time. The team still has one game to play against UT.

Coed Assaulted

Last Wednesday morning at about 1:45 a.m., a Maryville College coed was confronted by a knife-bearing man near Margaret Lloyd Residence Hall, according to College security sources. The man was frightened off and was seen by the campus security guards running towards his car parked near Anderson.

Thinking the man had stolen something from one of the dorms, the guards radioed to the Maryville City Police, who stopped the suspect on Washington Street at about 2:00 a.m. After searching his car, the suspect still appeared nervous. The police then took his name and address and let him go.

Later on that morning, the coed reported the incident to the authorities. At about 4:30 p.m. it was realized that the suspect could have been the person who assaulted the coed. The Attorney General for Blount County was then contacted. The coed said that she would prosecute if she was able to identify the culprit.

The suspect was then confronted and positively identified by the campus police as the man who was running to the car. At press-time the only other information received was that the suspect is known and action is being taken.

Playhouse Presents Mikado

Gilbert and Sullivan Operetta tonight, Saturday

The Maryville College Playhouse's production of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic musical masterpiece "The Mikado" opened Thursday night for a three-day run in the MC Theater.

Judged by its worldwide reception, "The Mikado" is easily the most popular Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, according to Tom Jones, assistant professor of speech-theater and director of the play.

"Few of Gilbert's stories are as clearly motivated and single minded as this one, a fact that does not, however, imply a reduction in wit or comic embellishment in which "The Mikado" abounds, perhaps more than any other Savoy work," Jones stated.

The plot concerns the coincidence of two circumstances: the search of the Lord High Executioner, played by Dr. David Cartlidge, for someone to behead, and the Crown Prince's escape from the Imperial Court because he does not wish to marry Katisha, being portrayed by Charlotte (Mrs. Raymond) Beck.

Critics continue to point out that the Japanaiserie of the "Mikado" merely masks an attack on English institutions, but "The Mikado's" initial success, particularly abroad, was due in no small part to its Japanese trappings, Jones added.

There isn't a great amount of very English behavior or satire about it in "The Mikado" and there is nothing exclusively English about the characters, the director pointed out.

"It is very much a fantastic comedy about death, in which no death ever occurs," he added.

"In the end, the great succession of immortal songs is the operetta's chief claim to international fame. While Sullivan's music is for the most part un-Japanese, there are occasional touches of Orientalia. The opening chorus begins this way, and in Act II the entrance of the Mikado, portrayed by Peter Cheney, is preceded by "Miya sama," which is actually an old Japanese war march. Other numbers are pure English Sullivan, Japanese only in costume."

"The Mikado" is rich in music with such melodies as "A Wandering Minstrel I," "Three Little Maids," "Here's a How De-Do," and "Titwillow" all included in the tuneful musical score.

Curtain time for Friday and Saturday performances is 8:15 p.m. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students and are available at the MC speech-theater office or at the door.

Twenty-one soloists selected to handle "Messiah"

Twenty-one soloists from Maryville College and the local community and three special guest soloists have been selected for the 45th annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah" at Maryville College at 3 p.m. on Sunday, November 13, in Wilson Chapel.

The performance of "Messiah" this year is in memory of the late George D. Howell, Sr., retired chemistry professor at Maryville College, and will feature his three children as guest soloists. George D. Howell Jr. of Clinton, TN, will sing the bass arioso "For behold, darkness shall cover the earth." William Howell of Maryville, will sing the bass aria "But who may abide" and Margaret (Peggy) Howell of Indianapolis, IN, will sing the soprano aria "If God be for us."

Thomas Banfield, a junior music education major from Chesterfield, OH, who now lives in Maryville, will sing the tenor arioso "Comfort ye my people" and the aria "Every valley shall be exalted."

The bass recitative "Thus saith the Lord" will be sung by Michael Jacobus, senior music education major from Lower Burrell, PA.

Howard Bell of Maryville will perform the bass aria "The people that walked in darkness."

Judy Corliss, a sophomore from Knoxville who is carrying a double major in English and applied voice, will sing the alto recitative "Behold, a virgin shall conceive" and aria "Oh Thou that tellest."

The soprano recitatives "There were shepherds" and "And suddenly there was with the angel" will be sung by Kathi Wilson, a freshman music therapy and voice major from West Lafayette, IN.

The recitative "And Lo, the angel of the Lord" will be sung by Ruth Cartlidge, a junior speech-theater major from Maryville.

Leisa Ford, a freshman music major from Lighthouse Point, FL, will sing the recitative "And the angel said unto them"; and Judy Thweatt, a junior music major from Winchester, VA, will sing the soprano aria "Rejoice greatly."

The alto recitative "Then shall the eyes of the blind" and the aria "He shall feed His flock" will be sung by Bonnie Holsinger, a senior English major from Holdrege, NB. The aria "Come unto Him" which follows, will be sung by Betti Green, a community soloist who lives in Maryville.

Mr. R. Vanjah Richards a Liberian sculptor and musician, spoke to several groups of students this past week. He demonstrated examples of Liberian music and art and later attended a reception sponsored by The Black Student Association.

Our opinion

This past week saw a lot of action at Maryville College. Halloween and Mischeif night, the eggs flew and the tempers flared as Maryville College students released many of the tensions built up since the beginning of the term. However, the damage inflicted is only going to create more tension at the end of Spring Term when the students receive their end-of-the-year dorm fines.

Realizing that the whole situation was conceived in fun, one cannot help but ask why the incident had to go to the extremes which it did. The stench of rotting eggs and the messes in the dorms around campus could have easily been aovided if the confrontation was restricted to the open fields where there could be some degree of control.

From the students point of view, it can be seen in light of the lack of an adequate social life on campus. One solution to this could be better use of the Social Committee as a release valve for the pressures of students.

Surely we are not advocating that the Social Committee sponsor this type of activity despite the high level of participation. But rather that such a release valve is needed and that the creation of a fall activity similar to May Madness be introduced.

Many who participated in the melee did not and may still not recognize their actions as being those of a rash body of individuals. Mr. R. Vanjah Richards, a Liberian sculptor who was on campus participating in a BSA activity that night, remarked to several members of the college community how he was shocked by the lack of consciousness of MC students, and that with world hunger evident, so-called "enlightened and concerned students" could turn their backs on such a problem and throw the food which would feed a multitude of starving peoples.

It is our opinion that the participants involved examine this gross waste of food and money (anestimated 200 dozen eggs were purchased over the two night period). The lack of or inability to effectively control such a situation,and how to prevent such an activity from esculating to such violent proportions (a nose was broken and various other minor injuries and threats to life and property were evident). Perhaps through the individual reflections of the participants, the total level of enjoyment will be re-evaluated thus preventing such a situation from arising again.

The Security 'Question

A deep concern has been registered at the most recent All College Council meeting by several members of the Council and community concerning a situation that directly or indirectly affects every member of our campus. This concern is for our campus security, the job they attempt to do, and the abuse they suffer at the hands of our students. The most recent harrasment the security guards have received from a number of students is entirely unwarranted in light of the job they attempt to do in our interest.

In my association with our campus security, which have been many, I have found them to be very understanding and helpful in every instance. The student must realize, in his assesment of our security, that they are very limited in their resources and, as many other areas here at Maryville, must make do with what they have. Security has been attempting for years to purchase a vehicle that would be much more practical for the job and perhaps also add a small amount of needed prestige. It's rather difficult to demand respect from the seat of an old, tattered green, pick-up truck!

The job our security should be performing is being prevented by the very ones they're attempting to help—US. During the most recent outbreak of hostilities between armed forces of the various dormitories the security guards were very tolerant and patient with the adverse behavior of these commandoes. They refused to call for outside help from the city of Maryville in face of an uncontrollable situation. Why didn't they call for outside assistance? Because they were more concerned for the eventual welfare of the students involved. What thanks did they get for their understanding? One security guard drove home Tuesday morning, after only four hours of sleep in two days, and completely covered with eggs and must have muttered to himself—"WHY DO I TAKE THIS HARRASSMENT?"

I think its about time that we get behind our security guards and let them know how deeply we appreciate the job they're doing. I'd feel a lot more secure knowing that our security is patroling the campus for unusual occurances rather than chasing a bunch of derelicts around for harrasing them. With the many thefts that have occured this fall, it seems essential that our security spend more time constructively in guarding our property and persons. The recent threat to one of our girls late at night, and the many thefts that have occured should be incentive enough for us to begin to set our priorities straight. For the safety of ourselves—NOW is the time to support our security, and quit abusing them, so they can carry on with the job they're paid to do—PROTECT US!

Thank-you security for all the patience and understanding you have shown to so many students in so many years. Again—Thank-You!

Your Opinion

Dear Editors:

In regard to Kooter's column of the 28th, I would like to thank him for making it the most intelligible one so far. More important, however, I would like to throw in a word of defense for the academic side of M.C.

I did not choose Maryville College for its' magnificient football team. I did not leave when they suffered a losing season. I do not care what, or if, they are ranked. But, I do resent Kooter's dig at the academic side of Maryville College sans football, especially referring to it as a "northerner slum".

Unlike Kooter my morale is built by a science test, not the sight of grown men (?) battering themselves into the mud.

Thank you,

P.S. Since in the paper of October 28 at least part of 7 columns—not including those about homecoming—were devoted to football, maybe one reference to it could be dropped—preferably, the most illiterate one.

"Mom" Jones Looks After Lloyd

by Veronica Sawdon

The title "dorm parent" has taken on a deeper meaning in the person of Mrs. Margaret Jones. Her motherliness and understanding have enabled her to become close to many students on the M.C. campus.

Mrs. Jones started her role as a dorm parent last January when she moved into Carnegie Hall to assist Lee Struble. Her hours—8:00-4:30—gave her a chance to meet the residents of the dorm, and she says, "I'm just crazy about the guys!"

But now, "Mom Jones" has 55 daughters. She moved to Lloyd last March as co-head resident of Lloyd.

Born and raised in Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Jones has held two other jobs. She began as a salesperson for Stewart's Department store in Louisville, and later became a buyer for the University of Louisville bookstore. This long association with students is reflected in her role as a dorm mother.

Before accepting the position at Maryville, Mrs. Jones had been retired for eight years. She comments that "Going back to work was an unexpected experience. It's great that older people can get back into the swing of things when the opportunities open for them."

Mrs. Margaret Jones with Dean Kramer.

Mrs. Jones is swinging, too. Her apartment is always open to students, and she frequently has an encouraging word or a homemade goodie to share. As she says, "I'm just here to look after you . . . ." She does, and we're glad.

Appraiser CIV Slated

Persons interested in finding out the origins and value of their most prized "treasures"—anything from a stone to a vase to an old doll to a fine painting—will have a chance to do so at next week's Community Issues and Values program at Maryville College.

Mrs. Alice Manning, decorative arts consultant to the Milwaukee Art Center, antique appraiser, lecturer and teacher of decorative arts, will characterize any items brought to the lecture on Wednesday, November 9 on the stage in Wilson Chapel.

The final CIV program for this term, entitled "Ancient to Modern Decorative Antiques and Collecting Appraisals," will begin at 9:20 a.m. and is open to the public.

Mrs. Manning, who believes that primitive or provincial items can be as interesting as expensive fine arts, will also bring some items with her which she will discuss from a collector's point of view. In addition, she will talk about "collectibility" and the possible value of antiques.

The guest lecturer has completed five years of university training in arts and sciences at Kendall College and the University of Illinois. In addition she has done subsequent work at Marquette University, the Chicago Art Institute, De-Young Museum in San Francisco, Winterthur, Toronto Museum, Williamsburg, VA, the Henry Ford Museum and the Milwaukee Art Center.

Mrs. Manning also serves as a consultant to the Milwaukee Historical Society and to the public television station in Milwaukee.

"Messiah", con't.

a MC graduate who resides in Alcoa, will sing the alto aria "He was despised."

The recitative "Thy rebuke hath broken His heart" and the arioso which follows "Behold and see if there be any sorrow" will be sung respectively by Judy Fulks, a sophomore voice major from Largo, FL, and Julia Ramsey, a senior music education major from Cedarville, OH.

The tenor recitative "He was cut off" and aria "But Thou didst not leave His soul in hell" will be performed by tenor Edward Herbert, a junior political science major from Williamsville, NY.

Lesa Payne, freshman music major from St. Petersburg, FL, will sing the soprano aria "How beautiful are the feet."

Michael Ketcherside, a new member of the music faculty this year and voice instructor, will make his first local appearance as a tenor soloist singing the recitative "He that dwelleth in heaven" and aria "Thou shalt break them."

The soprano aria "I know that my Redeemer liveth" will be sung by Marian Hummel, a junior music education major from Huntsville, AL.

Frederick Frost, a former Maryville College student, will sing the bass recitative "Behold, I tell you a mystery" and aria "The trumpet shall sound." Stanley McCleave, a senior applied music major from Haddon Heights, NJ, is this year's trumpeter.

The contralto recitative "Then shall be brought to pass" will be sung by Betty Payne, a sophomore applied voice major from Clearwater, FL. who will also sing the duet which follows with tenor John Ruch, a special student from Knoxville, majoring in music.

Savage Art Show Opens

Linda Savage (Mrs. Jeff) Ference, art education major at Maryville College, will open her senior art show Sunday, November 6, with a reception for the public from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Gallery.

Mrs. Ference's show, entitled "With Open Hands," will feature a variety of two- and three-dimensional pieces, including weaving, sculpture and pen and ink drawings.

These works will be on display through Friday, November 18. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Mrs. Ference is from Orange Park, FL, and has received numerous art awards, including the Sophomore Art Award, Davies' Fine Arts Award and a Merrill Arts Commission. An ALCOA scholarship winner, she has also served as a junior and senior counselor and was recently named to Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

Scots Drop to SAM

by Robert Boone

Maryville College head coach Jim Jordon stated prior to the MC Southwestern (SAM) showdown in Memphis that the game would be decided in the fourth quarter. That it was.

Southwestern scored two fourth quarter tds to erase Maryville's 21—14 third quarter lead and handed the Scots a disappointing 28—21 loss. Earlier MC held a 14—0 halftime lead.

MC knew they had to stop SAM's passing attack led by quarterback Craig Solomon the number 2 passer in Division III to win the so called "championship of Tennessee". But the Scots broke down in the defensive secondary. Solomon hit 20 of 31 passes for 354 passing years and 4 second half td passes. The Lynxes gained the momentum in the fourth quarter on a blocked punt at the SAM 16 yard line, which led to a 13 yard td pass from Solomon to Tom Ulllady tying the game 21—21. Jordan said, "The blocked punt was the turning point in the game. With 4:35 remaining the winning score came on a 90 yard touchdown bomb from SAM's Solomon to 4.6 sprinter Jerry Hampton. Frank Burton kicked the conversion for the 28th point.

MC, led by a charged up defense which socked Solomon seven times for minus 52 yards, was the dominant team in the first half. Senior tight-end Dan Coley scored twice on touchdowns of 18 and 7 yards from Charlie Hixon. After a scrambling Hixon had been chased all over the field by SAM defenders he caught Coley all alone on the other side of the field for an 18 yard td loss. Tim Kelley's extra point made it 7—0.

Mike Thomas, whose hometown is Memphis, gave the enemy home fans a show with an interception which set up MC's seconf td. The Scots touchdown this time by determined tailback Ron Lasley again completely fooled a tired SAM defense. Lasley swept left end, was hit twice, but spun off defenders for a tremendous second effort 29 yard scoring ramble. Kelly again booted the extra point for a 14—0 halftime lead.

SAM's third quarter score established confidence for the second half home club. A five yard Solomon to Hampton td pass and Barton's kicked out MC's lead to 14—7.

Fighting back the Scots down 72 yards in 11 plays for what proved to be their final score. MC's Hixon to Coley dombo terminated the drive with a td pass from 7 yards. Kelly's third successful conversion gave MC a 21—7 advantage.

The big question bringing on the minds of Scot followers is whether MC is still in contention for the playoffs. The Scots aren't thinking about the playoffs they're concentrating on knocking off presently 4th ranked Hampden Sydney and ending the regular season with a win. Saturday's loss leaves Maryville a 6—1 record but both SAM and Hampden Sydney have already lost once and have two games remaining. If the Scots can repeat their 11—10 upset over H-S from last year they'll be in an envied position. With no pressure on, MC should go into Saturday's game with nothing to lose and everything to win.

This past week saw some boring action in men's intramural football. In Wednesday's game the Mongolian Stompers stomped the Soulbergers by the margin of 21—0. The Stompers blew their doors off. The head stompers included "Greenie", and Tony Scalise, both of whom scored. The Stompers defense manhandled the Soulburgers and are looking ahead to the playoffs.

In Monday's game the Hackers took it away from the Nookies. It all started with Steve Wright's interception in the first play of the game. This scene set the tempo of the game even though the Nookies evened the game at 7—7 early in the first half. After this, it was all Hackers as they won 27—7. Scoring for the Hackers were Fucci, "Kooter", Mathus, and "Ozzie". The lone score for the Nookies was credited to Jim Reese.

Friday's game of this week will conclude this season's action with the playoffs nearby. The teams will be out for blood this time and might prove to be exciting. In coming articles stay tuned for the playoff action and all-star selections.

Meisburg and Walters Featured Thursday

Since 1974 Steve Meisburg and John Walters have been playing to packed houses and standing ovations in clubs and at large universities across the country, and on Thursday, November 17 at 8 PM they will appear at "little Maryville College."

The duo will appear in the Chapel to an expected sell-out crowd so it is advised to buy your ticket early. They may be purchased at the Student Personnel office, in the Student Center during break and lunch, in the Cafeteria during meals or from any member of the Social Committee for $2.50 for Maryville College students and $3.00 for the general public (all tickets will be $3.00 at the door). This concert is sponsored by the Social Committee, who reminds students that the Thursday, Nov. 17 concert may be a crowded affair, and to buy your tickets early.

Wind Ensemble to Perform

The Maryville College Wind Ensemble will perform in concert on Tuesday, November 15, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

The ensemble will feature Michael Ketcherside, instructor of voice at MC, as tenor soloist for "Songs of Abelard" by Norman Dello Joio.

This band composition is a symphonic synthesis culled from the music of "Time of Snow," a dance score choreographed by Martha Graham. Its three movements are the dramatic and tragic musical expression of the Abelard and Heloise legend. The text for the vocal solos is based on poetic material from the medieval period.

Ketcherside, who holds a double master's degree in voice and opera production from Florida State University, has performed previously as a soloist with the St. Louis Symphony and in various opera workshop presentations at FSU, including one for the Public Broadcasting System.

Other selections for the November 15 concert include "Chorale and Shaker Dance" by John Zdechlik; "Invoca-

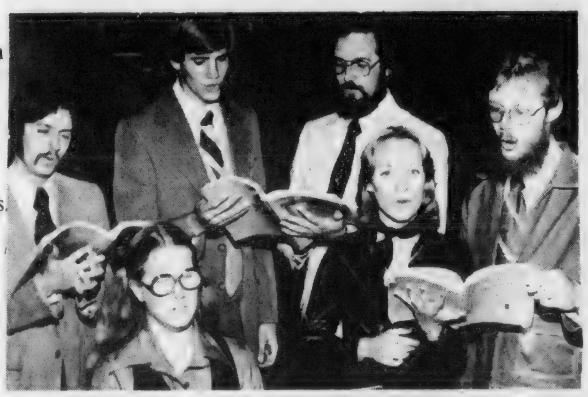
MC's 45th Annual Presentation of Messiah this Sunday

For the forty-Fifth consecutive year, Maryville College is privileged to present to the community Handel's oratorio Messiah on November 13, at 3:00 p.m.

This production is made possible through the combined efforts of both the college faculty and students and community musicians.

The re-creation of this spiritual work, 230 years old, has been termed an awesome religious musical experience for those who attend. A 150-voice chorus formed by the joint forces of the Maryville College-Community Oratorio Chorus, the South-Young High School Chorus, and selected singers from the community, accompanied by a forty-piece orchestra with pipe organ and harpsichord, will perform the oratorio. Hundreds of people from far and near have been drawn to the Maryville College campus to witness the grandeur of this musical presentation and to receive the inspiration of its message.



A unique feature of the College's performance of Handel's Messiah is the variety of soloists selected from student, faculty, and community singers.

An oratorio is usually similar to an opera in form, involving a full-scale plot with characters and action. Most oratorios also have a narrator who exposes the story and serves to connect the solo vocal selections with the choral and orchestral portions.

Messiah is an exception as an oratorio; it is essentially non-narrative in the conventional sense and has neither specific characterizations nor narrator. Rather, the implied story evolves around the prophecies of the coming of the Messiah, the life of Jesus Christ, and the life hereafter. The set pieces typical to both opera and oratorio, including overture, recitatives, arias, and choruses, are employed by Handel in Messiah.

The libbrettist, Charles Jennes, adapted passages of the Old and New Testaments of the Scriptures to form the oratorio's text. The work was premiered in Dublin, Ireland, with Handel conducting from the harpsichord. His performing forces consisted of only twenty-six singers including soloists with an orchestra of thirty-five.

This oratorio is performed annually throughout the United States and Canada, usually during the seasons of Advent and Lent. Since its first American presentation at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, in 1780, Messiah has provided spiritual inspiration to thousands.

Our Opinion

Opinion Policy Clarified

A flurry of letters were received by the Highland Echo this past week intended as "Letters to the Editors," three of which appear below. However the others will remain unpublished because they were unsigned.

This is probably as good a time as ever to state the policy of this newspaper regarding letters. Due to a shortage of space, letters should be limited to 300 words or they will be cut at the discretion of the editors.

The letter must be signed whether the name is to appear published or not. If you would like you name withheld, the editors will confer on the nature of the letter to decide if the request should be honored. The reason we ask that letters be signed is that we must be able to verify the letters as genuine.

As we stated in our first editorial of March 30, 1977, we wish to keep all avenues of change open.

Consistant with this policy is our determination to keep an honest and free exchange of opinion. We will not be the means by which people can take shots at others under the mask of anonimity. It is only with an honest and open exchange will the whole of Maryville College profit. We continue to invite your opinions and if the persons who submitted the unsigned letters would notify us—we would be glad to publish these letters promptly.

Your Opinion

Dear Editors:

In regard to last week's letter written by Name Withheld by Request, I would like to throw in a few words for the defense of Kooter, and especially for the athletics at Maryville College.

I'm sure all those who witnessed the J.V. game against carson-Newman (Nov. 7, 1977) saw Kooter coaching and working with the players (without pay). Only 2 or 3 of the residents of Copeland Dorm saw Kooter studying until 2:00 a.m. the next morning for an exam. For someone who has no regard for academics, Kooter gets by just fine with a 3.4 overall G.P.A.

Withheld, I'm sure Utah doesn't resent your letter. I once heard him say that the purpose of his column was to stimulate interest. Besides, we all know that the column is just all part of "Kooter's Act."

I'm only trying to say that just because a person is interested in athletics, that doesn't mean that he or she doesn't care about academics, or vice versa.

Thanks,
John Bobo

P.S. Let's all get our morale built up, fired up, or motivated somehow and do a good job on finals.

Freedom versus Responsibility

Lost Cause for most 'cause they see no responsibility in freedom. "We live in a free country, we can do as we please. We pay mucho dinero to belong to the west, they have no right to restrict what we do." Wrong baby, your freedom stops where somebody else's sniffer begins.

Those who cry out that they aren't given any responsibility ought to check and see why they cannot control their freedom. It's like the urinary system, unattached from the body, creating havoc throughout the west.

You cannot have freedom without first having responsibility.

Apathy versus Involvement

Different in the west. Our west, the homesteaders who occupy it. The smallness and closeness, reflects the ole Trout saying, nibble a little bit and everybody will see, hear and know it. Apathy is gripping. Shyness is a poor excuse. Apathy is the easy way out.

Involvement has its disappointments/headaches—this comes from uninvolvement or destructive overinvolvement. But these disappointments also come from a sincere effort to make something good happen. When water from the eye is shed it is much easier if there isn't your mucus molecules weighting them down.

Dear Editors:

This letter concerns the inconsistancy and poorness of refereeing of the intramural football and volleyball games. Many players feel these are done poorly, An example that ocurred in football was last Friday's game of Nov. 4th. In this game many infractions ocurred but only one flag was thrown. A fight and numerous arguments broke out. These could have been prevented if the referees had used their authority. Also, these infractions were observed by one of the intramural coordinators for football. He did nothing until the fight occurred in the last 5 minutes. Many other games have been similar to this one, and little was done.

Concerning volleyball, timing and the number of points needed to win by have been a center of controversy. From game to game these two rules very seldom remain the same. Sometimes a game will last 10 minutes and other times it will last 15 minutes.

Also, the rule states that a team has to win by 2 points. In some games, after time has run out, the game is continued until one team is ahead by 2 points. In other games, the game is stopped even though a team is ahead by only one point.

I realize that it is hard to call a really fair game with the referees knowing players on both teams, but the games have to be consistant for them to be fair and for players to have a good time.

Thank you,

LETTER TO THE EDITORS

It's been a great Fall! The Coaching Staff and Football Team wish to thank the Students, Faculty, and Administration for their support and positive spirits throughout the season. The Cheerleaders were tremendous in their efforts to be at every away game. It was truly encouraging to our team to see them when we came out on the opponents field. The band, not big in numbers, many times fired-up our team with fight songs. The Students and Faculty wishing the players and coaches "Good luck", "Go get em", and "We are behind you", sure meant a lot. Oh! what a few positive words do to your metabolism. The Administration's support and help especially getting buses to help get students to our games was tremendous. Many people had to help in doing this, and believe me, on "foreign soil" it's great to see a bus-load for your side pull up.

Our Young men played hard and were exciting. It did not end the way we all wanted it to, but it showed some guys what hard work, hanging tough and goal-setting can do. We didn't achieve our ultimate goal. However, in trying to reach it, a lot of good things happened. The biggest was that we all pulled the rope in the same direction. If we will continue throughout the Campus to support one-another, our ultimate goals can be accomplished. Mountains will become hills. Oh! What a few can do—but "Holy Mackrel" what a whole campus can do! One of the greatest things athletics can offer is the old saying, "We will be back next year". And, believe me, we will be there—THE SCOTS WILL BE BACK; YOU'VE ONLY HAD A TASTE!

Thanks everyone!
Coach Jordan

Mikado Creates Smiles, Giggles, and Laughter

A Review by Ruth Ann Wilbanks

"A source of innocent merriment" is the way to describe Maryville College Playhouse's production of Bilbert and Sullivan's operetta "The Mikado," presented this past weekend under the direction of Tom Jones. The set, costumes, and makeup were all done in the traditional Kabuki theatre style of Japan. Many of the dance movements resembled not only Kabuki, but also Italian Renaissance buffoonery as well.

The handsome hero Nanki-Poo was played by junior music education major Thomas Banfield of Chesterfield, OH. A clear and melodious voice along with a feel for the compassion of his character made Tom's performance an enjoyable one.

Dana Harbison of Maryville portrayed Nanki-Poo's true love, Yum-Yum. She displayed well the qualities of a demure (if not somewhat vain) Japanese bride.

The most enjoyable character in the entire show was Ko-Ko, the sniveling, driveling Lord High Executioner. Dr. David Cartlidge, in all his suave and debonair agility became the Harliquin of the show, mixing craftiness with uproarious folly. But at least he had Saga on his list.

The Noble Lord Push-Tush, who would have been marvelous in vaudeville, gave us a run for our money in the form of Ed Herbert, a transfer from Williamsville, NY. Ed has been seen in a serious mood on campus maybe twice, and his character's quick and often dry wit added just that much more humor to the part.

Joseph Saylor, from Maryville, portrayed Poo-Bah, Lord High of Everything Else. With a title like that, one could just imagine how pompous and eloquent he might be. Unfortunately, Mr. Saylor could not be heard very well, and much of his undoubtedly humorous dialogue was lost. What could be heard was a decidedly southern Japanese accent.

The Mikado of Japan, to whom the citizens readily bowed, was played by Peter Cheney, a junior voice major from Hampton, VA. Although his voice was strong, it tended to shift quite noticeably, which dampened an otherwise believable illusion of the Emperor of Japan.

Katisha, the lady with the beautiful elbow who hoped to make Nanki-Poo her own, was done by Dr. Charlotte Beck. Her emotions of anger, disgust, and even love weren't large enough to be conveyed throughout the theatre, and at times dialogue was lost. But I would like to see that elbow!

Yum-Yum's ever present sisters Peep-Bo and Pitti-Sing were nicely done by freshman Linda Wiley of Omaha, NE, and Melva Smither of Pleasureville, KY, respectively. Both girls had fine voices which carried well, but Linda Wiley in her cute-as-a-mother-of-pearl-button role stole the show with "He's gone and married Yum-Yum."

Michael Ketcherside and Betty Carol Zinavage are to be cheered for presenting such a fine blend of choral voices. The everlasting problem with musicals is understanding all of the words, and this ocurred at various times throughout the show. But, mostly, Gilbert and Sullivan's catchy tunes and often hilarious lyrics came through very well, causing smiles here, giggles there, and just plain laughter everywhere. The more we get the chance to laugh, the better.

tion of Alberich" from Richard Wagner's "Das Rheingold"; "Irish Tune from County Derry and Shepherds Hey" by Percy Grainger; and "Brighton Beach" by William Latham.

Also as part of the band's concert, Dr. Harry Harter, chairman of the fine arts department at MC, will announce the first winners of the Ellen Sue Mapstone Scholarship Awards. These awards of $100 each will be given annually to one or more upperclass students for continuous performance and participation in the Maryville College Highlander Band.

Conducting the MC wind ensemble is Gene Taliaferro-Jones, director of band and coordinator of music education at the College.

The concert is free and is open to the public.

RA Selection Changed

A major change is being made in the selection process of Resident Assistants for the year 1978-1979. Students interested in applying for the positions are asked to contact Jane Richardson, Assistant Dean of Student Relations, before December 16, 1977. Applications will be reviewed in January, and the selection process will be completed in March. In previous years the selection process has taken place in April and May.

Scots Close Season

Drop Final to Hampden-Sydney

by Robert Boone

Maryville College lost an outside chance of getting in the play-offs by dropping a 28—11 decision to 4th ranked Hampden-Sydney Va. Saturday in the final regular season game. The Scots final slate of 6—2 was the conclusion of a highly successful season and MC will miss a lot of seniors next year.

Saturday's game was a fine team effort, but the Scots were simply outmanned. Hampden-Sydney's junior sensational running-back Jimmy Ferguson, who is the leading scorer in the nation in Division III gallopped for a new H. S. school record for most yards gained in a season. He amassed 162 yards and 2 T.D.'s.

MC quarterback Dave Kibben filled in for Charlie Hixon in the second half and moved the team with authority while under pressure. The Scots leading rusher was Alvin Nance with 63 yards on 17 rushes.

MC's only touchdown came in the third quarter as Dave Kibben connected with Ken Dickens on a remarkable 14 yard T.D. catch. The fourth down catch, which Dickens made with three defenders clinging on him, was probably the greatest of his career. MC elected to go for the two point conversion which was a successful Kile Kibben to Goodwin pass. Larry Wright's fumble recovery at the 35 started the T.D. drive. Dependable receiver Dan Coley had a big fourth down 24 yard pass reception during the drive.

The Scots led 3—0 in the first quarter via a 35 yard field goal by Senior placekicker Tim Kelly. Kelly has been a mainstay in the Scots scoring for the past four seasons. Danny Thomas' interception set up Maryville's final score.

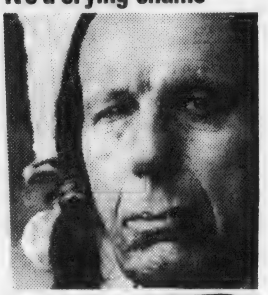
Lady Scots End With Win

The women's volleyball team closed the 1977 season on a winning note. Last Sat. the Lady Scots hosted Berea College. The women V Ballers had an excellent day. They defeated Berea 6 games straight: 15—4, 15—4, 15—3, 15—6, 15—11, 15—1. The 6 game streak was the longest win the ladies have had all season. The win was attributed to the team's good serves, good spikes, and an excellent defensive coverage. All players saw action in the game, and all played well.

The Lady Scots will travel to Milligan Thurs to participate in the State Tournament. Their first game is against Sewanee, a team which they have defeated earlier in the season. Then the V Ballers will go against a "tuff" U.T. Martin, which got first place in the states last year.



The Volley ball team has a good chance to place in state, and we wish good luck to them all.

Final planning for Photography courses for Winter and Spring terms is now in progress. All students planning to enroll in these courses are urged to do so this next week. It is possible that one or the other courses will be cancelled or that it will be necessary to combine them. What action is taken will depend upon the number of students pre-registered.

Scheduled for the Winter term is Advanced Photography (303-1E) meeting Tuesdays and Fridays at E Hour. Prerequisites for the course are either satisfactory completion of Beginning Photography 303 or admission by portfolio demonstrating solid skills in taking and processing photographs. The advanced course extends through the Spring term.

Tentatively scheduled for Spring term is Beginning Photography (303-1E) meeting Mondays and Thursdays at E Hour. This course has been placed on the schedule and will be held if there are not enough students for the advanced course. Anyone may register for the beginning course provided they own or have access to a camera which permits adjustment of F stop, shutter speed and focus. Students will learn both picture taking and processing skills. The beginning course will extend through the Fall term.

If you have any questions about these courses, please contact Mr. Stewart in his office in the Cahpel building.

Dent, Naylor Head Departments

Two Maryville College faculty members have recently been appointed as departmental chairmen, according to Dr. Carolyn Blair, academic vice president and dean of the college.

Appointed as chairman of the math/physics department is Dr. William H. Dent Jr., replacing Dr. Norman D. Love who asked to be relieved of the chairmanship so he could devote more time to computer research and development, his special areas of interest.

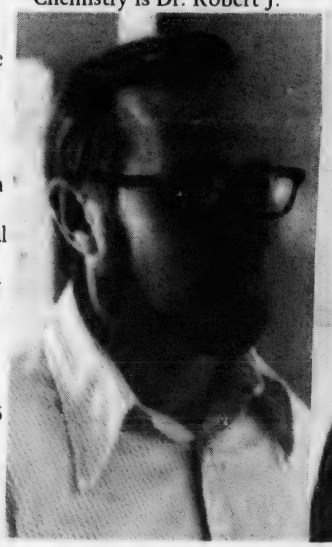
Assuming the chairmanship of the Department of Chemistry is Dr. Robert J. Naylor. Dr. Naylor was named chairman upon the resignation of Dr. W. Gale Rhodes who accepted a faculty position with Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington.

Dr. Dent, a 1957 MC graduate, has been on the MC faculty for 13 years. Prior to coming to Maryville in 1964, he was an instructor at the University of Kentucky, Henderson campus. He received his masters from the University of Kentucky and his doctorate from the University of Tennessee.

A member of the Mathematics Association of America, he also is active with the Tennessee Mathematics Teachers Association, serving the latter as regional chairman of its annual high school math contest. He is a former recipient of two National Science Foundation fellowships for science faculty awarded on the basis of nationwide competition. Besides serving on the MC All-College Council this year, he also is serving as chairman of the Board of Deacons and Directors at New Providence Presbyterian Church.

He and his wife Marge, who teaches kindergarten at Ft. Craig Elementary School, live at 107 Hummingbird Dr. in Maryville. They have three sons, Bill, a senior at Maryville High School; Ricky, a MHS sophomore; and John, a sixth grader at Ft. Craig.

Dr. Naylor, a graduate of Butler University in Indianapolis, received his doctorate from Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. Prior to joining the MC faculty in 1975, he was an instructor in chemistry at CWRU.



He is completing his second year as chairman of the College's Community Issues and Values Committee which oversees the weekly CIV lecture series. He also is serving on the All-College Council. Last year he was a runner-up in the College's "Outstanding Teacher of the Year" competition, selection for which is based on nominations made by the senior class.

A member of the American Chemical Society, Dr. Naylor also belongs to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

He currently is co-authoring with a former CWRU colleague a study guide to be published next spring in conjunction with the release of the second edition of a college chemistry textbook.

Interpreting Students Attend Seminar

Seven Maryville College students enrolled in the MC Interpreting for the Deaf Program and one of the Program's instructors attended a seminar on low verbal communication held in Atlanta on November 4-5.

The seminar was held in Atlanta Area School for the Deaf. Featured speaker was Eric Malzkuhn, who is associated with the Model Secondary School for the Deaf and is a drama teacher at Gallaudet College in Washington, DC.

Malzkuhn, who is deaf himself, worked with participants from the audience to illustrate using different kinds of facial expressions and natural gestures rather than signs or the voice to communicate.

Those representing Maryville College included Marie Griffin, instructor; and students Janet DeShirlia of Tacoma, WA; Michele Jones of Alexandria, VA; Julie Kauffman of Grand Island, FL; Janet Kleeb of Knoxville; Rebekah McCredie of Wrightsville, PA; Jeanne Sikora of Belleville, IL, and Kymme Taylor of Farmingdale, NJ.

The MC group stayed with Ms. Barbara Kerr, a 1976 graduate of the College and current member of the Board of Directors. Ms. Kerr, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kerr of Maryville, is a tumor biologist at Emory University Clinic in Atlanta. She also teaches a sign language class at her church and interprets for the deaf at nights and on weekends. A member of the first sign language class at MC, she is also one of the College's first graduates to have taken the Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf Certification evaluation.

Thomas knows where he's going

by Veronica Sawdon

Bill Thomas, from Greenville, Tn., has been elected Freshman Representative to the All College-Council. Bill, who has lived in Illinois, California, and Texas, attended his first ACC meeting in November and is working on "getting a feeling for the school."

Both of Bill's parents teach at a small school, and he thinks the experiences he's shared with them will help him at Maryville.

Before coming to M.C., Bill took a year to make his own way in the world—living and working in Dallas. He called the experience shocking at first. Looking back, though, he considers it a good background for college life.

Bill is involved in several activities this fall. He is appearing in the Mikado recently-, is a member of the MC Concert Choir, and has interests in theater, music, and athletics.

The new Freshman Representative knows where he's going. The ACC should be enhanced with the inclusion of its new member, Bill Thomas.

Kramer Roast Well Done

The following poem was read by Mrs. Kramer at the roast.

In Fourteen Hundred and Ninety-two Columbus sailed the ocean blue;
In Nineteen Hundred and Seventy-two George Kramer met his Waterloo . .
At Maryville College, small but great, he then became a potentate.
Admissions and Student Relations, too: quite different here than at Rutgers U.
Some interesting things with which to cope: beer, and streakers, a bit of dope . .
And how to prod the student mind and keep football players from falling behind.
And George was often given the task of fielding hard questions Alumni ask . .
"Why aren't things like they used to be when I was a student at old MC?"
So now with old age breathing down his neck he thinks he'd like to retire, by heck.
And I have promised to keep him busy with job upon job until he's dizzy.
The grass keeps growing, the leaves need raking;
There's a vacuum cleaner, and food for baking.
And then there are always the golf links calling and a few church jobs to keep him from stalling.
Crossword puzzles are already a vice; more time to spend on them might be nice.
But I am sure as time passes by, while swifter and swifter the seasons fly
He'll continue his interest in Maryville, and you'll often find him back on the hill.
Deans of students don't fade away: they're available still tho' they're old and gray.

Uneven Quality of Solo Work is Worst Aspect of Messiah

by Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times staff writer
Marcia Butts

Listening to Handel's "Messiah" is always a moving spiritual experience, and Sunday's performance at Maryville College was definitely that.

It was also, happily for everyone, well done musically. The message of "Messiah" and the grandeur of its music come across even in a mediocre performance, but it's so much better when sloppiness doesn't mar the magnificent picture of Jesus Christ and His redeeming work.

The quality of Sunday's performance was due in the main to an excellent job by the chorus, and the lion's share praise for that is due to the director, Dr. Harry Harter.

He's obviously taken the time for the musical fine points that make the difference between fair and very good. It's always a joy to hear that "the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it," not "ih," and so on throughout the work. It's also a joy to have the dynamic shadings and musical contrast that add so much to Handel's settings of scripture.

About the only problem with the chorus is that more male voices would help it a lot. Right now the tenor and bass sections do not have the smoothness of the women's parts. Individual voices occasionally stick out and sometimes the whole thing becomes ragged when men's voices are heard alone, as when the basses almost led the whole chorus into disaster on the unaccompanied section of "All we like sheep."

Consideration ought to be given to making a strong appeal for male singers from the community to add their talents to "Messiah" next year. This is, after all, a performance that is a spiritual as well as a musical contribution, and there are many church choir members who could add a great deal.

Consideration also ought to be given to abandoning the idea of a large number of "Messiah" soloists in favor of a few who are really prepared to perform as oratorio soloists. The uneven quality of the solo work was the worst aspect of Sunday's performance.

No one expects student soloists to perform up to professional levels, but the annual "Messiah" performance means enough to the community that they ought to have had enough vocal training and solo experience to handle the arias without some of the major difficulties apparent Sunday. These include pitch problems when a singer performs with an orchestra and without a microphone.

Fortunately, for every poor job there was a fine one. Miss Judy Thweatt, Mrs. Delores Ziegler, and Michael Ketcherside all showed how a "Messiah" soloist should sound. Creditable performances also were turned in by Miss Kathi Wilson, Ms. Betty Green, and the guest soloists, George D., Miss Margaret and William Howell. Miss Betty Payne and John Ruch did well separately and together on the duet "Oh death, where is thy sting?"

Our Opinion

The interim Term is generally regarded as a break in the school year from the rigors of studying. During interim, the academic emphasis is on learning for the sake of learning rather than the usual race for grades. This idea in itself is fine, but it is not always utilized to its greatest potential.

The courses offered are varied to the point where a student may even compose his own interim, provided it is approved by the Interim Committee. However, there are very few independent interims in any given year.

Yet so often one hears students complaining about not getting either their money or time's worth from their Interim course. This is not the fault of the faculty or of the administration, but rather the fault of the students in their selection of an interim of their failure to construct a feasible independent interim.

Seemingly, all of these complaints and comments boil down, not to the idea of interim, but to how interim is being utilized.

Clearly it is our opinion that students should design and develop interims which could further their ideas of "learning for learning's sake," rather than to apathetically stand by and wait to select a "dull" or "wasted" interim.

Ideas for consideration include the addition of practical interims. Although offered on occasion in the past, such interims could give students a period where a "marketable skill" could be mastered which would provide the MC graduate with an immediate job. These interims could focus on job or "situation" training, ranging from secretarial skills to journalism to carpentry, speed-reading, Red Cross courses, and a variety of other topics.

Probably the ideal interim is the independent one. Such an interim is truly learning for the sake of learning—whether the interim consists of exploring one's self through travel and living in a different culture, learning a method of self expression, or briefly altering your life style in order to experience new sensations. The independent interim is a rare opportunity which is unfortunately left untouched by most students.

The idea of interim is certainly bold and imaginative, yet it remains to be seen when the complete promise of interim will be fulfilled. Its future obviously lies in the minds of its participants—it is only they who can, while learning for learning's sake, determine its value.

Your Opinion

Dear Editors,

I'd like to speak for a number of people by taking this opportunity to express our appreciation and gratitude to the Maryville College football cheerleaders for a job well done. Many hours of hard work were put in by them that very few people realized, yet everyone—especially the football—benefited from. They were the major source of spirit during the season by making signs, giving pep rallies, and cheering at the games.

Thank you, Grace, Kay, Mary, Lisa, Nancy, Marky, Barb, Sue, Joe, Joe, and Bill—and you, too, Susan! You all really made a difference, and we'd just like you to know that you are appreciated.

Thank you,

Dear Editors,

It has been brought to our attention through way of Dorm meetings, Resident Assistant meetings, general talk on campus, and an obvious change in attitudes of some faculty and students towards one another, that the new administration is attempting to "crack-down," and enforce regulations. Our opinion as resident students is that the administration may well be ignoring many of the guidelines presented in the MC Students Handbook, issued Fall Term, 1977. The following are examples of such issues:

On November 14th at 10:30 we were asked to attend a Dorm meeting and were told, among various other topics, that we must be careful if we intend to use marijuana because the matter was no longer in the hands of the Dorm Judicial Council but if caught the Dean would be immediately notified. We were told "the eye is upon us."

—Pg. 9 "House Councils" Student Handbook

"Serious matters of discipline are handled by All-College Council's Judicial Committee or by the Dean of Student Relations with recommendations from the Residence Hall Judicial Council."

Either the administration feels that marijuana possession does not constitute a serious matter of discipline or they have planned to adopt some sort of Martial Law during times of emergency for which we find no reference to in the Handbook.

There are also other examples of cases in which Student Handbook regulations have been overlooked. We are merely pleading for a more adult and more standardized means of dealing with problems as well as a due process of rules and regulations. At the present time, the actions of the administration have served only to create a general disturbance on campus among students and a general feeling of suspicion on the part of students and faculty.

To have reality is not to be in time
Only in fantasy can the time of the butterfly

Organ Donation Prolongs Life

What is the greatest gift that a human being can bestow to another human. I say it is the gift of life. Countless numbers of people are burdened by illness and suffering every year, yet we as fellow compassionate loving human beings can give life to them by donating kidneys, corneas, and other vital organs after our death. Although not in the true Christian sense, we can, as mortals, offer life after our death. Medical science has advanced rapidly in the last few years and transplantation research has yielded new methods of controlling the body's normal rejection of foreign tissue. New techniques of tissue-typing allow better determinations of histo-compatibility so that rejections are rare. Kidneys and corneas can now be transplanted to people afflicted with kidney disease and blindness, who otherwise would not live full, normally productive lives. Those with total kidney failure would be condemned to organize their lives around the dialysis machines, and the necessary two to four visits per week. This expensive procedure is not the answer to their medical problem, it merely alleviates the suffering and certain death that would occur without functioning kidneys. The methods for transplanting kidneys are available, the highly skilled surgeons are available, the people who need living kidneys are available—yet every year millions of biologically functioning kidneys are buried. Why? Why do we as human beings allow this to happen? Why can't we see beyond our mortal existence, realizing that parts of our bodies may be useful, yea crucially important for life?

The process whereby we may donate parts of our bodies to others after our death is the UNIFORM DONOR CARD of the NATIONAL KIDNEY FOUNDATION. By filling out these cards, designating that all needed organs, or only those that you specify, can be used upon your death, you may be saving the lives of people who by birth, by infection or disease, or by accident no longer function as biologically whole individuals. Once the card is witnessed it becomes a legal document under the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. By carrying it in your wallet or purse at all times you will know that upon your death you may give life to others.

We of the Maryville College community should respond to this challenge as we have responded to similar challenges for the past 158 years. Donor cards are available from me in Sutton Science Center, Room 229. Please think about this decision carefully. Ask your friends, for surely some of them have been touched by a loved one's affliction that could possibly have been alleviated by transplant surgery. Fill out the cards today . . . . . for the loved ones in your life.

Thank you,
Dr. Terry A. Bunde

Mosley's Job Challenging

by Veronica Sawdon

Who is the new "Coordinator of Minority Recruitment and Counseling," and what does he do? Ricky Charles Mosley, a 1975 graduate in Political Science from Knoxville College, talked about his job in a recent interview.

Since he began work October 1, Rick has recruited in Memphis and Alabama, but he hopes to branch out soon to Florida and New Jersey. Coming from Woodbury, N.J., himself, Rick mentioned the culture shock he felt when coming to the South. This is one of the problems students face when they come to M.C.

Many Black students today are the first generation to go to college. Questions often arise about where to get funds, and what to expect from a small college. Rick's role as recruiter and counselor helps him answer many of these inquiries.

"Exposure" is a word that answers questions for Rick. He feels that only through introduction and interaction with other people can we grow ourselves. In short, by "sharing backgrounds and experiences," we can grow together.

This "exposure" is one element that can help everyone overcome the culture shock that is experienced when one comes to M.C.—a small liberal arts college in the South.

The current Black enrollment at M. C. is approximately 5.5%, and Rick points out that this is hardly representative of the national figure. In spite of the isolation associated with M. C., Black/White interaction will become a reality when one faces the outside world. Rick feels that with more Blacks on campus, "The prejudice will break down." Experience often cures the disease. With exposure to other cultures, it will be "not as easy to condemn them."

As well as being a recruiter, Rick is also involved as a counselor. He is working on programs for minority students that will involve the campus as a whole. He points out that "The classroom is only an introduction to education," and he feels that a "thrust in awareness of the outside world will have an important impact on all of us."

Ricky Mosley

Rick feels the greatest responsibility is on the students. "We need thinking young people," he says. Rick stated that minority students should look at the future and recognize the facts: unemployment for Blacks is 14-20% compared to 7-8% for Whites. How will they cope with these statistics?

Rick calls his role as recruiter and counselor at M. C. "a very challenging job." "In fact," he says," it's one of the reasons I took it." The development of minority enrollment at M. C. is starting to take shape in the figure of Ricky Charles Mosley.

The Palestine Liberation Organization signaled recently that it was backing away from its insistance on representing the Palestinian people at a Geneva peace conference. The shift by the PLO, apparently made under pressure from major Arab nations, could bring to an end the long diplomatic struggle over Palestinian representation at Geneva.

Arab foreign ministers made pleas for solidarity among the 22 members of the Arab League at the opening of a three-day meeting in Tunis. They are deeply concerned about two potentially divisive issues: Egypt's urging of a new Middle East conference despite differences with Israel over procedural matters, and the confrontation looming between Morocco and Algeria over the guerrilla war in the Western Sahara. "The Arab world is in a very difficult situation," said the Tunisian Prime Minister, Hedi Nouira," the most difficult we have ever known."

Somalia renounced its friendship treaty with Moscow recently, ordering all Soviet advisers, including those running a base for Soviet nuclear submarines in the Indian Ocean. It has also announced a full diplomatic break with Cuba.

Cuba is increasing its involvement in Angola instead of cutting it back, disappointing Carter Administration officials who would like to establish normal relations with both countries. The number of Cuban civilian technicians in Angola would be doubled in 1978. Ramiro Valdes, vice president of Cuba's Council of State, said in Luanda last week. The Angolan Press Agency said 2,600 more Cubans would go to Angola. This would provide a total of 5,000 Cuban technicians, but the Havanna Radio said Cuba would send 10,000 technicians to help with Angola's development programs.

A promise to resign as Panama's leader was made by Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrara if United States Senators feel he is an obstacle to ratification of the Panama Canal Treaties. He also promised to end human-rights violations in his country and to abolish immediately martial-law provisions that have been in effect since 1969.

An Israeli scholar's interpretation of the most recently discovered Dead Sea scroll provides insights into ancient Judaism and early Christianity that seem certain to stir much interest and controversy among theologians and biblical scholars. The scholar, Yigal Yadin, Israel's Deputy Prime Minister, became well known for his earlier research into other Dead Sea scrolls. He said the latest one, a 27-foot-long document, was perhaps the most important of the lot. His findings were published in Jerusalem last week.

CHILHOWEAN MAKES PROGRESS

Some important, major changes have occured in the 1978 Chilhowean. The book is no longer naked (Jenny Andrews was kind enough to give it a cover to wear) and it now totals 160 pages—the same as is usual for the Maryville College yearbook. Sixteen pages were added to the original 136 by the senior class for an extra senior section, and 8 more were added by the Chilhowean itself—mostly to beef-up the sports section. The first deadline was met successfully on October 24, and the second deadline will be mailed sometime this week (there are five deadlines).

The Chilhowean would welcome contributions of artwork, original writing (very short stories and poetry), and photographs. We have a special need for pictures from the Interim groups that are going off campus this year. We would also welcome new photographers (particularly those good in the darkroom). Joe Showalter with the help of Dr. Shields will be holding a few training sessions on darkroom technique the first week of Interim for members of the Chilhowean photography staff.

The MC Playmakers announce campus-wide auditions on November 20 and 21 for "The Importance of Being Earnest." Auditions will be held at 8:00 p.m. Sunday, November 20 in the Theatre—call-backs on the 21st. Please bring an audition piece. Those interested in technical work should contact Sharon Crane (Box 2236).

The Senior Class desparately needs a photographer who would be willing to coordinate a slide presentation for the class. Any photographers are asked to contact Steve Wright.

V-Ballers Place Seventh in State

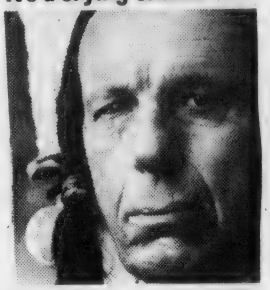
The Word from Bird

The Women V-ballers ended their 1977 season with a record of 7 wins and 15 losses. This past weekend the Lady Scots participated in the State Tournament at Milligan College. There, they placed 7th out of 12 tough teams.

The Lady Scots saw their first action against Sewanee. The women had been beaten by them once this year, but had come back quickly to defeat them at their next meeting. The Scotties won both games, defeating Sewanee 16-14, 17-15.

The V-baller's second game was against the tough University of Tennessee-Martin. UTM got first in the State last year, and the Lady Scots knew they had to play their best to win. Although UTM beat the Scotties 15-10, 15-3, this does not give a true picture of the closeness of the games. Maryville was beating UTM 6-0 in the first game, before they could get their tough offense started. The Lady Scots kept up with several of their spikes, but in the end, they were the underdogs.

In their third state game, Maryville played Trevecca. In this game, everyone was "up" and played excellent volleyball. The Lady Scots "dinks" were more than Trevecca's poor defense with their hard spikes.



In the Lady Scots final game, they faced Milligan College. They were defeated both games 15-11, 15-8. Although the Lady Scots played well, they couldn't get their first hits up to the front, to set up their good offense.

The 1977 season is now over, but one thing must be said about the Lady Scots. Although the record isn't as good as it should be, everyone must remember that at least half the teams Maryville plays are full scholarship teams, and the schools are bigger than Maryville with more girls to choose from.

Out of the whole team this year, there were 3 returning players. Nine players were new, including 7 freshmen. An unexperienced team like this takes time to develop into winners. Everyone on the team is good and next year the V-ballers will be missing only one good player.

They have great potential to be a number one contender next year!

Mongolian Stompers Take Championship

by Bill Clark and David Franssen

Intramural Football came to an end with last Thursday night's championship game. In earlier play-off action the Down Yonders defeated the Soulburgers 12—6, the Hackers destroyed the Nookies 33—0, and the Mongolian Stompers downed the Down Yonders 33—0.

The Down Yonders were lead defensively by Craig James with some good pass defense along with Mike Valind. Offensively, Bob Kiss and Pat Doyle were the studs. The lone Soulburger score was by Brian Davis.

In some semi-final action the Hackers showed a tremendous offensive effort, racking up 33 points on 5 big touchdowns. Osborne and Fucci seemed to catch passes all day. The Nookies were short-handed with a few starters not playing. They had much trouble connecting any passes against the secondary of Bill Brewer and Wayne Williams. Let it be said now that the Nookies are a young ball club and would seem to be next season's favorite.

Not to be out done, the Stompers proved they belong in the finals by out-dueling the Down Yonders 33—0. The Stompers scored in all but one offensive possession. They were led offensively by Steve Harrison, Andy Limone, John Thompson, and Scott Garren. The defensive standouts were "Greenie," "Catfish," Gardzina, and Keith Henderson. The Down Yonders seemed helpless against this upper-classmen team. Captain Randy Scurlock of the Down Yonders claims they are a very young team and will be tough in the future.

In Thursday's final action the Stompers prevailed by winning the championship 14—13 over the Hackers. The game was played on Honaker Field. The game started as the Hackers moved the ball inside the Stomper's 25 where they proceeded to run out of downs. The Stompers took over and on the third play Andy Limone swept left, eluded some on-by tacklers for a 45 yard score. The Stompers converted the extra point as John Thompson made a diving catch. The game seemed to become a defensive battle until late in the first half when the Hackers were on the move.

The 1977 Intramural Football Champions

Greenie then came up with an outstanding defensive play to stop a sure Hacker touchdown. The Hackers came back scoring first in the second half, with little less than 12 minutes in the game. The scoring play was an 11 yard gallop by Dave Osborne. The Hackers missed the all-important extra point.

The Stompers promptly marched down the field with Scott Garren scoring from 22 yards out. The extra point was good giving the Stompers a big advantage with the score 14—6. The Hackers again ran out of downs deep in Stomper territory. The Stompers took over and seemed to be moving until Eugene McSpadden intercepted a pass and scampered 25 yards for the score. This brought the game closer with the Stompers still leading 14—13. Neither team could score again and the game eventually ended 14—13. Playing well for the Stompers were Handler, Greenie, Garren, Campbell, and Limone. Also playing well for the Hackers were Utah, Hanna, and Fucci

We would like to thank everybody that participated this year in flag football, as it was an enjoyable year. Thank you for your support.

Scots Wrap-up Successful Campaign

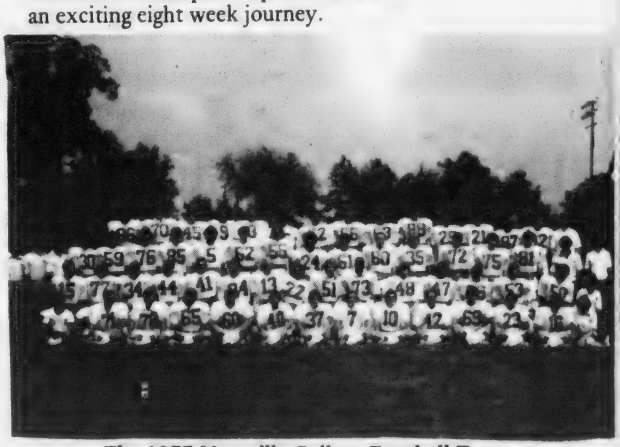
by Robert Boone

The 1977 Maryville College football Scots have just completed one of their most exciting football campaigns ever. The Scots, headed by 19 seniors, enjoyed a 6—2 season which was high-lighted by some national recognition.

Coach Jim Jordan's Fighting Scots this season at one point held the second longest winning streak among NCAA Division III teams in the nation after winning 11 straight games and were ranked No. 9 in the Division III football poll.

Actually, Maryville College was in the Division III playoff picture until their final game, which they lost to fourth ranked Hampden-Sydney of Virginia, 28—11. A week earlier a 28—21 loss to Southwestern at Memphis prevented MC from tying the school's all time winning streak of 12 games and dampened playoff hopes.

Dreaming of an unbeaten record, the Scots began the season by picking where they left off last year—with a 5 game winning streak. Tough Emory and Henry of Virginia was Maryville's first obstacle to an unbeaten season. The Scots raided the Wasps 21—16 thanks to two key plays. With 30 seconds remaining, sophomore defensive back, Charles Wyche, from Pensacola, FL, intercepted an E-H pass that ended a threatening Wasp drive. Earlier another key MC play had been a booming 70-yard punt by Tom Fleisch, sophomore from Fairless Hills, PA. During the season Fleisch was ranked among the leading Division III punters in the nation.



Although MC had just three home games this season, the scores were all impressive as the Scots went undefeated on Honaker Field. Bridgewater of Virginia was MC's first foe on the home schedule. The result was a 35—0 shutout for the Scots. David Kibben, sophomore from Bradenton, FL, replaced injured quarterback Charlie Hixon, also a sophomore from Venice, FL, and connected on 13 of 26 passes for 103 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Scots. A week later Maryville jumped to a 3—0 record by thrashing Centre College of Kentucky, 27—3. The Scots gave a strong offensive performance and racked up 421 yards, while the MC defense limited Centre's offense to just 101 yards.

The unbeaten Scots put 21 points on the scoreboard in just six minutes in the first quarter, and then paraded to a 42—0 win over Washington and Lee of Virginia for their fourth straight win. Senior defensive back Mike Thomas of Memphis had three interceptions and returned one for a 38-yard touchdown.

Maryville College had to rally from behind for a 17—10 victory over Millsaps College at Jackson, MS, for their fifth win. The Scots got their key play from tri-captain Steve Savage, senior from Maysville, GA, in the fourth quarter. Savage blocked a Millsaps punt and ran it 25 yards for a touchdown and a 10—7 lead.

Quarterback Charlie Hixon guided the Scots to a 42—0 homecoming rout over Bluefield State from West Virginia. Hixon ran for one touchdown and passed to split-end Ken Dickens, senior from N. Fort Myers, FL, for two others. The win was Maryville's 11th straight victory and gave the Scots a 6—0 mark. John Downs, sophomore from Miami, FL, playing in his first game of the year, led the Scots with 121 yards in 24 attempts.

Although the Scots fell short of their Division III championship dream, it was an exciting eight week journey.

Routney Leads Meetings

Dr. Eric Routney, Professor of Church Music at Westminster Choir College, an eminent author and editor of publications in the field of both religion and music, will lead Maryville College's annual February meetings which begin in two weeks.

This years' meetings, set for Tuesday through Thursday, Feb. 14-16, will explore the theme "A Faith Which Sings."

Dr. Routney's doctrine and discussion entitled "What You Believe and What You Sing," is scheduled for 9:20 A.M. until 10:30 in the Wilson Chapel.

The leader is a native of England and an ordained minister in the United Reformed Church in England and Wales. Educated at Oxford University, he has served several pastonates in England between 1943 and 1974. From 1949 through 1959, Dr. Routney was a faculty member at Oxford University.

After visiting the United States several times he finally moved to Princeton, New Jersey in 1975 to accept an appointment as Professor of Church Music at nearby Westminister Choir College.

Widely acclaimed as an outstanding authority and communicator in his field of church music and theology, Dr. Routney has written a number of books and articles on church music, hymnody, theology, and religious history. He is also in great demand as a speaker for church music conferences throughout the country.

Activities for February meetings begin Tuesday, February 14, at 12:20 P.M. when Dr. Routney will lunch with the Worship Committee. Following a speaking engagement at Knoxville, he will return to campus for a fireside chat with the college community at 7:30 P.M. at the House-in-the-Woods.

Dr. Routney will also be a guest speaker at the faculty luncheon at 12:20 following his Wednesday lecture with a Hymn Festival held at 8:00 P.M. with the MC Choir. He will also be a guest lecturer in several classes throughout his stay at MC.

Chaplain Presents One-man Show

A one-man photography show featuring the work of Maryville College chaplain James T. Stewart who also is a professional photographer will open on February 7 for an 18-day showing in the Fine Arts Center Gallery.

The show, which runs through February 24, will open with an 8 p.m. reception on February 7 in the Gallery.

Stewart will also present an illustrated lecture on creative photography on February 8 as part of the Community Issues and Values Program Series. The CIV is scheduled for 9:20 a.m. in the College's Fine Arts Center auditorium. In his talk, he will examine from an aesthetic point of view works by the most imaginative of today's young creative photographers.

He has had one-man photography shows in Beirut, Lebanon; San Francisco; Portland, Oregon; Corvallis, Oregon; and Mt. Angel Abbey in Mt. Angel, Oregon.

In 1973 Loyola University's "New Orleans Review," a jounal of literary and graphic arts, published a portfolio of Stewart's photography. Another major portfolio of his work is currently in production by the same publisher. The major emphasis in his work is on people, and all his work is done in black-and-white.

In reviewing the role of photography in design, Stewart noted that 50 years ago the major debate among artists was on whether photography is an art. Now, he observed, the debate centers on whether or not photography is the leading art form of our culture.

Dr. Carolyn Blair

Dean Blair Resigns
Will Continue Teaching

Dr. Carolyn L. Blair, academic vice president and dean of the college, has submitted her resignation, effective June 30, to resume full-time teaching responsibilities as professor of English at Maryville College.

In announcing Dr. Blair's resignation at Thursday's Board of Directors meeting, MC President Wayne Anderson said, "I have accepted Dr. Blair's resignation with reluctance and with great regret. Dr. Blair has been a tremendous asset to this institution for many years, as a professor and most recently as a key administrator. She has done an excellent job as dean, but she is most anxious to return to teaching, her first love, on a full-time basis."

Dr. Blair, a member of the faculty since 1948, was named dean of the college in 1972. Her title was changed to academic vice president and dean of the college by action of the MC Board at its October 1977 meeting.

A faculty committee will be appointed in the near future to search for her successor.

TVA Test Project at MC

The Maryville College Board of Directors, meeting on campus Thursday and Friday, Jan. 26-27, endorsed the proposed joint demonstration wood pyrolysis project with TVA.

The MC directors authorized the College to proceed with the project, calling on the administration to secure necessary funds to finance the College's share of the costs. The TVA Board also approved the pyrolysis project yesterday as part of that agency's national energy demonstration program.

Pyrolysis is a process which burns fuels without oxygen. The newly developed pyrolysis system to be installed at MC uses intense heat to convert wood shaving residues into low BTU gas and oil for use in heating buildings. The process also produces charcoal which the College plans to sell.

The two-year research test and demonstration project at Maryville College will be the first application in the United States of a pyrolysis system where the main emphasis is to provide energy for heating. The project is designed to demonstrate the practicality of a small scale low-cost wood pyrolysis unit for heating various facilities, including public school buildings, hospitals and small industries.

DECISIONS...

by Chris Cervenka and Eleanor Palm

The World Concern Committee is offering a blanket invitation to all faculty, staff, and STUDENTS who are interested in discussing International Relations. The program is called Great Decisions '78. There are eight programs which will begin on Monday, Feb. 5th at 4:00 in the Library's fiction room. Each program will run 3-times each week for your convenience. We urge all to participate in order that Maryville College will have it's voice heard. This is done through a ballot vote after each session. The ballots are sent to Columbia University where they are counted and the results sent to Congress. This is the opportunity to really learn about current world and national interests. Don't pass this up!

Our Opinion

Since the last publication of the Highland Echo, several events were important enough to demand the attention of an editorial. However, due to a lack of resources, we are forced to cover all three in one paper.

The first point we will discuss is the Echo's situation. It is a long and unresolved situation which we will deal with in detail in the next Echo. For the time being, let us just say that the problem is not totally in black and white (what we print), but in green, or the lack of it. Any member of the Communications Committee will shed light on this situation. They have been quite critical of our occassional missing of deadlines, etc. Ironically enough, they missed two of their own deadlines for this very paper.

The second point we would like to discuss is the new alcohol policy. Although we have yet to interpret the ambiguous statement released by the Board, the fact that something is being done is a step in the right direction.

The final and perhaps most important point to be discussed is the resignation of Dean Carolyn Blair. Although she is leaving her postion as Dean and Academic Vice President, she will not be leaving the College. Dean Blair will continue to serve as the Chairman of the English Department.

Graduated from Alabama College in 1943, Dr. Blair came to Maryville College as Assistant Professor of English in 1948. In 1960, she was promoted to Associate professor, becoming Professor and Secretary of the Faculty in 1962. Dean Blair spent 1966-67 studying and reorganizing the Maryville College cirriculum. In 1969-70, she studied in the British Museum and travelled through Greece and Scotland.

Although Maryville College will not be losing Dr. Blair, her effectiveness and diligence as a dedicated administrator is a milestone in Maryville College's history.

Your Opinion

Dear Mr. Editor,

We think it is a damn shame the way that Athletic Director Henry is running the Gym on the weekends. On the weekend of Saturday, January 21 the two outside gyms were filled with people, while there were many more waiting. We inquired with the management about opening the middle gym, they told us that Athletic Director Henry said the gym could not be opened except for the varsity basketball team's practice. There was no varsity practice all day. As a matter of fact there was no practice until Monday, January 23. On Sunday, January 29 only one gym was open and as usual it was packed, this time with town kids. The middle gym was open and for good reason, AD Henry's family were the only people allowed inside. The other side gym had the stands pulled out from the night before because of the basketball game. There was no room for students who pay almost $4000 a year to attend the college. We feel that we should be able to use it except when there is basketball practice. We just don't think it is right for Athletic Director Henry to be using his position the way he has been doing so. The Athletic Department does not need to be run this way.

Sincerely,
Jim Markle
Gene Byrd

Poetry Reading Next Week

"Impressions of the third Kind." a poetry reading sponsored by Impressions, will be presented Thursday, February 9 in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall at 8:30.

The title signifies the three types of aural impressions the reading will convey. These will be poetry, poetry set to music, and prose.

Dr. Charlotte Beck, Rick Smith, Tim Rahn, and others are among the scheduled readers. Tim Rahn, editor of Impressions, says that additional readers are needed; anyone interested should contact a member of Impressions.

Rahn further stated that Impressions has gone to press and will be sold for the first time after the reading.

"The reading is the staff's way of giving this new issue of Impressions a fitting send-off," said Rahn. "Hopefully we will give the reading the same quality that this magazine will have."

This is the first time Impressions is appearing in the winter. According to the editor, in previous years, the magazine has been plagued by poor publicity and a late appearance in the spring. This start will hopefully give the magazine the push it needs.

Under the terms of the agreement, TVA will provide the pyrolysis unit and funding for the two-year test and demonstration period at a cost of $250,000. The College must provide $150,000 to cover cost of purchasing the wood and providing operating personnel. At the end of the two-year period, the College will have the option of purchasing the pyrolysis unit to continue using the alternate energy system.

BOARD DISCUSSES COSTS

The Maryville College Board of Directors last Thursday discussed and received a preliminary budget for the 1978-79 academic year which calls for a balance of income and expenditures of $3,697,384.

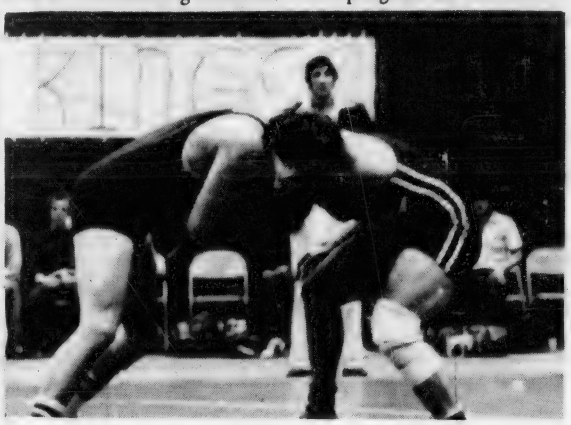
The total amount represents a 3 percent increase over this year's budget. The Board will approve the final budget at its April meeting.

The preliminary budget discussed yesterday includes an increase of $334 in student charges for next year. This increase, needed to help offset rising costs to the College due to inflation, brings to $3,850 the total annual cost for residential students and to $2,615 the total for commuting students.

Approximately one fourth of the tuition increase will go to increase student aid, according to President Wayne Anderson. He also pointed out that Maryville College's annual costs are still well below the national average for private four-year colleges which last year totaled $4,905 according to the College Scholarship Service.

In other action the Board also continued a discussion of the substance abuse issue initiated in last October's meeting. The MC directors issued a statement on consumption of alcoholic beverages in which it called upon the College administration "to continue and accelerate its efforts to establish an action program on substance abuse aimed at fully informing students of the dangers related to the use of alcohol as well as other drugs."

The directors also "reaffirmed the College's long-standing practice of preventing excesses in terms of the presence and consumption of alcoholic beverages on the campus and at official College events."



Marston Misses Board Meeting

With all the loose ends which need to be finalized as a result of his recent ouster as U.S. Attorney for Eastern Pennsylvania, David Weese Marston was not able to attend the January 26-27 meeting of the Maryville College's Board of Directors, according to president Dr. Wayne Anderson.

In a phone conversation last Tuesday afternoon, Marston expressed his disappointment at being unable to attend, Dr. Anderson added. Marston, a 1964 MC graduate, was appointed to the College's Board of Directors this past summer.

Dr. Arda Walker, chairman of MC's history department, remembers Marston as having political acumen even as a student as well as being a good leader. His sense of ethics was evident even then, she further noted. "I am quite delighted with Davic and how he has progressec so rapidly," she said.

Following his graduatic n from MC, Marston entere Harvard Law School, rec v- ing his law degree in 196?. He joined a Philadelphia law firm after graduating from Harvard; the following September he took a leave of absence and joined the U.S. Navy. During his two-year service tour, including a nine-month Middle East deployment aboard the USS Norfolk, he conducted several narcotics investigations and supervised official inquiries. After his honorable discharge in 1969, he returned to his law firm.

Eight Grapplers Place for Nationals

Last weekend the Maryville wrestlers went to Chattanooga to compete in the Mid-South tournament. With a dual meet record of 1–7, the team needed to show its potential in this tourney. Thus far this season the standouts seem to be freshman John Lacava, Ed Davalos, Rich Ramos, Wayne Dunn, and Ray Olivari. In the Mid-South, Maryville had 8 wrestlers place, which qualified each of them to wrestle in the Nationals next month held in Illinois. Four third place finishers were all Freshmen and included; Rusty Palmer, Lacava, Doug Weber, and Rich Mikjalo (Mongo). Rich Ramos and Olivari both placed second while Davalos and Dunn were tournament champs. Wayne Dunn was named MUP wrestler of the tournament and became the first wrestler to win this tournament four years in a row. The wrestlers travel again to Chattanooga on Wednesday to wrestle Chatanooga State and Tenn. Tech. (result to late for paper) tommorrow, Saturday will be the last home meet as the Scots will host Appalachian State and M.T.S.U. Student support will be appreciated in this all-important dual meet.

Administrative Changes Announced

Two administrative changes at Maryville College were announced recently by President Wayne Anderson.

Ms. Jane Richardson has been named acting dean of student relations, assuming the responsibilities previously handled by Dr. George A. Kramer, who retired as dean of student relations on January 1, and Libby Welsh (Mrs. William) Rankin, acting alumni director, has been given the added responsibility of director of campus events.

Ms. Richardson, a native of Oak Ridge, Tenn., was appointed assistant dean of student relations last spring. Prior to that she had served for a year as head resident of MC's Dorm I. Before joining the MC staff in 1976, she had worked for the Daniel Arthur Rehabilitation Center in Oak Ridge.

"Appointing Ms. Richardson as acting dean reflects the full confidence I have in her ability to handle these responsibilities," stated Dr. Anderson. "Her work with the dorm and as assistant dean has provided ample evidence of her ability to assume these responsibilities until a permanent dean is selected. I think she will do an outstanding job."

Mrs. Libby Rankin

Mrs. Rankin, who has been with the College since 1973, will be responsible for scheduling all activities held on the MC campus and coordinating the use of facilities. She will continue to assist with the alumni program.

"The appointment of Libby Rankin is part of our overall effort to utilize our administrative staff as effectively as possible. In this area as in others we're making a special attempt to coordinate our efforts and establish a more efficient management system. We also hope to optimize the use of our facilities," Dr. Anderson added.

All campus groups must register their events with Mrs. Rankin to assure fewer conflicts in the scheduling of events, Dr. Anderson stressed. Those wishing to use college facilities for meetings are asked to contact Mrs. Rankin at 982-6412, ext. 5.

"Susannah" to be Presented

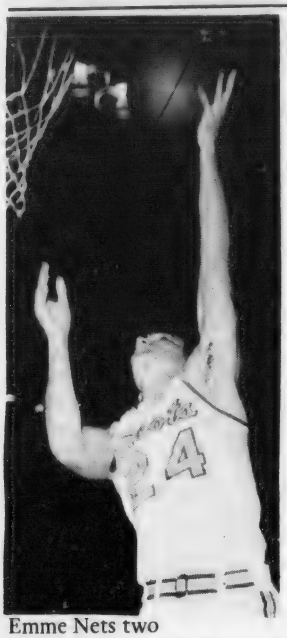
The metamorphosis from innocent girl to hardened woman is the theme of Carlisle Floyd's highly acclaimed musical drama "Susannah" to be staged in the College Theatre on February 10 and 11.

A joint effort of the MC music and theatre departments, "Susannah" is a realistic folk tragedy set in the mythical town of New Hope Valley, Tennessee. Although no folk tunes as such are used, an authentic folk quality is nonetheless captured in the music.

Named the "Best American Opera" in 1956, the contemporary musical drama is based on the story of Susannah and the elders from the Book of the Apocrypha.

Heroine of the play is the beautiful Susannah Polk, portrayed by Miss Mary Yoke, whose tribulations all arise because of her beauty. She incurs the jealousy of the pious church womenfolk who feel her beauty must be "of the devil"; she also generates the anger of the church elders who are embarrassed at the lust they feel for her.

With the jealousy and lust themes established, the story then moves on to the scene of the village elders searching for a baptismal hole on the Polk homestead. When they do find it, they discover Susannah bathing in it.



The play, which runs about 105 minutes, is divided into two acts, each of which has five scenes.

Michael Ketcherside is overseeing the production of the play. Serving as technical director is Thomas E. Jones, chairman of the speech/theatre department. Peggy Leatherwood, a member of the faculty of the MC Preparatory School for the Arts, will conduct the College-Community Orchestra.

Student tickets are $1.50 per person. All seating for the two performances will be on a reserved-seat basis.

Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center, (546-2390).

Scots Pick Up Two

Emme Nets two

This past weekend was one of the better moments of the 1977-78 Maryville College basketball season. Enjoying a 20 point halftime lead, scoring 98 points in a game, and winning back-to-back homecourt victories are luxuries that Billy Henry's squad has not been used to enjoying thus far.

Coach Henry's Scots were impressive in victories over Covenant College 73—71 and Millsaps College 98—78 Fri. and Sat. night. Maryville, now 5—11, has one more home game Feb 18, when they will host Bluefield State.

MC 73 Covenant 71

Maryville won the battle of the Scots but it was no easy chore. Steve Wright's free throw accuracy (12 for 12) in the closing minutes, and some nifty defensive strategy made the difference as MC's Scots edged the visiting Covenant College Scots by a bucket.

MC 98 Millsaps 78

Wasting no time Maryville jumped on the Majors for an early 16—6 advantage and never relinquished the lead over the surprised Millsaps crew. A balanced MC performance consisting of tight defenses and a hot shooting offense (64% from the field) seemed to make MC invulnerable. Mark Stinnett's hot hand caught five in the first half and scored 22 points before intermission. The sharpshooting captain hit 12 of 14 field goals, most of which never touched the rim, and finished with 26 points. Wade Edmond, 21 points and 8 rebounds, Wayne Emme, 12 points, and Doug Tutin, 11 points, were other leading Scots.

Lady Scots Even Record

Coach Sharon Brown's basketball squad had a .500 weekend after losing a close 45—47 decision to the Covenant College Lady Scots and winning over Bryan College Sat. night 41—29. The Lady Scots, who are 4—4, next see home action this Saturday at 1:00 as they host L.M.U.

In a close game MC held a 21—15 first half lead but were outscored 32—24 in the deciding final stanza. Late turnovers were costly in the narrow defeat. The Lady Scots high server, Sandy Rabun, hit 17 points and grabbed 9 rebounds. Hinds and Neal both had 6 points and Sallade and Neal chipped in 7 rebounds.

The Lady Scots had better luck Sat. Jan 28 against Bryan College as they came away 41—29 winners. After building a 19—13 halftime lead, the Scots gradually pulled away from the visitors in the final count. Again Rabun's 12 points and 10 rebounds placed in the final count. Seith had 9 points while Sallade gathered 11 rebounds.

Men's Intramural B-Ball Advances

by Bill Clark and David Franssen

Mens Intramurals has continued into this years winter term with competition in basketball. The program has really grown, with 17 teams averaging 8 people to a team. This growth is contributed to the enthusiastic freshman class. The top teams in West Division include P-funk, the Striders, and coach Bobo's Red Man's Men. The east Division is led by the Animals and Whiteside. The games will continue throughout the term with a playoff at the end to determine the champion. Although fun participating is plentiful, these writers feel that there are a few aspects of intramural basketball that are disturbing. There seems to be a general lack of class of many players' attitudes towards the referees and thus blaming them for losing. There also seem to be some flagrant acts of violence that don't belong on the court, such as throwing elbows, throwing punches, and trying to intentionally hurt their opponents. These acts belong in the gutter and not here at Maryville College. Intramurals is for enjoyment, physical conditioning and to release tension and frustration caused sometimes by schoolwork. We are fellow students, let's not harm each other, mentally or physically. We must live together happily, stay calm and show some class as we are all winners in our own way. Good luck to each team this year, and may the best team win.

SPOTS:

Congratulations to Bob Schmidt who won 1st place in the Men's "C" Single division at the Knoxville City 1978 Racketball Tournament.

Wayne Emme, the Scots leading scorer averages 22.1 points a game and has scored 331 points this season. His game high was 47 vs. King College.

Mark Stinnett has a 13.9 scoring average and is shooting .511.

Joe Beals leads the team in assists with 96.

Transfer Doug Tutin isn't too tall, but has some awesome moves while under the basket. His .650 shooting percentage leads the Scots.

Coach Jim Jordan

Jordan Hangs up the Whistle

by David Boone

Jim Jordan, Maryville College head football coach announced Tuesday afternoon at a football team meeting his decision to "hang up the whistle."

After a long huddle Jordan decided to announce his final resignation (Wednesday) in order to accept a sales position with an orthopedic supplies company in South Carolina. "I spent the whole past weekend thinking it over," stated Jordan. "My decision was based on what would be best for my family and myself."

Jordan came to Maryville College in 1974 after serving as an assistant football coach under Dal Sheeley at Carson-Newman College.

A defensive halfback at South Carolina, Jordan served his first chores as a coach with Davidson College in 1968-69. Jordan then accepted a position as head track coach at Austin Peay State University in 1970-71 before later becoming head football coach at Bowling Green High School (Ky.) in 1972.

Jordan's past two years at Maryville College will probably be remembered as the high-lights of his coaching career. After a dismal 1974 start of 2-6-1 and a more disappointing 1975 season (0-9) the football program under Jordan's guidance went from rags to riches. Jordan's determined footballers mustered together a two-year output of 13-4 which included an 11 game winning streak. Just one victory short of tying the school record, the Scots streak included the last 5 games in 1976 and the first 6 of 1977. Demanding respect, Jordan and his Fighting Scots finally climbed to a number 9 spot in the Division III Top Ten poll rankings, before narrowly missing a shot at the playoffs.

Since joining the College staff in 1974, Jordan has compiled a 15-19-1 coaching record.

MC President Wayne Anderson said of Jordan's decision, "I want to express my keen dismay at losing Jim Jordan who has done such a great job in turning the College's football program around. I thank him for his efforts and wish him well in his new endeavors."

"I also want to assure all concerned that we will move immediately to look for a successor who can maintain and even extend our successful football program," he added.

In his farewell address to his fellow gridiron mates Tuesday afternoon, Jordan expressed gratitude, thanks, and a hope for the best in Maryville College's 1978 season.

Alumnus Featured in Artists Series

Maryville College graduate Margaret Mann, a mezzo-soprano who has spent the past two years in Zurich, Switzerland singing with the Zurich Opera House, will be the featured artist in the College's Performing Artists Concert on Friday, February 17.

The performance, scheduled for 4:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center music hall, is free of charge.

Selections by Donezetti, Rachmaninoff, Wagner and Strauss are included in her program as are several selections by American composers John Carlos Menotti and Ned Rorem. Sallie W. Schoen of the music faculty will be the piano accompanist.

Miss Mann, member of the International Opera Studio in Zurich, sang roles in "Lohengrin," "Der Rosenkavalier," and "Porgy and Bess" while with the Zurich Opera House. She recently signed a two-year contract to sing with the Coburg Landestheater in Coburg, West Germany, through 1980.

During her professional career, Miss Mann has also sung with the Lake Forest (Ill.) Symphony in a production of Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" and at Chicago's Ravinia Festival in Verdi's "La Traviata" with Beverly Sills and James Levine conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

She also sang the Verdi "Requiem" with the Grant Park Symphony in Chicago, with Christopher Keene conducting, and in the Chicago Opera Theater's production of Virgil Thomson's "The Mother of Us All."

Miss Mann, a native of West Virginia, holds two degrees from Maryville College, one awarded in 1968 in art and the other awarded in 1969 in music. She received her Master of Music degree in applied voice from Northwestern University in 1970.

In addition to her work in the Chicago area, Miss Mann participated in the Apprentice Program for Singers with the Santa Fe Opera in Santa Fe, New Mexico, in 1972-73.

During her last yeat at Maryville, she was a finalist in the East Tennessee District Metropolitan Opera auditions. In 1972 she won the American Musicians Young Artists Award and the Talman Prize and gave the award recital in Chicago. She was also a finalist in the WGN-Illinois Opera Guild competition there in 1975.

Miss Mann's recital will be the closing event of the East Tennessee area conference of the National Association of Teachers of Singing which is meeting on campus on February 17.

Echo Discontinued

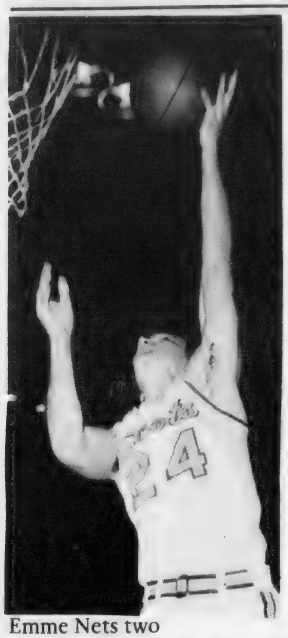
The ACC's Communications Committee has decided to suspend publication of the MC newspaper, the Highland Echo indefinitely. In a letter from chairperson Judy Mizell to editors Gannon and Weaver on Friday, February 10, the decision was based on "the college's present financial situation and in light of President Anderson's recent memo asking all departments to conserve funds for the remainder of this fiscal year."

The Committee expressed its regrets that it was "not aware of the Echo's present financial arrangements until (our) January 12 meeting," and thanked the editors for their services.

The Committee is currently developing proposals to remedy the budget problems which the current Echo editors have had to deal with.

The Committee is also examining the possibility of new guidelines for those interested in applying for the Echo editorship, the possible designation of awarding course credit and insuring an advisor whose work with the editors would be part of the course load.

Skeletons, Space in CIV



From "skeletons" to music to living in space—that's the range of topics to be covered in the three remaining programs in the CIV lecture series for winter term.

Katie Letcher Lyle, widely published poet and novelist, will examine children's and adolescent's contemporary literature and its influences in framing value systems, sexual responses, and even reactions akin to xenophobia among young people. Her CIV presentation, entitled "Skeletons," will be on Wednesday, February 22, at 9:20 a.m. in the Fine Arts Center auditorium.

The winter concert of the Maryville College-Community Orchestra, under the direction of Margaret Ann Leatherwood, will be presented on Saturday, February 25, at 8:15 p.m. in the chapel as part of the CIV program

Our Opinion

This being the last issue of the Highland Echo, it is an appropriate time that we talk about what has been going on with the Echo and clear the air of breakfast table gossip.

Thus we are going to be talking a bit of recent history, as it is important to see what has happened to the Echo over the past year. Some may think we should move on—not discuss what has happened before but discuss the present and future. (This feeling was apparent at the last ACC meeting.) But, as President Anderson once said, "I firmly believe that my right to explore the future depends on my responsibility to acknowledge what has gone before." We concur.

The basic problem we encountered this past year has been financial. This is also the reason why publication of the Echo has been so sporadic over this past term. Our business dealings have been open and a matter of public record, unlike previous Echo business dealings. Among our mistakes and errors over the past year our biggest mistake was that we took it for granted that the Echo would be sustained, as the previous administrations sustained previous Echos.

Obviously the administration realized what it costs to put out an Echo for 1 year ($3,000—an average of $100 for 30 papers). Our present budget is exactly one-half that amount ($1,500 for 1 year), provided we make 47% of it ($700) back in advertising. To date, with over one-third of the academic year completed, we have one-half of our advertising responsibility out of the way.

Under past administrations, the difference between the budgeted amount and the amount spent would be absorbed by the College. However, in an extremely tight fiscal year, an excess, no matter how attractive, must be cut to a minimum. It should be pointed out that we believe we have managed our money well and all costs have been itemized, examined and justified.

Another problem we have encountered has been criticism from certain college groups about the Echo's coverage of events—what we do and don't cover. We have been told this is a common occurrence in journalism—everybody wants their item in the news. Yet, this criticism, regardless of its validity, is negated due to the critics themselves.

These people neglected their responsibility by failing to record their dissent publicly. Just as the Echo is a matter of public record, so should their complaints. We are open to criticism in the form of a rebuttal or letter to the Editors—as in any publication.

The key problem we have come up against this past year has been the Communications Committee. Our problems developed from problems within the Committee itself.

Their first problem is that it has a chair-person who does not wish to serve. On any Committee, the leadership of a chair-person is of supreme importance. However when a chair-person has very little motivation to carry out their responsibility, a Committee is bound to flounder.

The final problem we have experienced has been our lack of an advisor.

The fact that we had no advisor will not be used as our scape-goat. Although if we had one, there probably would not be the situation that exists now. However, this also may not be the case because the last Echo advisor stated that she had no knowledge of the Echo's financial situation. Thus, even an advisor would not have helped in this area.

This is behind us now and changes from within the system are beginning to correct the situation, so we must look back and learn.

Previous Echo editors have called their experience as editor of the Echo a hemorrhoid while others have called it a "Grand Thing." For us, it has been somewhere in between. We have learned quite a bit about power plays which exist in any institution with our conclusion being that Ringer must sell very well in certain MC circles.

We have developed more liberal tendencies and lost a lot of our naivete in our dealings with people—perhaps too much so. Our experience wasn't what we had expected or hoped for, but it was of as much value than the mechanical experience we had planned on.

We have had some unusual experiences as well. Our office has been broken into twice. One editor rolled a car neatly into the tennis courts, while the other editor considered alternative plans to provide some campus stimulation. One such plan was to print a lot of slander that would force people to speak up in order to save their reputations. We settled on Kooter's Korner.

To our friends, editors, columnists, and staff, we'd like to congratulate them all for their time, enthusiasm, and moral support. To everyone else we came in contact with regardless of how they feel about us or the Echo , thank you for your patience and understanding and we'd like to ask you for a bit of the same for the next editor who may come along. All in all the experience has been rewarding, but we're relieved it's over.

We conclude that those who always look for fault should abandon this quest in such a complicated situation. As editors, we are responsible. For the Echo, we accept this responsibility and chalk up the experience as a learning one.

Kooter's Korner

The Perfect Western Ranch
or
The Small, Private, Church-Related Church

What does Maryville College (MC) stand for today? How does it compare to other related schools? Where is it headed? What trail will it choose—Will it be dust or the light of the western sky?

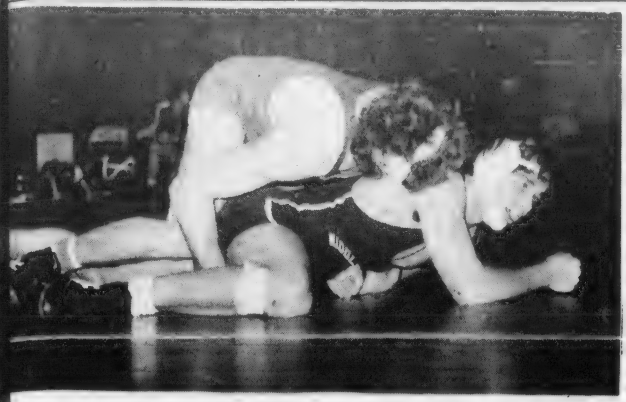
For some time MC has stood for everything, and stood for nothing? MC stands for unlimited visitation, very little in-class instruction, loads of free time, few disciplinary actions, and bundles of gripes and bitching. A College out in Sofuncun might ease up on regulation—so MC will follow suit. MC cannot be different. We have to be like everybody else. This is the major flaw that loosens the foundation upon which small private colleges are built. MC has a capacity for about nine-hundred folks—where are these people? They are attending private schools with strict regulations, definite values and attitudes, and a sense of standing for something.

Where does the "church-related" phrase fit MC? Evidently it is just a title cause alcohol runs to a head in the halls. There is no such thing as a required Chapel, the Religion courses being phased out, and such. The religious phase could make MC different. Instead MC has operated like a loose state school, supported by no government funding and charging outright fees. Has MC lost sight of its objectives?

The neutrality attitude produces graduates without committments, convictions, purposes, or directions. This type of life style has a definite aim—material success. Has a student ever gotter a straight answer from Anderson Hall? What an inspiration a faculty folk is whom they continually pass the buck.

Though students cry for freedom, they long for structure and stimulation. Loads of free time does not mean more individual development and accomplishment. An individual with very little unstructured time often gets more done.

MC has been a compromise. "Fubar"



Utah will never speak to the masses again. (The masses say thank goodness and Utah says, "hop on the pipe!")

The 28th annual Maryville College Choir tour will squeeze in 14 performances over a 12-day period in six different states, concluding with a home performance on the College campus on March 28. The tour will be March 10-21.

The itinerary, announced today by choir director Dr. Harry H. Harter, includes performances in Connecticut, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Tennessee and Virginia. This marks the ninth time the choir has toured in this section of the country, the last time being in 1975.

The 44-member choir will present a diversified program of traditional and contemporary music appropriate to the Lenten season. The program is divided into three sections, concluding with a paraphrased setting of the "Twenty-Third Psalm" to the Psalter tune "Crimond."

The choir, which has traveled more than 65,000 miles over the past 27 years on its yearly choir tour, has also toured in Europe and has sung on numerous occasions with the Knoxville (Tenn.) Symphony Orchestra. The choir has also served as the official broadcasting choir of the Department of Radio and Television of the United Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and has appeared in concert at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

Prior to its tour, the choir will participate in the 11 a.m. worship service on March 5 at the Second Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, followed by a 4 p.m. performance that afternoon, also at the church.

Dr. Harter, in addition to being choir director, is also professor of music and chairman of the Department of Fine Arts at Maryville College.

Wrestlers Prepare for Nationals

by Bill Clarke

Two weeks ago Maryville College grapplers travelled to Chattanooga for a tri-meet with Tennessee Tech and Chattanooga State. Maryville won both meets handily by scores of 34-12 and 36-9. Double winners were Schempp, Davalos, Ramos, Oliveri, and Murphy. Also winning single matches were Tabeek, Lacava, Clarke, Weber, and Mongo. That weekend, MTSU and Appalachian State came to Maryville for another tri-meet. Maryville lost both meets, but looked impressive in a losing cause to MTSU 27-24. A key bout was an upset as Rich Ramos beat the Mid-South Champ from MTSU. Last weekend the wrestlers competed in the S.E.I.W.A. and came across some big time wrestling with UT outdueling Auburn for the team title. Wayne Dunn captured the 167 title, for the first winner in quite a few years. Ed Davalos placed third in a tough 142 class. The wrestlers end their regular season this week and will begin preparing for the nationals to be held next month in Illinois.

Violinist Returns For Performance

The young violin virtuoso Brian Reagin, who began his violin training at Maryville College at the age of seven, will return to the College as part of the MC Performing Artists Concert Series on Tuesday, February 21.

The concert, which is free of charge and open to the public, will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center music hall.

Selections included in his performance will be Sonata in D Major, Op. 9, No. 3 by LeClair; Sonata No. 2 in A Minor for Violin Solo by Bach; Introduction & Rondo Capriccioso, Op. 28 by Saint-Saens; and Sonata No. 9 in A Major by Beethoven. Piano accompaniment will be provided by Sallie W. Schoen of the MC music faculty.

The 22-year-old violinist has a number of awards to his credit, beginning with winning the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra's Young Performers Concert in 1962 when he was only seven. He has also won competitions sponsored by the Dayton Symphony Orchestra, the Ohio Music Teachers Association, the Charleston (W. Va.) Symphony, and the Cleveland (Ohio) Institute of Music.

In 1976 he received the Talman Award at the Society of American Musicians Young Artist Competition. He also is the recipient of the Cleveland Institute of Music's Jerome Gross Memorial Prize for outstanding accomplishment in violin.

Reagin received his artist diploma in violin performance from the Celveland Institute of Music where he is now serving as a teaching assistant. He also is a visiting lecturer in violin at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

He has held membership in the Antioch College Chamber Orchestra, the Meadowmount Chamber Orchestra, the Wright State University Orchestra, the Northland Symphony of Kansas City, and the Cleveland Institute of Music Orchestra, which he currently is serving as concertmaster.

Rave reviews, such as this one from the "Daily Mail" always seem to follow his performances: "Prospects for America's musical future are bright when they are in the hands of such talented young artists as Brian Reagin. With hands and soul, lin . . ." His violin was crafted by Lorenzo and Tomasso Carcassi in Florence, Italy, in 1763.

The next program in the MC Performing Artist series will be an opera ensemble on Tuesday, April 4.

Reagin draws music of exquisite purity from his 18th century Italian-made vio-

MC Auction Slated

Maryville College will auction furnishings and other items determined to be surplus to the College's needs on Friday and Saturday, March 10-11.

The auction, which is being held with the approval of the College's Board of Directors, will include furniture, china and silver and other items from Morningside and other campus buildings.

Sam Furrow, an experienced professional auctioneer from Knoxville, will conduct the sale in the chapel-theatre complex on campus Friday evening and all day Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m. William Beall, A.S.I.D., director of the Fine Furniture Gallery, Fowlers, Knoxville, will assist Furrow.

Goods to be sold will be

Committee Plans Proposal

The Communications Committee, which acts as publisher of all campus publications, is currently evaluating the Highland Echo operation in order to present a proposal (or proposals) to the All-College Council on this subject.

The purpose of any proposals will be threefold: to ensure 1) that in the future the Echo operates efficiently, both economically and editorially; 2) that the learning experience the Echo affords students will be more valuable; and 3) that the Echo will be a quality publication of service to the entire MC community.

The major areas of concern to the Committee are that the Echo will have adequate funding, a faculty advisor and sufficient student staff to eliminate past problems. The Committee is also especially concerned that students interested in becoming editor have a chance to gain necessary journalistic experience and a knowledge of the total operation of the Echo prior to rather than after beocming editor.

As soon as the Communications Committee's proposal has been approved by the ACC, the Committee will begin the selection process for the next editor who will assume the position spring term.

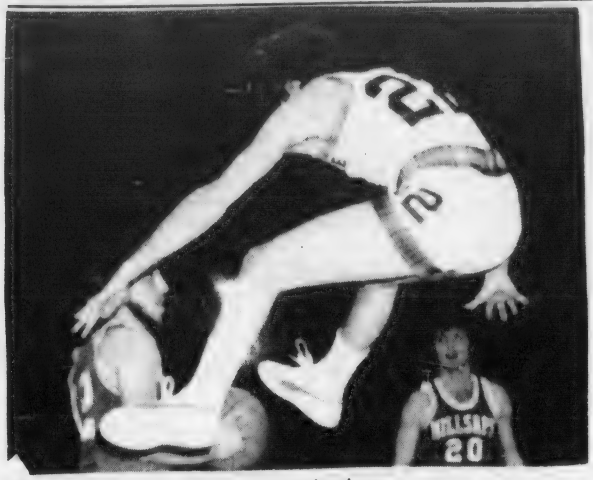
All students interested in serving as Echo editor should contact a member of the Communications Committee or pick up an application from the Communications Office in Anderson 212B.

Current requirements are that applicants for editor must be a rising junior or senior with a GPA of at least 2.0 for all college work and have at least three terms' experience on the staff of a college newspaper.

Students not meeting all these requirements but who have a keen interest in serving on the Echo staff should apply as well.

President's Inaugural Planned

An Inaugural Celebration for President Wayne Anderson is currently being planned. The Committee planning the event, consisting of students, faculty, and administration is chaired by Edwin Best, a member of the MC Board of Directors.



The specifics of the Inaugural have not yet been set but it will probably focus on MC and its future as inspired by President Anderson's Convocation Address. Tentative plans call for an Inaugural Week beginning on April 22 or 23 and concluding on April 29th at an elaborate 10:00 a.m. Inaugural ceremony.

Among the plans currently being discussed is a seminar series focusing on 3 main academic areas; the Social Sciences, Humanities and the Sciences, in which guest speakers will discuss the future aspects of those areas. One member of the Committee expressed hopes for some "big name speakers" who would host the seminars for the College Community.

There are plans being made to invite representatives from the 50 oldest colleges in the United States (MC is the 47th oldest) to attend the week's activities and participate in an academic procession on Saturday the 29th at the Inaugural Ceremony.

Other plans include a fac-

Scots Drop Three

by Robert Boone

Three defeats in as many tries were suffered by the Maryville College men's basketball squad on a rough road trip through Virginia and Kentucky.

Coach Billy Henry's Scots were handed two losses in Virginia and another in Kentucky.

Radford 101, MC 81

Wayne Emme pumped through 23 points for Maryville against a strong Radford squad. MC was down only 10 points at the half 40-30, but could not keep up with Radford in the final 20 minutes. Other MC cagers in double figures were Steve Wright 13, Mark Stinnett 12, and Wade Edmond 10.

Washington and Lee 88, MC 78

Mark Stinnett hit 24 points in a losing effort against the W & L Generals to pace Maryville's offensive scoring. Others scoring for the Scots were Wright with 12 and [illegible] with 10.

Transylvania 92, MC 73

MC took on the highly regarded and ranked Pioneers of Lexington, Kentucky Feb. 6 but came away with the short straw. The locals played an inspiring first half and were down 38-35 before the homestander's strong second half. Balanced scoring gave Transy it's 14th win in 17 starts opposite the Scots 14th loss against 5 wins. Doug Tutin and Stinnett tied for scoring honors with 18 points apiece. Steve Wright was a bucket behind with 16 points.

HS Tournament Set

Maryville College will be hosting the District III small high school basketball tournament in gyms I and II on February 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 23, and 24. From Monday, February 20th through Friday, February 24, Gym I will not be available for any activity. The tournament schedule will begin at 4:30 p.m. on the 16th and 17th, 1:00 p.m. on the 18th, 7:00 p.m. on the 20th, 7:30 p.m. on the 21st, 7:00 p.m. on the 23rd, and 7:45 p.m. on the 24th. The gyms will be closed to student use thirty minutes before the first game, and the necessary dressing rooms one hour before the first game. Students are welcome to use the weight room and handball courts during the tournament by entering through the front driveway door to the P. E. Building and checking with Mr. King at the pass gate by showing the student ID card. Students wishing to attend the tournament may do so at the student price by presenting ID cards at the ticket window off the lobby.

on display for inspection two days prior to the auction, according to Neil McDade, administrative vice president of the College. None will be reserved or removed from auction, but prospective bidders who cannot attend in person may purchase by proxy through another buyer, he added.

No advance information will be available as to individual items to be included because most of them are in a commercial storage warehouse and cannot be moved back to the campus before the week of the auction, McDade explained. Also, a catalog will be prepared at the last moment but will not be available for advance mailing.

intramurals

by David Franssen and Bill Clarke

We are now in the middle of the Intramural Basketball season, when teams are really tested. The big games last week were Whiteside (6-1) and the Hackers (5-2) and Snaggle Puss Babies and Jim's Nasium.

Going into the game, most observers felt that the Hackers were the underdogs. This seemed to be true throughout the early part of the game. Then in the second half, the Hacks fought back for an eight point deficit. They were lead by the strong outside shooting of John Thomas and Ron Brofman. The game ended in a tie and went into overtime. In the overtime, Conover drove to the baseline with 9 seconds left and put the ball up and tied the score. On the play he was fouled. With only a second showing on the clock, he scored the game's winning point. The final score was 59-58.

In the battle of the winless, Snaggle Puss Babies squashed by Jim's Nasium 44-29. The game was a see-saw battle early on, as both teams attempted to score. The Nasium, lead by sharpshooter Harry MacCall, took an early lead. Then slick ball handler Rick Mullinex of Snaggle Puss led his team on a comeback. The Nasium, without the services of leading scorer Steve Hurford (6 points a game) could not come back and found defeat again. P-Funk is still the only undefeated team in the league as the season winds down towards the playoffs.

series. Among the works to be performed are Beethoven's Prometheus Overture, Tschaikovsky's Russian Chorale and Overture, and Sovenir De Porto Rico by Gottschalk.

Dr. Charles H. Holbrow, professor of physics and astronomy at Colgate University in Hamilton, New York, will discuss a proposal formulated by 30 engineers, sociologists and physical scientists for construction of a self-contained space colony for perhaps 10,000 human beings. His talk will be illustrated with films and slides. Dr. Holbrow is also project manager for the NASA-sponsored "Space Colonization: A Design Study." His talk will be on Thursday, March 2, at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC auditorium.

Booters Prepare

The Soccer Club will play in a 6-man, 14-team tournament this Saturday, February 18, at Tennessee Wesleyan in Athens, Tennessee. This is the first event of the spring season for the club. The teams first game is at 8:30 in the morning. The team is working hard and would appreciate all the fan support you can give.

Vol. 63 No. 13 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 13, 1978

Sabrina Rawls and Kendall Murphy take a break from making plans for the upcoming Black Culture Week.

Black Culture Week brings activity

by Rick Smith/and Michelle Jones

"A race of people is like an individual man: until it uses its own talent, takes pride in its own selfhood, it can never fulfill itself."

These words, spoken by the late Malcolm X, embody the spirit in which Black Culture Week is being planned for the week of April 16-22. Rick Mosely, Director of Minority Admissions, made the point in an interview on April 7 that the activities planned for Black Culture Week were designed "to build bridges, to educate," and that students at Maryville College "should not lose sight of the contributions made by, and for, Black Africans and Black Americans."

Black Culture Week begins with "Umoja Day" on Sunday, April 16. The term comes from a Swahili word meaning "unity," and students from Knoxville College, UT, and Maryville will be meeting at Tremont for an afternoon of sports, activities, and a picnic.

Monday, April 17 is highlighted by a program in the FAC Music Hall, beginning at 7:30 p.m. A program of gospel music will be performed by the Knoxville College Gospel Choir, under the direction of Bernie Phillips. The Reverend Ralph Ross will then deliver a lecture entitled "Religion and College Education," dealing with the relationships—and conflicts—that occur between the two. Refreshments will be served following the activities.

Tuesday, April 18 is highlighted by the showing of a film, Legacy of A Dream, in Anderson Hall 214-216 at 7:30 p.m. Dealing with the movement inspired and led by the late Dr. Martin Luther King, the film will be followed by a discussion led by Perry Daugherty and Jesse Moulden, two instructors from Knoxville College. Refreshments and discussion will follow in the Black Student Center.

Wednesday, April 19 features a CIV program entitled "Music is Soul," performed by the Shaw High School Rhythm-Teens and Jazz Band of Cleveland, Ohio. (See related story, page 2.) A professional organization that has been in existence for over 25 years, this group will be performing a program of various jazz and blues selections, led by their director, Mr. Alvin Fulton.

Thursday, April 20 features a night of discussions to be held in the Black Student Center, beginning at 7:30. The featured guest speaker is Dr. Ira Harrison, sponsored by the Phelps-Stokes Fund at UT. Discussions will deal with Africa's history, politics, culture, and development. Special emphases will be given to

ACC holds elections tomorrow

The general election for representatives on the ACC will be held Friday, April 14, during lunch and dinner in the dining hall lobby.

The candidates from the faculty who have been here between one and five years are Dr. Terry Bunde and Harry Howard. Dr. Marilyn Pollio and Dr. David Cartlidge are running in the 6-15 years category. Nominated in the 15 years or longer category are Dr. Wallace Lewis and Dr. Jerry Waters. One faculty member from each category will be elected.

The staff nominees are Debbie Huffman and Jane Huddleston. One representative is chosen for the ACC.

The administration candidates running for two positions on the Council are Martha Hess, Raymond Brahams and John Klockentager.

Run-off elections were held yesterday to determine the class candidates. From the rising senior class, the candidates were Wade Edmond, Phil Loyd and Shirley Ambrister.

ACC raps on alcohol

The new alcohol policy was one of the top issues discussed during the April 5 All-College Council meeting. Due to an incident during the Uncle Sam's Senior Night, it was decided that the present policy would need some rewording.

The policy will be re-examined and specific guidelines drawn up to determine exactly what are college-recognized functions. As Dean Jane Richardson said, "We need guidelines for the guidelines." Further rules concerning social activities are expected in the near future.

The ACC also discussed the Tremont situation. Bill Thomas, freshman representative, stated that some students are disillusioned with Tremont. Dr. Robert Ramger stated that it is not presently geared to college students and that the "propoganda" concerning Tremont should be changed or the Tremont program should be changed to meet the "propaganda." The Council expressed hope that next year Tremont and the college can be more closely connected.

Dr. Harry Price of the World Concern Committee announced that the Fred Hope Auction would be May 1. It has yet to be determined where the proceeds from the auction will go. Dr. Price also reported that the committee had discussed plans for a Center for International Studies at MC. A student could ideally get a major in international relations, taking courses such as law, finances, and trade.

Swenson resigns

Mr. William Swenson, a member of the art faculty, has resigned in order to pursue other interests and freelance work.

According to Dean Blair, the college is looking for Mr. Swenson's replacement and is now in the process of gathering applications. They hope to find someone with a master's degree in art education and a good background in painting and drawing.

After the field has been narrowed down, two or three applicants will meet with the art faculty and students in order for the department to have some say in the final decision.

A dejected Maryville ball player watcher a UT Chattanooga player cross the plate in the second game of last Saturday's twin-bill. See sports page for details.

'Menagerie' takes stage

Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie will be presented May 4-6 at the Theatre. It will be the final production of the Maryville College Playhouse for the 1977-78 season.

Tickets for students will be $1.50 and for adults $2.50.

Directed by Mr. Thomas Jones with Sharon Crane as the technical director, the play features three of MC's stalwart performers. John Morton is the frustrated young poet Tom: Liza Howe is the fragile Laura, and Ruth Ann Reeves plays the confused mother Amanda. Bob Obstrowski will play the part of the gentleman caller.

The play is an autobiography of Williams' own struggle for self identity in a fragile, often brutal world.

The Glass Menagerie relies heavily upon expressionism through the use of stage devices, lighting and sound to create a plastic theater type effect.

Mr. Jones saw the premiere performance of the play at the Civic Theater, Chicago, Ill., on December 26, 1944.

Is MC what it says it is?

Dr. Robert Ramger's reference to the Maryville College admissions literature concerning Tremont as "propoganda" raises an important point about this program and others and how they are communicated to the public.

The comment was made in a discussion at the April 5 All-College Council meeting. It was a response to a statement made by one member that two students he knew of were dissatisfied with the unavailability of the Tremont facilities. It did not meet their expectations—expectations that the literature had led them to believe.

In recent years, students have been told that some programs and facilities, such as Tremont, music and art therapy, and engineering, were readily accessible to students. Yet after coming to Maryville students are disappointed. Either they are required to do large amounts of work to implement their program or the facility is not as available as they had understood.

What is the problem? Is it the information that is misleading, or is the student misinterpreting what he or she is reading? We think it is a combination of the two.

The admissions literature is necessarily written to give the college a very positive image. It is natural to build up a place where there are as many possibilities as Tremont. The students on campus, however, will read some of the information and say, "Do I go to this school? I never knew I could've done that." Fact is many unique programs and facilities are available, but after a thorough digging by the student he or she discovers that often the program is not all it is cracked up to be.

We realize the programs are viable. No doubt some students have had rewarding experiences in obtaining their degrees in such programs or at a place like Tremont. The 10-week interdisciplinary term at Tremont is a fine example of satisfying a student's demands for that kind of learning experience.

It is a question of credibility, however, that hazes any bright spots. Students want and desire learning experiences that enable them to have field opportunities, or the chance for practical learning. In attempting to meet these demands, though, something has gone amuck.

Dr. Ramger's point should be well taken by all interested parties. The most significant part of his statement was that either the programs should be changed to fit the propoganda or the propoganda changed to fit the actual programs.

While the ACC was not in a position to make any decisions about the situation last Wednesday, it did recognize the problem. In the future, perhaps the ACC or those that formulate the literature will take steps in assuring that what is said is backed or properly directed.

the compleat reporter

by Tim Rahn

O where art thou, American Dream: I sit in Gilbert's Coffeehouse, a slapped trap of misfits abandoned either by themselves or America. The war vet is back. I guess they let him out of the psychiatric hospital. A waitress—who no longer works here, being senile and hard of hearing—once told me that he was one of the best kids in the area. Straight A's in high school, etc. Then he went to the Vietnam War, Uncle Sam's senile commitment to Lord knows what.

Half a human he is, a nervous twitch two seats down who cannot stop running his hand through his hair, which is cowlicked by the constant repetition of the motion. There is such terror behind his eyes that it is painful to turn to him. Goddamn! why do we need wars to give us such limited existence—to defile youth, and to chase honor and courage to absurd edges? There's such a repulsive horror in his laugh, like the vampire in old movies—only this is a man who has been sucked.

Gilbert's has changed a lot since I began visiting the premises. At first it was a joke—a good laugh at the fat waitress dubbed Big Bertha. She's gone. So are the laughs.

Now one of the waitresses wears co-ordinated outfits. She's spotless, too. Her hair is red and she likes to play the juke box. A man just came up to her at the juke box and put his arm on her shoulder—he's drunk and she humors him. They bump butts.

The other waitress is Mutt to the former's Jeff. What a soul—if there's a God in heaven, bless her. She's a short, determined, and kind soul. When I was here several months ago it looked as though someone had beat the shit out of her. This is the best I've ever seen her. I feel glad to see her face clear and passive. She told me that when she gets off work she goes home to nurse her bed-ridden husband.

The courage of some people! To defy being slapped down—to stand today as they did yesterday: what a statement about the power of human will. It is paradoxical, but if humanity were what the philosophers and utopians say it can be, courage would not be so necessary. Yet it is courage that makes humanity the success it is today. Women like Ruby show us daily courage, its importance and strength.

Existence breeds hope, courage can sustain existence, as can love. The society of man, though, content with bare forms, settles on meaninglessness too often. It is a cold-hearted world then. If you walk by Gilbert's and don't cringe or feel for the people inside, you'd better look and see if hollowness exists where your heart should be. Sure, it's nothing more than another greasy spoon, but there's life inside the place, 24 hours a day—living, breathing people. Look, you could fill their shoes.

The silly country songs have stopped. She just puts more quarters in the box, and more songs play; but it isn't all that bad. Sitting here, I soon see how "drivel" can make existence easy for many. It's man's sad story, but as the poet says, "it's life, and life only."

Goodnight, America. I'm so lonesome I could cry.

Saturday, April 22 will be a day filled with activities, as some three to four hundred minority students from numerous high schools have been invited to participate in the events occurring that day. Registration for these students will begin at 8:00 a.m., with formal introductions and speeches to be given in the Little Chapel at 9:30. From 11:00 until 3:30 is scheduled an outdoor show of art by local black artists; this will be held in front of the Fine Arts Center, and registration of works for this exhibit will begin at 10:00 that morning. Music Hall, and there is an admission charge of 50 cents to the general public. Students from MC, Knoxville College, and UT can get in free, however, by showing a valid current I.D. card. This performance will be broadcast live over radio station WJBE in Knoxville.

Saturday night is also "Soul Food Night" for SAGA, serving at the regular time.

At 7:00 there is a Financial Aid Workshop to be held in the Black Student Center. This workshop will be led by Jenetta Fain, an assistant director for the Financial Aid Office at UT.

At 8:00 the "Fashion Elite," a group from Woodbury, N.J., will be holding a fashion show in the Fine Arts Center. The show, exhibiting the latest trends in contemporary black fashion, will be directed by Leslie Lockert.

The night ends with a Disco Party to be held in Pearsons at 10:00 p.m. At press time, arrangements for a live band were being made.

Concerning this busy week of activities, Director of Minority Admissions Rick Mosely stated that an emphasis of Black Cultural Week was interaction. These activities, he said, are not merely for the development and edification of black students, but are intended for interaction between students and other people from all races and segments of the public.

New Saga manager creates variety

by Cindy White

Spring is the time of fresh change and added to the pleasantries of spring is Billie Hows, Maryville's new Saga manager.

Ms. Hows comes to Maryville after working for Saga for nearly five years. She is transferring from Rosary College in Illinois. A Tennesseean, she received her ABA in Food and Institutional Management from the University of Tennessee.

Since Ms. Hows started managing the dining hall, she has made some obvious changes. Fruit is served at most meals; desserts have been imaginative; and meal plans seem more varied. Another change has been in the preparation of vegetables. Ms. Hows prefers to cook fresh vegetables not canned ones.

Ms. Hows describes herself as a creative cook. She tries to prepare meals that reflect seasons, attitudes, and atmospheres. For instance, she would like to prepare a Hawaiian luau this spring.

When asked about steak night, Ms. Hows said that she was interested in substituting weekly ethnic dinners for the usual steaks. She reasoned that steak night has become dull routine. An ethnic night would be adventurous, especially for those who have never eaten French or German food.

Ms. Hows mentioned that one of the problems she has encountered thus far is the inadvertent discourtesy of students who leave trays at the tables. She said that the removal of food and dishes from the hall has been another problem. She stressed that those students are only hurting themselves.

One student in referring to Ms. Hows observed, "She's neat. She's different." The difference has been a welcome change for Maryville.

Black Student Association member Helen Johnson poses with an art work that will be sold during Black Culture Week.

Editorial applications due Monday

Deadline for applications for editors of the Highland Echo and the Chilhowean is Monday, April 17.

Applicants for editorship of the newspaper must be rising juniors or seniors with a GPA of at least 2.0 for all college work. Applicants should also have at least three terms experience on the staff of a college newspaper or have worked on the two spring issues of the Echo and have participated in the journalism workshops on campus.

The yearbook editor must be a sophomore or higher class standing and have at least a 2.0 GPA. Those interested in the Chilhowean editorship must have some experience on the staff of a college annual or similar publication.

All applicants must complete interviews with the communications committee.

Application forms for both editorships are available from the communications office in Anderson 212B.

'Scholars' program begins

The Presidential Scholars Program, an honors system for entering freshmen who have maintained high academic standards throughout high school, will get under way next year.

The scholars program is designed to "recognize and honor students based on their academic performance," according to MC President Wayne Anderson. Scholarships will be awarded to selected students.

Twenty-five students have been contacted by the college to participate in next year's program, which will include special seminars, workshops, and other honors work.

To qualify as a Presidential Scholar, a prospective student must rank in the top 15% of his graduating class, present outstanding SAT or ACT scores, and have a 3.25 GPA.

Beats go on Friday night

by Rick Smith

"Java—An Evening with the Beats" is the name of a poetry reading to be given Friday night at 7:30 in the Experimental Theatre.

Sponsored by Impressions Magazine, this poetry reading will be conducted in a very informal, coffee-house style. The first half of the poetry reading will consist of selected readings of "Beat" poetry of the late 1950's and early 1960's. The second half will consist of voluntary readings and recitations by any members of the audience bringing poetry or other literature selections.

As of press time, scheduled readers include Rena Christoffersen, Phil der Pilbosian, Ruth Cartlidge, Tim Rahn, Rick Smith, and others. Other people who wish to read selections are urged to contact Tim Rahn sometime before Friday night.

This is a very informal reading—an attempt to revive for one night the Greenwich Village atmosphere of the late 1950's. So if you want to enjoy an evening of good poetry, come to the Experimental Theatre Friday night.

In addition to teaching piano, Mrs. Northington has won many scholarships and awards, including the Corbett Scholarship, the American Music Scholarship Association Award, and the Music Teachers National Association Award.

Mr. Sanzone has presented concerts in Florida and other eastern states. He has also appeared with the Royal Shakespeare Company.

The recital is open to the public and is free of charge.

The Council also discussed sending a questionnaire to students to discover what their social priorities are concerning campus functions. The questionnaire would seek to discover what functions to channel money into. It is hoped that by doing this the most important functions can be improved and that money can be saved in other areas.

Next year's ACC will meet with the present Council during the first Wednesday of May.

Scots vie with Chattanooga

by Sue Lunny

MC Scots split a doubleheader last Saturday against Tennessee Chattanooga. The Scots won the first game 8—6 before dropping the second game 10—5.

Danny Thomas went the distance in the opening game and came through with a clutch hit during the second game. Buddy McDonald, Johnnie Walker, Jimmy Reese and Vince Fucci lent strong batting support.

At the beginning of the season the Scots returned from the Classic Tournament in Montavello, Alabama with a 1—4 record. Commenting on the poor start, Coach Henry said, "It's hard to get off on the right foot after ten games on the road."

Errors proved to be the main problem the Scots encountered at Carson-Newman. They returned with a 17—5 loss. "We just played bad ball," Assistant Coach Stinnett said.

The Scots opened their April games with five straight wins. A doubleheader victory at Warren Wilson started the string of victories.

"We played two good ball games," Stinnett said. "We only made one error in each game."

MC soundly defeated Cumberland College in a doubleheader in the first home game. Mike Boring and Paul Alexander combined to pitch the first game. Larry Sheeley pitched a three-hitter in the second game.

The Scots' reocrd now stands at 6—8 for the year.

Maryville coach Billy Henry takes a time out to let the home plate umpire know what he thought of the last call.

Kiwanis gift aids interpreting program

Alcoa Kiwanis recently presented $200 to Maryville College's interpreting degree program, the fourth consecutive year the organization has done so, according to Irma Young, director of the MC interpreting degree program.

This year's gift will be used to help offset the cost of an air conditioner for the room which houses the special equipment needed for the interpreting degree program, Mrs. Young said. "We are most grateful to the Alcoa Kiwanis for this gift as well as for their continuing support of our program," she said, going on to note that the Alcoa Kiwanis was the first outside organization to have given financial support for the program and they have continued to do so each successive year.

Other area civic organizations and business firms as well as individuals have also supported the program since its inception four years ago bringing to more than $5,000 the monies received to date from these sources, she added.

The interpreting degree program, initiated by funds received from the U. S. Government under its Title III program, is currently looking for alternative funding sources, such as foundations, since Title III funds usually are not extended past a five-year period.

"The gifts we receive from organizations, such as the Kiwanis, help us do the 'little things' we would not ordinarily be able to do because of lack of funds," she pointed out. "We do have a number of pressing needs which could be lessened if other such gifts were received," she went on.

"In addition to helping us offset the cost of equipment needed in this program, such funding would also be most helpful in our scholarship program, both for deaf students as well as for interpreting degree majors," she continued.

"We are also reaching the stage where we'll have to equip another lab because of the increased enrollment in our interpreting degree program," she emphasized.

There were no contestants for the rising junior seat. The position may possibly be left vacant.

From each of the class run-offs, the two top vote receivers will be on Friday's ballot.

All persons are eligible to vote in Friday's election.

Dunn, Emme earn All-American titles

by Robert Boone

Two Maryville College athletes, Wayne Dunn and Wayne Emme, have achieved status as All-Americans in their respective sports.

MC senior Wayne Dunn has earned All-American honors in the NCAA Division III category for two different sports this year. He received honors for wrestling and for his performance as linebacker on the Scots football squad.

Junior Wayne Emme was named to the Southern District Division III All-American team for his talents on the hardwood floor.

Dunn placed fourth in the 167-pound classification at the national wrestling tournament held last month at Wheaton, Ill. This is the third consecutive year Dunn has received the All-American honors. He has had a brilliant career record of 122 wins, 14 losses, and 2 ties.

Earlier this year Dunn was honored for his performance on the gridiron. A senior physical education major originally from Rockaway, N. J., he now lives in Maryville with his wife, Mary Lou.

This was the second year that Wayne Emme has been awarded All-American honors in basketball. Named by Coach Henry as "one of the finest shooters the college has ever known," Emme had the Scots' high game this season with 42 points against King College.

Emme attributes his success this year to hard work during the off season and his determination to become a better all around basketball player. Looking ahead to his senior year, Emme is hoping to equal Dunn's feat of three consecutive All-American titles.

Juniors display their wares

Three art majors will present their junior shows in the library this term.

Lisa Ceraolo's show, which is entitled "Always Growing, Never Ending Just Beginning," will be held April 16-29. It will contain pastels, watercolors, drawings, oils, prints, batiks, and ceramics. She is a studio art major from Clearwater, Fla.

Joel Flint, an art therapy major from Prattsburg, N.Y., will present his junior show May 1-12. Entitled "The Real Thing," it will contain drawings, ceramics, paintings and weavings.

Anne Gilliland, who is an art therapy major from Tullahoma, Tn., will hold her show May 19-26. It will include watercolors, drawings, prints and weavings.

Anderson inaugurates 'new era'

Dr. Wayne Anderson assumed office as the eighth president of Maryville College on July 1, 1977, at the age of 39.

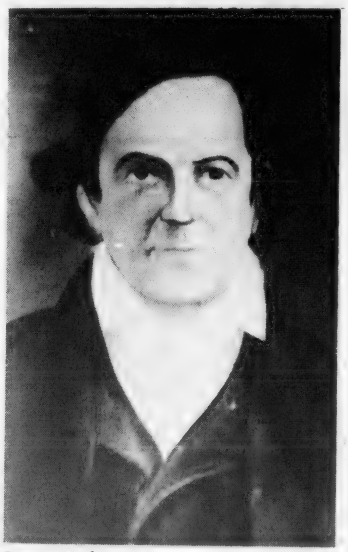
A native of Minneapolis, Dr. Anderson earned a B.A. degree in 1959 from the University of Minnesota where he majored in political science. He received the Master of Public Affairs degree in 1962 from the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs of Princeton University. In 1974 he earned his Ph.D. degree in government from Georgetown University in Washington.

In 1961 Dr. Anderson served as an administrative intern with HEW. In 1962 he went to work for the Association of American Colleges (AAC). He was assistant to Drs. Theodore Distler and Carter Davidson, both presidents of AAC.

Dr. Anderson left the AAC to join the administrative staff at Johns Hopkins University. There he served as executive assistant to Presidents Milton S. Eisenhower, Lincoln Gordon, and Steven Muller from 1966 to 1975. His duties at Johns Hopkins included serving as a liason between the presidents and the faculty, staff, and students.

From 1975 until he assumed the presidency, Dr. Anderson was the first director of the Trustee Leadership Program of the Association of Governing Boards. The Leadership Program was the first national effort of its kind to upgrade trusteeship in the nation's colleges and universities.

Dr. Anderson is married to Anne McClung. She is an alumna of Mary Baldwin College and received her Master of Teaching at Harvard University. The Andersons have two children: Carrington (Carey), 13, and Christen, 9.



Dr. Anderson feels that the inauguration is for the college community as a whole.

"There is a Maryville story to be told. This is not an inauguration of a president but an opening of a door to a new period of history for Maryville College." He believes that it is a

Presidential past reveals rich heritage

In October of 1819, Isaac Anderson gathered a class of five young men, and a college was born known as Southern and Western Theological Seminary; today it is Maryville College.

Dr. Anderson, the founder and first president of Maryville College, was born March 26, 1780, in Rockbridge County, Virginia. He received his early schooling both at home and in a subscription school conducted by a Scottish dominie. From the age of fifteen until his graduation, Dr. Anderson attended Liberty Hall Academy. He then began theological studies under Reverend Samuel Brown.

In 1801, at the age of 21, he moved to East Tennessee where he continued his theological training. After one year in Tennessee, he was ordained a minister and installed as pastor of Washington Presbyterian Church. In the same year, he was married and started Union Academy on his 215-acre farm. His school was successful for 10 years, but in 1812 he accepted a call to Maryville to succeed one of his former teachers as pastor of New Providence Presbyterian Church.

In addition to his preaching, he taught students in his home and at local academies. One of his most famous pupils was General Sam Houston.

For the first ten years, Dr. Anderson accepted no compensation from the College but continued to live on the income from his preaching and his farm. He and Mrs. Anderson often boarded in their home and paid the tuition of students who did not have any money. By this time, the number of students had grown from five to one-hundred.

Besides his presidential responsibilities, Dr. Anderson still taught classes, preached, and founded at least nine churches.

In his late 60's, Dr. Anderson was stricken with what was then diagnosed as "paralysis of an important lumbar nerve."

By 1856, he was almost totally incapacitated in mind and body and served as the College's president in name only.

Mrs. Anderson had died in 1852, and Dr. Anderson was almost killed in 1856 in a fire that destroyed his home and the College records. He later lived with his daughter-in-law in nearby Rockford where he died January 28, 1857.

John Joseph Robinson

John Joseph Robinson, the second president of Maryville College, was the youngest president to take office, and he served the shortest term in office.

John Robinson was born January 16, 1822, in Washington, Georgia. His family background was one of culture and strong church affiliation.

In 1850, Robinson began serving as the Professor of Anderson unites Maryville in giant step

The Latin meaning of inaugurate is "to take omens." It is a pledge and signifies a beginning, a fresh start, a wind of change, or the necessary overture to plot the course towards fulfillment.

Everyone approaches inaugurations with hope, with the understanding that things will change, that something better is just around the corner. Only skeptics refrain from the celebratory effusion, the opportunity to usher in that golden age.

So we at Maryville prepare to make that giant step, to take that omen, forcefully, and move confidently into the future. If just for a moment, we are united; and our stepping together signals our wish that Maryville College will have the very best.

In the history of Maryville College there have been days bleaker than many could imagine. The years during and after the Civil War threatened the very existence of the College, just as declining enrollment and finances have caused woe in recent years. Yet as always, it has been the perseverance of a few that has kept the College functioning.

In 1866 a man named Thomas Jefferson Lamar reconvened Maryville College. The years that followed saw Lamar's leadership rebuilding the institution slowly, but with a determined effort. Thomas Jefferson Lamar would never live to see the full fruit of his efforts, efforts that firmly established the College and enabled it to withstand many difficulties in the next 100 years. His is no small legacy.

In 1977 Wayne Anderson took a long look at Maryville College and decided that despite everything that plagued the institution, it was worth maintaining. He thought it was worth the effort to see that Maryville continued to teach and serve those who desired the special educational experience it offered. His is no small task.

Before he made his decision, Dr. Anderson no doubt took a look at the tradition and history of the College. No doubt he saw what many had seen before him, the story the tradition and history told: the depth, dimension, and pride of those who had worked, learned, and lived here.

We cannot, however, look to the past for answers, only direction. The road that Maryville is about to embark upon must be plotted with careful and insightful thought. It is a job that few would want and fewer still would be qualified for. Yet if the past ten months are any indication of Dr. Anderson's ability to lead this school, we are in the hands of a man who meets the giant requirements.

The future is not just in Dr. Anderson's hands. It is in the hands of everyone: the alumni, the faculty, the staff, and the students. As Dr. Anderson takes the oath of his office, each of us should affirm, in some small way, our commitment to the College.

"It is time for a new beginning," as Dr. Anderson said when he accepted his job in February 1977. It is fitting that he has waited until this month, when from the depths of a cold winter, spring has arrived and regally clothed the lands around us. In our "new beginning" we should try to rival the splendor of nature's creations.

Inaugurations: the way they were

by Veronica T. Sawdon

"Maryville College is a great institution. Some other colleges are greater in age, greater in their endowment, and greater in the number of students attending them, and, by consequence, greater in the extent of their influence. But still it is true that Maryville College is a great institution."

Those words were spoken at the inauguration of Samuel T. Wilson, fifth president of Maryville College. The truth contained in the prose is typical of the enthusiasm present throughout the seven presidencies of Maryville's existence.

Inaugural proceedings for these seven presidents have varied through the past 159 years. In anticipation of number eight, a look at previous inaugural ceremonies is in order, beginning with that of the founder and first president.

Isaac Anderson's inauguration was held September 25, 1822—three year's after the College's founding—in the old stone church at Maryville. President Anderson's address was centered around Hosea iv: 6 and Malachi ii:7 and concerned the importance of gaining knowledge.

Initiating a trend that has continued to the present, Dr. Anderson delivered an inaugural "discourse" in which he concluded: "This institution was founded with the most liberal views towards other Christian churches—From these liberal views, and a practice as liberal, it is hoped the institution will never depart. What can a generous public ask more at our hands?".

Unfortunately, little is written about the inaugurations of Maryville's second and third presidents. John Joseph Robinson, successor of Isaac Anderson, was the youngest man to assume the presidency of Maryville College. He was 35 when he was inaugurated on April 7, 1857. Serving only four years, Dr. Robinson completed the shortest term of office of any MC president.

Peter Mason Bartlett was 49 when he began his role as president in March, 1869. His term of office lasted 18 years, and he, along with Thomas Jefferson Lamar, the College's second founder, was primarily responsible for rebuilding Maryville College after the Civil War.

Samuel Ward Boardman, fourth president of MC, was formally inaugurated September 5, 1889. The exercises were held in the College Chapel on the second floor of Anderson Hall.

The topic of his inaugural address was "The Bible in Colleges and Theistic Realism," and the Directors' minutes portrayed his speech as "a masterly discussion of a very important subject."

Maryville College's fifth president, Samuel Tyndale Wilson, celebrated his inauguration by looking to the past. His address, "The Southern and Western Theological Seminary," was a tribute to Isaac Anderson, Maryville's founding father.

The review of Dr. Anderson's endeavors was given on Monday evening, October 21, 1901, at New Providence Presbyterian Church. Dr. Wilson's address reflected the power and endurance of the Anderson administration which helped establish the firm foundation for his own presidency—one that lasted 29 years.

The inauguration of Ralph Waldo Lloyd as sixth president of Maryville College was the beginning of a gala tradition. A two-day convocation on Sacred Literature at Maryville College. He resigned in 1855 and served as a pastor in Kentucky for two years. After Dr. Anderson's death in 1857, Robinson was invited back as President and Professor of Didactic Theology, but his term in office lasted only four years. In mid-April of 1861, the opening shots of the Civil War were fired at Fort Sumter. On April 22, a final chapel service was held announcing the closing of the College. There were no armed hostilities in the Tennessee Valley yet, but the feelings of war were abundant.

Robinson left two important contributions from his short term as president. First, he revived the College's life, and he restored confidence in it by the Synod and the general public. Second, he left a biography of Isaac Anderson.

Peter Mason Bartlett

When Peter Mason Bartlett became Maryville College's third president, he was faced with the bitter controversy associated with the pursuit of an integrative admissions policy in a southern college during the Reconstruction period. In the end this controversy led to Bartlett's resignation.

Several innovations evolved during Bartlett's presidency. He was the chairman of the building committee that was responsible for the erection of the first three buildings on the new campus purchased by Thomas Jefferson Lamar. One of these buildings was Anderson Hall, built in 1870. During Bartlett's administration February Meetings were initiated. In 1878 the YMCA was organized on the Maryville campus. Student enrollment increased from 48 to 246.

Despite these many innovations, in 1887 President Bartlett was forced to resign amid bitter, embroiling controversy. He was accused by William Thaw of Pittsburg, one of the college's most generous benefactors at the time, of not sincerely encouraging the enrollment of black students at Maryville. Bartlett denied the charges, saying he had adhered to the college's liberal admissions policy even though he felt it to be unwise considering the circumstances. Nevertheless Bartlett was forced to step down.

Samuel Ward Boardman

Despite the racial controversy surrounding the resignation of his predecessor, the administration of Samuel Ward Boardman took the first steps in achieving racial integration at Maryville College.

Under the Boardman administration the size and efficiency of the campus were greatly increased. The number of buildings doubled.

Boardman's greatest contribution, however, was his strict adherence to the college's integrative admissions policy. Of the 9 black students who received bachelors' degrees from Maryville in the nineteenth century, 8 of these were conferred by Boardman.

Samuel Tyndale Wilson

Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson was with Maryville College longer than anyone else in its 159 year history. At the age of 15, Wilson left his home in Athens, Tennessee, to enter Maryville College's preparatory department. Five years later, when only 20, he received his BA degree. In 1882 he graduated from Lane Theological Seminary and was ordained as a minister of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. After serving 2 years as a missionary in Mexico, he joined the Maryville College faculty as "professor of the English Language and Literature, and of the Spanish Language." During his 17 years as full professor he also served as librarian, registrar, and dean.

During his 29 years as president the College grew and prospered as never before. Eight buildings were constructed and paid for. Large sums of money were raised primarily through President Wilson's efforts, and enrollment increased from 83 in 1901 to 760 in 1930. Maryville developed into a first-rank college, and the College's church affiliation grew stronger.

In June, 1930, at the age of 72, Dr. Wilson resigned from his office but was elected President Emeritus by the Board of Directors.

Ralph Waldo Lloyd

Ralph Waldo Lloyd guided Maryville through what he himself called "three of the most disrupted decades of American history to that time: one of depression, one of war, and one of inflation." He became the sixth president of Maryville College when he succeeded Wilson on November 9, 1930.

Upon graduation from Maryville in 1915, Dr. Lloyd taught mathematics and physics and coached athletics at Westminster College, Salt Lake City, Utah.

In 1921, Dr. Lloyd entered McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, Illinois. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Union (Tennessee) of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. in 1923, and graduated from the McCormick Theological Seminary in 1924.

Dr. Lloyd became the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Murphysburo, Ill. He was the pastor of Edgewood Presbyterian Church, Edgewood, Pittsburgh, Pa. when he was asked to become Maryville College's sixth president. He remained the president until his resignation in 1961.

Joseph J. Copeland

When Joseph J. Copeland was 47 years old, he succeeded Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd as President of Maryville College, becoming the seventh one in its history. On August 1, 1961, he began his 16-year job as the head of the College.

Dr. & Mrs. Copeland have two children. Their son Joseph Kirk Copeland is married and resides in Chattanooga. Their daughter is Mrs. Meldrum Gray III, formerly Karen Lee Copeland. She presently lives in Maryville.

While president of the College, Dr. Copeland was involved with many special projects. During his presidency the college was cleared of its debts on the chapel and the theater. The salaries of the faculty nearly doubled. Three new dorms were built (Davis, Dorm I, and Dorm III, recently renamed Copeland Hall). A modern science center was added to the campus, and a comprehensive new curriculum was instituted.

In 1977 Dr. Copeland retired from the active life of a college president.

time that all can "share dreams for the future."

The eighth President feels that his predecessors have had "heroic people" to help them, and that in this respect his office is also fortunate.

Speaking on his role as President, Dr. Anderson stated that the "times demand an open presidency." He feels that the problems of M.C. have always been met by strong and intelligent people. Though the college encounters new problems, he is struck by the openness and new ideas of the people around him.

Commenting on his picture being on popular T-shirts, Dr. Anderson says, "I think Elton John would have been a better choice."

higher education was planned in conjunction with the formal inauguration which was held October 30, 1931.

Seminars by visiting college presidents, alumni, and faculty and an alumni dinner marked the agenda along with the afternoon inauguration exercises. Dr. Lloyd's address was titled "The College and Character." The ceremonies were concluded with a football game that night.

Thirty one years later Maryville College again looked to its foundings when it chose Joseph J. Copeland as its seventh president. Dr. Copeland left his post at Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville—a church of which Isaac Anderson was first minister—to serve as president of MC for 16 years.

His inaugural ceremonies were combined with Homecoming activities to carry on Dr. Lloyd's initiation of an inaugural experience. The service itself was held in Wilson Chapel at 10 a.m. on October 28, 1961. Joseph E. McCa of Iowa was the principal speaker to an estimated audience of 1,200.

The ceremony was accompanied by a parade, a formal tea, and a winning football game.

Another inauguration is forthcoming. On April 29, 1978, Dr. Wayne Anderson will be inaugurated as Maryville College's eighth president. The week long inaugural activities will become an important addition to the history of the Maryville College presidency—a history of strength, longevity, and devotion.

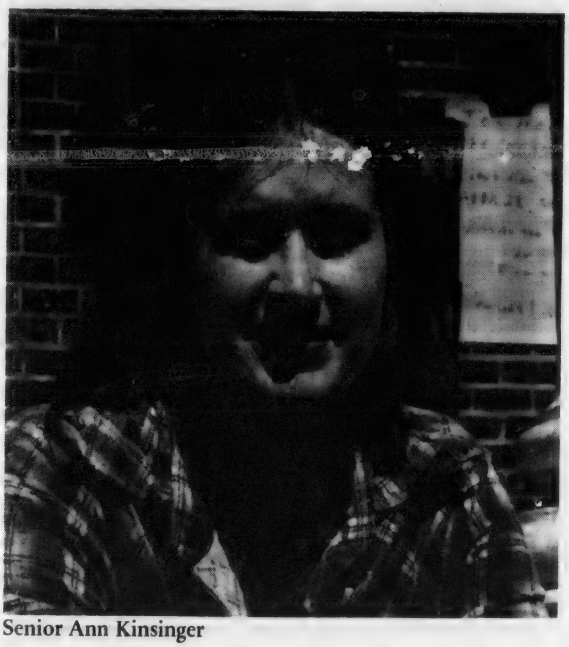
The 1978-79 budget of $3,732,423.00 was approved; it constitutes a 5.3 percent increase over the 1977-78 budget.



A feasibility report prepared by Tamblyn and Brown Inc. on a proposed major capital campaign was reviewed, and the MC administration has been asked for an evaluation and recommendation to present to the executive committee.

The Board paid tribute to three retiring Board members: Dr. Herman Spivey of Knoxville, TN., after 17 years; William G. Walker of Owensboro, Ky., after 21 years; and Blanche Gibbs of Marion, Mass. and Key Biscayne, Fla., after 6 years. Dr. Spivey is to continue as an honorary director.

Board members also participated in a workshop led by Marvin K. Strickler, Chief of Aviation Administration, Federal Aviation Administration, and Association of Governing Board mentor from Washington, D.C. Topics included selection and orientation of new members, organization and function, the relationship between the administration and the Board, and the Board's role in policy-making.

Senior Ann Kinsinger

MC adds to math forum

Maryville was well represented at a recent meeting of the Mathematical Association of America's Southeastern Section at Clemson University, Clemson, S.C.

Dr. William H. Dent Jr., associate professor and chairman of the math/physics department; Dr. John W. Nichols, associate professor of mathematics; Bill Allen, a junior from Knoxville; Scott Garren, a senior from Pittsburgh, Pa.; Ann Kinsinger, a senior from Maryville; Mark Kishimoto, a sophomore from Tokyo, Japan; and Chris Rigell, a junior from Baltimore, Maryland, attended the conference.

Dr. Nichols and Kinsinger presented papers. Dr. Nichol's paper, "A Two-Test Method," dealt with a method of teaching math that is used at Maryville. Kinsinger's paper, "Complex Analytic Curves in the Plane," was based on a research proposal from the Undergraduate Journal of Mathematics.

Kinginger, a senior math major, has been awarded a graduate teaching assistantship in the mathematics doctoral program at the University of Washington in Seattle beginning in September.

She has accepted an 11-week summer appointment at Brookhaven National Laboratory in Upton, N.Y. She will serve as a student research assistant with the applied mathematics department in the field of computer science.

Ann is the daughter of Mrs. Bertha Kinsinger, 203 Indiana Ave., Maryville, and the late Dr. Dan Kinsinger of the MC faculty.

Results tallied for Council

The ACC Council for the 1978-79 academic year has been finalized. Serving as senior representative and co-chairman will be Sharon Youngs.

Each serving two-year terms will be junior Steve Danna and sophomore James Engel.

Filling the administrative positions will be Martha Hess for a two-year term and John Klockentager for a one-year term. Debbie Huffman will be the staff representative.

Harry Howard will represent the faculty members with 1-5 years of service. Dr. David Cartlidge, representing those with 6-15 years of service, will serve a two-year term. Dr. Wallace Lewis will represent the faculty with over 15 years service. He will serve for two years.

AGS inducts new brains

Ten new members of Alpha Gamma Sigma were recognized in a ceremony held Thursday, April 27, in the Chapel.

The featured speaker was Dr. Richard A. Marius, professor of history at UT. Dr. Marius's talk, "Values in History," focused on the Protestant Reformation.

Members of Alpha Gamma Sigma must graduate within the top 10% of their senior class and display outstanding leadership ability.

Bill Brewer, an economics and political science major, is a member of the College's senior committee and has been active in Pi Gamma Mu, social science honor society.

Barbara Lundell, a religion major, has been active with the College's Worship Committee. She plans to attend seminary upon graduation.

Peggy Maher, an interpreting and psychology major, is serving as this year's president of the Sigma Lambda Kappa, sign language club.

Terry Pearson, a biology major, is the vice-president of Beta Beta Beta, biology honorary.

Robyn Turner, a business major, was the prime factor in the formation of a business club established earlier this year.

Rose Wing, a history major, is serving as president of Pi Gamma Mu and is currently the student representative to the Alumni Executive Board.

Pete Xiques, an English major, serves as an RA and has received the Alcoa Scholarship and the MC Academics Scholarship.

Bruce Hill, a history and political science major, served as co-chairman of Instructional Programs Committee and is a member of Pi Gamma Mu.

Trygve Aaby, a chemistry major, is a member of the senior committee and received the chemistry award in 1975.

Greg Wiberley, a biology major, has served as president of Beta Beta Beta.

Two other seniors, Donna Baines and Cindy Stockdale, were recognized in Alpha Gamma Sigma their junior year.

Menagerie opens tonight

The Maryville College Speech/Theatre Department will present "The Glass Menagerie" on May 4-6 in the MC Theatre. All three performances will begin at 8:15 p.m.

Bishop shepherds Echo

Bob Bishop was recently selected editor of the Highland Echo by a concensus of the All-College Council Communications Committee.

Bishop, a junior English major from Fairfield, Connecticut, will serve as editor the remainder of this term and the next academic year. The decision to select Bishop as editor came after discussions and an interview with the Committee.

While the Committee recognized Bishop's limited experience, it is hoped that his attendance of the journalism workshops and participation in the last three Echos will supplement his experience. He will be a member of the extended journalism interim planned next year.

Business manager of the Echo will be junior commercial art major Alvin Nance. Tim Rahn, former Echo editor, will be associate editor. Dr. Elizabeth Fowler and Dr. Carolyn Blair are the faculty advisors.

Students gone with the wind?

Absenteeism festers inaugural week

Inaugural week has come and gone. For those who participated in its events, they found them to be inspiring and educational. Beginning with "Dusty Feet," the week traveled an enlightening path which led to President Anderson's "New Era." It was all one could hope for.

The festivities climax was the emotional scene of three Maryville College Presidents standing together on the Wilson stage. It will linger long in the memories of those who witnessed it. The faculty, staff, distinguished visitors, and representatives of various colleges and universities attended.

Where have all the students gone?

Except for a handful of students and the choir, it appeared that there was not enough time or interest to fit in the 55-minute program.

Unfortunately, this situation was not unique to Saturday's activities. The Maryville-Alcoa community recognizes the benefits and values of the programs the college offers. The majority of the audience was composed of these people.

No doubt, many students had prior obligations which prohibited their attendance. When the modern cry, however, is for experiences other than those found in the classroom, one can only guess how sincere this plea is when observing last Saturday's student turn out.

There is time for the softball game. There is time to throw the frisbee. It is not a question of time; any student could have made the time if he or she wanted.

The question thus lies with student interest. It appears as if the students clearly did not desire to attend.

Is it lack of pride in the college? Is it lack of pride in a president who has done such a remarkable job of turning the college around in 10 months? Or is it apathy combined with ignorance of the day's historical event that kept student attendance so low.

Whatever the reason is, it is doubtful that it will be manifested in a simple lesson.

That this college, or any other institution, is made up of individuals is an elementary observation. It remains to be seen whether people will realize that it is also a community and must function as one if it is to survive.

Considering that presidential inaugurations are few and far between, it remains a mystery why so few students attended.

Form flowing to formlessness: In the strenuous exertion of mind and body there are precious moments—moments that you want to bottle and save. Such moments come while in the middle of a running stride. I actually feel the sweat burst from my brow and trickle down my face. The rarity of these moments—when my body knows my mind and my mind knows my body—are the pinacle of immediate sense perception.

Running—or jogging or walking, which ever you prefer—allows the mind to expand then gather from the senses a multitude of feelings: pain felt, sweat tasted and smelled, birds seen, deep heavy breathing heard. Other sensations come to mind: the cold air stinging the lung, rain and sweat running silently together, the wind holding the body still.

Fact is, infinite feelings can be captured in a runner's stride. They are there for the taking.

This spring has brought all sorts of runners out of the woodwork. Hardly an hour of the day goes by when I do not see someone loping around campus. Whether plodding or gracefully stretching, they move of their own volition for mind, body, or soul.

Many are up at the crack of dawn readying for the crush of the day—people, classes, work—with a peaceful run. Other pick late morning or afternoon; many find the twilight to be more inviting. Whatever the time, a runner usually will see or be seen with another runner.

Every runner has his own course, but most at Maryville eventually find themselves drawn to the College Woods. We should rejoice in that special acreage, and I think we all do at one time or another. I doubt that one of us leaves without visiting, partying, walking, or otherwise using its sudden solitude from the classroom or office.

Yet running in the College Woods is the supreme act of knowing it. In those moments, heightened by the body's efforts to maintain a running posture, the mind reaches inside out to perceive all.

In his poem "Corson's Inlet," A. R. Ammons speaks of the effect of walking on the shoreline. He says:

the walk liberating, I was released from forms, from the perpendiculars, straight lines, blocks, boxes, binds of thought into the hues, shadings, risings, flowing bends and blends of sight:

Such is the feeling while running in the College Woods. The dogwoods bloom in scattered white and pink shapes, the Morningside azaleas blur into vivid colors, the birds never stop their singing or their movement.

Millions of events: this,/ so that I make/ no form of/ formlessness," Ammons writes. The natural order of things is readily perceived, yet often stifled by our organizing, our ordering. Running can restore formlessness. Running is when the world is sensed by the mind and the body in an endless multitude of differences, each wholly new.

Ammons concludes his poem saying of the "looser wider forces:"

there is no finality of vision,
. . . I have perceived nothing completely,
. . . tomorrow a new walk is a new walk.

So it is with the runner.

Letters to the editor

I would like to take this opportunity to make a public statement regarding the happenings surrounding the Uncle Sam's Night. I would like to apologize to the student body, the faculty, and the administration for the consequences from this event that have been heaped upon Maryville College. My ignorance regarding the channels in which to classify a function using the Maryville College name has brought discredit to our school. The total summation of the individuals involved in planning, organizing, actualizing, and controlling this event is large and varied. As Senior Class President and spokesman for this group, I would like to offer suggestions along with our apologies.

These suggestions are as follows: (1) We as a group had no idea the effects of publicizing the Maryville College name on a club marque and in ON CAMPUS TODAY would have. We had taken preventive measures to not let this happen, but unclear verbal agreements and chaotic planning went right through these measures. We often do not see the reasons behind obtaining an official authorization for an event until after it has happened. Thus, for the best interest of the school we recommend that get-togethers using the Maryville College name should be cleared through appropriate offices. (2) Clearer guidelines established and set discipline procedures established; that these set discipline procedures be strict and go into effect promptly. (3) The whole veneration of this activity stemmed from the idea of "stimulation for unity and togetherness." We believe this points to a very basic fundamental behavior problem we (students, faculty, administration) have here at Maryville College. The problem is two fold: our behavioral bitching can be cured by changing the environment and it does not have to be Uncle Sam's, pot, alcohol, constant complaining; and, an awareness on the part of us students of how good we really have it. The vaccine is not the administration or the social committee. Environmental behavior change is the responsibility of each of us, the students. (4) That we recognize what a conscientious administration we have working for us. The administration was very much upset over this event . . . this is good.

If our past accomplishes the job of teaching us, our everyday wandering test us . . . and, hopefully, the future will reward us.

Steve Wright

The Highland Echo is the official newspaper of Maryville College. It will appear two more times this term, May 18 and 25. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall.

Letters to the Echo should be submitted to box 2820 Maryville College, Maryville, Tn. 37801.

All type for the Echo is typed by Kathy Lane of the Maryville College Print Shop. The Echo is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editors, staff, and/or the college administration.

aryville alumnus David Marston will speak at commencement.

Marston to speak here

David W. Marston, a 1964 graduate and member of the Board of Directors, is to speak at MC's 159th commencement May 29. The announcement was made to the Board during its spring meeting April 20-21 after the conferral of degrees on 129 seniors was authorized.

Marston, a former member of the Carter administration and former U.S. attorney from Philadelphia, was not present at the Board's spring meeting as he is currently campaigning for the gubernatorial nomination in Pennsylvania.

Student Union offers dividends

by Judy Corliss

"The college experience is not only classroom learning, but the students learning from each other, and from faculty in informal relationships."

These are the words of Jim Friedlob, the adviser and coordinator of the new Student Union. Presently it is located in the old infirmary building, but this could be subject to change.

Friedlob and some of the MC students have initiated action to bring a Student Union to this campus. They feel it will fill the void created by the lack of a social center

A task force has been formed consisting of Friedlob, Jane Richardson, Chaplain James Stewart, Neil McDade and Carol Hows. According to Mr. Friedlob, the administration and faculty realize that there's little to do on campus and that the school is losing students because of it.

The plan for the new Student Union is to provide a place for the students and other members of the campus to get together. Reading rooms, game rooms, and a television room are projected goals. The possibility of renting rooms to student organizations and committees at a minimum charge is also being considered.

An open house was held last Friday at the infirmary building to "let the students see that it's not a hole in the wall." Aside from the actual site of the Union, several questions remain to be answered.

Due to the Saga agreement, vending machines are the only vehicles for the sale of food if the snack bar on campus remains separate from the Union. However, Friedlob says that "ideally sometime in the future the two should be together." The problem is in finding the facilities and money to fund the project.

The question of alcohol will be posed to the ACC. The proposed plan calls for the Union to be considered in the same category as the dorm lounges.

The Union would be open from noon to 10 p.m. There would be someone in charge and present at all times. This role could be filled by head residents or student volunteers, according to Friedlob. It would have to be on a volunteer basis as no money is provided to pay the workers.

The idea of a social center has been discussed for many years. With its creation, commuter students would have the equivalent of a "hearthstone" on campus. A common complaint has been their isolation from campus life, and this is hoped to bring the "townies" and dorm residents together.

It is also pointed out that the dorm residents would benefit from the Union. The reading rooms would provide a quiet place and the game rooms new scenery outside of the dorm.

In the pamphlet, College Unions: Fifty Facts (1975), the purpose of a student union is stated: "The Union is the community center of the college, for all members of the college family—students, faculty, administration, alumni and guests. It is not just a building."

This is what the advocates of the proposed Student Union hope to convey to the campus community.

Melody and harmony abound in the park

by Bill Thomas

It is springtime again, and sweet music fills the air. During the week of May 15th the Maryville College Concert Choir and the Maryville College Community Orchestra will present their annual spring pops concerts in the Maryville Greenbelt Park. The two concerts are intended to appeal to all ages.

Under the direction of Miss Peggy Leatherwood, the orchestra will present its pops concert in the park on Monday, May 15, at 7 p.m. Members of the Blount County Girls Club and the Blount County Girls Group Home will perform a Maypole dance at 6:30.

The Maryville College Concert Choir, under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter, will present its spring pops program on Thursday, May 18, at 7 p.m. The choir will sing a selection of popular tunes; also they will perform several "sing along" songs with the audience.

In case of rain, the orchestra performance will be presented on Tuesday, May 16, at 7 p.m. in the Greenbelt Park. Should it rain on the 18th, the choir will perform instead in the Wilson Chapel on the Maryville College campus; the "rain-check" performance would also be at 7 p.m.

The directors have suggested that people pack a picnic supper to be eaten during the concerts. It has also been suggested that people bring their own lawn chairs and blankets for the performances.

Both of these Maryville College organizations have displayed considerable enthusiasm this year. It should come as no surprise to find their final performances of the year as exciting events.

Vespers terminated

The Worship and Religious Programs Committee recently decided to terminate Vespers, according to the Chaplain's Office.

The decision "reflects the fact that there has been very little participation in the service the last five weeks," the release said.

In the weeks ahead, the Committee will discuss whether or not to resume the Sunday evening service for the coming academic year. They invite suggestions from the community on the matter.

Round-an'-about

Biancos' show is open

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bianco opened a photography exhibit Monday, May 1, in the Fine Arts Center Gallery. It will run until May 14. All photographs in the show were taken during this year's interim to Greece. Mrs. Bianco is a member of the art faculty at MC.

Phonothon nets $

The fourth annual Maryville College Phonothon raised $25,000, its highest mark yet.

Thirty-eight students and faculty made 3,400 telephone calls soliciting gifts ranging from 1 to 1,000 dollars.

Development Director William H. Mooney expressed his appreciation to the telephone volunteers. "This was the best ever. We had the most volunteers, made the most calls, and solicited the largest gift total from the most alumni of any Phonothon."

Choir sells records

The concert choir is presently selling all past recordings for $2.00 or less. They are also taking advance orders for their 1978 record. Those interested should contact the fine art's main office.

Summer volunteer work

There are still a number of openings for students who would like to spend a summer in volunteer work somewhere between New York and California, Alaska and Guatemala. Community development, recreation, work with children, projects with old people, church work, school work, and many others describe the possibilities. If you are interested, contact the Chaplain's Office.

Parker attends convention

Dr. Russell D. Parker, associate professor of history at Maryville College, recently attended the combined annual convention of the American Association for Higher Education (AAHE) and the Association for Innovation in Higher Education (AIHE). The convention was held in Chicago, Ill.

Thinclads fourth in meet

MC Scots split a doubleheader last Monday against the Tusculum Pioneers. The Scots lost the first game after 8 innings of play 6—5, then came back with a strong 6—2 victory in the second game.

After the first inning of the first game the Scots led 5—0. Shortstop Jimmy Reese commented, "I thought we would have a field day." Several costly errors and a lack of offense caused the MC downfall.

Mike Boring pitched a four-hitter in the second game. Johnnie Walker, Dave Greenwald, Dave Osborne, Andy Limone, and Jimmy Reese lent strong offensive support. Reese hit a two-run homer in the 5th inning. Double plays and a good offense combined to spark another Scot victory.

Tempers flared during the second game, as fighting words were exchanged between teams. Hot tempers cooled off after seven innings of play, and Tusculum suffered a 6—2 loss.

The Scots' record now stands at 16—10, as they face 8 away games before their next home game against U. T. Knoxville, May 9th.

Scots split twin-bill

The Scot track team finished fourth in a field of seven at the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Conference meet last weekend at Austin Peay State University.

High hurdler Charles Brooks took a second place, while the 440 relay team of Steve Harrison, John Downs, Kendall Murphy, and Tommy Hunter finished second.

Ronnie Lasley threw the javelin for a third place finish. Jim Holland took third place in the high hurdles and Harrison the same in the shot put.

David Lipscomb, Carson-Newman, and Vanderbilt, previously rated in the university division of the TIAC, were the first three finishers in the meet.

Art workshops planned

Several art workshops will be held on campus during the next two weeks.

Off-loom weaving techniques, taught by Judy Gaston, will take place on May 8, 8 a.m.-12:30 in Fayerweather 206.

Rosa Kennedy will conduct a workshop on surface decoration on pottery May 11 in the FAC ceramic studio from 2:30-6:00 p.m.

Fayerweather 206 will be the site of two workshops to be held by Dana Alspaugh and Amy Smock. Spinning will be the subject on May 16, 7-9:30 p.m. On May 20 they will teach natural dyeing techniques starting at 9 a.m. and continuing until finished.

Fred Kramer boots one for the soccer club. Their record at press time is 4—3.

Vol. 63 No. 16 Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee May 18, 1978

The beginning of the "new era," as an eviction notice for the wings of Carnegie is served to Doc Shaffer and Gary Elrod by Chief of Security Mr. Hurst.

ROTC maneuvers in

Under an agreement recently signed by Dr. Wayne Anderson with the University of Tennessee-Knoxville, Army ROTC courses will be offered to Maryville College students beginning in the summer of 1978.

This agreement, known as a "cross-enrollment" program, will allow MC students to get academic credit for taking ROTC courses as electives at UT.

Any MC student who will be a junior or senior next year is eligible to participate in the program.

Those who sign up will attend a six-week camp this summer at Fort Knox, Ky. Following graduation, those students receiving a Reserve Commission will serve on active duty for two years and in a reserve status for an additional four years.

Students participating in the program will receive $100 per month for up to 20 months while in school. They will also receive approximately $475 for attending the summer camp.

John Klockentager, MC admissions director, has been appointed to assist in the coordination of ROTC activities at the College.

Council views social life

At the May 3 meeting of the ACC, Charlene Faglier, Social Activities Director, gave her final report, identifying major problems as lack of funds and sporadic student support.

Faglier offered these suggestions for improvement: 1) reorganizing the social committee into five areas (short courses, games, travel, movies, and entertainment); 2) improving publicity; 3) using the student center as a meeting place; 4) polling students for input; and 5) getting her replacement on the site early to "feel out" the situation.

Dean Richardson, representing the Community and Residential Life Committee, reported that most of the committee's energy has been devoted to the alcohol policy. They are presently occupied with outlining a policy concerning social events. Decisions about dormitory damage and visitation have been postponed until fall, 1978.

Introducing himself as the "Student Union Organization," James Frielob, counselor, proposed that for the remainder of the year the Student Union should serve as a lounge area. After much discussion it was decided that the Old Infirmary be designated on trial basis, as an area for informal drinking. This will be done under staff supervision. Hours on weekdays are from 6-10 p.m. Closing time on weekends will be at the discretion of those in charge, but shall not exceed midnight.

Co-chairman Lee Struble reported on the social activities referendum to which 225 students responded. Preference rankings were : 1) social committee, 2) intramurals, 3) Echo, 4) Chilhowean, 5) artist series, 6) Impressions, 7) debate. A follow-up questionnaire will inquire of students whether they would buy the Chilhowean if its cost is not included in regular fees.

Societies induct new members

Seven freshmen were inducted on May 10 into the Maryville College chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta, a national honor society for freshmen achieving a 3.5 or better grade point average.

The new initiates include Shelley Ballenger, Larry Bidwell, Lois Boney, Lawrence Durand, Dan Lawrence, Janet Sater, and David Widner. Glenda Brackin, a sophomore who started at Maryville winter term 1977, was also inducted.

Profs in seminars

Two Maryville College professors have opportunities for advanced study and research this summer.

Dr. Charlotte H. Beck, associate professor of English, has been awarded a $2,500 summer stipend by the National Endowment for the Humanities. She will participate in an eight-week seminar at Princeton University, Princeton, N. J.

The course is part of the Summer Seminars for College Teachers program. It will be taught by Dr. A. Walton Litz of Princeton's Department of English. During the seminar, the works of Ezra Pound, T. S. Eliot, Wallace Stevens, and William Carlos Williams will be studied in their relation to the larger American poetic tradition.

This is the second time Dr. Beck has participated in the Summer Seminars program. She studied at the University of California at Berkeley in the summer of 1975.

Mr. Tom Jones will also be taking part in a seminar this summer. This seminar is funded by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and is sponsored by the Southern Atlantic States Association for Asian and African Studies and the Appalachian Consortium.

The seminar will include a study of the causes of underdevelopment in the American South. The highlight of the seminar will be a tour of Senegal, Mali, Upper Volta, and the Ivory Coast.

The idea for the project grew from the belief that educators in the southern U.S. have the opportunity to increase student awareness of the problems of third-world countries through studying the development problems of their own region.

Round-an'-about

Student finances

Payment for student jobs will be made in two checks for May. The first set of checks will be ready on May 26. Time sheets for the first three weeks are due on May 22. Checks for the last week of May will be mailed to you at your home.

May 15 is the cut-off date for cashing checks in the Bookstore.

No emergency loans will be made except in an extreme situation and approved by Dean Richardson.

Ramsey gives recital

Senior voice major Julia Ramsey, from Cedarville, Ohio, will give her senior recital Saturday at 8:15 in the Fine Arts Music Hall.

Gilliland's junior show

Anne Gilliland's junior art show will be in Thaw Hall until the end of the school year. Anne is an art therapy major from Tullahoma, Tennessee. Her show is entitled "Land of Unlikeness", and features drawings, prints and weavings.

Gallery exhibits pictures

The Carbide Camera Club of Oak Ridge opened a photography exhibit in the Fine Arts Center Gallery Sunday May 14. The show will continue through May 26.

All entries were winners in the Club's annual salon. Judges for the contest included Michael Coster, art instructor at the Preparatory School.

Gallery hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Looking for a pup tent?

Dorm situation causes needless headaches

The handling of the room assignments over the past few weeks leaves much to be desired. To a certain extent, much of what has transpired has been unavoidable. This does not excuse, however, the indecision or lack of a coherent plan by the administration.

To those losing their rooms in Carnegie, which they may have had for several years, it is a final good-bye. To those in Pearsons who have enjoyed a sitting room, they will have to learn to do without. The microscopic rooms of Lloyd will now be occupied by two people. Many who have singles this year will have to do without next year.

One would hope that it is not by the college's or board's choice that this is happening. The school is in a financial squeeze and simply does not possess the funds to fix the fire hazard wings of Carnegie, or see fit to rebuild a dorm they do not expect to stand much longer.

Yet, the administration has known about this situation for more than the past few weeks. It is puzzling why they waited until the last minute to fumble around with a multiple choice group of solutions.

The students in Lloyd have been told several stories as to their rooming for next year.

Those in Pearsons have been playing musical chairs between floors, and those in Carnegie have bought pup tents.

It appears that the administration should have prepared better for this problem.

Numerous headaches of the past could have been avoided with a little foresight. True, it was an awkward situation, and certain problems and complaints are always expected. It is not being suggested that this predicament could have been solved to everyone's satisfaction, but that the over-all approach was handled in a sloppy manner. The careless and wanton attitude toward the students with which this was approached is inexcusable.

It is a shame that for many the past weeks have been a frantic and desperate search for rooms, taking place amid the disorganization of the responsible facet of the administration.

Winter time, the walls talk: Sure, spring has not been here long; and judging by the temperature last weekend you may wonder if it has been here at all, but let's leave spring and return to winter. Maryville winters have a way of making a mark, especially if the weather has been bad. In the slowness of that awful term we count our blessings and the days until spring.

Winter—as viewed from my window: sheets of snow, wet Maryville monsoon, cold and grey days—is a term that enables us to appreciate spring, summer, and fall. For this reason, you might say we need winter. It is often dreaded and can lead to introspections that shake the self and soul—we sort things out in the winter; we prepare for a spring cleaning of the mind.

That spring cleaning has passed now, and we are preparing for that spring cleaning of rooms. It is a physical thing, but for many it is a cleaning that will evoke memories of other events and times.

The rooms that are in the wings of Carnegie Hall are seeing their last spring cleaning, at least for awhile. They will be closed off, relegated to the status of warships in times of peace, that state-of-stuck-in-time called "in mothballs." Nothing can be done for the time being; the money just is not there to give the building its due or to make its occupants safe from the hazard of fire.

The rooms in Carnegie—forget the ramshackled appearance: a room is what you make it, how you get by—excluding those in Pearsons, are the only dormitory rooms on campus that have character. They are not like the other four rooms in the quad: match boxes stacked atop each other, beds bolted to cinder blocks, windows a narrow slit in one wall.

Every one talks about Carnegie's reputation. "It's the dorm on the other side of campus," one says as he points to this corner of campus. "They party a lot over there. Wreck the place, too." My first weekend was full of the fear I had been fed since freshman year. There, in 424, I was paranoid of the reputation, scared that the noise would drive me out of my head, afraid I would never get along with the guys who partied a lot.

That weekend I avoided the wing and my room. I was told there was to be a wing-ding and would I like to be a part of it? Yes, I would like to be apart. I fled to Sambo's and walked the streets with another until the wee hours of the night. Time, however, proved my feelings about Carnegie's reputation wrong—now I would not trade my room for any other. Oh, Carnegie has a reputation, but it is not what you might want it to be.

Carnegie is la grande hotel. It is a building of another time yet made for this time, also. If they ever tear it down, I hope I never know of it.

But the wings of Carnegie are being cut off, and that is tantamount to clipping the wings of a bird—it means that Carnegie will not soar as high next year. It has lost a precious part of its character. Its integrity is no longer intact. Its blood, people, will not circulate into the members that complete its being.

So next winter, when things are rough, and the rooms in the wings are quiet and envious of those in the hall full of life, the walls will talk to each other. But will they? Not really—they'll probably party or study all night, or dream of fond loves, or silently pass lonely time in the solitude of good friends.

Open Letter to MC Students

Housing on campus for the fall has been a major concern of students and administration these past weeks. We have had to make a number of changes in living space, but not as many as the rumors would have it, thank goodness! It is an unsettling feeling to know that changes will be made and yet not know what the changes will be.

After a number of false starts and revisions, the following items are FACTS:

(1) Carnegie will remain open on four floors, with the wings on 2nd, 3rd, and 4th floors closed.

(2) Pearsons Hall will continue to have women on 3rd floor and men on 2nd floor. Sitting rooms and triples will not be available.

(3) Private or single rooms will be available in Lloyd and Carnegie for Seniors only, unless space opens up after fall registration.

(4) First floor, west side rooms in Dorm I will be all men.

These changes are a result of a mandate from the Board of Directors to use space as efficiently as possible. The college year, 1978-1979, means a squeeze for all of us, perhaps in different ways, but a squeeze nevertheless. We feel confident that this cooperation from the

A night on the Left Bank

by Anne Gilliland

In the twenties and thirties, Paris's Left Bank attracted a variety of artists—painters, writers, and musicians. They included Pablo Picasso, Ernest Hemingway, and F. Scott Fitzgerald, but chief among them was Gertrude Stein—writer, patroness, and art collector.

Maryville College hopes to recreate this atmosphere with a poetry reading and art show entitled "Stein's Way: a Night on the Left Bank." Also that night, the second edition of this year's Impressions will be on sale for the first time.

Stein's Way will be held in Room 208 in Fayerweather Hall on Friday, May 19. The art show opening is at 7:30, with the poetry reading following at 8:15. Exhibitors are Keith Frederick; paintings, drawings and fabrics; Jim Stewart; photographs; and Rena Christofferson and Joel Flint, paintings. Readers will include Tim Rahn, Dr. Beck, Bonnie Holsinger, Keith Frederick, and Liza Howe.

Room 208, the Impressions office, has been cleaned and painted for the event. Says Keith Frederick, "The room itself will be a work of art." The art will be on exhibit until May 26, with gallery hours from 10:30 to 11:00 a.m. and 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. on weekdays. It will be open from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. on weekends.

"Paris in the thirties attracted and encouraged art—all kinds of art. We hope to do the same thing here. For some of us this is the culmination of three or four years of work here," stated Tim Rahn.

Impressions will sell for fifty cents a copy. Although the magazine has been published since 1975, this is the first year there have been two editions of Impressions. This one will be two-color, and will contain poems, short stories, line drawings, prints, and photographs.

Impressions has grown from a tabloid supplement to the Highland Echo to a literary magazine with an established format. Dr. Beck has been its advisor three of its four years. Tim Rahn has been editor or co-editor three of those years.

Stein's Way will have in the words of Rena Christofferson, "A touch of class, a touch of art, a touch of the poet."

FAC releases awards

The results of the Fine Arts Competition were announced Thursday, May 11. The final confirmation of the awards will depend on the winners' grade point averages at the end of this term.

The rising seniors receiving awards are Joel Flint in art, Martha Cain for piano, and Marion Hummel in voice.

Out of the rising junior class are Anne Harris, the art recipient; Judy Corliss and Judy Fulks in voice; and Mary McPhee for flute.

The award winners from the rising sophomore class are Laura Ross in art, Judy Grahl in piano, Bryan Ashley in organ, and Lesa Payne and Peggy Stewart, both in voice.

The Fine Arts Competition has been held since the opening of the FAC in 1951. The awards are stipends which are applied to next year's tuition.

Track

MC track team brought home their first trophy in four years from the Center Invitational meet, where they placed 3rd out of 8 teams. "That was the highlight of our season," long distance runner Joe Whitehead exclaimed. The team also placed in the T.I.A.C. meet at Austin Peay.

The track team consisted of 20 people, four of whom were seniors. They had 9 scheduled meets, but 4 were cancelled because of poor weather.

Coach Taylor commented, "The second half of the season we performed a lot better. We got in shape and got over injuries."

Four members of the team will participate in the Tom Black Track Classic at U.T.K. on May 19th and 20th. They are Joe Whitehead, Tommy Hunter, Steve Harrison, and Tony Scalise. Here their main goal will be to break school records and to qualify for national competition.

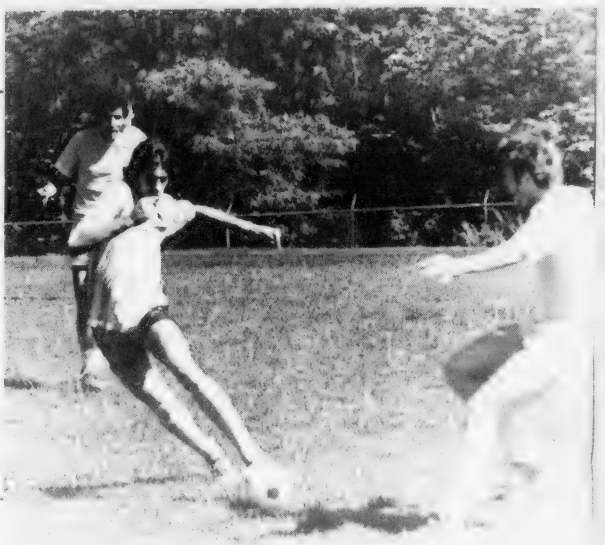
Final box score



MC Scots finished their baseball season last Wednesday with a split doubleheader against Emory and Henry. The Scots won the first game 3—1. The second game, played primarily by the Scots' second team, was lost 14—3.

"We played good defensive ball in the first game," Assistant Coach Stinnett commented. With playoffs out of the question, the second string started the last game of the season. Costly errors and a poor offense caused the MC downfall.

Barry Whitehead pitched the first game. Pitchers for the second game included Mike Boring, Larry Sheeley, Doug Tutin, and Barry Mathis.

MC Scots' coaches are expecting a better season next year, with 23 out of 25 players returning. Danny Thomas and Kenny Myers are two seniors who will not be back.

The Scots concluded their 1978 season with a 19—14 record.

Junior Jim Antonelli moves on the offense during the soccer game against UT last Wednesday.

Sports scene active on campus

Soccer club

MC soccer team has so far accumulated a 4—5 record, with a predicted 500 winning season. Captains John Mallozzi and Will Way, along with the new coach Rick "Bear" Ziegler, proved a great asset to the team.

Poor weather cancelled many practices. Coach Ziegler stated, "The lack of practice did not enable the team to be as sharp as they could have been."

Most improved players for the squad are Charlie McGuire, Sr., Tim Handler, Jr., and Phil Schemp, Freshman. The Coach further commented that Alan Makar was a very efficient goalie. "His presence made a difference in the club," Ziegler declared. Makar will not be returning to the squad next year, so Steve Danna will start. "The success of the team depends to a great extent on how well he does," Coach Ziegler explained.

The soccer team is looking forward to another winning season next year. All interested persons are invited to come out and join the club.

Men's tennis

MC men's tennis team closed their season this year with a 2—8 record. Coach Ricky Byrd declared. "We were a really young team." Out of eight top players, only two seniors, Scott Garren and Keith Henderson, started. The other two seniors, Joe Rigell and Kevin Lynch, played doubles primarily.

Steve Arnold had the best overall record with 5 wins and 3 losses. "He did an exceptional job," Coach Byrd recalled. The two most improved players, according to their coach, were Keith Henderson and Kevin Lynch. "Even though Kevin did not work his way up the ladder, he has greatly improved since last year," Coach Byrd observed.

More team balance and experience should provide an exciting season for 1979.

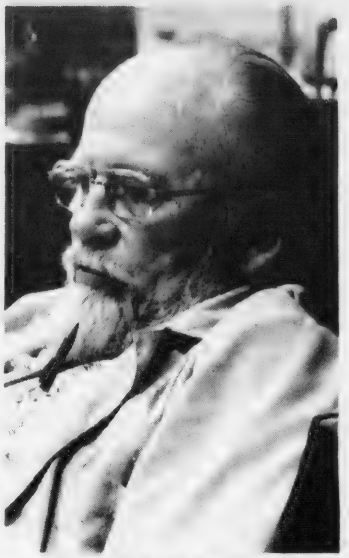
Shields to turn over new leaf

by Judy Corliss

On April 8, 1913, Arthur Randolph Shields was born in Cades Cove, Tn. Today he serves as a professor and chairman of the biology department. This is his last year to serve in this capacity. He has come a long way from the clearing in the Great Smoky Mountains.

Dr. Shields received an A.B. from Maryville College in 1934 and took the M.S. and Ph.D. at the University of Tennessee. He has served as an instructor at UT, Emory & Henry College in Virginia, and Roanoke College. On Sept. 1, 1962, he came to MC.

When asked about his plans for the future, Dr. Shields mentioned that his summers are taken care of because of his position as director of the Field Biology and Research Center of the Mid-Appalachia College Council, Inc. (MACCI) located on Norris Lake. He has worked with MACCI since its beginning 11 years ago.



Next academic year Dr. Shields will still be available on campus to teach a course or two if he is needed. He will maintain an office in Sutton Science Center. During 1978-79 he will also be tying up loose ends in research for his second book on Cades Cove. It will be released next year and is entitled The Families of Cades Cove.

Dr. Shields and his wife, Arta Grace Hope Shields, plan to spend more time traveling in the future. They hope to visit friends and relatives on the West Coast. He also mentioned southwest Arizona: "I've become very attached to it because of the trips we've made during Interim. We want to go when we can leisurely enjoy it."

His hobbies include photography and a great interest in the entire scope of Southern Appalachian history and culture. He is a member of New Providence Presbyterian Church and resides in Maryville.

Dr. Shields has worked as an elementary school teacher, a TVA aquatic biologist, a fisheries biologist, and has served as a park ranger and naturalist in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. He is an accomplished writer, contributing to many journals and publishing his first book in 1977.

His already diversified interests will merely be supplemented in the coming years.

Seniors seek horizons and highways

by Bob Bishop

"On our campus today are . . . some students who will soon leave the campus, perhaps never to return. These same students are joining in a frantic chorus these days, appalled by the approach of the days when they shall be thrust forth into the cold, cruel world, and are singing, 'Where do we go from here?' "

The above quote is as apropos now as it was in 1929, when it appeared in the Echo, written by editor Sarah Moore. We would like to continue the article, 49 years later, by investigating three seniors of the class of 1978, discovering their plans for the future in the "cold, cruel world."

Dana Alspaugh is an Art Education major from Mobile, Alabama. Her main event this summer will be her July 8 marriage to Charlie Blair, a 1977 graduate of Maryville College who has been working in Gatlinburg for the past year. She plans to spend the month of June at home making last minute arrangements for the wedding.

Dana and Charlie will live in Gatlinburg for about a year where she will apply for a teaching job. She is also considering graduate school in Art Education. Their long range goal is to eventually move to New Orleans and open a pottery and weaving shop.

From her years at Maryville, Dana feels that she has, "learned a lot about people . . . it is easier to form relationships. Though I've enjoyed it immensely, it's time for something new . . . time to get out."

Greg Wiberley is a Biology major from Andersonville, Tennessee. His immediate concern for the summer is to buy a car.

Next fall, Greg will enter Memphis Med School in his quest to become a doctor. At the present time, he is the only one from his

ACC concludes year

The final ACC meeting of the year heard the annual reports from various committees.

Martha Hess reported that the Teacher Education Council has spent the 1977-78 year in a self-study of the MC teacher education program. In March, 1979, a team from NCATE will be on campus to evaluate the study.

Dr. Jerry Waters of the Academic Standards Committee said the committee is interested in establishing a Phi Beta Kappa chapter on campus. It was also brought up that all awards and prizes should be listed in the commencement literature. Due to the difficulties in deadlines with this project, it will not be activated until next fall.

Speaking for the Ways and Means committee, Tim Rahn recommended ACC approval of a Political Science Club which would unify students interested in political science. The club would 1) recruit guest speakers to lecture on aspects of politics, 2) cooperate with the CPP office in placing students interested in political science jobs, 3) work toward a chapter of a national political science honor society. Rahn also recommended approval of "Guidelines for Forming Campus Organizations." The council approved the guidelines, realizing that flexibility will be necessary to meet special needs.

Concerning the Student Union Organization, James Freidlob reported that there has been no abuse of drinking and requested an extension on the Student Union's operation. This was approved until the end of the term, pending supervision arrangements and guidelines.

Regarding the Chilhowean, it was decided to allocate $4000 of the present $8000 outlay toward next year's production. The Chilhowean will be paperbound in an effort to expand the Social Committee's budget.

Teacher of the year

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, associate professor of English, has been named Maryville College's Most Outstanding Teacher for 1977-78. Her selection was announced at Wednesday's faculty luncheon in Proffitt dining hall.

Runners-up for the award were Dr. Robert J. Naylor, assistant professor and chairman of the Department of Chemistry, and Harry L. Howard, instructor in politocial science.

The winners were selected by decision of the student members of the Instructional Program Committee, based on nominations made by members of the senior class. Seniors were asked to take into account the teacher's ability to motivate learning, sensitivity to material, knowledge of subject matter, and involvement in student affairs.

Dr. Fowler had been a runner-up in the voting for the past two years, and Dr. Naylor was also a runner-up last year.

She exits office... ... enters classroom

Dr. Blair: A woman for all seasons

Perhaps when walking late at night you've seen her silently riding her bicycle through the College grounds. Or maybe you saw her at the concert in the park, sitting on the ground as if she had been transplanted from San Francisco and the 1960's. Or working late in her office long after the others have gone home. Whatever she is doing, or wherever she is, Dr. Carolyn Blair is a familiar face on the campus. She is a teacher, administrator, and student, all in one.

It is with great reluctance that the college community will see her leave the office of Academic Vice President on June 30, 1978. For those of us who have experienced the open door policy of her office, it is like losing an invaluable comrade. But before we splatter our maudlin emotions against the wall, let's remember that Dr. Blair will rejoin the ranks of full-time teachers next fall. She is returning to the profession she loves. Let's face it, Shakespeare conquers all.

Dr. Blair has been a member of the faculty since 1948, and dean of the college since 1972. In 1977, her title was changed to Academic Vice President and Dean of the College. She is a vital part of this institution and will continue to be so.

President Anderson's "new era" will not be easy. The spirit of the college must be turned into productive work if any realistic results are to be expected. It has been the Dr. Blairs of the past who have accomplished such transitions and have taken Maryville College through the many "new eras" it has encountered.

A hearty thank-you to Dr. Blair seems melodramatic, if not completely inadequate. Her service and sacrifices have been, and are, immeasurable.

The administration's loss, however, is the English department's gain. By immersing herself in the academic realm, she will add her experience and wide range of knowledge to the classroom scene. She will continue to support this college and to contribute to its rich heritage.

Anderson, Lamar, Lloyd, Blair, the list continues to grow.

the compleat reporter

by Tim Rahn

Lesson plans, lessons planned, lessons unplanned: The other day I walked into a classroom. It was empty and at that moment I was quite sure that the presence of a million could not have filled it. Then I was struck by some simple facts: that I had truly enjoyed the academic experience, that a tremendous effort went into that experience, and finally, that the classroom learning was very little of the total learning these last four years.

After four years of the gamut of emotions, I find myself full and empty. Maryville College has done that to me—and it is an experience I would not be afraid to attempt again. No matter how trite it may sound, despite all the bad, I would not hesitate to do it all again.

What feelings and emotions! I can remember walking to Gilberts my first term as a Humanities assistant scared out of my wits at the possibility of the KKK swooping down on me for preaching "radical ideas." In other ways I was scared of the students and faculty at the school—often a commanding presence humbles to withering. I have had the low feeling most have here at Maryville, the searching that sends us out looking for the better place. Then there is the elation that comes after an eight page paper or the completion of the first term of Independent Studies.

They all run together now, as I am sure my Maryville life will blur into one moment Monday morning. It will be a life in the day for all seniors, May 28, 1978. Everything about this place will culminate in commencement. A day in the life . . . now that is an interesting theory. Imagine all your perceptions in one day and multiply the possibilities by the number of roads each feeling can take. A day could become a life. While it isn't possible, reaching for it is, and always will be and really that is the most important thing I have been taught here.

The fullness of life—something both in and beyond the world of the classroom. Enough of the philosophy—really every catch phrase is a dime a dozen.

What am I doing in the Echo office writing this, just to find it tomorrow morning in the trash box unfolded? After all, I have history and Shakespeare to complete or I'll be here a full year beyond when I need be. I guess it is that the two things that stand in my memory about Maryville deserve preservation in these lines: my publications experience and most importantly the experience of people.

The former I hope speaks for itself—besides I hate personal drippy writing—the latter, though, puts me back in the gamut of emotions—the faces we've been, to paraphrase Jim Croce. What I have learned from my teachers has not been what they know—at least not primarily—rather it has been what they are, what they have been to me. What I treasure most about my friends is what they have freely given me: themselves. I hope that somewhere along the way I have repaid these people.

So we come and we leave—all of life seems to be one big coming and going. But why do we leave Maryville? The poet Mark Strand once said that he "moved to keep things whole." In a way, this is why seniors leave. There are other reasons, but mainly because there is a world "out there," a miniature of this one, where many of us have lived for four years. We need to take our learning and reach for the world's beauty, make what is wrong right, and finally, make it our conviction—and it is a God awful one—to live.

Round-an'-about

Students attend law school

Bill Brewer, Bruce Hill, and Jim Dewhirst have been accepted at the University of Tennessee Law School. Rose Wing will attend the Woodrow Wilson Law School in Atlanta.

Pool opens June 12

The pool is closed until the beginning of the first session of summer school on June 12.

Golf tournament

MC faculty and staff defeated the students in a golf tournament. The procedure decided upon by the players was Match Play.

Joe Savory and Billy Henry tied for a split lead with a score of 77.

Jack Turregano and Rick Byrd tested their skills. Coach Byrd won with a 6—5 and a score of 78.

John Klockentager defeated Pete Gardzina 4—3, and Dr. Wayne Anderson beat Coach David Held one up.

The students feel they can adequately defeat the staff, so a re-match is being scheduled.

Editors Chosen

Rising seniors Kathy Dunmire and Pam McCroskey have been chosen editors of the 1978 Impressions and Chilhowean respectively.

Dunmire, who has an individualized major in public service, is from Hollywood, Florida. She has served on the staff of Impressions for two years, the last as assistant editor.

McCroskey, a history major from Maryville, has had considerable experience on the staffs of yearbooks. She assisted Adrienne Bennet in the production of the 1978 Chilhowean and during interim acted in Bennet's place.

ACS elects

Newly elected officers for 1978-79 of MC's Student Affiliates Chapter of the American Chemical Society are Elaine Dorward, president; Chris Rigell, vice-president; Kathy Whitt, secretary; and Randy Watson, treasurer.

Playmakers are set

by Cindy White

One night during orientation week last fall, freshmen were entertained by a group called the Playmakers. Their repertoire consisted of songs and sketches from various plays.

The Playmakers is a non-profit group that aims to provide a wide variety of acting experience for people who are interested in theater. (Membership is not limited to theater majors.) They emphasize versatility in the material they perform as well as in the location of their performances. The group also considers itself as a satellite for the Maryville College Theatre. They hope to help generate a greater community interest in the college's major productions.

The Playmakers is funded by profits from productions that are held in the M.C. Experimental Theater. They have approached the college in reference to possible funds for costumes, but are sensitive to the school's serious financial straits.

Membership in the group is restricted to 10 students: 5 males and 5 females. Present Playmakers choose the new members on the basis of talent, dependability, and adaptability. Auditions for next year's Playmakers have already been held. The 1978-1979 Playmakers are: John Morton, Tim Stuart, Ed Herbert, Allen Evitts, Bill Thomas, Ruth Cartlidge, Judy Fulks, Linda Wiley, Lois Boney, and Peggy Stewart. Sharon Crane is the group's advisor.

The group is drawing up a charter that will give it A.C.C. recognition.

Kramer receives award

Dr. George A. Kramer, retired MC dean of student relations, has been awarded an honorary lifetime membership in the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO). This award is in recognition of his 24 years of service to that organization.

Dr. Kramer was one of three AACRAO members honored this year. The honorary citations were presented at the annual meeting banquet in Miami Beach, Fla., on April 20.

The citation recognized Kramer for his contributions to Maryville College and Rutgers University. He was affiliated with Rutgers from 1948-72. Kramer was also hailed for his key leadership roles with the College Entrance Examination Board and the Middle States Association of Collegiate Registrars and Officers of Admissions. Dr. Kramer has also been active in other professional and community events.

AACRAO is a national organization comprised of representatives of more than 1,800 four-year colleges and universities. At this year's six-day conference there were approximately 2,300 people.

Sports world winding down

Basketball

The MC basketball team will welcome the arrival of Rodney Nelson next year. Nelson, 6'-2", will be transferring to Maryville from Hiwassee Jr. College in Madisonville, Tennessee.

Assistant Basketball Coach Rick Byrd commented, "I think we're really lucky to get him, because I think he's a first-class player."

As a graduate from Young High School in Knoxville, Nelson was an all-state player averaging 24 points a game. The past year, Nelson played as a 6th man for Hiwassee and averaged 5 assists.

"It's really a big plus for our basketball program," Coach Byrd stated.

MC will also be anxiously awaiting the arrival of Jim Yates, a 6-foot wing from Ocala, Florida.

Women's tennis

MC Lady Scots Tennis team concluded their season with a 3—3 record.

Holly Eckert had the best individual record, 4—2, and was awarded the most valuable player award at the 1978 Sports Banquet.

Team coach Rick Byrd predicted an excellent season for the girls next year "with everyone returning but Kay Munn." He went on to say, "They're a young team with a lot of potential."

Intramurals

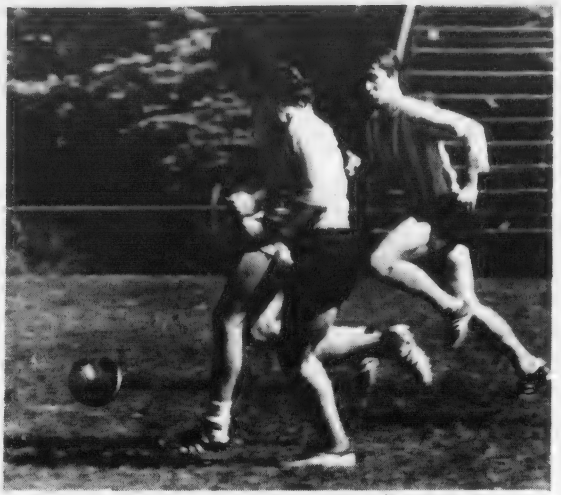
MC Intramurals were a big success this year. Careful planning by manager Evie Wills and assistant managers Wade Edmond and Lawrence Kennedy and the experienced supervision of Sharon Brown contributed greatly to the improved program.

In the past, the intramurals were run by the Women's M Club, but this year the program was taken into the students' hands. One of the main goals of the managers was to create a larger intramural program to include more students.

Scheduling games, keeping up the statistics, and setting up tournaments were only part of the work for the managers.

This spring Co-Ed softball was introduced for the first time to the MC campus. Manager Evie Wills established the program and predicted it will gain popularity next year. "That is a program I would like to see increased," Ms. Wills said, "A lot of people ple enjoy this sport, and the fact it's co-ed can only be an asset."

Intramurals hold much excitement for the Maryville College campus and will prove to be just as enjoyable next year.



Soccer club

MC Soccer Club finished the season with a sound victory over Oak Ridge, 2—1.

Team Captain Will Way scored both of the goals for the Scots.

At the end of the first half, there was no score. "Both teams played really well," full-back Gary Elrod said. "The second half is when Maryville got the breaks it needed," he continued.

Oak Ridge scored first, but the Scots' powerful offense combined to chalk up another victory.

The soccer club finished their season with a respectable 6—6 record.

class to be accepted at a med school.

Greg says, "I like Maryville College. It's a great place for science. I'll miss all my friends here, but realize that it is time to move on. I am looking forward to the excitement of med school."

Greg Rogers attended the University of Illinois for one year before engaging in his three years at Maryville. He is an Art Education major from Monticello, Illinois.

Immediately following graduation, he will return to Illinois for a month where he will teach art to high school students. In July, Greg will leave the U.S. for an 80-day trip around the world. (Greg insists, "It's cheaper that way.") His travels will include Montreal, France, India, Japan, Hong Kong, Tahiti and Hawaii. He hopes to stay with friends or relatives in most of the countries.

A possible job as a Commercial Layout Designer with Delta Airlines awaits him when he returns. Greg is also applying for teaching jobs in Australia. He hopes someday to own a cattle ranch in that country.

Speaking of Maryville College, he states, "It was good to come here. I grew a great deal, not only education-wise, but as a person. I am more independent now. It has been a good school . . . but it's time for me to move on. While you're young, go for it."

The Playmakers gave an excellent performance for the finale of orientation week.

Freshmen arrive at MC

by Gerry Reynolds

Maryville College brought together the class of 1982 from all sections of the United States and some foreign countries in Freshman Orientation held on the Maryville College campus September 5-11.

Ten study groups comprised of incoming freshmen and headed by members of the Maryville College faculty organized on the first evening of orientation. Orientation week was sparked by Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler, with the faculty members donating their time. The purpose of the study groups was to acquaint the freshmen with the campus and the history of the college.

Points were awarded to study groups on the basis of participation in the scheduled activities. The study group receiving the highest total points at the end of orientation would be guests of the participating faculty members at a steak dinner at the House-in-the-woods September 15. An anonymous donor provided the steak dinner rather than the study group leaders themselves.

Group VIII, headed by Dr. Lewis, accumulated the greatest number of points by winning the ping-pong tournament, participating in the frisbee and horseshoe throwing contests, and placing second in the backgammon tournament. Group V won the swim meet and placed first in the tennis and backgammon competition. They placed second in the volleyball tournament with a total of twenty-two points. Group VI won the volleyball competition with twenty-three points.

Perkins, Mangus assume positions

The beginning of any new school year promises the addition of several new faces on campus. This year, however, two of these faces belong not to students but to our new academic vice President and new dean of students.

A native of Columbus, GA, Dr. C. Alfred Perkins was named as MC's academic vice president by MC President Wayne Anderson on July 1, 1978, filling a position vacated by the resignation of Dr. Carolyn Blair. Dr. Blair has returned to full-time teaching in the department of English.

Associate professor in history and political science at Upsala College in East Orange, NJ, at the time of his selection, Dr. Perkins also had served as dean and vice president at Upsala for 5 years. He was also acting dean of students and acting chairperson of the department of history and political science.

Dr. Perkins graduated from Mercer University with a major in mathematics and minors in physics and religion. He received his master's and doctoral degrees in European history from Harvard University.

He and his wife Barbara reside in Maryville.

MC's new dean of students is Dr. Larry L. Mangus, who joined the staff August 28, 1978.

Dr. Mangus graduated from Ohio University in 1963 with a major in history education. Two years later he earned his master's

The Tremont predicament: here today, gone tomorrow?

Ed. note: This is the first of a two-part article exploring the past and future of Tremont Environmental Education Center.

by Bill Thomas

The future of Tremont Environmental Education Center will be determined September 23 at a meeting among college, Park Service and local school officials, according to Dr. Tom DeVaney, director of Tremont.

A spokesman for the National Park Service noted that dormitories for the center, located in Townsend, TN, were condemned this summer because of their deteriorated condition. The future use of Tremont by Maryville College is as yet undetermined.

Dr. DeVaney stated that in 1964 the Tremont area was developed by the U. S. Government under President Johnson's Job Corps Program designed to train inner-city youth in a vocation. At this time the government insisted that the program be taken up with the utmost urgency to combat further unemployemnt within America's cities.

Temporary buildings with a life expectancy of five to seven years were installed. In 1969 the Job Corps program was abandoned because the Tremont site offered little room for expansion and costs per person were too high.

Maryville College obtained a special use permit from the National Park Service in 1969. The permit enabled the college to operate an Environmental Education Center in place of the abandoned Job Corps facility.

M.C. made the Center available to elementary and secondary groups throughout the school year on a week or weekend basis. A full staff was hired with the intent of guiding visiting students and teachers to become more aware of ecology and conservation.

From 1969 to 1978 over 65,000 school children actively participated in the Tremont program. MC students interested in ecology and the sciences have used the center as a primary resource. Over 95% of the teachers involved in the program felt that it was a valuable experience.

One child recently summed up her experience, "I learned that if people would take care of things, other people could enjoy it."

A five-year special use permit was granted to MC in 1970, and a new five-year special use permit is in effect until 1980.

Dr. DeVaney said, "The current permit is in effect only if MC operates an Environmental Education program at Tremont through 1980." This means that MC could lose the use of Tremont.

Dr. Shields noted that there is no practical way the college can operate an Environmental Education Center in the deteriorated facilities of present-day Tremont.

A master plan for the construction of a permanent Environmental Education Center is currently under consideration by MC and National Park officials. A public hearing will evaluate the plan before it is sent to Congress for approval late this fall. Construction for the new center will begin after Congressional approval, and it will last approximately three years.

Maryville College hopes to be operating the only permanent Environmental Education Center in the U.S. National Park system by 1981. Whether or not MC can retain the right to use Tremont in 1981 remains a question unanswered.

Class of 1902, where are you?

Off with his head, said the Queen...

August 27, and the endless summer is sailing its final days. The season's heat slowly begins to fade as it blends with the musty warm days of a fresh autumn. The seniors of last spring's commencement are gone, and the wise ones know they will never return. Their allotted time has come to pass, and regardless of their struggle time steadily plods ahead. The noonday sun has begun to sink . . . . . etc., etc.

Amidst such pessimistic garble is the beginning of a new fall.

Garble? A convenient word to explain the disorder of life. Effective in describing situations one simply does not understand. "Garble," by the way, was taught to me by an ex-senior. (Proof that learning does occur in lower forms of life.)

Fall. What an odd time for a beginning. Yet, it is only sensible as the seniors leave in spring.

"Whoa," said the prophet, "I think there's a lesson here." Let me try to explain without too much garble.

In perspective, all things have their time. A Biblical lesson, difficult if not impossible to grasp and follow. The incoming freshmen are relinquishing 18 years of another life, and have signed up for a ride they will never forget. It is appropriate they begin in the fall, as they are also concluding another phase of their life simultaneously.

The seniors, on the other hand, begin life anew when they leave this institution. They belong here in the spring, their minds are forging ahead beyond ivory towers.

Obviously, both are going through difficult times, leading two lives at once. In between those glorious years are juniors and sophomores. Simple years of insanity.

I warn you, don't dwell too long on this topic. It is depressing when one realizes that this has been going on here for 159 years. Maryville College might say you're a name, not a number, but father time says you're merely a number . . . . . nothing else. Look at the sidewalks beneath your feet; the class of 1902, the class of '04, of '10, ... they speak for themselves.

And so the new year is upon us. New faces, new joys and sorrows, and the same old headaches. When it concludes, forever finis, only memories will remain. Freshmen will be sophomores, sophomores will be juniors, juniors will be seniors and seniors will give their ultimate valediction to youth. Many faculty will disappear and the administration will continue its massive turnover, searching for stability which will only come with change . . . . . .

The lesson here is obvious, painfully simple. It is either good or bad. One either accepts or rejects the painted picture of reality which clothes our existence. Your choice determines your destiny. Your fate is already known.

Garble you say? Of course it is.

Isn't it?

Listen to my story, though, I haven't told it all.

Unto my heart an air that kills
From yon far country blows,
What are those blue remembered hills,
What spires, what farms are those?

That is the land of lost content,
I see it shining plain,
The happy highways where I went
And cannot come again.

Coach Steve Fickert

Scotties' new master

by Judy Corliss

The leaves are turning from the summer greens to the reds and golds of autumn. The shorts and T-shirts are being replaced by jeans and pullovers. It's September and football season is just around the corner.

Joining the growing number of unfamiliar faces in the faculty and administration is the figure of Steve Fickert. Maryville College has a new football coach.

The Echo was curious about this new addition to the campus. In an interview with the new coach, several insights into his personality were revealed.

When asked how he and his family had adjusted to the small-town atmosphere of Maryville, Coach Fickert replied, "We really like it. It is a good place to raise a family." He was also impressed with the college atmosphere, stating that it was a "super academic institution with great possibilities."

Coach Fickert plans to stress the importance of class attendance to his players. He feels that education is number one and athletics is number two. There is a plan to have periodic checks on the players' class attendance and their grades this first year.

Steve Fickert, who assumed the duties of head football coach on June 19, 1978, holds the B.S. and M.S. degrees in physical education and health. He attended Miami University (Ohio) then transferred to Butler University. There he served as team captain and was named the outstanding player at Butler in 1972.

He has contributed to the football programs of Wabash and Albion Colleges. Both of these schools were in the Division III national playoffs.

While he stressed the academic standpoint of MC, Coach Fickert also mentioned that one must be realistic about it. He said that there were a number of men here who thought of football being the more important area of college life. When that is the case, he feels that it should be remembered that a liberal arts education is one that is based on a diversity of experiences.

When the conversation turns to football here at MC, Coach Fickert relies on PMA (positive mental attitude). Despite the lack of a freshman recruitment program last year, he has maintained an optimistic outlook on the coming season.

"Of all the places that I've coached or played at, I've never been involved with young men who have enjoyed playing as much as these men."

In the past the recruitment has centered on high school players in Florida and New Jersey. Coach Fickert has begun a recruitment program for next year which involves the East Tennessee high schools.

The MC athletic staff will contact the high school coaches and attend area games. The ultimate goal will be to recruit at least one player from each high school in the area.

The new coach hopes to eliminate the high number of players who either drop out or transfer because of homesickness or dislike of the area.

Over all, Steve Fickert plans to mesh his own ideas into the already existing athletic program. He says, "We want a program that works within the framework of Maryville College."

Coaching staff enlarged

Mike O'Brien, an offensive-line coach, and John Shannon, a defensive-secondary coach, have recently joined the Maryville College football staff. O'Brien will also serve as head wrestling coach.

In addition, assistant basketball coach Rick Byrd has been named head basketball coach this year. Coach Henry and Coach Fickert are both enthusiastic over the changes.

O'Brien received his B.S. and M.A. in Health and Physical Education from Tennessee Tech, where he also coached offensive line. He then went on to coach at Gardner-Webb College in North Carolina. His responsibilities at both schools included scouting, recruiting, and off-season weight lifting. Coach Henry is certain that these assets will make O'Brien valuable to MC's football and wrestling programs.

Shannon comes to the Fighting Scots after serving on the staff at Western Kentucky University, where he coached the tight ends and defensive secondary. Prior to WKU, he served as an assistant coach at Charleston High School, Charleston, Illinois. A native of Bowling Green, Kentucky, Shannon received his B.S. in Physical Education from Eastern Illinois University, where he played offensive halfback. He went on to earn his M.A. in Education while at Western Kentucky.

Rick Byrd officially joined the MC staff in September 1977 as assistant basketball coach, head tennis coach, and physical education teacher. Prior to that he had served as a part-time coach. Coach Henry says of him, "Rick has been a loyal assistant for two years and is very deserving to assume the head basketball coaching position. He is one of the hardest working, most dedicated and enthusiastic young men I know."

Byrd received his B.S. and M.A. in Physical Education from UT, where he played on the junior varsity basketball squad and served as an assistant coach.

When asked about his plans, Byrd said he is working toward the goal of making Maryville a national contender in NCAA Division III basketball. In line with that, he has scheduled sixteen games against Division III opponents for the 1978-79 season.

Byrd worked as organizer, originator, and co-director of the Ernie Grunfeld basketball camp held at Maryville this summer.

SATs continue drop

(CPS)—Two-thirds of the college freshmen this year are high school seniors who took the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) last year. The nationwide test results have just been released. The SAT-eye view of freshmen reveals, among other things, that:

They aren't any smarter, but not much dumber.

Their parents are making more money but not giving it to them.

Girls start out smarter than boys, but get dumber.

Academically, the class of '82 set a record. For the first time in 10 years, the

Levi fills pockets

Maryville College has been awarded a $17,250 grant by the Levi Strauss Foundation. It will be used to establish an office of community education and service under a full-time director, Ms. S. M. Atchley.

Her responsibilities, as outlined by Dr. Anderson, will include the College's continuing education program as well as analyzing local educational needs and developing programs to serve all age groups in the area.

In making the announcement, Dr. Anderson said, "This grant will permit us to build on the foundation established by our continuing education program which began in 1973. Beyond that, it will allow us to identify new ways in which we can better meet the needs of area residents who are so helpful to the College."

Some possibilities for the new program will include credit and non-credit courses, summer workshops, and seminars for employees of local business firms as well as interested individuals. Housewives who wish to continue their education will receive special attention.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor,

The commuters of M.C. feel that they are being discriminated against. As each one goes to the Student Services Office to purchase his parking sticker, he is told that he only can have lot No. 2 or No. 6—the only ones that are available to students that are unpaved and uncared for.

Last year a committee of commuters were promised that these lots could be paved, but instead of paving a load of gravel was put down. In certain sections of lot No. 6, there is no gravel at all. This leads to wading through mud to get into your car.

We feel that with the cost of the parking stickers each year, something must be done to resolve this discrimination.

College's coffers collect cash

A gift of $1 million from anonymous donors has been promised Maryville College before the end of the 1978 calendar year. The announcement came June 16 from President Wayne Anderson. "The donors expressed great satisfaction at being able to support a college which provides the unique kind of education that Maryville College offers to young people," Dr. Anderson said.

The gift is the largest single contribution in the College's history. "It comes in a magnitude and at a time which will make a great difference to Maryville College," Dr. Anderson added.

The gift will be added to the College's endowment with the annual income from the investment to help underwrite faculty salaries and to aid to deserving students.

The MC president also expressed confidence that the gift "will attract other substantial gifts from individuals, corporations, foundations, and organizations . . . in the future."

Scots obliterate Wasps

The mighty Scot's defense brutally stopped Emory-Henry, limiting them to only six points.

by Robert Boone

The Maryville College Fighting Scots, under the direction of new Head Coach Steve Fickert, made their opening debate before a hungry enthusiastic crowd Saturday afternoon, and the result was a rewarding 17—6 victory.

"It's sure nice to win that first one," said the elated coach afterwards. "We've been working and concentrating on this game since we started practice three weeks ago. We could have played better, but a win is a win, and I'll take it."

The Scots hit the road for the next two encounters. They take on Bridgewater College in Bridgewater, VA, Saturday, before tackling the strong University of Evansville, IN, September 30.

Fickert had words of praise for Joe Savary the kicking specialist, and his "bandit" defense both of which helped preserve the victory. Savary's deep kick-offs kept the E & H squad in the hole most of the afternoon as they had trouble getting good field position.

"The defense really played well for us today," remarked Fickert. "They made the big plays when they had to. Again, we need to work on some things . . . but they showed me a lot out there."

MC's stinging defense held the Wasps to one touchdown for the day. On four fourth down situations, MC's defense thwarted E & H's first down attempts.

Scoring 17 points in the first period, it seemed that a slaughter was on the way. But the scoring barrage ended as soon as it began. Savary's first period field goal from 35 yards put the Scots ahead, completing a 40 yard drive.

Sophomore linebacker Pete Baron set up the Scots' first touchdown with a fumble recovery on the opponent 19. With Chuck Hixon engineering the scoring drive, it took only three plays to produce six points. Hixon connected with Sophomore tight-end Mark Parsons, who made a beautiful diving catch in the endzone for the Scots' score. Savary's foot made it 10—0.

Hixon then found Alvin Nance floating out of the backfield for a 54 yard TD jaunt, in which Nance nimbly cut across the grain. Savory made it 17—0.

Emory-Henry had a 52 yard scoring drive for six points with :56 seconds left in the first half.

The rest of the game was sluggish and scoreless, as it ended in a defensive battle.

The dismayed E & H coach, Jerry Kirk, was so perturbed with his squad's performance that a gruesome 20 minute practice session occurred behind the P.E. building after their defeat.

Statistics: MC: first downs 9, yards rushing 28, yards passing 156 (7-9-1), fumbles lost 1, penalty yards 9-95. Emory-Henry: first downs 13, yards rushing 117, yards passing 86, (8-20-2), fumbles lost 1, Penalty yards 3-35.

Freshmen cont.

The morning joggers in Group VI, headed by Mr. Fowler, and Group X, headed by Dr. Walker, tied for first place. Group IX won the horseshoe division of the competition, and group VII dominated the checker games. Points were also awarded to students who attended band practices and new choir rehearsals. The study group headed by Dr. Naylor had the highest average score on the orientation quiz, with Dr. Bunde's group having the second highest average score.

Orientation has been held for freshmen since 1976 with funds being provided by a special grant. The opinion of this year's freshmen may help decide whether funds will be sought to continue such an extensive orientation program.

Reaction to the orientation schedule ranged from Kelly Beninger's, "I liked it", to Jeff Clark's, "Decent; too short."

Melissa Rubin remarked, "Orientation schedules didn't give us enough free time. The only new people we met were in our study groups. When the time came for us to go to classes, we really didn't know anyone but the people in our study groups."

When Lynda MacCall was asked if freshman orientation should be held for next year's freshmen she stated, "Yes; I got to know the area and people faster, and it made it easier to start classes." David Fisher replied, "Yes, orientation should be offered next year. It exposes freshmen to new environment without the pressure of the upperclassmen."

Previously, he was associated with the UT basketball camp for eight years and was connected with other summer programs as well.

Ward exhibiting in FAC

An exhibit of ceramic pieces by Marc Ward, an area artist and potter, will be on display in the Fine Arts Center Gallery through Sunday.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Ward's exhibit consists of Raku and pit-fired objects, including a series of both wheel-thrown and hand-built pieces. Raku is an outdoor ceramic firing technique which originated in Japan.

Ward set up his studio near Walland after receiving a B.A. from Maryville College in studio art.

"I began dabbling in Raku as a change of pace and work style and found myself growing more and more attached to the process and its spontaneity," he commented.

At present his work is exhibited and sold throughout the Eastern United States, and in the near future he will be represented by selected galleries throughout the country.

Choir tuning up

by Ed Herbert

As with every new academic year, the Maryville College Concert Choir held auditions for new members and welcomed those returning for another eventful year. Thirty returning members found themselves at Tremont to sing during the evening Vesper service. After the annual choir initiation and picnic in the College Woods on September 27, twenty-five new members were added to bring the total choir strength to fifty-five fine voices. Many places are represented through the choir as it's members come from as far as Japan and as close as Maryville.

Each Choir year is an active one, with various engagements at church services and school activities. The annual spring tour is the main highlight.

The first appearance by the 1978-79 Concert Choir will be at the morning worship service of Highland Presbyterian Church on October 1. That same evening, the Choir will participate in the evening Vesper service in Wilson Chapel.

Other upcoming performances include november 12, when the Choir

Unsafe Tremont Buildings

by Bill Thomas

On Saturday, September 23, college Park Service and school representatives gathered together in the mess hall of the Tremont campus to hold a public hearing. The topic was the future use of Tremont Environmental Education Center.

For two and one-half hours elementary and secondary school teachers, from as far away as Birmingham, AL., to as near as Walland, TN, listened to the reasons why two Tremont dormitories had been closed and fervently discussed alternative ways of keeping the Center in operation.

MC President Wayne Anderson made opening comments to the anxious crowd of seventy. He noted the importance of maintaining an environmental education program through this year. Dr. Anderson praised Park and school officials for their past support, and he urged their continued support through this crucial period of Tremont's existence. Jerry Eubanks assistant superintendent of the Smokey Mountain National Park, followed Anderson by saying, "The Park Service puts a high value on environmental education."

The most urgent questions of the afternoon centered around the use of Tremont for the up-coming year. It was generally agreed at the hearing that if the program discontinues for one year it could face total abandonment by presently participating school systems.

The problem is where to house the school kids during their weekly stays at Tremont. Alternative means of housing that were discussed included everything from turning one of the three permanent buildings on the site into dormitories, at the cost of a few hundred thousand dollars, to renting Wesley Woods United Methodist Camp in Walland, TN, for a flat rate of $25,000 per year.

The Wesley Woods alternative housing plan is the only practical plan under consideration that would allow an Environmental Education Program to be sustained for the upcoming year. The kids would be bused to Tremont from Walland in the morning, and then they would be bused after a full day of classes. Meals would be provided at Tremont.

A good deal of money will be needed to fund the Tremont program if it is to survive this year.

One teacher noted that letter writing to politicians was a most effective way of receiving assistance from the US Government. He was quickly reminded that Proposition 13 is causing politicians to tighten their money belts. Dr. Shields noted that raising money privately could ease Tremont's financial burden. Jim Bainbridge, of the Park Service, was asked by President Anderson, "Is there any quick money from the Park Service?" Bainbridge assuredly

The story of a Smoky Mountain resort

Can Humpty-Dumpty . . .

It appears that Tremont will remain in the hands of MC, at least for the immediate future. Unfortunately, this is not due to insight and planning, but a last minute attempt, with a little bit of luck.

The buildings were originally built to last 5-7 years. Their obituary should have been written years ago. We are fortunate they have lasted as long as they have. A closer look at the situation reveals that a noticeable amount of incompetence has been employed by the college inthe last decade in dealing with its Smoky Mountain resort.

Why weren't the buildings repaired years ago? Why were they left to fall apart? Perhaps the brains that ran this institution sat around a cup of coffee saying, "Well, any day now, I say it will fall apart during a storm."

"No, I have five dollars that says it will last until 1980."

"You're both crazy, this is a church-related college, it will take care of itself.

The present administration is not to be blamed for this ardent display of low I.Q.s. It is hoped, though, that they will take notice of the kind of action this college is capable of breeding.

Don't misunderstand. MC has difficult financial troubles (understatement for the day). It will take much money to fix the buildings of Tremont and Carnegie. Either they are fixed, or they are not. Lady luck cannot be relied upon for each problem.

Close Carnegie and throw them into Pearsons. Close Tremont at night and hope that area schools will be drawn to the day program. Wesley Woods offered their services for only $25,000. If not for them, what would lie ahead for Tremont?

The problem, though, runs deeper.

This column ran an article last spring on the propaganda of Tremont, pointing out that it has never been in recent years what the catalogs build it up to be. The college was openly accused of propaganda in its literature to lure students. Another problem, beneath the present one. It is hoped, with unwarranted optimism from the past, that Tremont will someday become what it is supposed to be. But at a time when all aspects of MC need money, one can only wonder what kind of priority Tremont has, or even deserves.

Yes, Tremont is important. But is it as important as the embarrassing faculty salaries? The ceilings of Fayerweather which are falling to the floor? Even if we maintain Tremont into the 1980's, can we destroy the propaganda flag recently attached to it?

President Anderson is to be—commended on his success in picking up the pieces of Tremont. Let's hope that Humpty-Dumpty can be out back together again.

Interim Registration

Interim registration for freshmen, transfers and those who did not register in the spring is scheduled for Oct. 23 in the registrar's office.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and is on a first come/ first served basis. New interims have been proposed and approved for unregistered students, but openings are still available in already-proposed interims. An interim proposal booklet will be available in students' p.o. boxes about Oct. 9, according to Dr. Russell Parker, Chairman of the Interim Committee.

Beck to coordinate

With Dr. Charlotte Beck's acceptance to be the coordinator, the new Presidential Scholars Program has become a reality. This program will add another dimension to the growing academic fields at Maryville College. Dr. Beck's duties in this new position will include providing students with the information on curricular opportunities, planning special meetings on campus and off-campus trips. Dr. Beck will also continue her classroom instruction for the MC English Department.

replied, "Money can be found, but I don't know where."

Bainbridge stated that he would find out within ten working days from Sept. 23 when money would be available for Tremont. MC can then make a decision as to the use of Tremont for the upcoming year.

MC's special use permit for Tremont runs out on June 30, 1980. The question was posed—will MC be able to retain a new permit after '80? Boyd Evison, Superintendent of the Great Smokey Mountains National Park, thinks so.

The saga explained

A typical saga-scene during lunch after the C-hour crowd has rushed in.

by Judy Corliss

It's 7:30 a.m. and time to grab some breakfast before A hour. After standing in line for 10-15 minutes, there are 10 minutes left to eat breakfast. Carol Hows is the manager of Saga. The Echo talked with her one morning to find out what is going on concerning the food situation.

She was shocked to find that there aren't two lines open at breakfast. Apparently two ever is in charge in the mornings hasn't opened them.

Ms. Hows did suggest that perhaps the slip-up lines are supposed to be opened up, but who was caused by the illness of an early shift worker and the student help wasn't co-ordinated at the time.

Another question brought up was why the lobby side door used by Pearson residents isn't unlocked. She said that they try to, but that during the summer it isn't used and that they will have to get used to doing it again.

The over-all quality of the food at breakfast has been below par this year. Meat is very rarely, if ever, served the grapefruit has been dehydrated, and the orange juice is more likely to be hot than cold.

Ms. Hows explained that the grapefruit quality is dependent on the shipment and the time of year. The question of meat at breakfast was never answered fully. She explained that the budget didn't allow for sausage or bacon at every breakfast, but when asked if she was going to serve meat at breakfast she remained noncommital.

One of the most often asked questions about Saga this year has been why certain things are in new places, such as the napkins, salad dressings, or the orange juice machine.

According to Ms. Hows the napkins were taken off the line to move people through that area faster. She said that it would eliminate the slow-down of extra stuff on the line and would keep the line moving.

The salad dressings cause a traffic jam when they're on the salad bar. By putting them at a separate table Ms. Hows hopes to eliminate the crowd at the salad bar. When it was mentioned to her that the croutons and bac-o-bits were in an awkward place (at the beginning of the line with the bowls), she said that she would put them with the dressings.

The reason for the orange juice machine sitting in the middle of the dining hall like a lost island is understandable. It seems that the outlet that it is plugged into is the only one that is not shorted out or improperly grounded.

Another new addition to the dining hall this year has been the ice machines that do not work. Ms. Hows said that the crushed ice gets blocked in the channels. She said that they were going to try cubed ice in them soon.

The budget is the biggest obstacle for Carol Hows to overcome. She explained that she is allotted about 30 cents at breakfast, sixty cents

Scots defeat Bridgewater: stand 2-0

by Robert Boone

MC football coach Steve Fickert will be the first to admit that Bridgewater College of Bridgewater, VA is 35 points better than they were last year. (A 35–0 shut-out victory for the Scots).

The Scots had to "keep the dogs away from the door" in the closing seconds last Saturday to preserve a 13–6 victory over the tough home-standing Eagles. The Scots are now 2–0.

After the game an elated Coach Fickert stated, "We had a tremendous effort by the defensive team for the second week in a row and we also had some outstanding individual play on offense. We feel that both our offense and defense is coming along. There's been great improvement in just two weeks."

Leading the outstanding individual play on offense was senior runningback Alvin Nance, who finished with 94 yards on seven carries. Nance had 90 yards on a third quarter touchdown sprint that gave MC some breathing room after a 7–6 lead.

Maryville quarterback, Charlie Hixon, hit 13 of 22 passes for 173 yards, but was decked seven times behind the scrimmage line for 66 yards in losses.

The MC defense came up with five turnovers, including two fumbles and three interceptions, in their strong bid to victory. Wayne Dunn, Danny Thomas, and Steve Moffett stole enemy aerials, while Pete Baron and Dave Shankle pounced on loose pigskins.

MC's first scoring drive occurred in the second period of play. Completions from Hixon to Crews and Gentry for first downs kept the drive alive. The highlight of the offensive threat was a 35-yard pass play from Hixon to Crews. Eventually Maryville was faced with the unlikely decision of fourth down and two yards to go for the first down. The head mentor went for the first down instead of a field goal and the gamble paid off. Quarterback Hixon got the first down and two plays later got the touchdown on a 2-yard plunge. The extra point by Savary was good and MC led 7–0.

In the third period the Eagles, led by quarterback Duane Harrison, opened up their passing attack. After connecting on two pass plays the lonely quarterback forked right and escaped down the right sidelines for a 35-yard touchdown run. The interior line blocked the extra point, but the Eagles had rallied to close the gap to 7–6.

After an exchange of punts MC's offense came through. Running back Alvin Nance slashed through a hole for a quick trap and simply outran everyone for 90 yards. The extra point attempt was inches off and Maryville led by only 7 points.

The Eagles staged a frightening comeback bid and passed their way to MC's 30-yard line. But a clutch interception by Steve Moffett with 24 seconds remaining killed the Eagle's hopes. For the Scots, victory number two and an unblemished starting record of 2–0 had been achieved.

Next Saturday Maryville's fighting Scots travel to Evansville, Indiana, to square off with what Coach Fickert termed, "The toughest team Maryville College has played in 18 years (a Division II university). The Evansville Aces, 1–2 for the season, play on a higher scale of competition than does MC and have athletes on scholarships. But Fickert is optimistic.

"This week we are excited about the opportunity of playing Evansville."

With a little luck maybe the Scots will answer the Evansville inquiry about Maryville . . . who? . . . where? . . . what's a Scot?

along with the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra and the Oratorio Chorus will present Handel's Messiah. In the next few weeks, the Choir will be performing at a few area high schools as they do on their spring tour. In the spring term, the Choir will join with the Oak Ridge Choral Society in two performances of Verdi's Requiem.

During spring break, the Choir will depart on the "Harry Harter Charter," lookung forward to performances in a number of churches and high schools. The 1979 spring tour will find the Choir in Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Western New York, Michigan, and Canada. If you are interested in having the Choir perform at a church in one of these areas, contact the Choir's director, Dr. Harry H. Harter, as soon as possible.

After the Tour is over, the Choir takes an important role in the annual Easter Sunrise Service in the College Woods. Shortly afterwards, the Choir will present its Home Concert for the enjoyment of the college and community residents. The Choir will also present it's annual Pops Concert in the Maryville City Park late in May.

In announcing the appointment, Dr. Wayne Anderson said of Mrs. DeYoung, "She has the enthusiasm, the dedication to the College, and the administrative skills to enable us to expand the services we offer to our alumni."

Mrs. DeYoung has served as a member of the College's admissions staff for the past four years.

at lunch, and ninety cents at dinner per student. Thus she has $1.80 to spend per student each day.

Food costs, which have risen about 25% over last year, take up 55% of the budget. Labor, janitorial duties, and paper products eat up the remaining 45. Because of the increase in costs, and since her budget was not increased accordingly, Ms. Hows is trying to make ends meet by cutting back the meal times.

Ms. Hows explained that last year she over extended her budget. This year Saga is making sure it doesn't happen again.

Freshman bigger and brighter

A total of 218 freshmen, an increase of 9½ percent over last fall's class, are presently enrolled at MC, according to Admissions Director Rick Ziegler.

The overall September enrollment was down from last year's 673 to the present 631. There is a decrease of 16 transfer students from last year.

"Most colleges are experiencing a decrease in transfers, and the decline in returning students is a problem at Maryville as it is elsewhere," Ziegler said. He also added, "The College is in the process of analyzing the retention question by means of an extensive study of those students who have withdrawn from Maryville over the last five years. This analysis will be finished in the near future."

There is an increased academic quality of the students enrolled for 1978-79. The average SAT and ACT scores for new students are up over last year's figures and remain above the national average. In an article two weeks ago, the Echo reported that the national average for these scores has fallen consistently over the last few years.

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, coordinator of the week-long orientation, reported that orientation sponsors have indicated this year's students to be "brighter and more advanced academically."

Partial credit for this is given to the inclusion of the 25 Presidential Scholars in the freshman class.

ACC starts year

The ACC held its first meeting of the year Wednesday, Sept. 27.

The Social Committee report was given by Genie Varker. Apparently, there is a busy schedule lined up for the year. This fall, there should be something happening every weekend: class dances, a hayride at Cade's Cove, Run for Fun, and an exciting Homecoming weekend. During the winter term, hall-sponsored events are being encouraged. "Winter term is the time people need to be active," said Ms. Varker. Spring plans include White Water Rafting, a Physical Fitness week, and a big May Madness weekend.

The latest guidelines for the alcohol policy, presented by Jane Richardson of the Residential Life Committee, was avidly discussed. There was much concern expressed over some unclear wording regarding the policy on off-campus events at which alcohol could be consumed. Dr. Wayne Anderson stated, "The college does not forbid college groups from taking part in off-campus events at which alcohol will be consumed." Also expressed was a need for clarification concerning the advertisement of events at which alcohol would be consumed.

After the long discussion of the alcohol policy, Dr. Naylor reported on the CIV Committee. He reported that the fall schedule is now complete, although Lamar Alexander and Jake Butcher may yet come and speak. Winter and spring CIV programs are still open to suggestions.

Dr. Wallace Lewis gave a report for the Elections Committee. October 5 and Oct. 11 are the dates pf elections for the Homecoming Queen and class representatives. Elections for freshman class officers will be Oct. 6. "We are running as few elections as possible in a few days," said Dr. Lewis.

Point of harmony

MC achieves compromise

Three cheers for the senior class. Their party on Saturday, September 30 at Willard House is an excellent example of the party potential of this campus.

The amazing fact is that it was all legal. Wandering deans seemed as at home as the students did.

In the past, this kind of action would have been impossible at MC. The campus has been blamed for being boring, slow, and lacking in social graces. The evolution that brought us to the Saturday night success should be shared by all; students, faculty, staff and the generous board who legalized alcohol on the campus. Though alcohol was not permitted at the party, certainly the liberal thinking of the board concerning alcohol helped pave the way for the permission of Willard House.

The alcohol policy, though, still needs work. There is confusion as to what it states or even implies. For example, the Echo is not allowed to advertise alcohol. It would almost appear hypocritical to allow alcohol on campus but prohibit the advertisement of it. Besides, think of the money.

Regardless, Willard House is a tribute to the advancement of this school. It is gradually moving out of the dark ages toward a realistic and student-oriented image.

Let us hope that this progress continues. I am not advocating radical change, and realize a point of compromise lies ahead. But when that point is reached, it will be a landmark for the defeat of incongruous attitudes, and a victory of a long battle---for both sides.

The Willard House is an example of a common ground. With an effort on both sides, this ground can be kept for future uses and relations.

DESERT KIDS

"I close my eyes . . . .
nothing lasts forever but the earth and sky . . . .
dust in the wind . . . ."

Come sail away, come sail away. Off to another world where little boys and girls play in the dust all day long, until the little bastards choke to death.

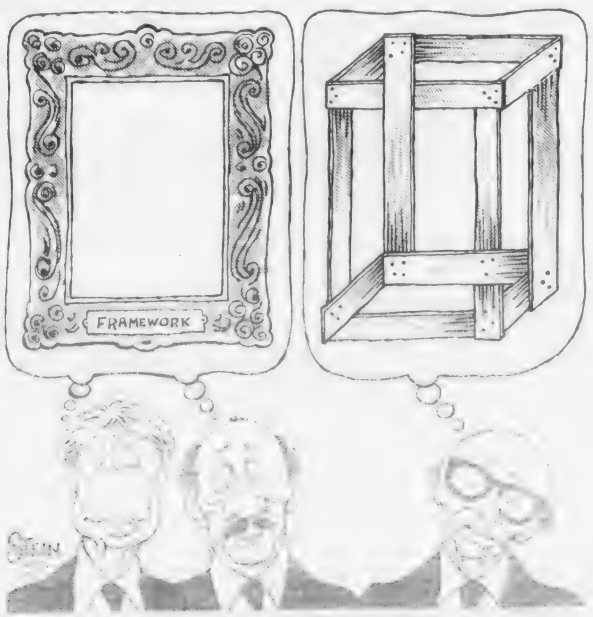
Why, you may ask, does this happen?

Why does anything happen?

Into the dust ride the 10,000; into eternal oblivion of existence. The sun shines brightly in the west for those who dare to see it, who dare to challenge its heat. The 10,000 dared; the 10,000 are dead—like children in the dust.

Like dust in the wind.

A mother loves her son so very much———he goes to war and gets his head blown off.



A father cradles his infant son———who will OD at the age of 12.

Two old woman are taking a stroll through the woods. While talking about the flowers, one feels a sharp pain in her chest and drops dead. The other just looks at her. Neither say a word.

Like dust in the wind.

I once had an aunt. Many years ago she was walking home from a Christmas Eve service, tripped on the curb and busted her skull on the cement. She was a vegetable the rest of her life.

Dust in the wind.

once upon a time, down in the bar they all sat, coming from far quiet still empty glasses empty air
we're missing something, and it's a sin because once upon a time will never come again.

"The desert kids; the bones of the 10,000; a king among men; men among kings; Winter's Tale; Winter's Tail; from the cold hard winter, long, leaving hope frozen and still on a barren leaf."

Frozen dust in frozen wind.

All this is fine, but tell me, "Will you still love me tomorrow?"

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

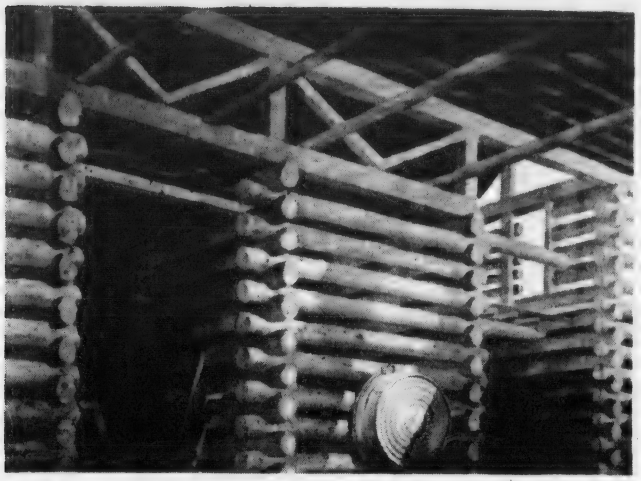
The patch of grass between Sutton Science Center and the sidewalk holds five different roots of plants and three times as many textures. Dorms boast of fewer-vinyl, formica, glass, painted concrete and indoor-outdoor carpeting on which you can skin your knees. But how can it come alive, become a home, a gravitational point? A place for friends to gather?

Well, never mind, it's really too small. We can meet somewhere else. Where at MC is there some humane living space? The FAC lounge comes close, but after that, what is there?

Where can we gather during our thirty-three weeks here that has warmth and welcome? Financial feasability is a question, but it answers not the cry of my heart.

Recent administrative policy declares Williard House available only to officially recognized groups such as dorms, a class, or the Playmakers, for campus-wide events. Dr. Mangus was not willing to set a precedent of allowing one student to use Willard for a private party. Proposed alternatives were dorm floor lounges, second floor lounge at Pearsons, the basement of Lloyd or Carnegie, or the back lounge of my dorm, Davis, or take it off campus.

I can't fairly ask Pearsons to give up their lounge for an evening so that I can give a dinner party. Lloyd's basement is okay for a dance, but it's a bit large and austere for a dinner. Not just the floor, walls, and pillars, but even the ceiling is concrete. Of Carnegie's basement, well, explore it yourself, imagining a dinner party there.



This is a residential college—my home, our home— from September to May.

Some gracious living and gathering space needs to be available to students.

McDade, Mooney depart

Neil McDade, MC's administrative vice president since 1974, has resigned that position in order to assume the post of budget and planning for Morris Harvey College in Charlestown, West Va.

His resignation was effective August 18, and he began his new work immediately thereafter.

While working with Maryville College, McDade was chief financial officer and was responsible for finances, property and management of non-academic activities. His duties at Morris Harvey will be of a similar nature.

McDade spent 13 years on the Board of Directors of M C , as well as his more than four years on the staff.

William H. Mooney, director of financial advancement for MC since 1974, has left the college to accept a position with the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

Working in the central East Tennessee region, Mooney and his wife will remain residents of Maryville .

Social tokers safe

SAN FRANCISCO (CPS) —Regular use of marijuana is habit-forming, and may leave the constant user subject to withdrawal symptoms when the drug is cut off, say researchers at the University of California-San Francisco Medical Center.

The Center has been investigating for five years the effects of THC, the psycho-active component of marijuana. They've experimented with volunteers who lived in the med center for three to four weeks, during which time they received round-the-clock doses of THC equivalent to the amount contained in five or six joints.

Researchers note that the subjects developed a tolerance to the drug with time, when its initial effects were no longer [illegible]. But, within six to eight hours following [illegible] withdrawal symptoms [illegible] and hyperactivity.

Dr. John Bachman of the Center explained that only the heavy toker—not the social toker—need be concerned with THC's addictive qualities. "It is necessary to keep a constant level of the drug in the blood in order for the body to build up a physical tolerance," said Bachman, "so the smoker who occasionally smokes five or six joints in an evening will not develop these tolerances."

FAC exhibiting watercolors

by Anne Gilliland

David E. Joyner, an illustrator and graphics designer for TVA's architectural division, finds watercolor a release from the more literal renderings he must do at work.

An exhibit of Joyner's work opened Sunday in the Fine Arts Center gallery and will continue through Oct. 27. Gallery hours are 9 to 4 p.m. weekdays.

One style represented in his show is realistic and detailed, an outgrowth, Joyner says, of his architectural work. Predominant colors are greys and browns.

His other style is loose and more abstract. Color is brighter and more arbitrary.

Joyner feels that in a recent painting, April in Sandestin, he has begun to find a synthesis between these two styles.

Joyner credits Walter Stevens of UT in Knoxville with helping him to become more free with watercolor.

He began to work seriously with watercolor seven years ago but has not yet formed a definite philosophy about his work. When he does, he feels that his work will probably stop being so varied and will instead settle into one style.

Joyner majored in architecture at Pratt Institute in New York because he felt it was an area which offered financial security.

"If it weren't for the security of my job and my family obligations, I would consider working as an artist full-time," he says.

Joyner also works in oils, but finds watercolor more meaningful because of its spontaneous quality. "If it's right, it's right, and if it's not, you start again. I tend to labor over oils."

Joyner hopes to begin working with sculpture soon. He did some sculptural work while in school, but stopped because he found himself working on sculpture instead of architecture.

Joyner's ongoing project is the design and construction of his home in Knoxville, where he lives with his wife and their two daughters. He is also a photographer.

Joyner is past president of the Knoxville Watercolor Society and an artist member of the Tennessee Watercolor Society. He frequently exhibits in the Knoxville area. His work is presently included in a traveling show by the Tennessee Watercolor Society, which will be at Maryville College in December.

New courses to be offered

Maryville College's new office of Community Education and Services, directed by Ms. S. M. Atchley, has announced 10 noncredit courses to be offered this fall. Registration for these classes began Sept. 27 and continues through Oct. 6.

Five of the offered courses are repeats of the most popular courses held last year by the MC continuing education program. The other half of the courses are new. Information on these courses may be obtained by calling 982-6412, or picking up a brochure in the central Community Education Office, first floor, Anderson Hall.

Among the courses are "Single again," a course designed for widowed or divorced persons; "Improving Communication Effectiveness," which is designed to acquaint people with the processes of effective communication and most types of public speaking; and "Discovery." This course is to assist persons considering a change in their lives, but un-

Maryville surrenders to Evansville

by Robert Boone

There should be no doubt in the minds of the University of Evansville concerning the identity of Maryville College's football team. The two got acquainted real good last Saturday in a classical soggy battle that ended 3—0 in the favor of the homestanding Division II Aces of Evansville.

In recalling the intense outcome, a proud Steve Fickert said, "We played them very, very hard, but I guess not quite hard enough because they scored more points than we and the team that scores the most points deserves to win."

The winning edge occurred with 10:04 remaining in the second quarter. The Ace's Neil Saunders booted a 37-yard field goal. Before going into Saturday's contest, Evansville ranked fifth in the Division II passing statistics. MC's tenacious defense changed matters. The purple gang accumulated a total of 47 yards passing by completing 3 of 7 passes.

"I guarantee that was the finest defense effort Maryville College has had in a long time," stated Fickert. Over a three game span the "bandit" defense has allowed opposing offenses an average of five points a game.

The scots were close to scoring in the final quarter, but penalties and a quarterback sack doomed the effort.

The scots begin a two game home span this Saturday with Washington and Lee before the homecoming affair against Millsaps College on October 14.

Lady Scots second in tourney

This past weekend, the Lady Scots volleyball team boosted their record to 5—2, and got second place in the Maryville Invitational Tournament.

The Scotties started out on a bad note Friday night when they were defeated by Milligan 17—15, 15—12. Saturday, the lady scots came back and beat Bryan, who was second in the state last year. MC won 15—12, 15—3. This was the first time in three years that MC has beaten Bryan.

The v-ballers next match was with Carson Newman, a team Maryville has not beaten in four years. MC won 15—9 in the first game, but lost the second 4—15. The Scotties pulled it through, winning the last game, 15—7.

Fisk was an easy victory for the scots, 15—4, 15—4.

The Lady Scots played Milligan for first place playoff. The Scots won the first game 15—9, but lost the next three 16—8, 15—10, 15—7.

Freshman Donna Owens played an excellent game, putting several hard spikes on the floor. The wins are tributed to good teamwork.

The Scotties' next game is this weekend at the Mars Hill Invitational. Their next home game is Friday, the 13, against Fisk.

Soccer club drops close match

The MC Scots Soccer Team is off to a slow start, losing the first four games of the season.

The first loss came at the hands of Temple College, who blanked the Scots 17-0. The second setback was handed to MC by Bryan College in the Bryan Tournament, 7-0. The third defeat came in a close game, 5-2, with the Scots playing King College in a consolation matchup. Tim Farrell and Mike Wise put MC's two points on the scoreboard.

The final defeat came Saturday, September 30 in the closest game so far, as the Scots took on Walters State Community College. Fred Kramer and Dave Franssen scored one goal each for MC, but the Scots again came up short. . . in this case, one point, as Walters State won, 3-2.

Soccer Team member Tim Fitzgerald said of the team, "We're really not that bad. We just need a little more work."

The Soccer Scots will have another chance at Walters State this week, hoping to improve on an 0-4 record.

Some of the repeated courses will be "Mother-Tot Swim" for children ages four months to six years; "Beginning-Intermediate Swimming" for adult women; and "Aqua Swim" for those interested in aerobic conditioning, water exercise, figure control and relaxation.

"I did it myself—Home Improvements" and "Reading Skills Clinic" for adults and high school students will again be offered this year.

Frank Schwartz

The election for Homecoming candidates was held last Thursday, Oct. 5. By popular vote, the candidates were narrowed to the remaining five students.

Sharon Youngs
Sharon is a physical education major from Gainesville, GA. Active in student government, she is the present co-chairman of the ACC, and past president of the junior and sophomore classes. She is an RA in Davis Hall and a member of Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Epsilon Rho. A member of the choir and Messiah chorus, Sharon is also active in intramurals and basketball. Her future plans include either coaching or physical therapy.

Colleen Masterson
From Florham Park, NJ, Colleen is a Physical therapy major. She is senior class president and chairman of the judiciary committee of the ACC. She is an active participator in intramural baseball. Colleen would like to do graduate work in physical therapy either at the University of Texas or the Mayo Clinic.

Lisa Ceraolo
Lisa is an art major from Clearwater, FL. She is secretary-treasurer of the senior class and was a cheerleader for two years. She participates in soccer and softball. Lisa plans to go to Boston or New York when she graduates.

Barb Kees
Co-captain of the cheerleaders, Barb is a business administration major from Valley Forge, PA. She is president of Theta Epsilon and active with the soccer club and intramurals. Her plans after graduation are to be involved with the advertising end of marketing for a large retail company.

Janet Rock
An environmental education major, Janet is from Akron, OH. She is involved in Chi Beta and Beta Beta Beta. She participates in intramural softball. After graduation, Janet would like to go into environmental awareness.

Frank Schwartz
Frank is a distant relative of Candy Belle, a 1975 homecoming candidate. Frank's major is undecided, though he has done extensive work as a cigarette tester. When bored, he tours with the choir, usually disguised as a bozo, or clown. Hailing from the Bronx, Frank plans to retire after he graduates.

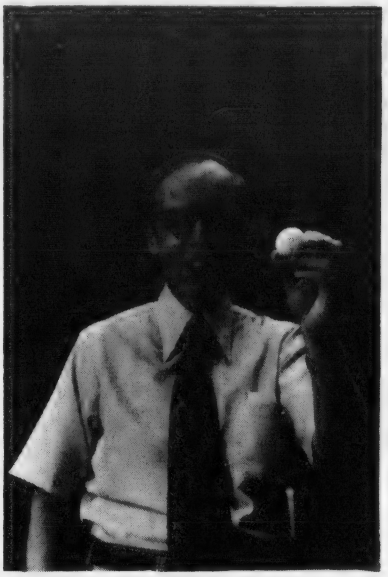
A parade, a square dance, a bonfire, a big country dinner, a formal disco dance, and some fine football are just a small sample of Maryville College's 1978 Homecoming festivities, scheduled for this weekend.

Genie Varker, chairman of the ACC Social Committee, is excited about the homecoming plans. Students have been included in alumni activities for the first time this year, allowing for greater interaction between the two groups. This has been arranged at the alumni's request, as they are eager to meet more students. The Social Committee hopes that everyone will benefit from the combined events.



The action starts at 6:00 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 12, with the Black Student Association's Dating Game. Everyone is invited to attend. Winners will be awarded prizes.

The annual Homecoming Parade will begin assembling at 3:00 p.m. Friday, Oct. 13, in front of Lloyd Hall. Actual parade time is 4:00. The band, homecoming court, and floats will wind their way through Now-Town as part of their three-mile route. The class, hall, or organization presenting the best float will receive $50. Second prize is $25; third is $10. Dr. Mangus has been named this year's Parade Marshal.

During dinner on Friday, the cheerleaders will direct a brief, informal pep rally. Afterwards, at 6:30 p.m., everyone is invited to do some square dancing outside the gym. Joe Saylor will call the dances until 7:30. At 7:00, the Lady Scots will challenge Carson-Newman in volleyball. At 8:00 the action will move to the entrance to the football field for a large bonfire/pep rally. Both the Wayne lays an egg.

Wonderful Wayne's wasted wit

Editor's note: Wonderful Wayne is the president of Maryville College. Not known for administrative abilities, Wayne was hired to brighten the damp spirits of Anderson Hall, which he still thinks is named after his daddy. Below are some of his favorite jokes.

How can you tell the difference between Coach Fickert and a gorilla?
You can't.

Why doesn't Larry Mangus ever play hide and seek?
Because nobody will look for him.

Who runs Maryville College?
Gravity, it's been going down hill for years.

Anderson on Mangus: "I love him. He's a dean and a built-in smoke detector rolled in one."
Mangus on Anderson: Illegal in Tennessee.

"Do you know how Jane Richardson's face got like that?" asked Dr. Perkins.
"No." replied Dr. Walker in one of her more brillant moments.
"Twenty years of trying to master the fork and knife."
"You don't say." said Mr. Ribble, walking out of the john. Ribble, by the way, is the only person I know who loans money to a pay toilet.

Anderson concludes: "I'm really happy to be here at Merryville, Ellie and I have a great time . . . . when Larry has a cold."

BSA plans activities

The entire black student population at Maryville College makes up the Black Student Association. It provides an arena for ideas to be circulated and exchanged. The BSA has been and is responsible for various programs on and off campus. It allows students the opportunity to donate time and effort or just some place to go. The BSA's office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather.

The organization is currently presided over by Sabrina Rawls. The BSA's primary business is to try and become a more completely self-sufficient organization. Ms. Rawls explained this meant "becoming a more recognized association on campus." She commented further, "I feel the BSA has not been as visible as it could be. I hope to change that by publicizing more programs."

The BSA has been responsible for the Dating Game, and Fashion shows. It will be sponsoring numerous activities throughout the fall and winter to raise money. It is currently in the process of finalizing plans for a student vs. faculty basketball game.

With the increase in students, this year should be promising. When asked about the prospects of the BSA, Ms. Rawls replied, "I'm definitely optimistic. I feel anything can be done with motivation, determination and faith. The BSA will most certainly flourish this year."

Variety at MC

by Anne Gilliland

Since not just one kind of student goes to Maryville College, this year the Social Committee plans to have as many different activities for students as possible, according to Sharon Crane, Social Activities Director for Maryville College.

This desire for variety can be seen both in the events planned and in the makeup of the Committee itself.

For large campus events, the committee is planning something for everybody. For example, during homecoming a square dance, a clogging program and a disco dance will be held.

The next big event after homecoming is Parents Weekend, Oct. 27 and 28. Programs for that include a semi-formal dance, a student crafts fair, a hole-in-one golf contest, an orchestra dress rehearsal for parents and The Lark, the fall theater production.

Crane feels that since a variety of people are on the Social Committee this year, different points of view will be represented. She also feels that alumni and the administration could make a valid contribution to the Committee.

The Committee also plans to involve faculty in the campus' social life, by scheduling teachers to give lectures and demonstrations in subjects they are interested in but do not have a chance to teach.

Social activities are also being planned in accordance with the seasons. Outdoor activities, like the golf contest, are planned for the spring and fall. Indoor activities, like a classic and foreign film festival, are planned for winter when the weather is bad and it is hard to get off-campus.

Crane stresses that the Social Committee does not have to plan every campus activity. The committee will help advertise and provide backing for a campus-wide activity sponsored by any group.

Genie Varker is co-chairperson of the committee.

football players and the cheerleaders will be there in anticipation of Saturday's game.

At 9:00, Lloyd Hall will host the group "Stanley," featuring Steve Maggio, in their lobby. Refreshments will be served. "Stanley" will provide entertainment until 11:30 p.m.

On Saturday morning, Oct. 14, activities resume with the Faculty Women's annual Harvest Crafts Festival in the Chapel courtyard. Some fifty area craftspersons are expected to display and sell their wares. The Festival will last all day, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Football action will get underway on Honaker Field with the Pre-game celebration at 1:30 p.m. At this time, float winners will be announced. The Concert Choir will sing the Alma Mater, and the Band will perform a pre-game show. Kickoff time for the Maryville-Millsaps College game is 2:00 p.m. The Millsaps Majors, from Jackson, MS have been opponents of the Fighting Scots since 1960. Last year's game found the scots victorious, 17—10.

Halftime festivities will feature presentation of the Homecoming Court and crowning of the new 1978 Homecoming Queen. The winner of the Big Man On Campus contest will also be announced. The band will perform in full uniform.

For the first time, faculty, students, and friends of the College are being invited to join the alumni for the annual alumni dinner at 5:30 p.m. in the Gym. Students who have indicated their intention to attend the dinner need only to present their ID's to be admitted. Cost of the dinner for alumni, faculty, and staff is $4.25.

After-dinner, entertainment, featuring the Tennessee Mountain Cloggers, will begin at 7:00 p.m.

The final homecoming event will be the formal dance in Proffitt Dining Hall from 9:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. The theme of this year's dance is "Look to the Rainbow." Disco music will be provided by "The Oz." Cost is $3.00/person or $5.00/couple.

Rehearsal for The Lark is now underway. The play will be presented Oct. 28-29.

Lark spreads wings

by Bill Thomas

The Maryville College Playhouse will open the 1978-79 season October 27-28 at 8 p.m. in the Theater with Jean Anouilh's The Lark.

A cast of 28 will be featured under the direction of Thomas E. Jones, assistant professor of speech-theatre at the College.

Eliza Nickels, a freshman English (speech-theater) major from Kingsport, TN, will portray Joan of Arc, the maid of Orleans. Her supporting cast will include Maryville College students Tom Bowen as the sympathetic, masterful prosecutor, Cauchon; Allen Evitts as the disturbed English representative, Warwick; Patrick Carrick as the Inquisitor; Bob Ostrowski as the sheepish but keen Dauphin; Bill Thomas as the guillible Beaudricourt; and Bob Griener as Joan's comrade-in-arms.

A story of how a teen-age country girl became the military leader of her country and changed the course of history will be told in The Lark. The Lark, one of the most outstanding Broadway plays of 1955-56, is the completely true story of the remarkable achievements of Joan of Arc from 1429-1431.

The play begins with the trial of Joan of Arc before the ecclesiastical court that is prepared to condemn her to be burned at the stake for heresy. The action moves to Joan's account of her poor family and childhood and of hearing her voices and following them to the Dauphin's court. She then leads the French army to victory over the English. The action ends with Joan's betrayal.

Tickets for the Maryville College production of The Lark can be purchased by either writing to Maryville College Playhouse, Box 2825 Maryville College, Maryville, TN, 37801, or by calling 982-2911 any afternoon from 1 to 5 p.m. Adult tickets are $2.50 and student tickets, $1.50. Season tickets for all four Maryville College Playhouse productions can be purchased for $6.

Why Johnny can't read

By John Wood

LOS ANGELES (CPS)—There's been a lot of talk about "Why Johnny Can't Read" in this country, and most students, if they could write would probably wonder, "Who cares? All we want are classes that will give us a higher GPA." There are, indeed, plenty of easy classes around.

The University of Texas, for example, offers a course called Ed Psych 310, which is dedicated to showing entering freshmen how to get by at the school.

You can learn to fly for six credits at North Dakota State University, and you can become a belly dancer for credit at Cal State-Sacramento. American University in Washington, D.C., offered a $631 summer course called "The Train in American Culture." Students boarded a train and spent six weeks riding it to Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, and other places. In essence, it was a summer vacation for credit.

Northern Missouri State University has raised the academic hustle to its purest form, offering a course in disco dancing.

But, then again, Miami Dade Community College has a course called "Understanding and Enjoying Football." Students can learn about veers and 3-4 defenses. The Monday night class, according to the school catalogue, breaks in time for students to watch Monday Night Football on tv.

Such examples of fundamental learning experiences do, it's true, lack in subtlety. Here, then, is a catalogue that could be a dream for the serious connoisseur of easy courses:

CHILDREN'S LITERATURE

A comprehension of works by some of the sissiest authors to ever lift a pen. Attempts to answer the question: "Was Grimm a fairy?" Miller's superb Anthology of Ancient Heroes will be used, and students who concentrate mostly on the pictures will be severely penalized come quiz time.

METEOROLOGY 3

The nature and structure of clouds, condensation, and what keeps the damn things in the air so long. The evolution of clouds is examined from precipitation to measles to adolescence and beyond. Laboratory work will consist of creating your own miniature cloud and then trying to make it heel.

THEOLOGY SEMINAR

A group discussion on topics related to the question: "Is there a God, and if so, why doesn't He pick up His mail?" A God versus Devil debate will feature the actual presence of the two superpowers themselves, and the sky above the football field will be reserved for this occasion. A special panel on exorcism will probe the nagging dilemma of what to do when you believe you're being possessed by a salesman.

ASTRONOMY 1

Formal introduction (first tea to be held this Thursday) to all the constellations in the Milky Way. Explanation of how the planets got where they are, and why they haven't left. Selected topics (such as why we revolve around the sun rather than an enormous pomegranate) will also be treated in some depth. (Not open to former astronauts.)

Pearsons on its own

Pearsons Hall is trying a new type of residential government this year. The ultimate goal of the arrangement will be for the dorm to be completely self-governing, within the guidelines set by the College.

The first phase of the experiment has already been completed. At the beginning of the school year, the dorm residents elected a House Council and Judicial Council.

Serving on the House Council are Tony Norris as president, Barbara Kees as vice-president, Secretary Kathryn Whitt and Jun Kasuya serving as treasurer. This council will take the College guidelines and rules and interpret them for dorm application.

The Judicial Council is chaired by Bill Sharp. The other members are Martha Cain, Chris Cervenka, Dale Frame, Mitch Hamler, Birdie Hill, Bill Thomas and Kathryn Whitt. They will enforce the dorm rules and establish any penalties necessary.

The success of this experiment rests in the theory of self-government through peer pressure. Eventually Pearsons will no longer have a resident director. Dean Mangus is currently living in the dorm as the RD but plans to move as soon as his family joins him in Maryville.

Essay: Journalism

Being the minor history buff that I am, I spend my quiet hours looking through old Echos. More than faded paper, they are escapism, a vicarious existence in which I travel through time to live and experience a life which has passed before me.

A record of theselives, the Echo is the written word of what has transpired before us. Much can be learned by consulting the transcripts of the past.

Isn't it pretty to think so? Unfortunately, this is not always true.

The 1966 Echo was comprised mainly of poetry. The 1975 Echo was runner-up to the National Lampoon. The question I propose is whether these papers reflect the campus of their times or merely the people who manipulated the press.

When free press entered this country, indeed, was a major contributor of the country, it was conceived that the press was a private organization with a responsibility to the people. Its purpose was to inform and address issues of the day, in the style of the writer. It was a creative work of communication.

Modern journalism, I submit, is radically different from this naive and primitive viewpoint. Nicholas Vov Hoffman, in his article "Media Clones" states that most communications in the United States are stereotyped not by law or managed censorship, but by stereotyped humans. The New York Times, Hoffman says, is the leader of American newspapers. The credibility of any major newspaper is merely how well it measures up to the Times. Journalism schools mass produce students trained in regurgitating the Times style and format.

Hoffman points out that the covers of Time magazine and Newsweek are frequently alike. The editors once thought there were spies in the other's organizations which were discovering the other's layout plans and then copying them. Not so, says Hoffman. The executives at the top are so similar, so cloned to think alike, that they produce the similar covers as though they were machines. The national news on ABC, CBS, and NBC all run about the same story for the first 15 minutes of their programs: then they have segments in which they can be creative. The result? The "creative" section is usually a story that appeared in the New York Times or the Wall Street Journal two days before.

How has this unification of mind come about? Knight Ridder, the largest newspaper chain in the country, requires all applicants to take a psychology test before they are hired. Though the executives of Knight Ridder deny it, the test could easily be used to weed out those who do not conform to the paper's views. The papers are thus composed of media clones all possessing the same viewpoints. Editors do not have to edit as their machine reporters do the job automatically.

Adding to this joy, many TV stations and newspapers are owned by the same persons. Cross-ownership, as it is called, further minimizes the threat of opinion.

This, obviously, does not hold true for all newspapers. Numerous newspapers, such as the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times are molded to the community they serve. Most small newspapers fit into their community. Though I do not wish to undermine the importance of these newspapers, their outreach must be kept in perspective. The Daily Times of New York reaches more people in one day than the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times does in one year.

On a drastically reduced scale, yet more obvious, the Echo is subject to the same pitfalls of stereotyped opinions. Yet, this paper is different because it is a college paper. Much will and should be written in this paper which would not be placed in a community newspaper. "College" is a strange subtitle, and much is justified under it. This paper will not be a glorified On-Campus-Today. It will not be a summary of last week's events. It will report news, interpret news and act as a stimulant and catalyst to campus events. It will attempt to build a sense of community from this often too chaotic place.

This is not easy. The students come from diversified backgrounds and geographic areas. There are times when the only thing they share in common is the cold water schedule. The Echo will strive to reach and maintain a level of journalism which will be suitable to this coherent family. It will avoid, as much as possible, the media clones which have run this paper in the past. It will not become a playground of amusement for a few select individuals.

There will be times when this paper will insult people. This is the price it must pay to become a paper worth reading versus one that is excellent for the bird cage.

There are 750 readers of the Echo. There are 750 opinions of what should go in. If the death of your frog doesn't make it, please try to understand.

Students expanding

(CPS)—Students may not pick up the cause of Fat Liberation in a big way, but many are picking up on the fat. 18-24-year-olds are an average six pounds heavier than their counterparts of ten years ago, reports a recent federal survey. For students wanting to shed some of those pounds, their schools are coming up with some innovative ways to get them dieting.

Most student health centers will provide basic diet information, but the health service at Marshall University in Huntington, W. Va., goes a step beyond. They offer a free weight loss clinic, where students sign a contract to change their eating habits for a certain length of time. Exercise and nutrition are also part of the program, which is apparently successful. One student lost 20 pounds in less than two months.

Marshall's food service and P.E. department took dieting to the cafeterias and the gym, with lectures on exercise, junkfood, and low-calorie nutrition.

The psychology department at Wayne State University in Detroit is using behavior modification techniques in their weight reduction clinics. The most effective may be their requirement of a $25 deposit, which is returned in $2 amounts at each subsequent meeting attended.

Other methods require students to eliminate all extraneous stimuli at mealtime (like tv, radio, or book), keep a very specific record of what, where and when food is eaten, and hop on a scale at least four times a

How's your cycle?

MADISON, WI (CPS)—Biorhythms have recently been adopted as a way of predicting the outcomes of sporting events, of individual and group behavior, and even of tests. Lately, some industries have even flirted with biorhythm theory as a way of minimizing industrial accidents. Now two University of Wisconsin researchers have conducted some experiments on biorhythms, and found that they can foretell accidents no better than horoscopes can.

Wisconsin professor Frazier Damron and research associate Dan Leetz investigated some 380 on-the-job accident reports, and cross-checked them with the biorhythms of the victims. "We found," Leetz reports, "no evidence that biorhythms had any influence on accident occurrence." As Damron summarizes it: "Our study shows that the validity of biorhythms as a means to prevent accidents is highly questionable."

Biorhythm theory, of course, has it that there are three cycles—physical, emotional, and intellectual—that determine our actions. When the three cycles are each in their own "critical period" simultaneously, it's supposed to be a day when it's better not to get out of bed.

But the Wisconsin study suggests the theory isn't valid. Damron speculates that "if biorhythm users claim a lower accident rate, Elements combined, converted to compounds: simple things suddenly thrust by catalysts into new arrangements—breaking-down or building-up the new and complex. Particles of matter in the atmosphere block the setting sun's rays leaving mostly red to paint the sky and land. They are simple things—particles stopping light—but when their effect is mixed with clouds, variant textures and colors of stone, trees, and flying birds, a complexity is brushed on the earth. The New Mexico sky leans toward night.

Sunsets, being daily, are hardly unusual. We humans, though, often stop at day's end, mouth agape, and stare in wonderment as everything that appeared simple in daylight is bathed new in red rays. The New Mexico terrain, forever open, seems to stretch far into the horizon at sunset. In a single glance, land changes from arid sagebrush to mountainous ponderosa pine and alpine forest. No wonder every New Mexican's license plate proclaims the state as the "Land of Enchantment." Every evening this enchantment reaches its apex.

Why are we filled with wonder at the sight of a spectacular sunset? Is our wonder founded in the beautifully hued sky? Or does it come from seeing the vast panorama in a stunning transition? Or is it that the sun's setting is an ending, the day in its death throes?

Is our answer to these wondering questions complicated by combining their answers? For instance, the ending of the day may be seen as a parallel to man's death. Is our wonder founded on this knowledge, or is it founded on the assurance that tomorrow will bring dawn, dewy and green? The dark finality of night comes when the sun leaves. The moon that often rises to take its place is a pale reflection of that sun.

When I stop, I find the world still moves. The lizard darts across the road, the yellow cottonwood leaves of fall sway silently, the ash-throated flycatcher dashes from its perch for food and returns quickly to that spot. Recognizing these movements we might see where our wonder comes from: the flux of nature, its ever-creation. Subtler differences can be noted: the shadows on the flat side of Kitchen Mesa.

The sandstone weathered by time and lined by colors—red, yellow, and the gray of gypsum—is suddenly russet and ruddy. The colors cannot detract from the sharp shadows of the rough-edged rock that play on the mesa's face. Shadows that we see only for an instant and never again. Simply, the light will never shine from this angle again; the shadows will never reappear as they do now. Each day the earth's axis tilts and the sun journeys that much farther south, reaching for the Tropic of Capricorn. Today's form will appear tomorrow, but it will be different, however slight.

After two seasons of New Mexico's sunsets, certain moments come to mind—moments complicated in their fullness. I once watched the sunset while floating on a small body of water in an inner tube. I looked straight up where the clouds were flushed red and floated, unlike my aimless drifting, quietly and quickly towards the sun. On the bottoms of the clouds red diminished to purple and finally to faint lavender. Suddenly the clouds became threatening and gray, and in their unexpected power they loomed ready, but like the loss in intensity of color, their power failed and their motion became a futile chase for the sun. As they thinned, I continued to drift.

After a late afternoon rainstorm, I found myself on a mesa top, capable of seeing the horizon as it stretched from northeast to west. The fiery sun fell into the horizon orange then red in the clear west sky. Kitchen Mesa was splotched gray where the rain had soaked into the yellow sandstone. In the southeast, great banks of storm clouds swept over the Jemez Mountains. Listening, I heard thunder's faint rumble. Looking again, I saw the clouds stained red, and nearest me where the rain fell in sheets, a rainbow appeared.

This is not all of the marvel in the sunset. The painter, the poet and the observer know that the brilliant fire colors are not the only ones in the sunset. They know there is green in every sunset. Green trapped like we in the unrelenting dramatic tension that comes with change; trapped between darkness and light. Yet it is not an envious green, desirous of a world of constant light and the warmth and contentment it brings. This is the green of life, the promise of dawn.

Miss Goddard

Goddard fund set

A $10,000 endowed scholarship fund has been established at Maryville College to honor Miss Carrie Lou Goddard of Nashville.

Mrs. Bessie Henry Olin and Dr. and Mrs. James N. Proffitt, all of Maryville, have established the Carrie Lou Goddard Scholarship Fund. Mrs. Olin is a 1920 MC graduate, and Dr. Proffitt is a 1938 MC graduate. Both Mrs. Olin and Mrs. Proffitt s are cousins of Miss Goddard, who is being honored for her contributions to the field of education.

One or more scholarships from this new endowment will be awarded annually to students in any class and in any major field. Academic performance, personal character, responsible citizenship and financial need will be considered in selecting recipients.

Miss Goddard was born in Maryville and graduated from MC in 1933. She taught in the Blount County public schools for eight years and in the Maryville city schools for two years. She earned her M.E. from the University of Tennessee. Miss Goddard served as professor of Christian education at Scarrett College in Nashville for 23 years before retiring in 1977.

The Carrie Lou Goddard Scholarship Fund is being left open for anyone wishing to honor Miss Goddard by adding to the fund.

Letters to the Editors

It seems that another tale from Ripley's Believe it or Not has come true on the MC campus. Students are being prevented from studying! The problem centers around the use of the Sutton Science building and facilities therein.

Several faculty members have seen to it that serious students are not allowed to be in Sutton on Sunday mornings and not after 1 a.m. on any night. For science students, this means loss of study time and severe constraints on lab work. On weekends, one might find the outer doors to Sutton open, but the doors to the library, equipment rooms, etc. are locked. Are students supposed to work in the hallways? Maybe on the side walk, or go to UT to use their facilities.

Science students, because of the nature of their studies, often keep odd hours and need a variety of equipment and facilities. These additional time limitations and barred doors further hamper the study efforts of those students who take their major seriously.

Administration takes a hike

Nineteen Maryville College administrative staff members participated in an administrative retreat on September 29 and 30 at Tapoco Lodge Resort in Tapoco, NC.

The purpose of the retreat was to familiarize the MC administrative staff with the MBO (Management By Objectives) system, a process of goal-oriented effectiveness in management.

The guest speaker, Dr. Roger Fritz, president of Organization Development Consultants of Naperville, IL, explained how the MBO process works, as well the group in an exercise in formulating key goals for their respective areas of responsibility.

Maryville College President Wayne Anderson stated: "This administrative retreat is a part of Maryville College's overall effort to introduce a more effective management system at the College. The MBO system which was discussed this past weekend is already being used in the MC Admissions Office."

Government reneges on student wages

by Helen Cordes

(CPS)—Robert Liberty is still mad.

Last spring, Liberty, a law student, helped the Oregon Student Lobby compile some startling statistics. Their report showed that almost half the students employed by Oregon schools were being, in essence, illegally underpaid. But when they presented their 20-page report to the Oregon Board of Higher Education (OBHE) and the U.S. Office of Education, neither took any action.

Presently, the Oregon case is being re-reviewed, and Liberty is hopeful of changes in the future. But for now, the wages remain largely unchanged, leaving Liberty bitter about a seemingly wasted effort.

Oregon's battle is typical of the plight of many students who find themselves working for their schools at rates lower than the $2.65/hour minimum wage. Most colleges and universities, it turns out, are routinely allowed to pay less than the minimum wage to all their working students, including those on work-study programs.

In getting their waivers, most colleges plead fiscal problems. And if the colleges meet federal requirements to pay wages comparable to prevailing rates and compatible with the skills of the student, the government will typically grant a waiver.

The problem, says Liberty, is that the government doesn't make much of an effort to see that colleges do indeed pay "comparable" and "compatible" wages. Janet Buntebard of O.E.'s Office of Financial Assistance agrees, saying there are so many schools requesting waivers that it's impossible to keep an eye on them all.

In Oregon's case, for example, the O.E. granted a waiver to the OBHE allowing them to pay subminimum (85 percent of the legal minimum) wages to its work-study students. Liberty says the O.E. action contradicted its prevailing local rate requirement. The Oregon Student Lobby's research was based on a 1977 Oregon wage-and-salary survey that showed starting pay for student employees in the state's seven public colleges was lower than that offered for comparable work to part-time state employees, employees of private businesses, and even students employed by Oregon's community colleges.

OBHE's waiver request "didn't contain one single scrap of justification," Liberty claims. "The bureaucrats granted the waiver simply to avoid the work of reviewing each request individually."

Government officials denied they grant waivers without reviewing them. But, Buntebard adds that no waiver request has ever been turned down O.E., either.

CUTTING BACK JOBS

It's not known exactly how many students work for sub-minimum wage, but the 1976 estimate of 470,000 is probably conservative. For one thing, following a 1976 Supreme Court decision exempting public colleges from minimum wage standards, public schools can now set their own wage scales. About 150 of them have sub-minimum wage permits for work-study.

U.S. Dept. of Labor officials estimate some 800 private colleges have minimum wage waivers for student employees and work-study employees. Businesses can also obtain waivers for student employees, who numbered over 142,000 in 1976.

Yet school administrators claim that, if they paid all students minimum wage, they would have to cut back on jobs or hours. The other solution, anathema to most administrators, would be requesting additional state appropriations.

Kent State University financial aid director William Johnson put it this way: "It's a simple matter of economics. No new money is coming in for wage increases. If we were to go to $2.65 an hour, some students would have to be laid off or get their hours reduced." Kent State currently employs 2,300 of its students.

However, pressure from the KSU Student Worker Association seemed to facilitate finding some new funding. Following the Association's threat to file suit against the university, all students received a 20 cent raise to $2.50. A month later, the hourly rate rose to $2.65, the present minimum.

Scots ambush Generals

The Scots' running back Ken Adair looking for a way in.

Led by quarterback Barry Mathis, who stepped in for injured Charlie Hixon, and a stingy defense, Maryville College scored a 13–0 shutout victory Saturday over Washington and Lee. The Scots' 1978 record is now 3–1.

The Scots challenge tough Millsaps College, (4–1) of Jackson, Mississippi, in this Saturday's homecoming affair. Kickoff time is 2 p.m.

Guided by Mathis and Nance the Scots produced the best rushing attack of this season. Nance ran for 90 yards on 29 carries thanks to some backfield blocking from Ron Marksberry and Ken Adair and the front line. The offensive unit gained 147 yards rushing.

MC senior running back Ken Adair danced into the endzone from 14 yards for Maryville's first score. Savary made it 7–0.

In the second period, punter Savary faked a kick and passed 37 yards to Bill Crews to set up Maryville's second touchdown. Mathis collected the second touchdown by scoring from the one-yard line. Savary's point after attempt was blocked and the Scots led 13–0. The lead held for the rest of the game.

One bright spot for the scoreless Generals of Washington and Lee was running back Stuart Atkinson's breaking the all time rushing record for W & L, Atkinson needed 41 yards and finished with 42.

The defensive shutout was led by several individual efforts. Sophomore Pete Barron had two quarterback sacks and a fumble recovery. Tony Ierulli had 16 hits and senior linebacker Wayne Dunn contributed 13 hits and a fumble recovery. MC's defense has given up only 15 points in four games.

Fickert stated that his Scots showed slight improvement. "We have not reached our potential as a football team and our goal is to reach our potential against Millsaps."

Soccer club grabs 1st

The Maryville College Soccer Team logged their first victory of the 1978 season Saturday as they squeaked by Carson Newman College, 4–3.

Tim Fitzgerald put 2 points on the scoreboard for MC with penalty kicks. Paul Heinze scored another point. The final point came from Greg Hossler, who scored from the corner and gave MC its margin of victory.

Tri-Captain Tim Farrell commented, "We have a win now. That should give us a boost. We should end up with a .500 season." The win over Carson Newman pushes MC's record to 1–4–0, with 7 games to go on the schedule.

This week the Scots play two home games. MC vs. Lee College is scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, October 12.

Though the Lady Scots placed second in their own tournament, they met with little success at Mars Hill.

V-ballers fall at Mars

The Lady Scots volleyball team felt the agony of defeat this weekend in all three matches in the Mars Hill Invitational Tournament. The first match was with Virginia Intermont, a rival of the Scotties. The v-ballers lost 6—15, 14—16.

The second match found the Scotties against the University of North Carolina at Asheville. They lost the first game 11—15, but came back the second game winning 15—9. The Scots couldn't hold UNCIA the third game, as they were defeated 14—16.

The third match brought Mars Hill and Maryville together. Mars Hill won the match 4—15, 9—15.

The Lady Scots' main problem was lack of movement and communication on the court.

Setter Ann Outterson served the most points in the game with 15. She also had several good saves. The Lady Scots' next home game is tomorrow against Carson-Newman.

Intramural teams clash

Men's Intramural Flag Football is underway, with two teams tied for first place. Both the Mongolian Stompers and the Puddin Eaters have an untarnished record at 2—0 as this week's schedule begins.

Copeland University has a loose hold on second with a 1—0 record. No Names and X-X are in contention for third with 0—1 records. And S.O.M.S. is in sole possession of last place with an 0—2 record.

Competition began on September 27 and will continue until a champ is determined.

This week, undefeated Copeland U. will attempt to keep its perfect record as they play the winless No Names on Monday at 6:00 p.m. Tuesday, X-X and S.O.M.S. will fight it out on the grid to see who will get the win. Tied-for-first Puddin Eaters take on No Names on Thursday.

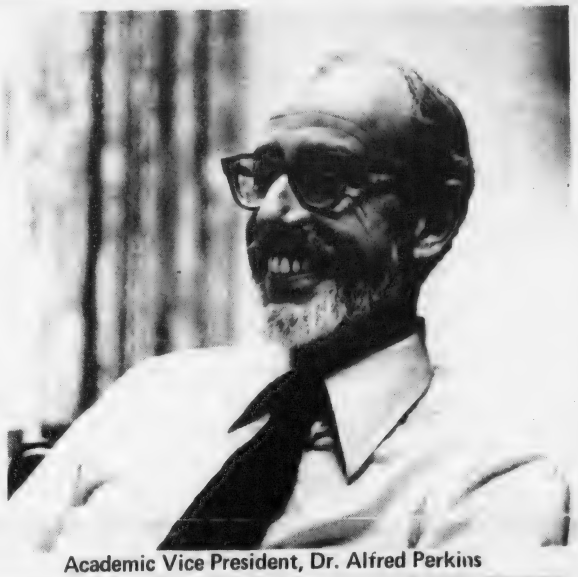
Perkins positive about MC

Dr. C. Alfred Perkins, new academic vice-president at Maryville College, feels that his being a newcomer to the college is an asset to the job.

Dr. Perkins states that the college has many strong points that may be overlooked or taken for granted by people who have been associated with MC for a long time.

Sitting in on three classes last week, Dr. Perkins said, "I was impressed with the easy relationship between teachers and students," "I saw students speaking up in class, correcting each other and being involved in their classes. This doesn't happen in a lot of places."



He also cites MC's attractive campus and good facilities as points in its favor.

Dr. Perkins is also impressed with the faculty's dedication and the loyalty of alumni. "When Maryville started looking at me and I started looking at Maryville, I never heard bad things about Maryville. This is a resource we can't generate and we can't buy."

Dr. Perkins was also surprised by the wide geographic range from which MC students are drawn. He feels this is also reflected in the Board of Directors, and the cosmopolitan orientation of the faculty. He says that MC has the best of both worlds—it is withdrawn from the cities, yet not so isolated as to be cut off from the world.

This month Dr. Perkins plans to spend a day in each of the college's departments. He has already visited history, chemistry, religion and interpreting. Next week he Homecoming Queen Colleen Masterson greets President Anderson at half-time.

Campus church forms

Beginning Sunday, November 5, at 11 a.m., something new will happen on the Maryville College campus. For the first time in the history of MC, a campus church will begin holding services. The site for the services is still undecided.

In the past, required daily chapel was used for announcements, scripture readings and hymns. When that was discontinued Vesper services were still held on Sunday evening for those who wanted to attend. Vespers was held as a supplement to a Sunday morning service and was not a substitute for a complete church service.

The Worship Committee has decided to change this situation. The committee, consisting of Dr. James Bloy, Jeff Hayes, Marion Hummel and Virginia Derby, met on October 12 and began shaping the plans for the ecumenical services.

Reverend James T. Stewart, who along with Sarah Edris, serves as co-chairperson ex officio of the committee, hopes that this will help to "find out what makes a worship service meaningful for the students." He stressed the fact that the students began the drive for this type of service and that student participation is going to be needed to make it work.

The committee has worked out a four-week cycle in which Rev. Stewart will conduct the service two weeks, a student will present the content of the service one week and a visiting minister will preach the fourth week. This plan will hopefully bring continuity to the church while still exposing the college to people from off campus.

There are plans for a chapel choir, open to anyone who enjoys singing. The choir could possibly be conducted by a member of the conducting class in the music department.

Ever wonder about test scores?

LAWRENCEVILLE, N.J. (CPS)—Camouflaged in the gently cantilevered hills of Lawrenceville is one of the most influential unknown corporations in America.

Critics like to characterize it as an unchecked monopoly, a gatekeeper, a cradle-to-grave arbiter of social mobility.

Forbes Magazine, after noting the 370 acres of prime real estate, the artificial pond, the real ducks, the $3 million conference center, the tasteful brick buildings, the savvy investments, called it one of the hottest little growth companies around.

Information officer John Smith calls it a very concerned organization, with a lot of integrity.

The IRS calls it non-profit.

Most Americans have little to say about the Educational Testing Service (ETS). They know it only as a multiple choice test that stands between them and college, grad school, law school and now more than 50 professions ranging from podiatrist to CIA agent. Last year over a million students took the ETS-designed Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). Another 800,000 sat down to one of a battery of graduate exams. Countless others, from pre-schoolers to auto mechanics, were measured, assessed, and, say the critics, judged by an ETS test.

. . . if the test has come to influence the allocation of academic opportunity, then the fault lies not with the ETS, but with the colleges.

These programs, plus grants from government and the private sector, netted ETS $70 million in 1977, with a profit margin of about $1 million. ETS, in short, is a very successful non-profit company.

A RUBBER STAMP?

"For too many students, the decision to take a standardized admission test creates a statistical shadow which follows them through life, often without their knowledge or control," says Congressman Michael Harrington (D-Mass).

Harrington has introduced a "Truth in Testing" bill designed to open standardized testing to public scrutiny and control. California recently passed a similar bill, and one is now pending before the New York legislature.

Park Service comes through

Tremont revitalized by June '79

New developments regarding Tremont merit another article on this controversial subject.

In a previous article, the Echo stated that on Sept. 23, a meeting was held at Tremont to determine the center's future. At that time the Park Service indicated they were willing to help locate funds which would help Tremont through this year. It was hoped that they would pick up the $25,000 tab for the use of Wesley Woods.

The situation is different now.

The Park Service, in an apparent surprise move, has tentatively offered $154,000 to restore the Tremont facilities completely by June, 1979. Of this money, $10,000 will be used for the dining hall and the remaining $144,000 for the restoration of the two dorms.

According to President Wayne Anderson, the key reason for the action from the Park Service was the meeting on Sept. 23 in which a crowd representing 70 various schools plainly stated their support of Tremont and were critical of the Park Service's decision to close the dorms. The Service did not mention giving money for their immediate repair at that time, though they did express a desire to provide money to keep the center open for this year.

Anderson, along with Dr. Tom Devaney, director of Tremont, visited the Park Service's headquarters in Atlanta. They were told that money would be available but that it would be at least five years before it could be gotten and construction work started on the dorms. Anderson assured the Service it was "crucial" that the money be gotten earlier. The $154,000 appears to have been offered after this meeting.

However the matter with Wesley Woods is not finalized. Their board will meet on Nov. 2 to approve the $25,000 figure, the price offered for the services of Wesley Woods for Tremont residents at night. Should they approve it, Tremont will run as a day program for the remaining of the year with nightly trips made to Wesley Woods. The financial burden of this will fall on Maryville College.

Though a loss of money is inevitable for the year, Anderson feels that this will be worthwhile and is necessary in order to hang on to Tremont. With the renewal permit coming in 1980, it is essential that Tremont be kept in running order.

One reason for the financial difficulties is because 1/4 to 1/3 of the students originally planning to attend Tremont this year will not be doing so. When the center was reported closed a few months ago, schools cancelled their trips to Tremont, thinking it would not be opened at all. Though it is clear that it will be operated on a day program, the school's funds have already been reallocated to other areas and they are unable to return them to Tremont.

The day program, loss of students, and the financial red which Tremont is experiencing this year will not make it a memorable year for the right reasons. It is a rebuilding though. Let's hope that this period will be rewarding in the years to come.

vancement of Teaching, the American Council for Education and the College Board Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) established ETS as a searate entity chartered to construct educational tests.

Of this triumvirate, CEEB was and is the most important. An umbrella organization representing over 2500 schools of every character, it contracts with ETS to provide admissions tests. Despite their historical tie, the relationship is supposed to be purely contractual, with CEEB acting as consumer protector.

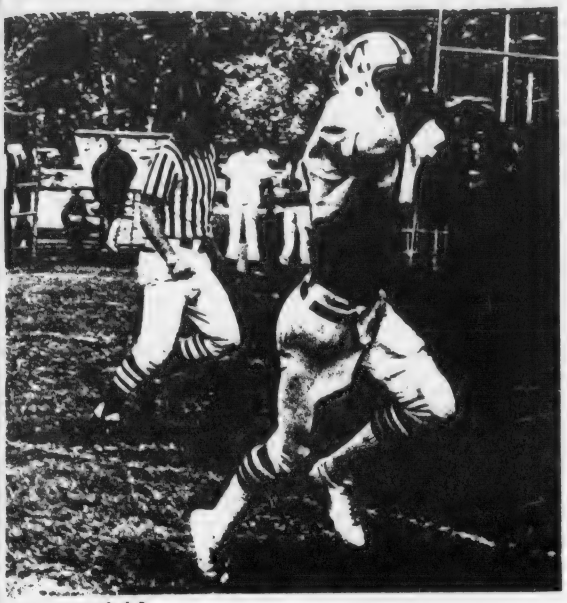
"Not so," says Nader researcher Alan Nairns. "The college board is a rubber stamp for ETS, and therefore not accountable to the students who must take and pay for the exams."

"Historical" and "Amicable" are the words ETS president William Turnbull uses to describe the relationship. He should also say profitable. Last year CEEB programs accounted for more than 42 percent of ETS revenues.

Turnbull admits that ETS, as the largest educational research organization in the country, often conducts the studies that validate its own test to clients like CEEB, but he points to the distinguished educators involved in the CEEB-ETS relationship as proof that motives are pure.

IT'S THE SCHOOL'S FAULT

One-time Einstein collaborator and longtime ETS gadfly Banesh Hoffman disagrees: "They reward superficiality, ignore creativity and penalize the person with a subtle probing mind." Ralph Nader and Harrington echo Hoffman's charge that the tests ignore such vital qualities as creativity, integrity and maturity.



Turnbull agrees: "It's not as if there were an array of things to test, and ETS chose only a couple. We test only what we know how to measure. He adds that if the test has come to influence the allocation of academic opportunity, then the fault lies not with ETS, but with the colleges.

The $1.50 charge for the hayride includes the wagon trip on the Cades Cove Loop Road and donuts and hot chocolate afterwards. A car caravan (student cars are needed) will assemble behind Pearsons and leave at 5:30 p.m. At this time, Copeland's Halloween party, featuring spooky movies, horror flicks, etc. on the upper floor of Willard House, will begin. Dancing and refreshments will be located downstairs.

Parents' Weekend, Oct. 28-29, will commence with the Hole-In-One Golf Tournament at 11 a.m. Saturday. Prizes will be awarded. At lunch, parents are cordially invited to dine with Dr. Anderson in Proffitt Dining Hall.

MC will face Southwestern at 1:30 p.m. on Honaker Field. That evening, Lloyd lobby will host a semi-formal dance, complete with orchestra. The dance begins at 9 p.m. and lasts until midnight.

Another "Run for Fun" will leave the starting gate at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 29. T-shirts (a different design) cost $3.00. For pre-registration, give your name, T-shirt size, and money to Genie Varker, Box 2714. Winding up the Parents' Weekend events is the orchestra concert at 3:30 p.m.

On Monday, Oct. 30, the Playmakers will relate ghost stories, folk tales, and superstitions of Tennessee and surrounding areas in "The Haunted Hour." Willard House will act as their stage; time is 9:00 p.m.

Come to dinner Tuesday, Oct. 31, in your Halloween costume—prize for the best costume is $10; second is $5. After dinner, various games and a pie-eating contest will be held.

Student Center: for the students?

With the advent of changes in the menu, prices and time that have occurred, the Student Center has become undesirable for many students.

The changes that have taken place in the menu have left the students with a very limited choice. Most of the more popular foods, such as ham and cheese sandwiches, onion rings and chili, have been deleted.

The most common complaint of the students concerns the increase in prices. The cost of a cheeseburger last year was 65 cents, and most students resent paying a 30 cent increase. These prices are higher than almost anywhere in town. High prices were blamed for the reduction in the menu, according to a source close to the operation of the Campus Center Snack Bar. The source said "SAGA, under whose jurisdiction the Snack Bar falls, made all of these changes." Our question is that if SAGA intended to raise prices, why did they cut the menu? The students will come closer to paying a higher price for something they enjoy rather than something they are forced to buy because there is nothing else available to them.

The hours that the Student Center operates also create problems for the students. With the Center not opening until 9 a.m., there is no place for commuters, who arrive early, to go. The 4 p.m. closing time also creates the same problem. At 10 minutes of 4 everyone must leave the Center, and commuters who are waiting on rides must find somewhere else to wait. With winter approaching, the problem becomes more acute.

It seems that the restrictions concerning the Student Center were made to fit the needs of management rather than the needs of the students. These restrictions leave plenty to be desired.

ACC continues alcohol probe

The alcoholic policy was once more discussed by the ACC at a meeting called to review changes in GUIDELINES TO BROADER SOCIAL EVENTS. Originally, the GUIDELINES had stated that the consumption of alcohol at campus events could not be advertised. Now, all advertisements for such events must state "Alcoholic beverages are permitted." "The intent is to let people know who might not want to go," said Jane Richardson. The Office of Student Services will judge whether or not a poster is in good taste and will remove those it considers in poor taste.

Scots swing Major victory

The Maryville College Scots outranked the Millsaps Majors in a Homecoming battle Saturday afternoon, 13—7. The win, MC's biggest this year, gave them a 4—1 record while Millsaps dropped to 4—2.

Bending but refusing to break, Maryville's never-say-die defense held the Majors scoreless on their first two possessions. Millsaps had a total of 122 yards on two drives, but was unable to score.

Led by Donny Thomas, the defense gave the offense a chance for the lead. Thomas picked off a Millsaps pass and with nifty foot work returned the interception 50 yards to the Major's 30-yard line. Three plays later, Hixon hit runningback Alvin Nance with a flare pass and the talented runner broke tackles for the score. Savory made it 7—0.

Another determined drive, sparked by Hixon and Nance increased the lead to 10—0. Savary's fake punt pass to Steve Moffett on fourth down and Hixon's pass to Craig Gentry moved the ball to the Millsap's one yard line. A delay of game penalty hurt, but the Scots added three points with Savary's foot.

In their only scoring drive, the Majors moved the ball 76 yards in 12 plays to score from one yard out. MC's passing game was good for another three points.

Pete Barron's fumble recovery and Donny Thomas' second pass interception proved to be the icing on the cake for the Homecoming game.

The Scots are on the road to St. Leo Florida this Saturday.

Puddin' Eaters in first

The undefeated Puddin Eaters took over first place in Intramural Flag Football last week, as they stretched their record to 3 straight wins, in a game with the NO names. Now second, the Mongolian Stompers were idle with a 2—0 record.

Before losing to the Puddin Eaters, winless NO Names defeated Copeland University on a technical forfeit.

X-X and S.O.M.F., both previously winless, also clashed. S.O.M.F. came out the winner, tying them with Copeland University for 4th.

This week sees the Mongolian Stompers matched against S.O.M.F. on Tuesday, beginning at 6 P.M.

will visit music, math and physics, biology and English and theater.

"Maryville College has serious financial problems and there is no magic answer to these problems," he says. "However, when they are weighed against goodwill, intelligence and commitment, they can be reduced."

But he feels that the answer to these problems is not to water down courses or remove admissions standards. Dr. Perkins sees these solutions as bringing only short-term success that will ultimately short-change the students.

Instead, he feels, MC must concentrate on what it can do well, instead of trying to be all things to all students.

An organist will be needed to play for the services. Along with the organ, utilization of instrumental music or folk music is being considered.

A pipe organ will be needed most of the time, but outside services are also in the plans.

The area churches have shown support of this new endeavor. Rev. Stewart commented, "An overwhelming majority of area churches are very positive about the idea of a campus church service. Their response shows a maturity of churchmanship."

Frosh and ACC officers elected for 1978-'79

The elections which took place on Oct. 5 have left us with two new ACC representatives and three freshman class officers.

Cathy Angell, the freshman ACC representative from Clarksville, AR, and Bill Sharp, the junior ACC representative from Birmingham, AL, are looking forward to a good year on the ACC. "The ACC is good because it involves the students in the administration of the college," says Cathy.

Both are hoping for a lot of ideas and feedback from the students. Bill expressed a concern that the students are not hearing about what happens at ACC meetings. "I know quite a few students and can tell them what is going on in the ACC," he stated. Nov. 1, the two new members will attend their first meeting.

The freshman class officers are also looking forward to a big year. "The three of us have had one meeting and we came up with a lot of ideas, mainly getting to know all the freshmen and trying to develop class unity," said Vice-President Betsy Pankey. Her roommate, Secretary-Treasurer Sissy Gravely, seconded this statement. Walt Montgomery,

Parents' Day brings activity

Parents' Day at Maryville College will be held October 27-29 and will include a wide range of events.

Leading off the activities will be the MC Theatre's production of The Lark at 8:15 p.m., Friday.

Parents will register from 8 to 10 a.m., Saturday in Pearsons Hall. Immediately following will be a Parent-Faculty Coffee Hour in the colonnade of the MC Chapel.

Beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing throughout the day will be plant and arts and crafts sales. The plant sale, sponsored by Tri Beta, biology honorary, will be in the MC green house behind Sutton Science Center.

The arts and crafts sale, which will be held in the colonnade of the Chapel, is sponsored by the MC Concert Choir. The Choir will use receipts form the sale to help fund a concert tour planned for this summer to Hawaii, South Korea and Japan.

The Maryville Alcoa College-Community Orchestra will hold a dress rehearsal, open to parents, from 9:15 to 11 a.m. in the Chapel.

The MC basketball team will sponsor a Hole-in- One Contest on the MC golf course from 11 a.m. until noon. Prizes will be awarded in three separate divisions: parents, faculty, and students.

After lunch, MC President Wayne Anderson will talk with parents at 12:30 p.m. in Proffitt Dining Room.

The Scots' football game against Southwestern at Memphis will kickoff at 1:30 p.m. at Honaker Field.

The Lark will be performed again at 8:15 p.m., Saturday, in the MC Theatre. From 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Ward & Company, a local band, will perform for the Harvest Moonlight Semi-Formal Dance. The dance, to be held in Lloyd Hall, is free for parents, faculty, staff and students but will cost $2 at the door for the public.

Sunday's events will begin with a five-mile "Run for Fun." The run, beginning at 2 p.m., at the post office is open to the public.

Bill Sharp and Kathy Angell represent the Sophomores and the Freshmen, respectively, as newly elected officers on the ACC.

Traffic regulations explained

The Traffice Committee met recently and decided its policy for the handling of traffic violation of rules and regulations and repeated offenses were all considered.

In regards to an appeal: if you receive a ticket and believe that it is a mistake or is unjust, you have three days to appeal. Simply write a letter to the Traffic Committee explaining the incident and why you think the ticket should be voided, and bring it to the Office of Student Services. The Committee will then decide if they should excuse or sustain the ticket.

Concerning tickets for non-registration: if you received one ticket for not registering your car and then registered it before October 13, your ticket is void and no fine is required. However, if you received more than one ticket, or if you failed to register before Oct. 13, you will be charged the $25 registration fine (plus $2 for the ticket).

During the registration period, the paper on "Rules and Regulations

Board holds meeting

MC Board of Trustees will gather together this weekend to conduct college business at the second semi-annual Board meeting of '78.

Board members will hear committee reports, administrative reports and other regular business while others on the Maryville campus prepare last-minute details for Parents' Day.

Two items on the agenda for the Board meeting include a review of the alcohol policy "just to see how it's working," and the appointment of a special task force to study and analyze what it means in this day and age to be a "church-related college."

Meetings are scheduled to take place from midday Thursday to Saturday afternoon. A reception will be held for faculty and Board Members on Friday at 4:30 in the Fine Arts Center lounge. Later in the evening a special preview performance of The Lark will be shown to Board members at 6:45 in the Proffitt dining room.

Poor food causes poor state of mind

Saga displays sub-level quality

Albert Einstein came up with his theory of relativity, the equation being e=mc2. Here at Maryville College we have the makings of a new theory of relativity: state of mind=(weather) (Saga)2. The weather is out of the hands of humanity. Saga is another matter, though.

This past Friday another one of the infamous food fights erupted in the dining hall. Quite obviously these displays should not be encouraged or even condoned. But just as the saying goes, perhaps the flying food was a voice crying in the wilderness.

It seems to be perfectly clear that the disgruntled students involved were upset over something. Perhaps their behavior can be explained by the poor quality of "food" that has been served this year.

The Echo ran an article recently about the state of Saga. It was reported that Ms. Hows did not receive an increase in budget this year. Thus, she must make do with what money she had. Even though she has a point, it's painfully obvious that she hasn't been satisfying the paying customers.

Some of the complaints this year concern the number of desserts offered. To some of the students, this seems like a misplacement of funds. They feel that instead of junk food, the menu should contain more nutritious food. And incidentally, the repetition of lasagna and pizza in the line has not been met with favorable reviews. Too much of anything gets old.

The growing number of complaints about the food can add up to only one thing: A poor state of mind. This was in evidence Friday evening. It has become apparent over the years that the atmosphere in the dining hall is directly proportional to the quality of food served to the students. Have you listened to the uproar in there lately?

The food service has always instigated controversy on this campus. Last spring we got a new Saga manager. For awhile the complaints died down. But it turns out this was due to an overexpenditure of the budget. Now, once again, we are faced with poor food. What can be done about it?

Last week an open food committee meeting was held. Only seven students showed up. This was partly due to lack of publicity and information of the meeting. In the future, though, the student body should attend these meetings and air their grievances. If we are given the opportunity to tell our viewpoint, we should definitely make use of the chance.

It has been said that man cannot live by bread alone. At Saga right now that is about the only thing edible. This situation has got to change. Otherwise, can you imagine the state of mind the students will be in by the end of this academic year?

DESERT KIDS

Dead . . . quiet . . . . shadows . . . deception. The old house is within ½ mile of campus, yet few know its location. Of those who have been there, only the brave, or foolish have returned. Some have vowed never to go back.

Is it haunted? That sounds too much like Halloween. It is sufficient to say the unexplained happens there with regularity.

For example, there is a small creek before the house. If you go there at 6:00 it contains little water, but return at 9:00 and it is a gushing stream.

There was once a piano at the old house, which played by itself.

One room is full of feathers. Covering the floor, there is no trace where they came from.

Three MC students tried to haunt it years ago. The house had the last laugh as the 5-minute walk to their car turned into an hour search through woods and simple side streets. They were finally found by a mutual friend a mile from their car . . . . heading in the wrong direction.

And so, for those of you with a delicate taste for the absurd, the insane and undesirable, the house waits for you . . . . . Happy Halloween.

ROTC: jokes on us

editorial

On Nov. 1, the ACC will vote on whether or not to allow ROTC to enter Maryville College. The outcome of this vote is not the concern of this article; the inexcusable lack of communication with the student is.

Essentially, the ACC is voting on what many feel to be a large and controversial subject without informing the students. After questioning a cross-section of 25 people in the cafeteria, not one was aware that ROTC was being voted upon within 10 days. Ironically, the Echo picked the story up at Down Yonder. Something is amuck in MC.

This is similar to the origin of the alcohol policy. Though it was in and out of the ACC, when the board passed it, the initial move did not come from the ACC. I know of ACC members who were upset that such a movement did not originate with the ACC. They felt the ACC was not serving its purpose and was abused. The alcohol policy was like a Christmas gift.

It appears that the ACC is about to turn the trick. Perhaps they are taking a lesson from the board. Perhaps we are in no mood for Santa Claus.

Satire is insufficient here. We are on the verge of making a farce of our governing system. We are defeating our purpose.

Whether the vote is yea or nay for ROTC, I turn my back on the hypocrisy of this affair.

Merry Christmas.

Dear Editor:

I want to take advantage of this "open forum" to express my appreciation to all the people who helped make Homecoming '78 such a success. Many people don't realize how much effort goes into such an event, but the individuals who devoted the last month to Homecoming plans deserve some recognition.

The Social Committee, under the leadership of Sharon Crane and Genie Varker, did a fabulous job of generating spirit and planning enough events to satisfy any taste!

Carol Hows deserves a medal for Heroic Action under Crossfire, as do Hugh Crawford, Lee Stevens, and the whole maintenance staff.

Libby Rankin, who dreamed up the whole idea for Saturday night's entertainment is the "unsung heroine" of the weekend. Without her preplanning throughout the summer, Dr. Anderson would never have had the chance to demonstrate his dancing ability!

Last, but by no means least, hats off to Steve Fickert and his mighty Scots! They made us all proud.

Sincerely,
Sarah DeYoung

Playmakers perform varied theater

The Maryville College Playmakers group gives its members a chance for varied theater experiences.

On Oct. 30 at 9 p.m. at Willard House, the Playmakers will present a Haunted Hour. It will include regional ghost stories and the story of Halloween.

Other performances this term will be a fund-raising dinner theater for faculty, staff and administration on Nov. 4 and a story theater program for the Knoxville Book Fair on Nov. 19. On Dec. 11 the Playmakers will present a Christmas dinner theater show in the dining hall.

Members of Playmakers are Lois Boney, English major; Allen Evitts, math major; Tim Stuart, elementary education major; John Morton, speech-theater major; Ed Herbert, political science major, Judy Fulks, voice major; Linda Wylie, English major; Ruth Cartlidge, speech-theater major; Bill Thomas, political science; Peggy Stewart, music education major and Sharon Youngs, physical education major.

Sharon Crane is director, Heidi Parunak is the road coordinator, and Dr. Carolyn Blair is faculty advisor for Playmakers.

Allen Evitts sees Playmakers as a learning experience for people interested in theater, a different kind of learning experience from that of the class room.

Lois Boney feels that Playmakers gives her a chance to use and develop her creative talents: "Since the Playhouse only does four shows a year, Playmakers gives a chance to improve our repertoire. This is especially true since we have a closed cast with no stars."

Playmakers also gives its members a chance to perform a variety of works by many authors. Music majors have a chance to perform more popular music than the work they do for class. The Playmakers have performed in a variety of places—from theaters to living rooms.

Mike Ketcherside helps the group to perform. Because of high interest and a good response, the group has kept on. Membership in Playmakers is decided by auditions at the end of the year. However, this winter the group will sponsor one-act plays with open auditions.

Congress aids middle income

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)—In a major victory for President Carter, the Congress adopted the president's Middle Income Assistance Act and, in last-minute politicking before the Oct. 15 adjournment, dropped the tuition tax credit legislation Carter opposed.

The Middle Income Assistance Plan, offered by the president last February as an alternative to tuition tax credits, adds some $1.2 billion to existing federal student financial aid programs.

Specifically, the plan expands the government's Basic Educational Opportunity Grants, Guaranteed Student Loans, and Work-Study programs. The plan was generally pitched to middle-income families, who presumably want some relief from the rising costs of college education.

Under the act, which the president is expected to sign into law shortly, dependents of families earning more than $16,000 are eligible for work-study grants for the first time ever. Average grants to families earning $8,000-$16,000 per year will go up by some $200.

Tuition tax credits legislation, which would have allowed families to deduct up to $100 in tuition costs from their income taxes, passed both the House and the Senate last week. As originally introduced, the bill included the tuition costs of students in elementary and secondary schools as well. Political expediency demanded that elementary and secondary school costs be dropped from the bill, which was then passed as an amendment to a larger tax cut bill.

House and Senate versions of the larger bill, though, were different. When the bill was referred back to a joint conference committee, several representatives insisted on attaching the elementary and secondary school provision to it again. An agreement could not be reached, and while the tax cut bill went on to passage, the tuition tax credit amendment to it was dropped.

Despite the concurrent passage of the Carter plan, Dr. Albert Alford, assistant commissioner for legislation at the U.S. Office of Education, expects that tuition tax credits may make a comeback in Congress' next session. "It's a perennial bill," he observes, "and there's no doubt quite a few representatives intend to sponsor one again. But after the Middle Income Assistance plan, I couldn't tell you if it (tuition tax credits) will have the same push it did this time."

Art students commissioned

The last commissioned art works to be purchased with the '77-'78 Merrill Commission Fund are now on display in the Library.

This is the third time that Charles E. Merrill, a friend of the college, has given a large sum of money. The commission money has been used to encourage practicing artists and to enrich the campus facilities.

Last spring Anne Gilliland, Carol Neal, Sabrina Rawls, Laura Ross and Lokken Liane were commissioned to do drawings, which are currently on display. Their work is to hang in the proposed student union.

Other work bought with the '77-'78 money includes wall hangings, banners, a chalice and platter for the Little Chapel and a banner which hangs in Anderson Hall.

Works bought with Merrill Commission money in past years include seven paintings in the Student Center, three paintings in the band room, a wood sculpture in the library, wall hangings in Davis and the Fine Arts Center, and banners and a wood relief sculpture for the Chapel.

Orchestra concert set for Sunday

The Maryville Alcoa College-Community Orchestra will present a free public concert at 3:30, Sunday, Oct. 29 in the Maryville College Chapel. The concert will be the culmination of the events planned for Parents' Day.

The 54-member orchestra, composed of persons from the College and surrounding communities will be conducted by Mr. Gene Taliaferro-Jones of the MC music faculty.

The program will include a piece from Mozart's last opera, "La Clemenzada di Tito," part of a variation of Mendelsohnns' "Midsummer Night's Dream," and a "Variation on a theme by

Scots humiliate St. Leo, 56-0

by Robert Boone

Maryville College socked St. Leo at St. Leo, Florida 56—0 last Saturday afternoon and in the process assured themselves of a winning football season.

The Scots, now 5—1, host Southwestern College at Memphis this Saturday at Honaker Field for what promises to be quite a showdown.

Ken Adair and Alvin Nance provided the Scots with an impressive rushing attack as the two rushed for a total of 335 yards. Rugged Adair was the workhorse as he rolled up 210 yards on 37 carries and scored two touchdowns. Nance picked up 125 yards on just 10 attempts.

Another strong defensive effort was given by senior captains David Shankle and Danny Thomas. Shankle pounced on two fumbles while Thomas picked off his sixth pass interception of the season. The intimidated St. Leo squad was held to a mere 45 yards total offense.

Quarterbacks Charlie Hixon and Barry Mathis both played well and threw for touchdown passes.

MC coach Steve Fickert had words of praise for his offensive line, consisting of Eddie West, Steve Serotte, Dave Evans, Keith Martin and Kevin Reilly.

The Scots never had to punt during the game.

V-ballers place second

The Lady Scots boosted their record to 13—8 this week. The Scotties traveled to Bryan Thursday and won all three games. Holly Hartson played an excellent match.

This weekend the v-ballers got second place in the Sewanee Invitational Tournament. They defeated Sewanee, Southwestern and Milligan. The Lady Scots played the final game with Vanderbilt for first place and won the first game but lost the next two.

Coach Sharon Brown commented, "No one person was a stand-out. Everyone played well. The team came from behind several times to get the victory. The last match was just too hard for us to come back. We had spent 14 hours in the gym that day, and everyone was tired."

The Scotties next home game is Nov. 3 against Swanee.

Mr. David M. Roberts

Roberts fills VP post

Maryville College will have a vice president of development as of Jan. 2. He is David M. Roberts who has worked with the University of Tennessee and Vanderbilt University and is presently director of development at Memphis State University.

After a meeting of the College's Board of Directors, at which Roberts discussed his responsibilities as coordinator of the offices of development, alumni and communications, as well as fund-raising for the college, MC president Wayne Anderson announced the appointment. "Dave Roberts has the exemplary personal qualities, the fund-raising skills and experience, and the extensive acquaintance with people throughout Tennessee and elsewhere to make a great record at Maryville College," said Dr. Anderson.

As development director at MSU, Roberts has been responsible for the planning and conducting of its private gift support program. While there, he was named a finalist in the US Steel Incentive Award competition improvement category. These awards are given annually in recognition of outstanding giving programs.

Before working at MSU, Roberts was director of alumni affairs and associate director of development for the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences at Memphis. Prior to working there, he was assistant director of alumni affairs and then promoted to director of the Annual Giving Program for UT-Knoxville. During the time Roberts worked at UT, the program received four US Steel Awards for improvement and sustained performance.

Roberts received a B.S. degree in journalism in 1965 from UT-K and is now a candidate for a M.S. degree in educational administration and supervision.

He has served as a reporter on The Chattanooga News-Free Press and worked as a writer for an editor of the Vanderbilt University news bureau.

He has been an active member of the American Alumni Council and its successor, the Council for Advancement and Support of Education. He is now chairman-elect of its board of directors and is the chairman of the district's annual conference, which will take place February in Birmingham.

Board approves Pearsons' concept

The Maryville College Board of Directors, meeting on campus last week, reviewed and approved the alcohol policy as recommended by the All College Council. They also approved the self-governing concept for Pearsons Hall and made one change in current visitation policy.

Regarding visitation, the board voted to allow individual house councils to cancel sign-in/sign-out procedures remaining in effect in three women's halls. The escort policy which states that all guests must be escorted by a resident of that hall remains in effect.

In other action the board supported the self-governing concept in Pearsons, a program which permits unlimited intrahall visitation for

Ketcherside, Ziegler in "La Traviata"

Michael Ketcherside and Delores Ziegler will appear in the local premiere of the opera "La Travita," by Verdi, at 8:15 Friday, November 3, in the Bijou Theater in Knoxville. A Sunday matinee is set for 3 p.m. at the Bijou.

Ketcherside, an MC instructor of voice in the fine arts department, portrays the character Gastone. He is the happy-go-lucky life of the party.

Ziegler, a well-known singer from Alcoa, is filling the role of Flora, the hostess for one of the parties in the opera.

This opera will be the birth of the Knoxville Civic Opera Company. Included in the cast will be internationally famous opera star Mary Costa and John Stewart, a singer from New York City. Stage director James Lucas is one of the busiest free-lance directors in New York.

Dance company to perform

The Eurythmeum Stuttgart dance company of West Germany, accompanied by the Romanian State Orchestra and internationally famous actress Sarah Burton, will perform Tuesday, Nov. 7 at 9:20 a.m. in a CIV program in the theatre.

The multinational group is making its first tour of North America, according to Tour Spokesman Charlotte B. Kull of Maryville. "The special program for the college is a unique one," she added, "since the group is performing chiefly in selected cities in the United States and Canada."

The dancers perform Europe's independent dance form called eurythmy, a type of entertainment in which language and music become visible in colorful movement and dynamic gestures. Costuming and lighting are also designed to enhance the visible impact of a poem or musical piece, she explained. Mrs. Kull described eurythmy as a fairly young dance form which attempts to make it possible to "see" sounds as a poem is recited or a piece of music is played. It consists of a large spectrum of motions both for the sounds of language and the full range of musical tones.

Composed of 21 performers from 9 countries, the Eurythmeum Stuttgart dance company is directed by Else Klink, a veteran of the eurythmy form. Ion Baciu will conduct the Romanian State Orchestra.

Miss Burton, a native of London, has performed for the theatre, radio and television in the US and abroad. She has been featured with such stars as Noel Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Beatrice Lillie, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Basil Rathbone and Orson Wells.

Musical numbers will range form Gluck's "Dance of the Furies" and Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony:: to Charles Ives' "The Unanswered Question." Miss Burton and the company will perform numbers ranging from nursery rhymes to works by Robert Frost, Rudolf Steiner and Thornton Wilder.

A public performance of the group is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Nov. 6 in the Bijou Theatre in Knoxville. The two productions, both sponsored by the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet, will be the only ones presented in the South, Mrs. Kull noted. Members of the public will be seated at the campus performance if space is available.

Mouth-watering race

Candidates excel at advertising

One cannot help but notice the close gubernatorial race which has developed in Tennessee. Even the less observant among us has noticed the below the belt ads which both candidates have employed.

This tactic is certainly not new to our political system, and much has been said about it in recent years. Yet, it is still amazing that the candidates continue to dig up the dirtiest issues about their opponent as their main platform rather than the issues which confront the people.

Many of us have heard in classes that we are the ones who will face the problems of our world in the future. This will require an instrument of change, since the politicians of today do not confront these issues themselves.

One ad tells of all the bars one opponent is connected with in Knoxville. My mouth waters just watching it. Perhaps Miller is contributing money. Another ad on local radio tells of the opponents' sketchy past. The ad is done in a fake Tennessee accent, making one believe that the object of it is to communicate to low intelligent turtles.

Have the voters gone blind? Do they really fall for this type of advertisement? Is this an indication of how out of touch the candidates are or how naive the voters are?

Either way, the system is in a poor state. Mass communication has made mass advertisement possible. It appears that someone or something is abusing this media. A question for another day is whether the media is hurting itself or merely following the law of business and freedom of speech. Unfortunately, my opinion of one station in Knoxville has dived this past week because of ads which they have aired. Quite simply, I can go elsewhere to have my intelligence insulted other than the car radio.

Even TV ads are fake, beyond any attempt of sincerity. In one ad, the candidate has himself surrounded by hard hat wearers. And I mean hard hats! Every man has his hat on, even though he is not working at that specific time. If one looks close enough, one can even see the price tags still on the hats. Naturally, the candidate has his every day pair of Levis and denim or plaid shirt on. Perhaps I have become too cynical and critical, but these ads are so shallow, I cannot keep a straight face while watching.

Enough of this hypocrisy. State the issues, state your positions, and I'll ask if I want to know how many bars one of you owns. According to their ads, the hottest issues in Tennessee outside of bars and hardhats is criminal punishment. Is this what the voters feel?

Underneath all this are real issues with two men competing to be the one the people vote to meet these issues. The voters deserve the right to know the men as political thinkers, not as deceptive advertisers.

DESERT KIDS

WRECKED REMAINS

The rain trickles through the sockets
That once held your deep, lovely eyes;
The head that once I loved to hold
In my hands
Lies there, cocked to one side and Tilted up, lifeless and totally Without the feelings and emotions
I once admired.
There is now no response to My earnestness as I gaze at
Your face, hoping for some Hope that you are still . . . Alive?
Where have you gone?

The silent sands and roaring waves
Tell no answers.
The deserted, dreary pier, a mile down
The beach, has never known you, nor Does it now see you, so far away.
There are no opinions being voiced
Here!

I long for warm lips;
Not the cold lifeless bone
I just kissed.

Whose was that voice?
"There are memories enough,"
It said.
Oh, there are warm memories,
But there you lie—a cold,
Despairing one.
Whose damnable voice was it
To try to conquer reality?
I loathe that voice. Depart!

That was not you who uttered that;
You, whose words were warm as
The life that warmed you.

Can I warm you now?
Can we snuggle together,
Touching and kissing,
Till the morning streams
Through the curtains?

But, that is not you there
On the cold, wet sand.
I will look other places
For that is not you there.

Letters to the Editors

Dear Editor

After tolerating the noise problem in the library for the past seven weeks, I stumbled across another inexcusable situation that has led me to openly discuss my feelings concerning the first floor of Thaw Hall that has been termed by some as a library. The predicament that I'm referring to is the fact that some people have taken it upon themselves to rip articles out of bound magazines, making them inaccessible to others.

I find it difficult to understand why anyone would be so selfish that he would steal any material from a library just so no one else could use it. That kind of behavior is disgraceful at any age, but I find it to be unforgivable in a college setting. I wonder what kind of value system is held by the person(s) responsible for the above acts. There is no way to stop people from taking library materials for their own, permanent use short of having a guard posted in the stacks, but that idea shatters the concept of college students as being mature, responsible adults, capable of making decisions that will be of benefit to themselves and others.

The second aspect of the library situation that has been extremely aggravating to me is the noise level. I recognize the fact that the acoustical setup is not conducive to a quiet atmosphere, but it seems that a high percentage of people using the library feel that a conversational tone of voice is necessary when communicating with someone else. Having had regular contact with two other university and college libraries, not to mention numerous public ones, I find the Maryville College library to be a pathetic example of what a library should be in this regard.

Somewhere along the line students at this college have lost respect for one another regarding the use of the library facilities.

Dear Editor,

On Oct. 26, an editorial on Saga was printed in the Echo. The editorial was not a good journalistic endeavor as it presented no pertinent facts or solutions to what it looked at. I believe students who complain about Saga and the job Ms. Carol Hows does do not know the whole story. For example, students do not pay much for that food. The board this year is near $700. If a student eats but 2 meals a day, for the whole academic year, it is costing him $1.73 for all he can eat. Those eating 3 meals find that cost at $1.01 for all they want.

Another point is that Carol Hows does listen to student gripes. Last week she put in a new type of egg at breakfast because students wanted a better tasting egg. it is more expensive, but the call was out for a new egg.

Carol Hows has also formed a Saga Food Committee and there, 14-20 students, Ms. Hows, and 3 staff people, listened to gripes and complaints trying to determine a solution to the problem. The meetings are Wednesdays at 3 p.m. in the dining room.

One complaint is about meat, or lack of it. Ms. Hows has but $120 a day for meat and that does not buy much meat for 500-800 servings, so some days we don't have it.

There is a simple solution that I, myself, can't afford.If the students really want better food, they must pay for it. Saga is working with the little we have given them and I know it's better than any of the other institutions I have eaten at.

Mr. Steve Sumerford

Sumerford advocates total disarmament

by Ed Herbert

On October 24, Steve Sumerford, an activist with the Mobilization for Survival, presented a CIV on the Disarmament Imperative. In the program he discussed his organization's hopes for nuclear disarmament before we get into a dreaded nuclear confrontation. He finished his presentation with a slide show and question-and-answer period. The slide show was titled The Last Slide Show, presenting the possibilities of a nuclear holocaust, and yet it saw man overcoming this powerful killer and learning to live life to its fullest.

The next morning, I was able to interview Mr. Sumerford during breakfast. He told me that his program is to get people involved, but to a bigger extent, to make them aware of the arms race. He wanted more students to bring up the argument many of them had after the program in their dorms as to our disarmament. That was that if we disarm our nuclear weapons, the Soviets would destroy us. Two points were made by Mr. Sumerford: First, the Soviets would hurt themselves if they attacked because we would never disarm unless they would follow suit. Second, unless their intention was to totally destroy us, they would not launch a nuclear attack. The land would be of no use for many years due to the nuclear after-effects. The process of disarmament would be a gradual one. Ten years ago, former Secretary of Defense McNamara stated that an effective deterrent force against the Soviets would be 100-400 nuclear warheads. At present, we have nearly 30,000 such warheads. Sumerford believes the reason we keep building these weapons is not to deter the Soviets, but to one day build a force capable of winning a nuclear war. He draws this conclusion from the threats of using the nuclear power since 1945. Eisenhower threatened in Korea, Kennedy in Cuba, and Nixon (in his memoirs) thought to use them in Vietnam. The reason disarmament is such a dirty word is if our policy is to follow this hard line as in these three examples, then disarmament would make us look soft on our threats.

In closing our conversation, Mr. Sumerford stated that Mobilization for Survival is a coalition of many groups of people. Their dream is for total disarmament of nuclear weapons with the process being a gradual one.

Lark shows youth and talent

by John Morton

In what has become the familiar fashion of late for MC Playhouse's fall stage extravaganza, last Friday and Saturday night's productions of Jean Anouilh's The Lark featured a cast in which 17 out of 24 members were new to the MC main stage. Of the seven returning actors, only four were MC students.

While the youthfulness of the cast was evident, there were moments that were very effective and enjoyable. MC sophomore Bill Thomas was a bright light in a fairly dismal forest. His comic and somehow very authentic portrayal of Robert de Beaudicourt provided a freshness and relief which was a pleasant deviation from the somewhat stuffy script. Other MC students who deserve mention for their performances include freshman Eliza Nickles, who portrayed Joan, sophomore Allen Evitts and transfer student Tom Bowen. Eliza seems to have a hopeful future on the stage. She was able to dominate most of her scenes and stage space, often causing weaker actors to upstage themselves and get in poor positions.

The simplistic, multi-leveled stage was effective, particularly when entrances from the orchestra pit were used. There were times when the actors on stage were unbalanced, but generally the bright colors of costumes caused a pleasant effect. Lighting and sound also aided in an overall good appearance to the audience.

Saga meets

The Food Committee meeting on Wednesday Oct. 25 was termed "constructive" by Carol Hows (Saga manager). The meeting was attended by seven representatives of the student body along with three Saga administrators and three college staff members.

The committee first reviewed the food surveys which were filled out by MC students last week. The surveys indicated that the students thought the atmosphere and service in the cafeteria were adequate, but many of the surveys were quite negative about the quality of the food served. For example, three out of four of the surveys read by one committee member contained the quotation, "The food tastes sh--ty."

When questioned by committee members about food quality, Miss Hows maintained that the food is the best that can be served within the set Saga budget. She noted that new entrees had been added to the menu for variety.

Answers to the other questions by concerned committee members can be summed up in the following. Fruit is not served whole for fear that students will carry it out of the dining hall. The next Food Committee meeting is on Wednesday, Nov. 1, at 3 p.m. in the dining hall.

Scots explode; 55-36 victory

Charles Brooks grabs a pass for a TD against Southwestern.

Taking advantage of 6 turnovers and using a highly-explosive offense, Maryville won a scoring marathon Saturday over Southwestern 55—36 for what was one of the school's biggest victories. The third period proved to be the decisive part of the game as the Scots exploded for 25 points and notched their sixth win in seven starts.

For the second week MC got superb performances from runningbacks Ken Adair and Alvin Nance. Nance snatched a pair of TD's and rushed for 126 yards on 21 carries while Adair got one TD and 120 yards on 20 carries.

Quarterback Charlie Hixon also had a big day as he ran for two Scot TD's and passed50 yards to Bill Crews and 23 yards to Charles Brooks for two more TD's.

Maryville's longest score came from speedy Steve Moffet who electrified the crowd with a 90-yard kickoff return.

Placekicker Joe Savary chipped in a 32 yard field goal and 4 point-after attempts to round out MC's scoring attack.

Maryville's defense was led by linebackers Tony Ierulli , Wayne Dunn, and Robert Boone. Ierulli had two fumble recoveries and an interception. Boone had three quarterback sacks and a partially blocked punt while Dunn contributed numerous hits over the field.

In an evenly matched battle MC gained 422 yards to Southwestern's 453. Southwestern's All-American quarterback Craig Soloman was too hot to handle as he threw five touchdowns and hit 28 of 47 passes for 359 yards.

Scotties grab 1st place

The Lady Scots boosted their record to 20—10 this past week. In a home match they defeated Tennessee Temple 15—6, 15—11. On Friday the Scotties traveled to Milligan College to participate in the Milligan Invitational Tournament. Fourteen teams entered from Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia.

The Lady Scots came away with the first place trophy. The v-ballers only lost one match the whole tournament, which was to Emory and Henry in the finals. The Scots were defeated 11—15, 6—15. The Scotties came back to defeat Emory and Henry for first place 15—6, 15—5.

Coach Ms. Brown felt Bobbie Jo Sallade did an outstanding job. Carol Neal and Donna Owens turned in excellent performances. Ann Outterson was consistent with her good service.

Brown was pleased with the weekend. She stated, "A big reason for our success was our strong offense. It was definitely the most exciting contest of my coaching career."

residents of that hall only. Members asked the student services office to continually evaluate the program, make changes as needed and keep the board advised as to its progress.

According to Dean of Students Dr. Larry Mangus, the board expressed great interest in the Pearsons program as an alternate lifestyle for MC students. He added that no plans exist to expand the program beyond Pearsons. However, he explained, the College will continue to provide different residence hall lifestyles for students to choose from.

Dr. Mangus added that the College was able to get approval from the board because of Pearsons' success so far. He also cited students' acceptance of responsibility and commitment to making the experiment work as factors in the board's decision.

In other action, the board reaffirmed the College's covenant with the United Presbyterian Church U.S.A. The board, which reviews this covenant relationship every three years, also directed its academic policy committee to continue to analyze the covenant in the coming year.

Mellon Foundation awards MC $110,000

The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation of New York City has awarded Maryville College a $110,000 grant to be used for faculty development over the next four to five years, MC President Wayne Anderson announced today.

The purpose of the grant, according to Dr. Anderson, is to allow faculty to develop both individually and as a group and to assist in a campus-wide effort in curriculum development.

"We are deeply indebted to the Mellon Foundation for assisting us in these important areas," Dr. Anderson indicated.

"As a result of this program, and thanks to the generosity of the Foundation, we will be able to expand and accelerate efforts in the vital area of faculty development," he continued. "Moreover, we will be able to make important and needed improvements in our curriculum."

Dr. Anderson added that faculty development is one of the top priorities of the College and for that reason, the job of preparing the final grant proposal was one of the first tasks undertaken by the new Academic Vice President, Dr. Alfred Perkins, when he joined the College in July.

The Mellon grant will make possible a four-point program, coordinated under the office of the academic vice president.

One phase provides funds for faculty development through individual projects; a second phase, for development of an interdisciplinary course dealing with the moral dimensions of contemporary issues; a third, for faculty to confront broad issues in field of education; and a fourth, for seminars and workshops on new techniques for teaching and learn-

46th annual presentation

Messiah set for Sunday

The 46th annual production of Handel's Messiah Sunday will combine the talents of the College Community Oratorio Chorus and the Maryville High School Choir.

The program is set for 3 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. Eleven of the 15 soloists chosen to perform with the Oratorio Chorus are MC students.

Six of the soloists are seniors. Thomas Banfield, a voice major who resides in Alcoa, will sing the tenor recitative "Comfort Ye" and the tenor aria "Every valley shall be exalted." Bob Bishop, an English major form Fairfield, CT, will sing the tenor recitative "He was cut off" and the tenor aria "But Thou didst not leave his soul in hell."

John Morton, who is a speech and theater major from Lyndhurst, OH, will sing the bass recitative "Behold I tell you a mystery" and the bass aria "The trumpet shall sound." Sharon Youngs, an interpreting for the deaf and physical education major from Gainesville, GA, will sing the alto recitative "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened" and the alto aria "He shall feed his flock."

Marian Hummel, a music education major from Huntsville, AL, will perform the soprano aria, "If God be for us."

Ed Herbert, a political science major from Williamsville, NY, will perform the duet "O Death where is thy sting?" with Peggy Stewart.

Two soloists are juniors. Judy Fulks, a voice major from Indian Rocks Beach, FL, will sing the soprano aria "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Judy Corliss, an English and applied voice major from Knoxville, will sing three selections. They are the aria "He was despised," the recitative "Behold a virgin shall conceive," and the aria "O Thou that tellest."

Three sophomores, Bill Thomas, a political science major from Greeneville, TN, Peggy Stewart, a music education major from Piney Flats, TN, and Lesa Payne, a music education major from St. Petersburg, FL, will also perform.

Thomas will sing the tenor recitative "Thy rebuke hath broken his heart" and the tenor aria "Behold and see if there be any sorrow." Stewart will perform the duet "O Death where is they sting?" with Ed Herbert and the alto recitative "Then shall be brought to pass."

Payne will sing the so-

ACC postpones ROTC decision

The arrangement to allow students of Maryville College to receive Army ROTC instruction at the University of Tennessee brought forth a great deal of controversy among the ACC members at the Nov. 1 meeting.

The report was presented by Dr. Alfred Perkins, representing the Instructional Program Committee. The conditions which MC students would be subject to are: One-third course credit would be given for each of the nine courses. The Army ROTC summer camp would be worth one course credit and could serve as one interim project. These courses would only substitute as electives and would not be accepted as part of an individualized major. The grades would be transferred to MC on an "S-U" basis. The recommendation was that the report be approved.

Much discussion took place following the report. Because of the lack of consensus, there was no vote taken. Dr. Wayne Anderson suggested postponing the vote and having a town hall meeting. Dr. Robert Ramger brought up the point that probably "the present population at MC is not interested in ROTC." However, "a town meeting might im-

Fayerweather committee forms

According to Dr. Larry Mangus, a student center is one of "the greatest needs that we (MC students) have at this time."

Under the direction of Dr. Mangus, a student center committee comprised of students, faculty and staff has been formed with the purpose of reviewing the Student Center on campus.

Fayerweather Hall has been designated as the location for the new student center. The committee's task is to determine what is needed in the student center.

So far, the committee's progress has been impressive. A plan for the construction of student center facilities in Fayerweather Hall will hopefully be approved by the All College Council, and the construction of the new student center could be complete by the end of the '78-'79 academic year. Some of the items that the committee has considered putting in the new student center include a snack bar, pub, dark room, large ballroom, committee club rooms and a recreation room.

There will still be adequate space in the student center for the Van Metre school of Dance which is presently located on the third floor of Fayerweather.

Ambiguous element of MC

Campus spirit aids progress

I will let concrete problems rest for a week. Instead, I will look at a different type of situation on campus.

You see, the problems tend to get stale around here. I am not saying they are unimportant, but they are redundant. I was going to write on the communication problem, but it has been written about so many times before. The Saga scene is similar. And so, I search for individuality, something that even if written before, it is fresh to use and not a remolding of the past.

Garble again? No.

I am talking about campus spirit. Attitude. Awareness. MC has always had campus spirit, but it varies with each group of students, faculty and administrators who inhabit this arena. In many ways, spirit is the same as other problems, but it is the framework in which the others are attacked and solved.

Three years ago (for those of us who remember) the spirit was very low, about 6 feet under. The whole freshman class practically transferred out. The football team never won a game. This was not the way anyone wanted it, but to most, this was the way it was.

Today is different. Campus social events flourish. Movies, parties, a campus church, a five-mile run, a dance, a hole-in-one contest, and another run only make up a portion of the events that occur. The football team has practically reversed its record.

Obviously the Social Committee is to be commended but many of these activities stem from individual groups. The spirit is not confined within the committee's walls, and this is good.

To an extent, the development of this spirit can be traced. There has been much effort to improve the attitude on the campus. Turnover of administration and students has contributed in a positive way. A harmonious combination is being reached.

The same old problems are here, but they take on a new light when they are approached with confidence and a positive attitude which the spirit can provide. Of all the elements that comprise this school, spirit is the hardest to define, yet the most powerful and effective when it is functioning. In our search for stability, growth, and our drive to maintain a high level of education, this spirit makes our jobs easier, and our brief stay here much more enjoyable.

Let us strive to maintain and cultivate this spirit, it is the stuff; that makes us what we are.

"Wheels to Meals," an American Lullaby: It is not by coincidence that the American roadside diner is often housed in an old railroad car. After all, the diner, the emporium of grease and coffee native to all America, is the epitome of American sensibility and ingenuity. It is what would have been thrown away; it is American resourcefullness; it is a cheap way to "build" a restaurant: knock-off the wheels, plop down the body,open the doors, and serve food fast, very fast.

It is more. The diner has become the embodiment of the American dream. When I sit in Gilbert's in Maryville, or in Knight's Diner in Spokane, Washington, and look down the narrow formica counter, I imagine the diner's original use and find it hard to avoid knowing that this embodiment is true.

Forced to look back to a simpler time, as I do when I enter Knight's Sunday morning in September, floods of memories return. A whole catalog of roadside diners from Maryville to Harrisburg appears. Maybe not all are narrow, but all possess the same traits: a long bar, the short order cook in a white apron, the floor sticky, the smell heavy and thick with food; lone men soundless, stirring coffee; and the moist warm air.

But these memories are minor compared to those of the simpler time when the diner was a railroad car on some line--B. & O., New York Central, Great Western, or Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and was pulled by huge engines. Trains that spewed coal or wood smoke and went by fast--names like the Cannonball Express.

From the folklore (emphasis on folk) and history comes the vision of a growing land. The mind swells with the legends and tales of the men and women who used the steam engine as a means to improve themselves, to get out and go to a new place, to make their lives better and the lives of each of their suceeding generations the best.

This is, and was, the American dream.

Sitting on the round cushioned stool in Knight's, I look up and see the pictures of engines with their proud engineers beside, and all this becomes clear. I imagine the diner taking wheels once again and clipping down the tracks to Walla Walla, then following the Columbia River to Portland. My mind sways with the cars; I ride the slanted line through time; stop at a hundred small towns and see myself in the crush of people that search for the better place and in doing, make every moment of their lives an adventure.

Smells bring me back and I address the meal before me. I see the plate heaped with real hash browns, eggs, and jam that has all the mystery and sweetness of grandmother's. I watch the cook. At Knight's, he is as entertaining as the customers, a whiz in both skill and speed, cracking eggs on the grill, spreading the bacon, turning the hash browns, and remembering the orders as they are shouted out.

A customer can get lost in that apron. I do. Staring at the map of the morning, wiped with yellow yolk, spotted with grease, and bloodied by ketchup, leads me back again, becoming synomomous with the sooted face, the blistered hand, and the sweaty brow. I watch the waitress. Her movements are those of a mother in a sod house bending over the table to deliver the bounty of food. This is the lasting picture, the direct parallel, the love for humanity passed down from generation to generation.

A truck driver enters and sits beside me. He is travel weary, hyped on coffee--trying to get from place to place. He sits with a sigh--Casey Jones after a long day's work? When the waitress comes there is an instant understanding, the realization that this is a working man. His wheels keep the country moving, to paraphrase a thousand company slogans. She treats him as if he had just walked into his home, talking to him, stopping a minute to listen. He pauses and smiles at her kindness.

The spirit here is singular and lasting. Walking out of Knight's, I leave the imagined with the real. The life and color of the place having run time's way, I am jolted, realizing my destinations and realities. Driving away, I half wish that the old car would follow, continuing the swaying that was once a lullaby to a nation. I need not worry, though; in many ways it is already singing that song, singing sweetly and softly, singing until the dream perishes.

Who's Who announced

The 1978-79 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges will carry the names of 17 MC students who have been selected as being among the country's most outstanding campus leaders. Campus nominating committees and editors of the annual directory have included the names of these students based on their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential. They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,000 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations. Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934. Students named this year from MC are Lea Adcock, Carol Alette, Pris Book, Martha Cain, Jim Campbell, Paul Canon, Elaine Dorward, Ed Herbert, Bekah McCredie, Melinda O'Connor, Chris Rigell, Gary Spears, Laird Weaver, Kathy Whitt, Keith Williams and Sharon Youngs.

Faculty wages not keeping pace with inflation

(CPS)—As tuition costs continue to rise, students are often left wondering where all the money goes. One expert has spoken up to say that he knows that, though faculty and staff salaries account for about three-fourths of a school's budget, the money doesn't seem to be going to faculty members.

Howard Bowen, economics professor at Claremont Graduate School, has charted average faculty wages and benefits from 1903-04 through 1976-77. His figures show that, although salaries have come a long way from 1903's average $1500, real wages have been declining in comparison to other occupations.

Bowen warns that if the disparity continues, faculty earnings in ten years will be 9 to 18 percent below those in other occupations and, in 20 years, a full third below.

The overall effect of the decline, Bowen says, is likely to entice the most able academics into other, more lucrative fields.

Bowen computed the salaries in terms of 1967-value dollars. Thus, while today's average salary of over $20,000 is the highest ever, it represents only $12,500 in 1967 dollars. Such salaries, Bowen fears, will make higher education uncompetitive with businesses of similar sizes.

The problem becomes even more serious because, according to Bowen's numbers, two-thirds of the nation's faculty members will have to be replaced in the next 25-30 years. Sixty percent of the current faculty is over 40 years old, and 30 percent is over 50. With the healthy supply of Ph.D's, filling the open positions won't be hard. Bowen thinks the problem is filling them with the best people. Because of salary trends, the positions "probably couldn't be filled with people at the level of competence of those recently recruited."

The outlook, Bowen writes in a copyrighted article called "Academic Compensation," is not very bright. Historically, faculty wages have been determined by public attitudes as much as by market forces. So the public's current cost-cutting mood, Bowen predicts, is going to result in a "gradual but persistent financial squeeze" on faculty paychecks.

The two choruses together provide nearly 200 singers, according to Dr. Harry Harter, chairman of the fine arts department, who will mark his 30th year as director of the Messiah production.

He will also direct an ensemble from the maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra, the instrumental accompaniment for the production.

Joseph Drake, a freshman from Clearwater, FL, will be the trumpet soloist for the program. Associate Professor Sallie Schoen will play the harpsichord and Professor James A. Bloy will celebrate his 17th year at the Lambert Memorail Organ. Serving as pianist will be Assistant Professpr Robert J. Bonham.

There will be no reserved seats and no charge for admission. A free will offering will be accepted at the door after the performance.

Undefeated at home for two years

Scots roll on; 35-0

by Robert Boone

The Maryville College fighting Scots chalked up victory number seven Saturday over Baptist Christian College 35—0 on Honaker Field. The Scots have not lost at home for two consecutive seasons.

The 1978 squad is only the eighth team to win seven or more games in a season in MC's football history.

A strong offensive attack that mustered 413 yards guided Maryville's victory. Scot rushers Alvin Nance and Ken Adair rambled for two TD's apiece and for the third consecutive week both rushed for over 100 yards. Nance had a 67-yard TD run and 147 yards rushing while Adair rambled for 107 yards including a 65-yard scoring blast.

Maryville's other three touchdowns were Nance's 28-yard scamper, Adair's 12-yard dash and Freshman DeVal Shorter's 1-yard blast. Senior kicker Joe Savary was successful on all five extra-point kicks. Senior split end Bill Crews had three receptions to lead MC's receiving corps.

All of Maryville's scoring occurred in the first half as the Scots skipped to a comfortable 35—0 halftime lead. Most of the second half consisted of the Baptist Christian's first team battling Scot reserves to a 0—0 draw.

The Scots conclude the 1978 season next Saturday at Danville, KY against always tough Centre College where Maryville will be vying for a possible playoff bid.

Bill Gannon, who was sitting in on the meeting, suggested having two direct speakers, pro and con, and then opening up the meeting to discussion.

The town hall meeting, Dr. Perkin's responsibility, will be held immediately after the next morning CIV.

It appears that the investigation began last year with the idea that ROTC might bring in a few more students. However, one of the much declared arguments against it was that some students would not attend a college affiliated with ROTC.

Social Committee plans for Interim

With fall term coming to an end, the Social Committee is looking forward to Interim. Plans to keep both weeknights and weekends busy are underway.

The first weekend of interim, "Jay and Eric," a singing group from Montreat-Anderson, is scheduled to perform. The second weekend, musical entertainment will be left up to MC students who wish to go Christmas caroling from dorm to dorm.

On December the 6th through the 9th, the Theater will present a play called "Red Shoes." Theta Epsilon is planning to hold a Sadie Hawkins (girls ask) dance, but the date is not yet set.

Weeknights during interim will feature get-togethers to play games such as backgammon, spades, hearts and other card games. Everyone is welcome to try his hand.

On Monday, Dec. 11th, the Playmakers will present "An Old English Christmas Supper." This will be a dinner theater program for all resident students. There will be no charge.

Several ideas have already been drawn up for winter term. Tentative plans include a Meisburg and Walters concert, more films (foreign, classical, and cartoons), a winter sports carnival featuring mini-tournaments in racquetball, swimming, basketball and others, a semi-formal Valentine's Day dance sponsored by Chi Beta, a skiing trip to Gatlinburg and an ice-skating party.

Additional information on interim and winter activities will be made available as the time grows closer.

Students had a chance to participate in last Friday's coffee house sponsored by the Social Committee.

ACS hits six straight

Maryville College's Student Affiliate Chapter of the American Chemical Society has been designated an "outstanding chapter" by the national ACS for its activities during the 1977-78 academic year. This marks the sixth straight year that the MC group has been awarded this and similar honors.

Each year the ACS's Council Committee on Chemical Education reviews the activities of all its student chapters and selects for special recognition those chapters which have completed outstanding records during the year. The MC group is one of 27 student chapters out of a total of 710 nationwide so recognized this year.

Established in 1937, the ACS Student Affiliate program is designed to provide students interested in chemistry and chemical engineering greater insights into these fields. Maryville College joined the program in 1965. The student program affords students in these fields an opportunity for intellectual stimulation arising from professional interactions, for obtaining experience in preparing and presenting technical material before chemical audiences, and for fostering a professional spirit among its members. The program is also designed to help develop an awareness of the responsibilities and challenges of the modern chemist.

The ACS program for students is the largest of any scientific and educational organization. No other group has chapters in more than 700 colleges and universities as does the American Chemical Society.

Faculty advisers for the MC group are Dr. Robert Naylor and Dr. Terry Bunde. Kurt Markgraf, a 1978 graduate of MC, served as president of the group for the 1977-78 academic year.

Snack bar revamps

Menu additions and new hours of operation exemplify some of the changes that have taken place in the Campus Center Snack Bar.

In the October 19 issue of the Echo, an article was printed questioning the price increases concerning some foods, the deletion of more popular items from the menu and the snack bar's hours of operation. These questions have now been answered.

The 15 cent price hike on the hamburgers and cheeseburgers is the result of the snack bar's changing to all-beef quarter pound hamburger patties. The price increases in other areas are also the result of higher wholesale food prices which have been passed on to the customers.

Some of the items that were deleted from the snack bar's menu were dropped due to increased wholesale prices and lack of student demand. While some students found these items quite appealing, the snack bar was having to throw away great quantities of food due to spoilage. Ham was one of the items that frequently spoiled and had to be discarded.

Recently there have been many additions to the snack bar's menu; pizza, beff barbeque sandwiches and BLT's are now served. Students now may order a complete breakfast from 7:30 until 10:00 a.m.

The snack bar also has new hours of operation. It is open from 7:30 a.m. until 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 7:30 a.m. until 6:30 p.m. on Fridays, and 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. on Sundays. Commuters should find these new hours convenient, especially with winter and harsh weather approaching.

Boob tube ruins writing

AUSTIN, TX, (CPS)—By the time they're college freshmen, most students have already watched some 16,000 hours of television. Put another way, they've spent almost 1.9 years—about ten percent of their lives—in front of the tube. And that, contends Dr. Wayne Danielson, dean of the University of Texas School of Communication, explains why college writing skills are continuing to decline.

Danielson and two other Texas faculty members speculated on college students' apparent inability to communicate through words on, of all things, a radio show in Austin. They agreed that television is the most important reason for students' writing failures, but added a number of other causes.

Dr. Lynn Reynolds of the university's business school, for example, put some of the blame on teachers. Professors, she says, are "not requiring term papers. They're giving multiple-choice tests because, frankly, it's a lot easier to grade them." Secondary school students, adds English professor Dr. James Kinneavy, simply aren't given much writing practice. The result is a basic unfamiliarity with words, a deficiency that has led to a "deterioration of structure and logic in college writing."

Echo expands in '79

The Echo will expand to an eight-page weekly beginning in January, 1979. This is an effort to better inform the college community and to provide a wider variety of material for its readers.

The eight-page paper will be on an experimental basis, since the Echo's budget allows only for weekly publication of four pages throughout the academic year, excluding interim. The extra money needed for the expanded publication will come solely from Echo initiative and advertising.

The Echo welcomes those wishing to participate on its staff. If interested, contact us through Box 2820.

The next issue of the Highland Echo will appear Jan. 11.

Sorry about that

In last week's Who's Who article, David Boyd's name was left out; we apologize to Dave.

"For whom the bell tolls"...for us

Last week I commended on the spirit of Maryville College. Unfortunately, spirit does not mean we have a harmonious community. "Community" is a word thrown around a bit too much.

Webster states that community is a "body of persons having common interest and privileges." This is what MC is and at times little else.

A brief look through the college catalog reveals that the word "community" has a monopoly in the pages and appears in the Purpose and Objectives seven times. It is never defined yet is linked with such words as God, truth, and faith. This is big company for an ambiguous word.

John Donne once said of community, "No man is an island entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main . . ." Donne's perspective is realized when he concludes, "I am involved in mankind."

Donne envisioned his community because he was sensitive. He made an effort to be tuned in with others. Do we display the sensitivity necessary for a community? Does 20th century man?

Food fight's are an example of our community. Rah, siss boom, food fight! Let's all have good clean fun in the name of spirit. But hang around when the fights over for the best show. Watch the students who pick the mess up.

They laugh. They pretend to enjoy playing in someone else's garbage. Some can't pretend. The hurt and humiliation is painted on their faces with vivid colors. When the party's over, they play in the meat, cake and vegetables. Even the radio takes a shot at them, "someone left the cake out in the rain . . . ."

Feel like more? Swallow this one.

Bette Donahay was an active member of MC during the 1976-77 school year. She and her boyfriend, Vince, used to go to Pizza Hut at least once a week and sit in the same booth. My friends and I patronized the place every week the same night they did. One night their booth was empty, enough to create a void in my gut. That night, my friends ordered a Thin & Crispy with extra pepperoni and two pitchers. They laughed and had a good time. We knew why Bette wasn't there. She died of cancer on April 15, 1977. I have returned to Pizza Hut. Their booth remains empty. The couple is gone, and my friends' laughter haunts my mind as a memorial to insensitivity and a fatal blow to the idealistic "community." Not every one is so cold, but enough are to cause one to doubt what we are made of.

For Donne, the bell tolled for him. But 20th century man is different. I believe that looking out for number one has damaged our sensitivity and injured our sense of community. The bell is rusty and rings only for those who make a great effort to hear it, to allow it to permeate the little circles of isolation and fragmentation which we inhabit. I do not feel a majority of people make such an effort.

Why the insensitivity? What's it all about? Perhaps the 1975 editor of the Echo, Emerson Henderson, said it best: "The students are basically concerned with getting good grades and getting drunk or high." Good call, Emerson.

As for you, Mr. Donne, we don't ask "for whom the bell tolls", we don't even hear it ring.

A very old lesson is being ignored:

There is a time . . .
to cry to laugh to grieve to dance.

DESERT KIDS

The old catfish lay in the mud under a log chewin' on seaweed and generally just passin' the time in his own corner of the farm pond. He really didn't have much to do but contemplate on life and admire the awesome beauty he felt around him.

The catfish was old and didn't get around as much as he used to when he was always out chasin' around and basically raisin' hell. Still he enjoyed life and was known throughout the pond as a good guy to sit down with a chew and talk things over.

He liked the young fish he saw as they grew and would always quit whatever he was doing to help one out. As I said, he was one of the oldest fish in the pond—I know—all the rest done got caught by the farmer's son and put into a bigger pond. It seemed most fish went there after so long, and the catfish felt sure he'd be going there soon. He was wantin' to broaden his horizons, you might say, after many years in the farm pond.

The catfish liked to swim through the pond real slow and watch the newly born play their little games he used to play. He would watch the bright young bass strutin' and showin' off to the ladies—funny thing though they were always the first ones on the farmer's kitchen table it seemed.

Catfish was always content to grovel in the mud and scratch his whiskers; in fact he liked it. He had the love of God on his side and the wisdom of his papa who went to the big pond, and a sweet little thing on the other side of the pond to tickle his fancy. Yeah, old catfish had it made. But hold on—the hook's baited with a juicy little cricket, but the will is strong, and Catfish is content.

Letters to the Editors

To the Highland Echo:

On Saturday, November 11, 1978, Maryville College played Centre College at Danville, Kentucky. At the game, I made a terrible mistake that proved to be an embarrassing situation for both Maryville College and myself. I truly feel sorry towards all the administration, faculty, and students whom I have embarrassed. I would like to apologize for all the retrogression that will take place within the athletic department and our overall status because of my actions. My movements were recognized by several outstanding people of both the Maryville and Centre campuses. Because of me, our campus may have a stigma placed upon it, and for this I would like to apologize.

Worse things have occurred, but none more obvious and embarrassing to our small community here at Maryville College. I would like to specifically apologize to our cheerleaders. Tammy, Linda, Jenny Ann, Sabrina, and Kim, you all have done a tremendous job this season, and I am sorry you had to close the season on a note of such immoral action.

I would also like to thank the administration for being open-minded about the situation, and allowing me to remain in school, although I did receive my just punishment for my inexcusable actions.

Art remains in Fayerweather

The Student Center Committee has run into some unforeseen problems of late.

The committee was formed with the intent of reviewing and improving the student center on campus. The committee designated Fayerweather Hall as the location for the new center. Their plans included renovating part of the building and furnishing unused rooms in the Hall for student center facilities.

The Nov. 9th ECHO article "Fayerweather Committee Forms" noted that there would still be adequate space in the student center for the Van Metre School of Dance. The article did not mention the future of the studio rooms in Fayerweather which are used by the art department.

The Student Center Committee had no intention of undercutting the art department by taking away their much-needed space. However the committee had considered moving the art studios from the 2nd to the 3rd floor. The proposed art studios on the 3rd floor would be equal to or better than the second floor studios. The committee took a tour of Fayerweather on Friday, Nov. 2, to determine more readily the building's potential for renovation. While in Fayerweather the committee members asked Mrs. Thelma Bianco, who is the head of the art department, about the possibility of relocating on the 3rd floor. Reportedly Mrs. Bianco avoided the issue.

Last Thursday, Nov. 8, a petition from the art faculty and students, with some fifty signatures, was sent to the Student Center Committee. The petition noted the struggle that the art department has had in recent years with finding adequate space for their growing department. Obviously, there has been a breakdown in communications between the Student Center Committee and the art faculty.

The Student Center Committee is confident that money can be raised to renovate the new student center. Where the money will come from is yet to be seen. The Student Center Committee meets weekly on Fridays at 10 a.m. in the Dean of Students Office.

Wind Ensemble performs tonight

The Maryville College Wind Ensemble will present its first concert of the season tonight. The concert, featuring various works of contemporary composers, will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Chapel.

Dello Joio's "Variants on a Mediaeval Song," John Chance's "Blue Lake Overture," Holst's "Moorside March," and Giannini's "Symphony No. 3 for Band" are the featured numbers that the ensemble will perform. All of the composers except Chance, who died recently, are currently writing.

The wind ensemble consists of 38 musicians.

Outdoor club forms

The first meeting of the Outdoor Club was held Wednesday, November 8th in the FAC lounge. The organizational meeting, initiated by freshman Linda Crozier, was to discover how many students are interested and what the specific activities people want to participate in are.

Suggested activities were hiking, camping, canoeing, spelunking, rock climbing and possibly tubing. Another plan of the club is to sponsor various seminars by experienced outdoors persons to inform and instruct people about certain areas in which they might be interested. The first goal of the club is for all members to become acquainted with each other, and the second goal is to get the College to sponsor the club. The current sponsors are art teacher Robert Bonham and former students Gary Black and Phil White.

Dues will be collected to buy for an initial cook-out before interim, but it is likely that fund-raising projects will be organized in the future. "We're looking forward to an interesting year. I'm glad that someone finally had the initiative to start something of this kind here at Maryville," stated a member of the new club. The next meeting will be on November 15 at 9:00 p.m. in the FAC lounge.

Summer in Alaska?

How would you like to spend next summer in New Mexico, Alaska, New York or one of the national parks?

On Monday, Nov. 20, the Rev. Jean Ann Swope, Presbyterian coordinator for these projects throughout the U.S. will be on campus. The projects are sponsored by a number of agencies and are open to students of any denominational background.

When you talk with Ms. Swope she will suggest projects which fit your interests and abilities and will show you how to apply for them.

Scots finish year: 8-1

The conclusion of a brilliant football season arrived Saturday at Danville, KY., as Maryville trounced Centre 27—3, thus winding up a respectable 8-1 worksheet.

Hoping was the extent of the playoff journey for Fickert's fighting Scots as they were overlooked at invitation time to the Division III NCAA playoffs.

Down 3—0, the Scots had to come from behind to nab the victory. Ken Adair had a big day as he scored twice on runs of 51 and 5 yards, scored a two-point conversion, and churned out 134 yards on 27 carries to lead the locals down the stretch. Other MC scores came by means of flanker Bill Crews' 17-yard touchdown pass from Charlie Hixon and Ronnie Marksbury's two-yard run. Savary booted the final MC point of the season through the uprights. Maryville's awesome defense checked the Colonels for the final three quarters.

Only the fourth team to capture eight season wins in MC football history, this inspirational Maryville team played with a lot of heart all season. Senior leadership was one impressive credential.

Senior runningback Alvin Nance was hit with misfortune as an early injury bottled his chances of rushing for 1000 yards this season.

In posting an 8-1 mark the Scots' offense and defense have complimented each other well. At one time MC defense was ranked number one in the nation against the score (4.0) and finished by allowing just 6.7 points per game. While averaging 28 points per game, Charlie Hixon and Barry Mathis and company gained over 400 yards total offense in each of the last four games.

V-ballers get 3rd in state

The Lady Scots' volleyball team ended their season on a good note, placing third in the state and ending with a winning record of 25-12.

At the state tournament, the women volleyballers defeated Southwestern 15-11, 15-10, and defeated Austin Peay University 15-11, 15-7. The Lady Scots were then beaten by Carson-Newman 15-11, 15-12. They proceeded to beat Covenant 15-3, 15-11, then were defeated by the University of Tennessee at Martin 15-1, 15-4.

Junior Bobbie Jo Sallade was named to the all-tournament team which was made up of eight players from the eleven teams participating in the tournament.

Coach Brown was very pleased with the team's performance this year. She stated, "It's the first time we've had a winning season in such a big way. We will definitely miss our seniors Paula Hensley and Blinky Hinds." She also commented that "I will be looking forward to a good season next year."

The Lady Scots will have a harder schedule next year. Most of the players will be returning, and it should promise to be an exciting season.

Basketball season opens during Thanksgiving break. The team is practicing for what they hope to be a profitable year.

Basketball bounces in

New head coach Rick Byrd is very excited about the upcoming basketball season as MC basketball is just around the corner.

At 25, Byrd, who is one of the youngest coaches in the NCAA basketball ranks, joins two returning starters and a host of newcomers as the Scots prepare for the 1978-79 basketball campaign.

"We'll be better this year than we've been the past two years," predicts Byrd, "because our talent is better."

Heading the Scots' roster this season are two-year All District III senior guard Wayne Emme and 6'3" senior Wade Edmond, the Scot's leading rebounder for the past two seasons. Emme, an All-American candidate, enters his final season with 1124 career points. Edmond, also beginning his third year as a starter, is another potent offensive threat and holds his own under the boards as well.

Candidates for the wing and post positions are headed by two sharp-shooting junior transfers. 6'1" Rodney Nelson has outstanding shooting touch while 6' Jim Yates adds quick hands and excellent ball-handling skills to the Scot attack. UT transfer, Richard Suttle (6' 6" sophomore), and 6'3" sophomore Doug Tutin are battling for starting post positions.

Food fights abound

(CPS)—As Lane Glaser remembers it: "Some guy stood up and yelled 'food fight!' and about five other guys started throwing food with him." Thus, Glaser, a University of Texas-Austin student became involuntarily emboriled in a recent food fight in an Austin Burger King. During the melee, which resulted in eight arrests, Glaser's suite-mate "even got hit by a cheese Whopper."

Glaser escaped with clean clothes, but her story is only the latest in the saga of the runaway campus success of National Lampoon's Animal House. College students not only want to see Animal House (they've helped it make over $17 million thus far), they want to BE Animal House. Food fights, in short, are becoming very popular again.

It all started when Universal Studios and National Lampoon put on a dozen promotional toga parties at various universities. Then other college unions took up the idea, and threw their own campus toga parties—complete with unlimited beer, jello eating contests, and John Belushi look-alike contests—all against the background of "Louis, Louis," with unexpurgated lyrics.

Although there seems to be an upsurge in Animal House-type behavior (Kent State officials, for example, were compelled to warn dorm residents that House-inspired noises and drinking violations would result in dreaded "white slips"), the movie's most popular legacy appears to be the traditional food fight.

At Texas A&M, a dining hall food fight caused $900 in damages and prompted the resignation of three food service employees. Eight students were expelled from the board program, recounts food services director Ron Blatchely, but not before students began asking for transfers to other dining facilities.

Mr. William Ribble has been named director of personnel.

Ribble moves; directs personnel

Mr. William Ribble, director of student financial aid at MC has been named director of personnel at the College. He will assume this newly formed position soon as a replacement can be located for his present job. The new post was made possible by a grant from Title III.

As director of personnel, Ribble will be responsible for staff job descriptions and evaluations. He will serve as a liaison with the Federal Government on matters such as occupational safety and health and facilities for the handicapped. He also will coordinate personnel records and policies, establish a clearinghouse on personnel information and supervise the post office, print shop, and bookstore operations.

"I am as pleased as I can be at Bill Ribble's willingness to assume this key role in our effort to establish a management system at the College, and I know he will do an excellent job," President Anderson said.

Ribble has been MC student financial director since May 1967. In 1975 his duties were expanded to cover the supervision of the bookstore.

Prior to coming to MC, Ribble worked for Durham Manufacturing Corporation in Muncie, IN from 1941 to 1966 in the personnel, payroll, and accounting departments. His duties also included serving as assistant sales representative for the company.

Beatty returns

Sarah Tompkins Beatty, a 1966 Maryville College graduate, will open the College's Performing Artist Concert Series at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday Jan. 17 in the Fine Arts Center Auditorium.

Mrs. Beatty, a soprano, will perform popular show tunes from the 1928s and '30s by such composers as Rogers and Hammerstein, Cole Porter, George Gershwin, Lerner and Lowe, and Victor Herbert. Mrs. Sallie Schoen, associate professor of music at MC and one of Mrs. Beatty's former teachers, will provide the piano accompaniment for the concert.

Mrs. Beatty vaulted into national acclaim in a unique way. She stepped out of her role as a Chicago Symphony Chorus singer one evening with just one hour's notice and performed as a stand-in the soprano part in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis. Her triumph was repeated the next day, and she progressed to other solo parts with the orchestra the following season.

In 1977, Mrs. Beatty made her Metropolitan Opera debut as Helmwige in Wagner's "Die Walkuere." Highlighting her 1977-78 season as a soloist were appearances in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the San Francisco Symphony under Edo de Waart at its festival in Concord, CA, and the Detroit Symphony under Antal Dorati in its Beethoven Festival in Detroit. She appeared in Bach's B Minor Mass with the Pittsburgh Symphony and the Mendelssohn Choir in Pittsburgh.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Mrs. Beatty attended MC on a vocal scholarship and Mrs. Sarah Beatty will perform Jan. 17 in the Fine Arts Center Auditorium.

Murray fund starts

Clyde T. and Olive Wilson Murray, two alumni of the College, have had a scholarship fund of $5,000 established in their memory.

The origin of the scholarship is a gift annuity presented to the MC by Mrs. Murray in 1972. The annuity became a part of the school's permanent scholarship fund upon her death on Oct. 9.

The scholarships are to be given to students who show financial need, who meet admission requirements, and who indicate sufficient ability to progress towards a baccalaureate degree.

Mrs. Murray was one of six children of the late Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Tyndale Wilson. Dr. Wilson was the sixth president of Maryville College.

Mr. Murray, who attended but did not graduate from MC, died Oct. 31, 1962. He formerly served as chairman of the financial committee of the MC Board of Directors and was associated with First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Maryville.

Test management class offered

Did you do poorly on your tests during Fall Term? Did you study a lot and then draw a blank while taking the test? Did you get so nervous during the test that you just couldn't think? If the answer to any of these questions is yes, then the test anxiety management class offered by the Counseling Center may be for you.

Test Anxiety management is a short, simple, understandable series of four class meetings, each lasting one hour. The student learns various techniques to control, alleviate, and reduce that "panicky" feeling that comes with taking a test. In order to receive full benefit from the course, class size must be limited to six people. The Counseling Center will offer two anxiety management classes during the Winter Term. One will begin Jan. 22 and one on Feb. 19. The specific meeting time will be decided later.

Don't take a chance on being left out. Sign up now for either class at the career planning and placement office.

Pepper, Lane resign from Post Office

David Pepper and Kathy Lane have both resigned their positions with the Maryville College Post Office.

Mr. Pepper has reportedly left his job of over ten years service in order to attend graduate school at the University of Tennessee. The past four years he has been manager of the Post Office.

Mrs. Lane stated that she is giving up her position as assistant manager and composerist, "to raise a family and settle down a bit."

Mr. William Ribble, who oversees administrative positions in the MC post office, says that, "The college will surely miss their services."

The Echo would like to express its gratitude to both David and Kathy for the help they have been to its publication process.

Echo seeks

The Echo is currently seeking photographers and reporters to add to its staff. Experience is necessary as a photographer. The Echo is willing to train those who would like to be a reporter but do not necessarily have experience. If interested, contact Box 2820, providing your name, box number, and what you are interested in.

Submissions to letters to the editor and Desert Kids are also being accepted. Letters to the editor should be typed and signed. The Echo reserves all rights to edit material over 200 words. Desert Kids submissions should be a short piece of fiction, either poetry or prose. The writer's name can be withheld upon request.

Book prices soar: students sore

Faces in the MC Bookstore on registration day reflect shock, horror, despair, and utter disbelief. Some students swear under their breath; others seem nearly on the verge of tears. It is not unusual to see someone staring dumbfoundedly at a list for minutes on end. The adding machine clatters cruelly. Leaving the bookstore, one and all they mutter, "I can't believe I spent that much on books."

The cost of buying new books is astronomical. It is no idle statement to say that it is beyond the reach of many students. Even those with hefty bank books find the amount less than comfortable. Usually the student has no choice but to pay through the teeth for the stack of books the instructor has ordered. The only hope, the only way out in most cases is the chance of finding used books. Yet two major obstacles may prevent this from occurring.

First, there is the lack of consistency in a course from year to year. Just because last year's class used a $13.00 book doesn't mean that this year's class won't have to buy a brand-new $16.00 one. It is especially hard to understand why a new edition of the same book is required; major differences between editions are rarely noticed. Some professors manage to keep the same books for several years; these, regrettably few, are to be commended. Far too many seem to have little regard for the hardship it is on the students to change books every year. Perhaps the most disheartening thing to hear is, "Those are all different books from the ones we used when I took the course." Usually, this does not involve buying only one expensive book, but two or three, plus a paperback or two. And that's only one course; you forget, dear sir, that I have three to buy for. And only one checkbook.

The second, and perhaps more regrettable, obstacle is the lack of a solid, organized used-book sale on campus. For several years, Alpha Lambda Delta (the freshman honor society) held one with limited success. But it ran into difficulties, not the least of which was a lack of interest among its own members. Books were slow in coming in, and prospective buyers were often disappointed to find nothing they needed in the small piles. This term, there was no sale at all. Perhaps the soon-to-be-elected new members of Alpha Lambda Delta will meet the challenge of rekindling interest in the booksale. If not, is there another organization somewhere that is willing to take on the job of handling a used-book sale? At many schools, the student government council buys used books at the end of the term and then resells them. Would it be possible for the ACC to do something like this? We can't know for sure unless we try it.

If nothing else, the students might just as well help themselves. Who is to prevent signs on the post office bulletin board stating, "I need such-and-such a book" or "I'm willing to sell this one," with names and box numbers? It would be easier than trying to track down last year's class members, only to find they've already sold their books to someone else.

So when it comes time to buy books again in March, remember that ways of keeping the cost down do exist. If everyone works at it, the expense of book-buying can be made more affordable—and the trip to the bookstore less terrifying.

Letters to the Editors

To the Editor:

Epiphany, the festival commemorating the manifestation of Christ to the gentiles in the persons of the Magi, is observed on January 6 and, as such, is regarded as the last day of the Christmas celebrations.

As its way of celebrating this special day as well as of welcoming MC students back to campus after the Christmas break, the members of the Faculty Women's Club brought our own personal Christmas decorations to lend a festive air to Pearsons dining hall for the evening meal on Saturday, January 6.

This was done in the spirit of Christmas . . . yet, that spirit has been broken, for several of these special decorations are now missing.

Perhaps these centerpieces were taken on the mistaken belief that they were favors meant to be taken. Whatever the reason for the disappearance of these decorations, we would like to ask that they be returned. To do so, simply return them to Pearsons dining hall; no questions will be asked. The return of the items in question will be deeply appreciated by their owners as they all have deep sentimental value.

In the spirit of Christmas, we tried to make January 6 a little bit special for the MC student body; in the spirit of Christmas, we ask that our centerpieces be returned to us.

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my thanks to all of the people that I have met during my three-plus years at Maryville College. Many of these people have helped me in more ways than I can even attempt to express here.

See you all later . . . and God bless.

Roberts arrives; enthusiastic over post

by Anne Gilliland

David M. Roberts, Maryville College's new vice president of development, and coordinator of communications and alumni, is glad to be here and feels positive about MC's future.

Although Roberts comes here from a job as director of development at Memphis State University, he has never worked in development for private higher education. "This kind of challenge surrounding Maryville College appealed to me," he said.

He stressed that development at MC is not a one-man show and that the President and Board of Directors set the direction for fund raising. Their aim—to get the college in the black—can succeed only if both giving and enrollment increase.

Within the next 2 or 3 years, Roberts forsees a multi-million dollar campaign to raise funds for the college. The details of this campaign have not yet been worked out.

About 30 percent of alumni now give money to MC. Although he says this is an adequate percentage, Roberts hopes to expand that base. He believes that "participation is more important than dollars." Money also can come through the Parents' Fund. "Parents have the opportunity to give, although this has not been stressed, which is how it should be."

Roberts sees these two sources of income as especially important because "increased participation on the part of people affiliated with the college makes a stronger case when we ask for funds from corporations, foundations and other friends of the college."

Over the Christmas holidays, Roberts read former president Dr. Ralph Lloyd's book, Maryville College, a History of 150 Years. "I was impressed with the long tradition of tremendous sacrifice," he said. He added that he will do his best to continue that kind of service.

Although MC has financial problems, Dr. Anderson and the college's trustees convinced Roberts that these problems can be overcome, and that his future at MC would be good. He believes that Dr. Anderson is an aggressive leader who will turn the college's finances around in the forseeable future. "We should be in good shape by the early '80's," Roberts predicted.

Roberts and his wife Mary have two children, Lea, 4½ and Chris, 8½. Chris is in the third grade at Sam Houston School.

The Roberts' are temporarily living on the second floor of Pearsons. "Chris and Lea like it. They're sleeping on the floor in sleeping bags and they think it's a big picnic. They like older kids and they've made friends with some of the students." Roberts said the family plans to move into a house in Maryville as soon as their house in Memphis is sold.

Impressions searching for new editor

Applications are now being accepted by the Communications Committee for the editor of the 1979 Impressions, the campus literary magazine, to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Editor Kathy Dunmire.

Criteria for applicants is that they have a grade point average of at least 2.0 for all college work, be of "rising sophomore" or higher class standing and should have previous experience on the staff of a newspaper or literary magazine.

Applicants will also be judged upon their knowledge of literary forms by critical analysis, judgment and evaluation; skill in layout or graphics or the ability to recognize these skills in another staff member; and the desire for literary excellence.

Interested students may obtain applications for the editorship from the communications office, 212B Anderson Hall. Deadline for applications is Monday, Jan. 15.

Animal Crackers

The plane flight was really dull, except for the stewardesses, but it was worth it. It feels good to get away from the folks again (especially your little sister), and back to the thrill and excitement of Maryville College life.

Upon arriving at the airport, you discover that your luggage has somehow ended up in Patooie Flats, North Dakota, and can pick it up in a few days. Thanks Friendly Skies . . . Meanwhile, you've gotta make it in the white corduroys you spilled your "complimentary beverage" all over, and a sweater with one sleeve longer than the other that Grandma made you for Christmas.

Obviously, there is now only one thing for you to do—kill yourself. You think better of it—too tacky to do in public. You decide on something more within the bounds of reason. So it's off to the airport lounge to drink yourself comatose.

After a two-hour layover here (and fifteen beers later) you remember the dangers of drinking alone, so you set out to find a cab and get back to ole Maryville.

Ah! How good it seems to be back! Looking around, you see familiar faces—with jet-lag expressions and bags under their eyes as well as under their arms. Perhaps things aren't so bad after all . . .

You shuffle into your dorm and drag yourself up the four flights of stairs—only to realize that your room is on the second floor. You stumble back down, find your room, and as you open the door, you are reminded that it is indeed the beginning of Winter Term. Sitting down, you watch your breath crystalize and resign yourself to the fact that, despite it all, it is good to be back.

Lady Scots start strong

Edmond shoots-Wayne Edmond goes up for a shot against Carson Newman last Saturday night. The Scot's lost the game 60-61, as a last minute come-back by Carson Newman spoiled what seemed to be an apparent victory for the b-ballers.

The Lady Scots basketball team has kicked off their 1978-79 season with a 6-2 record. The women defeated Bryan 62-60, Sewanee 77-30, Saint Mary's 58-43, 69-35, Tennessee Temple 78-24, and The University of Montevallo 53-48.

The team's only two losses were to Carson Newman 101-59 and 92-47. In the last game against C-N, freshman Dee Dee Chapman and sophomore Sandy Rabun both had 15 points.

When asked about the Carson Newman games, Coach Sharon Brown stated, "We didn't play well against Carson Newman. We had a lot of turn overs, which cost us a lot of points. Our defense was good, but offensively we never got rolling. We'll definitely need to work on it." She also stated, "We'll be looking forward to a tougher schedule in January. Our easy games are behind us."

The Lady Scots next game is tomorrow against Hiwassee.

Non-credit courses begin

Registration for the 20 noncredit courses which Maryville College's Office of Community Education and Service will conclude tomorrow announced director Ms. S. M. Atchley.

Information, about the courses or gift certificates, can be obtained by calling 982-6412 or by picking up a brochure in the central office, first floor, Anderson Hall on the MC campus.

More courses are being offered this term than in recent terms.

Before working at MSU, Roberts was director of alumni affairs and associate director of development for the UT Center for the Health Sciences at Memphis. Prior to working there, he was assistant director of alumni affairs and then promoted to director of the Annual Giving Program for UT Knoxville.

Roberts received a B.S. in journalism in 1956 from UT Knoxville and is now a candidate for an M.S. degree in educational administration and supervision.

He has worked as a reporter on the Chattanooga News-Free Press and as a writer for an editor of the Vanderbilt University news bureau.

ACC begins 1979

All College Council members heard reports from several committees, and they also adopted programs in Continuing Education, Wednesday, Jan 10.

Dr. Price, reporting for the World Concerns committee, called attention to the international affairs forum which will begin the week of Feb. 5 and run for 8 weeks. He noted that community involvelment will be entertained through later newspaper announcements.

Dean Mangus requested that the deans be removed from the Appeals Board in the judicial procedure, since they will have already been involved with the case before it reaches appeal. The council concurred.

The CIV schedule for the winter term speakers was distributed by Dr. Naylor (CIV representative). He noted that Mellon Foundation speakers will be utilized in the CIV framework.

The Ways and Means committee spokesman, Mr. Crawford, presented a semi-annual report and recommended approval of an "Outdoor Club" application. The ACC approved the application.

Saga Manager Carol Hows gave a report in absence of the ACC Food Committee. She mentioned various change in the dining hall in response to student suggestions. Hows broke down the food dollar allocation at 54% food, 32% labor, 12% expenses.

Chaplain Stewart stated that the theme for this year's February Meetings (January 30 –Feb. 1) will be Faith, Science and the Future.

David Widner, MC represent ative to the Tennessee Inter-Collegiate State Legislature (Nov. 16–19, 1978), noted the worth of T. I. S. L. to an MC student. T.I.S.L. legislation is passed on to the Tenn-

Capitalism hits Guyana

(CPS)—"The only thing I can say is that as journalists, it's our job to try to put out a story," Washington Post reporter Charles Krause told a recent National Press Club luncheon in Washington, D.C. The "story" was a book called Guyana Massacre, which Berkley Publishing of New York assembled, typeset, printed, and rushed into bookstores across the country all within two weeks of the tragic mass suicide in Jonestown, Guyana. Krause, who witnessed the murder of Rep. Leo Ryan, has been criticized by his colleagues for being something of a literary mercenary for seeing a book so quickly in the shock of Jonestown.

Yet Krause is hardly alone. While Berkley was rushing 450,000 copies of its books onto the stands, Bantam Books was printing 600,000 copies of The Suicide Cult: The Inside Story of the Peoples Temple Sect and the Massacre in Guyana. Cult was written by two San Francisco Chronicle eporters who have, over the years, been covering the Peoples Temple and Rev. Jim Jones, its leader, from San Francisco. The Los Angeles Times Syndicate is selling a six-part serial of the book to daily newspapers, while Universal Press Syndicate has already sold the serialization of Guyanan Massacre to 35 papers.

Publications get new darkroom

The Highland Echo and the Chilhowean finally have a long needed Communications darkroom. It is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall which makes it easily accessible to the staffs of both publications. The darkroom, which was designed by the Echo's managing editor, David Boyd, is for the use of the Communication staff only.

Work on the darkroom began at the beginning of November. The project progressed rapidly and the majority of the work was completed before Interim by the B&B Construction Company and the College's own maintenance crew. The lab contains the darkroom itself and an outer drying room, sturdy work benches topped with formica and two sinks. The fact that there are seperate sinks means that two entirely different processes can go on simultaneously.

Four men deserve special credit for helping to make the darkroom a reality. They are: Reverend Jim Stewart, who pushed the hardest for a centralized lab; Dean Larry Mangus; Hugh Crawford, Business Manager; and Lee Stephens, Director of Maintenance. According to David Boyd, designer of the lab, "Those men went out on a limb for us. They really helped us immensely."

The lab is expected to be totally functional by January 16. There will be six keys issued to the photographers associated with the Echo and the Chilhowean. A seminar will be held for the staffs of both publications on the correct use of the darkroom and tight security will be maintained to prevent loss of equipment. Staff members must sign into the lab and an inventory will be taken at the end of the year. If anything is missing, the grades of those who had used the lab will be withheld until the equipment is replaced.

"We are delighted with the lab," exclaimed Boyd.

The New Communications Darkroom — This new facility is now complete and in full use by the photography staffs of the Echo and Chillowean.

Weiner provides info on student withdrawal

by Shelley Ballenger

Attrition, the phenomenon of student withdrawal, and retention, the ability to retain students, are major present concerns among faculty and administrators of Maryville College. The results of a six-month study on why students leave MC have recently been compiled and made available by Stuart-Weiner Associates. The purpose of the study, according to the report, is "to provide Maryville College with a written report that will develop understanding of the attrition problems and promote actions to deal with them."

Stuart-Weiner surveyed two basic groups for their information: present MC students (remember those surveys fall term?) and students who had withdrawn from 1975–1978. Response to the survey of withdrawals was about 50%; this is considered excellent for a mailed survey.

According to Chaplain Jim Stewart, who promoted much of the interest and concern about attrition at Maryville, the study proved what was expected all along -- that the reasons behind student withdrawal are exceedingly complex. No one factor stands out above all the rest. Understanding how factors interact is therfore important in analyzing attrition problems.

Of the 301 students who have withdrawn since 1975 34% were freshmen, 42% sophmores, 15% juniors, and 7% seniors. A great majority -- 81%-- transferred to another college. The rest got married and/or went to work. Forty-three percent of the withdrawals received financial aid while at MC; however, 55% of these considered the amount of aid inadequate. Over half of present students receive financial aid, and again 55% consider it insufficient.

When asked to state their one major reason for leaving MC, 27% pf the surveyed withdrawals said that the academic programs were not strong enough, 15% that MC didn't offer their intended major, 13% that the school was too small, and 10% that it lacked social diversity. The withdrawals were then asked to rate Maryville on a number of points. 51% admitted a lack of campus activities contributed to their decision to withdraw, 49% rated MC's social program as poor, and 39% complained of low student involvement. 47% found the curriculum lacked diversity, 43% said some courses were bad, 40% complained there were too few faculty members in their field, and 40% said some teachers were bad. 41% were uncertain about their career objectives, and 34% mentioned poor guidance. These figures are significant in that they show where some of the main difficulties in retaining students lie.

Maryville did get some good marks from both present students and withdrawals. Everyone seemed to like the quality of the faculty and their concern for the students, the campus and its location, the quality of instruction, and class size. On the other hand, food services, the internship program, financial aid, academic advising, and cultural opportunities suffered low ratings. Approximately 60% of both groups feel a good athletic program is important, and, in this area, satisfaction varied greatly -- while only 19% of present students consider the athletics at MC poor, a full 41% of withdrawals find it lacking. Another big difference is the perceived quality of the student body at MC. Fifteen percent present students are dissatisfied with their peers, compared to a big 46% of withdrawals.

On the whole, then, it appears that withdrawals have a more negative attitude about the campus than do present students. What is interesting, however, is the fact that the percentages for current juniors and seniors, when considered apart from freshmen and sophmores, approach those for withdrawals. Seventy percent of the current jr/sr. classes dis=agreed with the statement, "I feel I am getting my money's worth at MC," compared to only 55% of the frosh/soph classes. Whereas only 68% of freshmen and seniors said they'd recommend Maryville to a friend, 80% of freshmen and sophmores would. Apparently, the study concludes, something happens to cause disenchantment with MC as students become upperclassmen.

Thirty-two percent of all present Maryville students have considered dropping out of college altogether, mostly because of a desire to work or financial difficulties.

Faculty women bestow scholarships

Adrienne Bennett, David Boyd, and John Bobo will each receive a $500 scholarship awarded by the MC Faculty Women's Club for 1978–79.

Miss Bennett, a junior, is majoring in biology. Her campus activities include assistant director of "The Lark," Vice pres. and secretary/treasurer of Beta Beta Beta, a member of the American Chemical Society, past treasurer of Alpha Lambda Delta, and editor of the 1978 yearbook. She also served on the Echo, Impressions, and the Communications Committee.

Boyd, a senior, is also a biology major. He is now a new member ofWho's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges and is the recipient of the Susan Allen Green Biology Scholarship.

At MC, Boyd has been involved in intramural sports, the MC Concert Choir, newspaper staff, Alpha Lambda Delta, and his residence hall council. He has also served as a sophomore aide and a resident assistant.

Does sex sell?

(CPS) --"Sex Cells" -- it's said to be Madison Avenue's First Commandment that may not be so any more, if two recent studies are any indication.

Nudity and the use of sexy models in advertising may actually blunt the effectiveness of ads, according to separate studies done at the University of Texas-Arlington and the University of Wisconsin. The researchers found that clothed plain-jane or john models create more acceptance in advertising.

The UT researchers, M.Wayne Alexander and Ben Judd, Jr. have replicated a 1969 study that non-sexual illustrations were more effective than sexual ones in promoting brand-name recall. After showing 15 slides containing brand names and various degrees of female nudity to 181 male subjects, they reached the same conclusion.

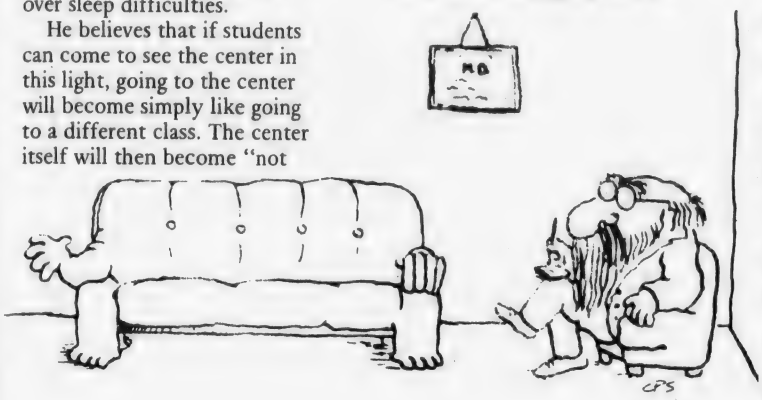
In non-sexual pastoral scenes, significantly more brand names were recalled. But while Alexander and Judd had predicted that brand-name recall would decline as nudity increased, they found it approximately the same for the various degrees of nudity shown.

Meanwhile, Michael Baker and Gilbert Churchill, Jr., completed a study that would put Mr. Olsen above Farrah Fawcett-Majors in product-selling capabilities.

Students indicated that the more comely models made better ads, but the cuter models didn't sell the product. Students, especially male students, were more often persuaded to buy coffee held by an unattractive woman than a pretty one. The research team surmised that perhaps the plainer female was more believable, and created a liking for the product.

Guillaume counsels students' problems

by Anne Gilliland



"Everybody thinks you have to be crazy to go to a counselor," says Bruce Guillaume, who runs the counseling Center on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall.

He wants to change this image and make the counseling center a place where students can learn skills such as anxiety management, assertiveness training, vocational planning, and getting over sleep difficulties.

He believes that if students can come to see the center in this light, going to the center will become simply like going to a different class. The center itself will then become "not much different than any other place on campus."

Guillaume believes that his job primarily consists of providing students with any skills they need to deal with relationships, school or any other area. After that, using those skills is a learning process.

This type of approach does not involve many hours of lying on a couch or digging into the unconscious. Most sessions last less than an hour.

However, Guillaume is also available for more serious counseling.

The Counseling Center is open from 8:30 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. on Mondays and by appointment on Tuesdays and Fridays. An appointment can be scheduled by putting a note in box 2893 or by contacting the Career Planning and Placement Office. Guillaume can also be contacted at Child and Family Services in Maryville where he works when he is not at the college.

Guillaume, who is a 1976 graduate of MC, received a master's degree in social work in 1978. He feels that this is an advantage in his work because in the past the center has been manned by graduate students.

This led to erratic hours. Also, Guillaume says, since he is not in school, "People won't be guinea pigs or in someone's thesis."

Guillaume says that since he took over the center during interim, the response has been greater than he expected. He hopes soon to expand the time he is available.

He has other plans for the center, also. Since MC is concerned about the attrition rate, he believes that students who leave the college should have an exit interview through the counseling center so that MC could find out why students seave.

To further combat this problem, Guillaume believes that freshmen should all have an orientation interview through the counseling office. This way, MC could spot students who might leave while it is still early enough to do something about it.

Guillaume enjoys working at MC because of its flexibility. He hopes that the counseling center will become a place where students can learn the skills they need. He wants students to know that "you don't have to be three minutes away from suicide to come up here."

Encare controversy... how effective is it?

(CPS)—"The most talked about contraceptive since the pill," announced inch-high headlines in ads running last month in over 100 college papers.

The makers of the new contraceptive Encare Oval couldn't have been more correct. Encare Oval is a suppository-type product that, when inserted in the vagina before intercourse, melts to provide chemical and physical barriers to sperm, the ads say. People have been talking about Encare since its U.S. marketing begain in October of 1977. And they're still talking now that Encare has become the nation's fastest-selling over-the-counter contraceptive.

But while many cite Encare's advantages over other methods of contraception—it has none of the dangerous side-effects attributed to the pill and the intrauterine devices (IUDs), and less of the messiness and inconvenience of most foams and jellies—others are telling a different story.

Despite the advantages, says the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), and, more recently, several disgruntled college family planning centers, Encare may not provide the "extremely high sperm-killing protection" the ads promise.

Furthermore, they say, although Encare orginally claimed effectiveness rivaling the pill and IUDs, it "has not been proven" any more effective than present foams and jellies, which have one of the lowest actual failure rates of all contraceptives.

Encare's critics acknowledge the new advertising avoids the direct claims the FDA has since judged untrue, but some health professionals are still concerned. Many worry doctors and pharmacists are still recommending Encare based on its earlier claims, and that women, too, are buying them based on that knowledge.

JUST HOW EFFECTIVE?

And some, like Dr. Warren Hern of the Boulder (Co.) Abortion Clinic, feel Encare's ads are still "dishonest and misleading." Hern feels, as do physicians at the Kent State University's birth control service, that the ads and information on the packages don't give specific and complete information. That, says Hern, who reported "a significant number" of women at his clinic who became pregnant while using Encare, can be "tragic in consequences."

For now, Encare's makers simply maintain that the product is "highly effective," while declining to cite a specific percentage, or to compare it to other products until "ongoing studies" are completed. Meanwhile, their public relations firm, Shaller-Rubin of New York, notes more advertising is planned. An account executive said Encare ads will be continued in the professional journals where they first appeared, on campus in newspapers as well as on over 100 campus radio stations, and that a campaign has begun in leading women's magazines.

To date, most of the non-promotional information about Encare comes from the dealings of the FDA with the "most talked about" contraceptive makers, Eaton-Merz Laboratories of Norwich, New York.

Engl. Lingo "obsolete"

(CPS)

Authors Arlene Zebrowski and Stanley Berne say they know why today's students aren't writing or reading as well as students in years past. They don't blame tv, incompetent grade school teachers, or the disintegration of the nuclear family. Instead, they say, the semi-literacy problem is just a signal of a deeper malaise. Students haven't failed language, the authors claim. The language has simply failed its students.

The English language is "obsolete," charge the Eastern New Mexico University professors, and it's because of the structures of grammar. Grammar, as Zebrowski sees it, is the "sodium pentothal of the system —— a form of verbal brainwashing that destroys instinctual creativity."

If the professors had their way, the 300 — some rules of grammar would be stripped of three: the comma, the period, and the capital letter. "The rest simply isn't necessary," explains Berne.

The sentence is next on the pair's list. "People don't think in sentences," Berne reasons. "They think in fragments." The subject, verb, and object construction of sentences, he believes, are "much too limit-"

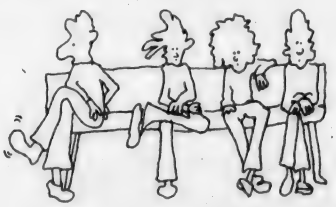
Social Committee revives campus spirit

"You know what MC's biggest problem is? There's never anything to do! This is the dullest place that I've ever seen."

This statement and others like it may be heard at any given moment on this campus. Students sit around in their dorm rooms and complain about the lack of a social life here. Perhaps in the past this may have been the case, but now these complaints are out of line.

Beginning in the Fall, MC had a change of face. Because of the efforts of the Social Committee, there was not one weekend Fall Term when something was not planned to fill time. A better use of the facilities we have on campus was evident. Events were held in front of the P. E. building, in the chapel courtyard, and in the FAC lounge. Lloyd lobby was the site for coffee houses, which provided a showcase for the unique variety of talent at MC.

The student participation was much better this fall. The majority of those involved were underclassmen, however. It seems that the upperclassmen have found their own social niche by this time and don't feel the need for the outlets offered.



Even with the improved Social Committee, there is a need for more workers to help organize the activities. Beginning this term, representatives from each hall will provide more direct communication to the Committee. In this way, ideas and suggestions received will tell them what the students want.

On the subject of ideas, something must be remembered. When compared to larger institutions, such as the University of Tennessee, a 100% participation of the student body of MC would equal a 2% participation at UT. Thus, when the complaint that we don't ever have the big name concerts is aired, it's unreasonable. This small campus cannot afford to bring these acts in, and it should not be expected.

The big events that we do offer, such as the Meisburg & Walters concert and the formal dance, require a large attendance to be both profitable and enjoyable. An ice-skating party, scheduled for Feb. 9, costs about $150. If the participation is too sparce, money will be lost and another chance gone by to fill those long winter nights. A number of movies are being offered to the student body free of charge. Granted these are not the big box office attractions playing today at the theaters, but they are usually classics or cartoons.

Maryville College should be appreciative of the hard work the members of the Social Committee have put into making life on campus a little more fun. Those gripes and complaints have little backing now. We are being offered alternatives to the "same old thing" weekends and nights. Give the activities a chance, and maybe they just might surprise you. Of course, it would mean one less thing to gripe about.

DESERT KIDS

In the beginning was nothing, and nothing has changed.

The sky was grey as winter's clouds moved in front of the sinking sun. It was not hot. It was not cold. The sands were still, as if they had never known movement. Small plants stood barren of all life and stripped of any color. In the distance, on the horizon, far away, was nothing.

The dead land gave no relief or monotony. From the nothing emerged a shadow, barely moving, but approaching the still sands. The black and white figure was silhouetted on the grey sky. It was a cowboy riding a horse.

The cowboy's face was pale, his eyes were thin, and his bland visage matched the dust below him. He carried nothing but a survival pack; nothing else was needed in the desert; nothing else is ever needed.

He dismounted his horse and examined the ground. He found nothing. There were no tracks, no signs, no messages, from those who might have gone before him. Maybe they had chosen to remain silent, maybe they had nothing to say.

The dying sun died into the nothing, and the darkness replaced what had been light covering the earth.

Finding nothing, the cowboy looked into the nothing. He realized though that he had nothing, found nothing, had encountered nothing, was nothing, facing all nothing, and that nothing would find nothing. He nothing nothing.

The cowboy laid out on the desert floor and slept . . . . he had nothing else to do.

Unmerciful are the hands of time,
Unceasingly ticking our lives away.
A second, a minute.
A year, a century, eternity.
Forever and ever, world without end amen.
And there's never enough of it
It will tell.
It's Money.
It marches on.
It waits for no man.
It heals all wounds.
Ah, But does it.

People I used to know pass by me,
Ancient and dusty relics from past ages.
These long since dead resurrect shadowed and vaguely painful memories and half of my life.
Do they see me, remember me?
And they return to the past, leaving me alone again.

Rocky Horror Picture Show fever

by Shelley Ballenger

Some strange songs have permeated many dorm rooms and campus parties recently at MC. What, in heaven's name, is the "time warp"? And what's all this about a sweet transvestite? And just who is Riff-Raff? The answers to these somewhat puzzling questions are well-known to every devoted fan of the "Rocky Horror Picture Show."

Beginning as a play in New York, Rocky Horror Picture Show was soon made into a movie that has virtually swept the country. In many cities, R.H.P.S. has played for months and even years on end. Usually one movie house will feature it as a midnight movie—and then watch it sell out faithfully weekend after weekend. In Columbus, OH, the theater that has shown it for three years at $1.00/person plans to keep it at least two more years. R.H.P.S. came to Knoxville last May—and the midnight lines at the Kingston Four, even at $3.00 a head, have never since been what you'd call short.

What is the movie's big attraction? It's difficult to say, but a lot of it has to do with crowd participation. Many people come to the show armed with rice (lots of rice), newspapers, flashlights, noisemakers, toast, bells, cards, and even hot dogs. The throwing, ringing, and exhibiting of such paraphernalia are all tied in with key parts of the movie—and the audience knows its cues well. In fact, it knows the lines almost by heart, not to mention the songs and dances. This is understandable when you realize that many of the audience leaders have probably seen the show literally dozens of times.

The plot of R.H.P.S. is not always visible to the first-time viewer, but if you haven't caught onto it after a few times, by then you at least know enough to sing along. It does have one, though. It has something to do with Frankie creating Rocky after failing with Eddie (whom Columbia nearly loved) and the mutinous efforts of Riff-Raff and Magenta (who are anxious to return to Transylvania)—and the discovery of this strange world by two innocents, Brad and Janet, and subsequently by Dr. Scott. But that barely scratches the surface, for the real plot—and the "moral" of the show—are much more complicated. The best thing to do is to watch it until it becomes clear or, better yet, to take a veteran with you.

So if you haven't caught "Rocky Horror Picture Show" fever yet, perhaps you'd better try it soon. If nothing else, you may at least know what's going on when they play those crazy songs at the next party.

animal crackers

Here we are at the Intramural basketball games! On any given weeknight one can go down and watch budding amateur athletes and not so budding athletes play an exciting game of roundball.

A game that's always fun to watch is one of the freshman teams against one of the Carnegie teams. As the day of the big game draws near, each team goes through rigorous training -- each in its own way. Every other day will see the freshman team in practice sharpening their game plan. Some of the players will even go so far as to take time away from their studies to practice.

As of yet, the freshmen haven't seen hide nor hair of the Carnegie team(s). They watch and wonder. Perhaps the Carnegie team has forgotten about the game; maybe they all were struck by lighting and died. Maybe -- maybe they might forfeit the game . . .

Carnegie has not forgotten about the game, nor have they all been struck by lighting and died. They, too, have been in training for the game, but in their own special way. The Carnegie team's training comes in the form of sleeping till noon the day of the game, going to whatever classes they have after that, and, then, after supper and before the game, consuming mass quantities of alcoholic beverages either in their rooms or at the D. Y. Drinking is not limited to just the night of the game. Many of the members train constantly this way.

Finally, the night of the big game arrives. The freshman team dresses in relative silence and heads for the gym. The Carnegie team, too, prepares to go -- finishing off that case of Little Kings or downing a last shot of Jack Daniels. Then they move toward the gym.

The game starts as the ref and the team captains flip to see who gets the ball. The Carnegie bunch looks intimidating. There is a strange fire in their eyes, and they smell strangely of alcohol. The freshmen shuffle nervously.

At first, the freshmen play their game plan, but, as time wears on, they begin to fall apart. Their star rebounder inadvertently gets his face in the way of a third-year senior's elbow. One down.

The ref, a freshman himself, calls no foul after a short conference with the entire Carnegie bench.

From there, the game becomes more and more one-sided. The upper classmen pull ahead after the freshmen's star shooter throws his groin into the knee of one of their players, an obvious foul on the part of the freshman. The Carnegie bench thunders approval of the referee's call. The freshmen sag visibly.

As the game comes to an end, the freshmen have closed on the Carnegie team, bringing the score to 98 to 18. The last few seconds tick off both the clock and the battered freshmen.

The Carnegie bench explodes into a flurry of drunken cheers and back-slapping. With typical freshman machismo, the freshmen shrug the loss off to inexperience.

"Just wait till we're upperclassmen," they say "Then we'll beat 'em."

SOUNDS

Aerosmith

Aerosmith is America's answer to the Rolling Stones. Gritty street-wise rockers who understand the feeling of Rock and Roll as well as the execution.

"Bootleg" is a double live album that will please any Rock fan. Joe Perry is a fine guitarist who comes up with the kind of good licks that one associates with Keith Richards. Steven Tyler is a rock and roll singer; this album dispels the last doubts. The record contains some of the best music that Aerosmith has recorded anywhere. "Back in the Saddle," "Walk This Way," and "Dream On"; the hits Aerosmith has had come across a lot more urgently and graphically live. "Come Together," their new single, has an energy live that was not evident even on the searing "Sgt. Peppers" album version. And the album ends with one of the all-time scorchers, "Train Kept-a-Rolling."

But there's more. There is a version of "Last Child" that was recorded in a bar in Boston late last year under the pseudonym of "Dr. J. Jones And The Interns." Also, a two-song jam of oldies (Ain't Got You, and the funky Mother Popcorn) recorded at one of Aerosmith's gigs back in 1973.

Having established themselves as one of the biggest draws on the road, the band has been plagued by bootleggers. They decided to put out their own 'bootleg' album because of this. The theme is very interesting as it is carried throughout the album. Tapes fade in and out between songs (although the technical recording of the music is of good quality) and the effect really is that of an underground L.P. There are even juice stains on the sleeve of the album.

Aerosmith played in Knoxville this past November, and the concert was high-energy musical wonder; the house was sold out.

Rock is Aerosmith . . . and the night-after-night jams as the result of a tour bring out the best of a good band. Simply put, Aerosmith kicks out the jams.

Hall and Oates

Those people only peripherally aware of the msuic scene will know Hall and Oates as the artists that did 1975's "Sara Smile" and 1976's "Rich Girl." Others know them as company to some of the most versatile and creative musicians today.

They originate in Philadelphia, with roots in the 'Blue-eyed soul' school of music. They first teamed together in the early seventies, and now have about eight albums out. But the thing is that none of the albums sound similar. Hall and Oates run the gamut of expressing themselves from folk singers to Motown to rock, and each album is a relevation of their mastery of style.

"Live Time" was recorded on their massive 1977 world tour, and because of the band's new prominence (due to their singles), it features some of the best back-up men around. But more importantly, it chronicles various aspects of their musical careers. Both of the singles are included, as well as vintage material from "Abandoned Luncheonette" (1973).

They have a clean, extremely tight sound, commercial enough to sell albums, yet they don't compromise their music a whole lot. I have a lot of respect for this band, and for this and any other of their albums.

What they advocate is a "stream—of—conciousness type of writing, a collage of free—association fragmants they call "open structure" language. For example, if Zebrowski would explain their concept in the new language, it would go like this:

"The thought. Precepts. Of a series of. Images. Clusters of. Concepts constellating. Elaborating. Enlarging. Exploring. Probing. Accentuating. Being. Motion. Emphasis. The Sentence. The part. Of the parts. Of the totality. The entity. The Whole"

The new language isn't, Bernc insists, the easy way out. "Our system requires as much discipline as the traditional teaching of English.

Jersey Co-ed leads students, 70,000 strong

The New Jersey group is only one of some 24 state student associations that, many national student organizers feel, are collectively the most significant new development on the student political scene since campus anti-war activism faded in the early seventies.

They've been formed with an eye to establishing a student voice in state legislatures, where colleges and universities typically get much of their funding. Most of the groups have hired paid lobbyists to carry their positions in state-level politics.

Sadat, a student at Douglas College in New Brunswick, NJ, reports "We've been well-received in the state legislature." Her association lobbies for student representation on the state Board of Education, for marijuana decriminalization, and for cutting the rate of tuition increases, among other issues.

The other active 23 state associations also have at least one part-time staff member, while some of the larger ones sport annual budgets of more than $100,000. Associations in California, New York state, New York City, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Missouri, and Oregon are generally considered the most successful.

These organizations first began to grow in the frustrating era of the early seventies, when student activists found themsleves floundering in state legislatures, unsuccessfully pursuing issues ranging from the war in Vietnam to academic governance to control of student fees.

Groups in New York and California were established in 1970, with the Student Association of the State University in New York being the first to send a lobbyist into a state legislature. The California Student Lobby soon followed, quickly scoring two legislative victories.

Since then SSAs in many states have blossomed and wilted. The United States Student Association in Washington, D.C. lists some 80 SSAs, of which only 24 are currently considered functional. SSAs fail for a variety of reasons, but the major problem has always been funding. The organizations have traditionally depended on contributions from individual campus student governments. Those students governments, though, were frequently prone to cutting off funds in the midst of the political bickering endemic to student politics.

Thus the most interesting experiment in student politics these days is being performed in Pennsylvania, where 13 of the 14 state schools in the Commonwealth Association of Students in Pennsylvania have agreed to contribute a mandatory $1 student fee to the association.

With its new financial stability, the Pennsylvania group plans a more aggressive lobbying campaign. Kathy Downey, the group's executive director, says the "sound financial base" will give her association independence from administrators. Perhaps more significantly, the group now also has a continuity of cash that helps insure a continuity of paid staff. Turnover among student leaders has always been the bane of student organizing.

Most administrators and politicians, of course, know that the average student group has an entirely new collection of staffers every four years. Some of those administrators, moreover, have become adept at referring issues to committee, or setting up a study panel to ensure a reform is not dealt with until the student who originally proposed it has graduated. By then, the issue is usually "safe" to simply drop, and let die.

But SSAs with paid staff, Downey feels, have an organizational memory that outlasts the turnover of its student leaders. Leila Sadat may graduate and move away, but the lobbyist for the New Jersey Student Association will still be there, remembering pledges and promises made by administrators and politicians.

With those kinds of advantages, Downey and many of the other 75 state-level student activists who attended an October meeting of SSAs in Milwaukee think that mandatory student funding may help the SSAs reach a new plateau of power. The fees are refundable upon request, and require periodic referenda for continuation.

But their new power also promises to have a dramatic effect on the national student political scene.

"Most of the national student leaders today come out of the SSA movement," observes Frank Jackalone, the chairman of the United States Student Association. Jackalone himself began as an organizer for the Student Association of the State University of New York. "In the past you would have people jumping from campus politics to the national level without experience with working on several campuses, much less several thousand campuses."

Now he finds national student leaders start out more sophisticated. Jackalone says they're not only more sophisticated in terms of office management skills and of organizing on many campuses, but also in lobbying techniques and political maneuvering.

Since many officials in the U.S. Office of Education started their careers on the state level, moreover, they've already got a working relationship with some of the state student leaders now arriving in Washington from the SSAs. The shared experiences and past negotiations have led to increasing cooperation on the national level.

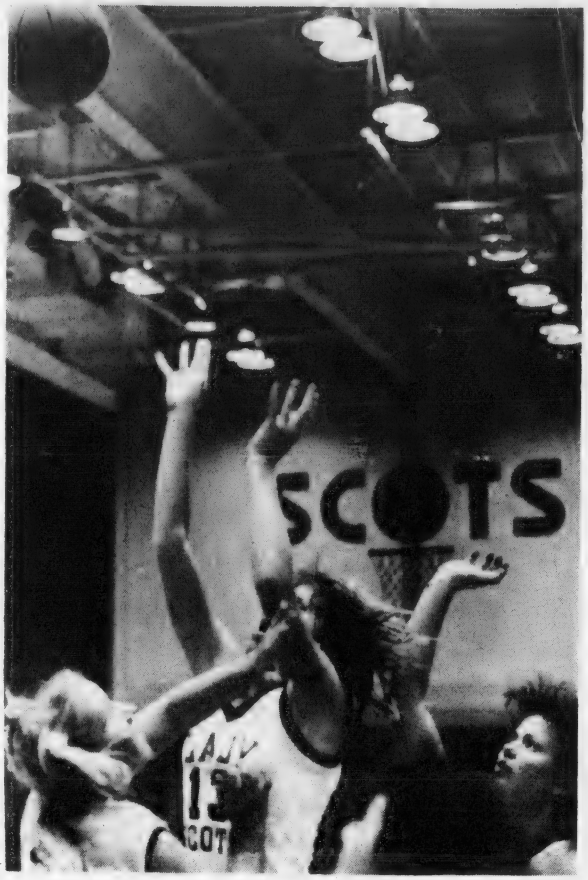
For example, when U.S. Commissioner of Education Ernest L. Boyer arrived in Washington after serving as Chancellor of the State University of New York, he found the same student lobbyists he had worked with in New York. Perhaps as the result, student leaders in the capital are now enjoying more influence in federal policy-making procedures than they have since Lyndon Johnson's presidency.

House defeats proposed Department of Education

WASHINGTON,D.C. (CPS)

At the close of the last session of Congress, the U.S. Senate emphatically approved a measure that would create a new cabinet department, the U. S. Dept. of Education. By a 72-11 vote, it gave the new department -- which would centralize most federal education programs under one administrative roof —— 14.6 billion and 16,000 staffers. But, in the end, the proposal was scuttled. Opponents in the house of Representatives tacked over 100 amendments to the proposal. The delaying tactics worked. When the 95th Congress adjourned, there still was no department of education, and the U. S. was still the only industrialized nation in the world without one.

It's not for lack of trying. Congress has considered over 120 proposals for administering education program since the 1850's. One of the few that was actually passed was in 1954, when the newly created U. S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) was given authority over most government school-related activities. Discontent with that arrangement continues. Almost inevitably, it's expected to result in yet another bill for a Dept. of Education in the 96th session of Congress, which opens Jan 15.



Indeed, debate over the proposal is expected to dominate education action on the Hill this year. Department advocates optimistically forecast passage by the spring. But opponents are equally optimistic. They expect to pick up support because of the "tax revolt" and the free—floating suspicion that attends the creation of any new bureaucracy.

Those opponents are worried that centralizing all education programs under one roof could do more harm than good. For example, James O'Hara, a lobbyist with the American Federation of Teachers, is scared that education would be isolated in a new department, and that, as a result, federal funding will be harder to get.

Others say elementary and secondary education would get the most attention in a department, while higher education would have a lower priority.

Some major research universities have announced a fear that a centralized department would only involve the federal government more in all levels of education.

Sandy Rabun shoots under heavy pressure in the Lady Scots game Friday against Hiwassee.

Lady Scots fall to 6-4

The Lady Scots basketball team dropped their record this week as they were defeated by Morristown 85—45, and by Hiwassee 48—41. Morristown shot 94% from the field, while Maryville only shot 20%. Sandy Rabun and Donna Owens each had 16 points.

The Lady Scots played a tough game against Hiwassee in which both teams were poor offensively. The Lady Scots came within three points in the final two minutes, but couldn't pull it out. Donna Owens was high scorer with 11 points.

Carol Neal and Sandy Rabun had 9 points each. In looking back on the games, Coach Sharon Brown stated, "We were very poor shooters, but our defensive game was good. We had to have a good game to get us confident again."

Crown Publishing, moreover, plans to publish Ginerva, a fictional book about the Peoples Temple, in May, 1979.

But there's more: two Italian moviemakers had already started production on a movie about the mass suicide by the time the Berkley books rolled off the presses at 4:32 a.m., Nov. 30.

The night before drummer Elvin Jones had unveiled his new song, "Guyana Elegy," at a night club in StoryTowne, N.Y. If the song is ever published and recorded, Jones says he will contribute some of the royalties to the victims' families.

About the only people not actively seeking publicity in the affair are those who work at General Foods, which makes KoolAid. The Soho Weekly News in New York reports the company is trying to take its product's association with the mass suicide in stride. Rhoda Kaufman, General Foods' assistant manager of public relations, told the paper, "I suppose in one sense it's corporate bad luck. On the other hand, it would be improper to complain whether it was KoolAid or not . . . It may turn out from all this it was not KoolAid. It was probably Flavor-Aide."

To be eligible for the scholarships, a student must be a junior or senior, maintain a satisfactory academic record, support undergraduate activities through participation and leadership, and show evidence of financial need.

Undertakers on top

Men's intramurals are now underway, and the name of the game is Basketball. Fifteen games were played on Jan. 9—11, with plenty of action. Three teams have emerged as possibly the team to beat.

Clearly the Undertakers are presently tops at MC. They have 3 wins and no losses going into the second week of competition and are averaging slightly over 68 points a game.

The Hackers and No Names are tied for second. Both teams have 2 and 0 records. Joe Beals of the Hackers is leading scorer so far with 24.2 points a game.

Soccer Club practices

The M C Soccer Club is now in full swing for their 1979 year

In anticipation of the start of the spring season, the soccer club is meeting every Sunday afternoon for practice sessions from 1:30 to 3:30. These sessions exercise the Scots' soccer skills and allow the participation of students who want to be on the team. Definitely scheduled for the Spring season are five home games and two away games; with more currently being scheduled. A Complete listing of all games will be published when finalized.

The soccer club emphasizes that students students interested in soccer should come to Sunday practice sessions.

Percussion jazz ensemble offered

Do you like to beat things? If so, you should check out the Contemporary Jazz Percussion Ensemble which will start rehearsals on Tuesday Jan. 23 — 4-4:30 in the Band Room.

According to MC's Taliaferro-Jones, the ensemble's director, the group will experiment with different types of percussion instruments. Students will be coached in composition and will be able to perform their own compositions. A concert performed in the Spring, will enable the percussionists to perform what they have practiced.

If interested, contact Taliaferro-Jones through box 2852 or by calling 982-9132. The Tuesday rehearsals are mandatory.

Scots drop two in tourney

Disaster was the word for the Maryville Scots at the Washington & Lee tournament. The Scots dropped two games, after playing spectaular first halves.

Friday night's game matched the Fighting Scots with the host team, Washington & Lee. The first half was an exciting topsy - turvy half with each team going up by six points. The strong inside game of Wade Edmond and Doug Tutin proved to be the right combination for the Scots as they silenced a hostile Washington & Lee crowd with their brilliantly combined effort of forty - one points and numerous rebounds. Behind Edmond and Tutin, Maryville went into half - time with a two–point lead.

In the second half, the difference proved to be Washington & Lee's bench strength. Utilizing twelve players to the Scots' seven, Washington & Lee simply wore down the Scots. At the beginning of the second half, W & L took the lead from the Scots and never relinquished it, even though the Scots cut the lead to four at the seventeen minute mark.

SCORE: Washington & Lee 89 ; Maryville 74

Saturday night's game was at best a carbon copy of the Scots Friday night performance. Ursinus college , a more physical team, had the Scots fighting for breathing room in the second half. The first half of the ball game was well played with the Scots only down by seven at halftime. But the Scots soon began to pay the toll of playing against the more physical Ursinus ball players. The inside game of Edmond and Tutin again accounted for the bulk of the Maryville scoring, but it was Wayne Emme who was the high scorer for the Scots against Ursinus. Emme had 22 points for the night.

The stellar performance of Doug Tutin both nights was rewarded with his being selected for the All-Tournament team.

SCORE: Ursinus 86

Fifty-one percent of current students have thought about transferring to another college, the majority because of an expressed lack of courses in their major field. Less important seem to be the complaints that Maryville is too small, too expensive, or too far from home. The GPA division among withdrawals and present students is about equal; the researchers conclude that poor academic performance is not a major motive behind withdrawal.

After computing and analyzing the results of their survey, Stuart-Weiner makes a number of suggestions as to what Maryville College could do to decrease its attrition rate. These will be covered in depth next week.

Editor's Note: This is the first part of a two-part article dealing with the Stuart-Weiner survey on why students leave Maryville College. This article is a summary of the 200 page report which is on reserve in the library.

Dorms meet, initiate administration dialogue

President Anderson, Dr. Mangus, Dean of Students, and Jane Richardson, Assistant Dean of Students, made visits to three dorms on Monday, January 15. They began making their rounds at 8 o'clock

The first stop was at Davis where there were approximately twenty students. At nine the party of three travelled to Lloyd where they were questioned by over sixty interested students.

These meetings were not mandatory. Dr. Anderson, Dean Mangus, and Jane Richardson wanted to be at the dorms to talk to any students who wanted to talk.

The most common concern of the students was over the food. Other concerns dealt with the washers and dryers, the linen service, the Post Office being closed on Saturday mornings, the accessibility to P. E. facilities, and concerns over the academic courses.

Dean Mangus had good feelings about the meetings. It gave the administration a chance to talk to a group of students about their concerns in a relaxed atmosphere. The meetings were an opportunity for the administration to get acquainted with the students. Questions were answered that cleared up rumors, and complaints were presented to Anderson, Mangus, and Richardson;

Most of the students were pleased when they were in-

Mathison, Murphy elected toboard

The Rev. John Mathison, minister of New Providence Church, Maryville, and Judson Murphy, president of Murphy Enterprise, Inc. and board chairman of Murphy Motor Manors, Alsoa, have been named to Maryville College s Board of Directors.

The Synod of the South of the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.elected the New MC directors.

Rev. Mathison has served as pastor of New Providence Church since 1972. He came from Chicago, Il., to assume that position.

A long time resident of Maryville-Alcoa, Murphy attended MC, is a member of the MC finance committee, and served as advanced gift chairman for the college's community fund-raising campaign in 1977. His wife, Lois Brown Murphy, a 1937 graduate, formerly served on the board from 1962-1972.

In announcing the new positions, President Wayne Anderson said, "Maryville College is indeed fortunate to have Jack Mathison and Jud Murphy, both longtime friends of the College, as members of our Board of Directors. Both men bring a vast knowledge of and experience in business, as well as religious and community activities which will greatly enhance their service to the Board and to the College.

The Reverend Mathison is chairman of the ministerial relations committee and co-chairman of the planning committee of the Union.

Weiner suggests variety of improvements

Second part of a two-part series.

by Shelley Ballenger

More attention to career development, better record-keeping, increased student advisory services, internships in every major, and more financial aid are just some of the ideas outlined by Stuart Weiner and associates to help Maryville College retain more of its students.

The results of an extensive study on attrition (withdrawl) and retention of students at MC have recently been compiled in what is properly called the "Weiner report." Some of the more important findings of this report were summarized in the Echo last week. The social program at MC, academic weaknesses in some majors, and career guidance were some of the areas which showed a definite need for improvement.

After presenting the facts stemming from the survey and drawing conclusions from them, the Weiner researchers proceed to make a number of suggestions as to how Maryville College could go about lowering its attrition rate. (Note: the attrition rate of a school is the percentage of students who leave each year for reasons other than graduation.) These suggestions include the establishment of a retention committee and the adoption of a "retention action plan."

The retention committee, once organized, should keep data in the form of a control card on each student, should set timetables outling the things (research, meetings, reports, and so forth) that need to be done and when. It should also examine its own status periodically to determine what effects retention efforts have had.

The retention action plan has four basic parts: recruitment, support services, academic programs, and what Weiner calls "significant others." In the recruiting process, a "good student/institutional match—up" needs to be assured. Maryville would do well to stress the relevancy of a liberal arts education in light of the current trend toward speciality.

Support services are of five basic types: advising, career development, internship, financial aid, and social/cultural opportunities. All of these areas were rated fairly weak by the majority of withdrawn students and many present ones.

Weiner sees the need for a "Goal-Oriented Advising Program" to stress total student development. The program would consist of trained faculty and peer advisors to help students define and meet their goals. Weiner suggests Maryville hire a professional consultant to help integrate the present career/planning/placement program into the total academic program.

Internships were thought highly of by students but are presently too limited. Since most college students today are

February meetings offer challenge, and entertainment

by Laura Ives

This year's February Meetings, slated for January 30-31 and February 1, will feature talks by a noted religious leader, seminars on Christian discipleship and entertainment by an internationally acclaimed jazz group and by MC students under the direction of members of the Playmakers. Following the theme "New Questions, New Answers: A vision of Truth in a Changing World," the Februrary Meetings are designed to explore profoundly religious questions for the moral and religious welfare of the College and community. The Meetings have been an annual occurance at the College since 1877.

All the events of the three-day meetings, which are are open to the public, are being coordinated by the MC Chaplain's office and the worship and special meetings committee of the All-College Council.

Dr. Paul Abrecht, director of the Department of Church and Society of the World Council of Churches, Geneva, Switzerland, is the featured speaker for the meetings. Dr. Abrecht, who is the organizing secretary for the 1979 World Conference on Faith, Science and the Future, to be held in July at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, has chosen to focus on the topic of that conference for his workshop and addresses. He is a graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, and the Union Theological Seminary, New York, and received his Doctor of Divinity degree from Assumption College in Worcester, Mass., in 1974. Dr. Abrecht is a pastor affiliated with the American Baptist Church.

The February Meetings will begin at 2 P.M. Tuesday with a workshop introduced by Dr. Abrecht, which will look specifically at science and "Ethical Questions for the Future." The workshop will meet in the Fine Arts Center lounge and classrooms. It will divide into three study sessions: Biological Research, led by Dr. Terry Bunde, MC associate professor of chemistry; Energy and Technology, led by Reverend Charles Fowler, pastor of Logan's Chapel Methodist Church in Maryville; and Food Resources, Environment and Population, led by Dr. Tom Fuhr, chairman of the Blount County Chapter of Bread for the World. The study guide for the workshop is the book Faith, Science and the Future: Preparatory Readings for the 1979 Conference of the World Council of Churches. Copies are available for $4.95 at the Chaplain's office in Wilson Chapel.

A dinner and the first address by Dr. Abrecht will be from 6:30 to 9 P.M. Tuesday in Proffitt Dining Room. The cost for dinner is $2.25 per person, and reservations can be made by calling the Chaplain's office at 982-9161. The address will begin at 7:30 and is open to persons not electing to attend the dinner. Dr. Abrecht will lecture again at the Wednesday morning CIV in Wilson Chapel.

Three seminars led by prominent religious leaders will follow the February Meeting theme and will examine the subjects of social action, Bible study, and prayer. Each seminar is open to the public and will be held in the Proffitt Dining Room.

Reverend Hogan Yancey, pastor of the Downtown Presbyterian Church in Nashville, will interrelate local and global social issues and discuss the need for a cross-denominational focus on social action programs at the first seminar from 2:30 to 4 P.M.on Wednesday. In Nashville, Reverend Yancey is a member of MANNA, a hunger coalition; Clergy and Laity Concerned, a peace and justice center; and a local chapter of Amnesty International, which he helped to establish. He also serves on the Hunger Task Force for the Presbytery of Middle Tennessee and the Southern Presbyterian Peace Fellowship, a peace studies group. Reverend Yancey has a B.A. from Yale, a Master of Divinity from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia and a Ph.D. from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

The Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy

The next event on the agenda for the meetings will be performance by the Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy.The group will present their jazz theater program from 8 to 9:30 P.M. on Wednesday in the FAC auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public.

The five instrumentalists and one interpretive dancer present, in addition to jazz, a program that mixes contemporary drama (drawn mostly from the theater of the absurd), film and both classical and modern dance to provide an intelligent and stimulating approach to entertainment.

Paralleling the religious purpose of the February Meetings, interperative dancer Charlotte Adams will portray a clown who explores what it means to experience life in its fullest dimension. Accompany-

Students sue parents for $$

(CPS)

Parents can be a student's best friend at tuition-paying time. But if they're not, more and more students are finding ways to impose a friendship, with help from the local courthouse.

That's the case, at least, in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania. Judges there report that "hundreds" of students have sued their parents for money to help pay for school in recent years.

Judge John Brosky, administrative head of the County Court's family division, told United Press International that lawsuits are usually filed by children of divorced parents, but that children of stable families can and do file suit if they feel their parents should be giving them more money.

Parents are often forced to assist students if the judge determines that the costs won't place an "undue hardship" on them..

Bill Thomas, Marian Hummel, and Judy Fulks rehearse for Threepenny

3-Penny Opera set in "Seedy London"

The Threepenny Opera, by Bertolt with music by Kurt Weill, will be performed by the Maryville College Playhouse Feb. 22, 23, and 24.

Threepenny Opera is based on John Gay's Beggar's Opera, according to Thomas Jones, director of MC's production. The Beggar's Opera was written in the eighteenth century as a satire on Italian opera, which was extremely popular in that day. Instead of a story written in Italian that dealt with the noble emotions of royalty, the Beggar's Opera was written in English and was about a group of thieves and prostitutes.

Brecht updated the story to the early part of this century, and set it in the seedy Soho district of London. Most of the men are criminals, and most of the women are prostitutes.

Brecht, who was a Marxist, used the Threepenny Opera to criticize society and comment on the contradiction of man's good and bad impulses.

The story of Threepenny Opera concerns a criminal named Macheath, who marries a girl names Polly Peachum, goes to prison, takes up with another girl there, and is rescued at the last moment from a tragic end.

"IT's a good story," says Wayne Arrants, who will play Macheath, "but it has a lot of philosophical implications, too."

Marian Hummel will play Mrs. Peachum, Bill Thomas, Mr. Peachum, and Judy Fulks, Polly Peachum in the production. Judy Corliss will play the part of Pirate Jenny, Lois Boney will play Lucy and John Morton will play Tiger Brown.

"This show will have many new faces," says Sharon Crane, assistant director. "There are a lot of music majors in it, which is an advantage, since they can learn their music quickly." Mike Ketcherside is music director.

"This show also offers something different visually," adds Crane, who is also lighting designer. "There will be no curtain, and the lights and the back stage wall will be exposed. Even the stage manager and prop mistress will be in costume and in character."

Tickets for Threepenny Opera may be purchased at the theater office or at the door. Tickets will be $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students and children.

The Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy has gained an international reputation for their quality of musicianship and their novelty in programming. In addition to theatrical programs, they present worship programs, ranging from a full requiem mass to a deeply subdued meditation experience, which are specially designed for each situation to give free, non-sectarian reign to the worshipper in the 20th century.

During the past year, they toured Greenland, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Saudi Arabia, Central America, the West Indies, Puerto Rico, and the Bahamas. Domestically, they have appeared recently with Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, Muddy Waters, Doug Kershaw, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Paul Winter, Billy Cobham, and George Duke.

Final Day

The final day of the meetings will begin with a breakfast seminar on Bible study led by Dr. Lee Humphries, associate proffessor of religious studies at UT–Knoxville, The breakfast will begin at 7:30 on Thursday, and the cost is $1.25 at the door. Dr. Hunphries will discuss what the Bible meant to different people at different times in history and various approaches for studying the Bible. He received a B.A. from the University of Rochester, NY, a Bachelor of Sacred Theology from Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Connecticut, and a Ph. D. from Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

Reverend Lloyd Edwards vicar of St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Knoxville, will focus on the traditions of prayer in the Catholic and Protestant faiths and the question of how to pray in the scientific age for the final seminar on Thursday from 1:10 to 2:30 P.M. A graduate of Louisiana State U, Baton Rouge, with a B.S. and Ph. D in physics. Reverend Edwards also has a Master of Divinity from Nashotah House in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The event which will wrap up the 1979 February Meetings will be three one-act plays presented by MC students in the Experimental Theater. The Ugly Duckling, Hello Out There and To Burn a Witch are being directed by members of the Playmakers; Allen Evitts, Tim Stuart and Ruth Cartlidge.

This year's meetings should give everyone who attends an opportunity to learn and grow in new and exciting ways. That is, after all, the purpose of the February Meetings.

Super Bowl Sunday a success

Lloyd Hall and the Social Committee sponsored a Superbowl Celebration last Sunday afternoon that was certainly a Superparty. In spite of the snow and the fact that admission was charged, over 80 people showed up to watch the game. The scene in Lloyd Lobby was exciting as people in cowboy hats rooted for Dallas, and people yelling "Go P–burg" cheered for the Steelers. Although there were screaming opponents and popcorn and cushions for throwing, the party was, in general, an orderly one. Sharon Crane, the R. D. for Lloyd, said, "I had a good ole time . . . . the party went really well." The residents of Lloyd made and sold 170 meatball hoagies and Italian subs to satisfy the appetites of the football fans. The enthusiasm and participation Sunday was terrific for an M. C. event, and, if the Lloyd party is indicative of future activities, there is hope for Winter and Spring terms.

Dorm meetings productive

Administration strives for better contact

Last week the administration took a vital step in improving its relationship with the student body by dropping into the residence halls for an informal discussion with anyone who came by. President Anderson, Dean Mangus, and Dean Richardson opened the floor to questions on any subject of concern. The response was excellent. Students brought up gripes about everything from SAGA to HPER 101. President Anderson, with his notebook in hand, listened, questioned, and joked with the students which made the evening a very productive one.

Several important issues were raised during the evening which we feel deserve more attention in the immediate future. One is the problem of poor campus communications. All too often posters and signs telling of coming social activities are ripped down or removed before they have served their purpose. Word of mouth becomes the major source of information on campus. A campus bulletin board could solve this problem. It might be located between Pearsons and the Post Office, thus eliminating some of the clutter that now exists in the Post Office. Ironically, we found that plans for such a bulletin board were begun back in the Fall and have never been completed. Hopefully, we will see this become a reality in the near future.

An issue that seemingly surprised President Anderson was the apparent lack of confidence in campus health services. It appears that most students do not understand what the college offers in this area. If a pamphlet could be prepared explaining the infirmary's hours, when the doctor will be in, the college insurance policy, and emergency room procedures, it would help clear up many problems, especially for freshmen, in this area. The infirmary is the one facility on campus that everyone has in common. Therefore, we believe that every effort should be made to improve it and make it more than a place to get pills. A doctor should be available on campus more than once a week. A related issue involves injuries that occur during intramurals. Three people have had surgery this school year because of injuries that happened during intramurals. Sometimes these injuries can not be avoided; nevertheless someone should be around that is qualified in First Aid when one happens.

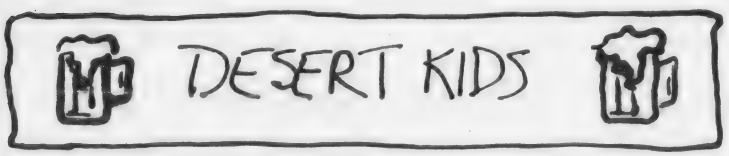
Many other important issues were raised during President Anderson's visit which need to be dealt with in the near future. Some of them were: the quality of instruction in some core courses, problem with SAGA, the use of athletic department facilities by the whole student body, dorm visitation policy, and others. We would add these to the list for further study: improved parking for commuter students, paving all the parking lots, making the campus a prettier place for our visitors and the community, and improving the Student Center.

This spring President Anderson will begin a fund raising drive with the goal of nearly $5 million in the next few years. Obviously, it will take lots of money to make all the improvements that have been called for in the past week. But it takes more than money. As students we have the responsibility to take an active role in campus affairs. Anderson and his staff are working diligently to improve our lot. We have to let the administration know what needs fixed, before they can fix it.

Last week we learned an important thing. Our friends in Anderson Hall are willing to listen to what we have to say. They are ready to help us with out problems when they can. Too often these days, people won't listen or just act like they are listening to our problems. If we can keep up this dialogue between students and the administration, we can surely, in time, solve many of the problems that plague our campus today. Hopefully, the kind of communication that started last week will continue throughout the remainder of this year and through the coming years.

Letters to the Editors

Dear Editor,



This is to set the record straight. I did not get fired from my job as RA in Pearsons, I resigned. A hall party Friday, Jan. 12, resulted in an early morning visit by Dean Mangus and a conflict between him and the girls volley ball team and basketball team. I lived in Pearsons for two and a half years and never before was there the discipline problem that has recently occured.

In a discussion with Dean Mangus, I learned that the governing bodies in Pearsons are supposed to handle the situations that arise, but, if this does not happen, the RA is responsible for handling the situation. In the case of the hall party, which I was unable to handle alone, I was responsible to find someone who could. The point was stressed that I was the paid staff member of the residence hall. There are two RA's in Pearsons, each responsible for approximately thirty people. The $24 I received for the job is half the amount that an RA of Two Quads in Copeland, Davis, or Dorm I receives. I realize that I was not willing to accept the consequences of the duties placed on me, and I understand that the job has been filled; more power to you.

Meisburg & Walters back for second big performance

Meisburg and Walters

From performances in New York to Los Angeles, Meisburg and Walters have taken the country by storm, playing to standing ovations where ever they go. They will perform at 8 P.M. tomorrow night at the Maryville College theatre.

Atlanta-born John Walters joined native Mississippian Steve Meisburg in 1974. They performed separately through out high school and college years. Walters performed solo while attending Florida State University, and met his would-be partner at a coffee-house engagement in Tallahassee.

A graduate of Lexington Theological Seminary, Meisburg wrote and performed his own music while serving pastorates in Venice, Fort Lauderdale, and Tallahassee. It was while he served as campus minister of Florida State that Meisburgh was united with Walters.

The musical team released their first album "See The Morning Breaking." They signed a multi-year contract with Casablanca Records soon thereafter and released two more albums: "Just like a Recurring Dream" and "Love's an Easy Song."

Although the singers follow a hectic performance schedule which has included concert appearances with England Dan and John Ford Coley, Amazing Rhythm Aces, Harry Chapin, Helen Reddy, Leo Kottke, Jerry Read, and many others, they continue to compose most of the music they perform.

"Power In The Darkness"
Tom Robinson Band

Tom Robinson not only fronts the most interesting and explicitly political band to come out of Britian's New Wave in several months, but is also the first openly gay rock singer. So "Power In The Darkness" would be an extremely significant double album even if it weren't as good as it is.

Because he doesn't exploit any of the gay stereotypes rock audiences expect from Mick Jagger or Rod Stewart, Robinson seem to unnerve some listeners. People have been known to say "he doesn't look (act) gay" as if homosexuals must play specific roles. Maybe the most important function of TRB, for all its musical excellence, will be to break down that image.

Essentially, this band's music is the same combination of rock & roll and social insight that the Kinks have developed, although its been a while since the Kinks have shown the commitment of TRB's "The Winter of '79 or the charm of "2–4–6–8 Motorway", their recent British hit.

Robinson is a bit too much the preacher, however. "Right On Sister" and "Better Decide Which Side You're On" come on so strong that they might do better if the lyrics were a bit obscured by feedback.

If the radical rhetoric is more aggravating than usual here, it's because the group's best songs deserve something more emotional. When they get it - when Tom Robinson Band sings about the cost of being gay in London or the exhilaration of motorvating on the highway. "Power In The Darkness" is the most convincing fusion of rock & roll and politics in years.

ROTC still undecided

The ROTC (Reserve Officers Training Corps) issue is a controversial one on many campuses in the United States, and Maryville College is no exception.

Last spring, the college administration entered into a contract with ROTC. Tensions ensued between the educational/administrative bodies as a result of the lack of effective communication.

A plan to limit the existing program was submitted by the I.P.C. (Instructional Programs Committee) at the November All College Council meeting.

President Wayne Anderson submitted the proposal informally to the Board of Directors who implied ratification of the plan.

At the December session, Sharon Youngs urged the Council to render a decision on the ROTC issue. A vote of 8–4 was taken in opposition to the proposal.

Dr. Anderson reportedly advised the council to allow the present contract to remain as is until it is due to run out (at the end of the academic year) when the question of the continuation of the program should be conditional to those limits outlined in the I.P.C. plan.

There was an uncontested vote of "yes" regarding the suggestion.

One Sunday morning it snowed. And snowed and snowed, and when it finally stopped, there was four inches of snow on the ground. Inside Pearsons, the entire SAGA staff conferred. They must save their trays! They reflected back on the year before, when almost all their trays had been taken. This year must be different! Just because there weren't many trays taken after the first snow of the winter didn't mean they wouldn't disappear this time. "Yes," all of SAGA agreed, "something must be done."

The night of the big snow, dinner was served on plastic plates: the precious trays were stored away safely. Monday brought regular plates but still no trays. The students became adept at balancing their meal, silverware, drinks, and dessert between the serving line and their tables. Tempers flared and fist-fights broke out as students squabbled over where they were sitting. Going back for seconds was risky at best. As there were no trays to mark an occupied seat, and there was always the chance that someone would lose control of his balanced plate and spill it on you. Injuries were confined to scratches and bruises from fighting over seats. There were no reported cases of burns from spilling hot food, despite the high number of plates dropped.

Every day brought more snow and still no trays. The students retaliated by not taking their plates up to be washed. This went on for several meals, and soon there were large stacks of plates, silverware, glasses, and lots of uneaten food on the tables and floors.

In retaliation to this, SAGA stopped using plates and refused to clean up the dining hall. Students were served on whatever they brought with them. It was not uncommon to see students carrying their meal in their hands, and army surplus mess kits were the new rage. Fights still broke out over seats.

A group of students calling themselves the "Copeland Commandos" attacked and took over the SAGA kitchens in search for the long-missing trays. The Dean of Students soon had the kitchens surrounded by Maryville's finest, and the Copeland Commandos were trapped. But the cavalry, as usual, arrived to save them. Attack squads from Carnegie broke through the police, allowing the Copelanders to escape. Both groups then retreated to their dorms and barricaded themselves, stocking themselves with beer and pretzels for the emminent seige.

Soon the whole campus was in rebellion. Trays that had been borrowed from the first snow or from years past became objects of great esteem in the barricaded dorms. The Dean of Students called in the National Guard. The dorm leaders met with SAGA staff members and the Dean for negotiations. "All we want are trays." said the dorm leaders. "As long as there's snow on the ground, we will never hand out trays." the Saga staff responded.

Soon after the residence halls were under attack, and one by one they fell to the Guardsmen. Last to fall were Copeland and Carnegie, the ones who brought about the Great Tray War. The college soon afterward went bankrupt and was sold to the National Guard for a training ground. All for the sake of some trays.

Government slackens University research aid

(CPS)

The once-cozy marriage between the government and universities engages in federally-sponsored research is at an end, apparently soured by fiscal mismanagement and a recent federal vogue for 'cost accounting.'

The loudest warning about the possible consequences came at the annual meeting of the National Council of University Research Administrators last November. There, Massachusetts Institute of Technology President Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner mourned that the "floundering" relationship could leave the U. S. lagging behind Japan and West Germany in technological development.

Deteriorating government-academic relations, he said, has "dulled the sharp cutting edge of university research which helped bring the nation to world prominence in science and technology."

What Dr. Wiesner and his colleagues in the $4.4 billion field of federally-sponsored research object to are new regulations imposed by the Office of Management and Budget. The tough new rules prohibit federal expenditures for the "indirect costs" of research, like library purchases and research assistants. Under those rules, graduate students can no longer be reimbersed for time spent on federally-sponsored projects.

Stanford University, for one, predicts that curtailment of money for indirect costs will amount to a $4.5 million annual loss to the school. The university plans to make up the loss in tuition increases.

FISCAL MISMANAGEMENT

The new regulations -- Circular A-21 in bureaucratic parlance -- also call for stricter accounting of research contracts. It's a condition, say the researchers, that's antithetical to the spirit of experimental research. Circular A-21, according to Dr. Wiesner, "serves only to reinforce the current trend to evaluate the measure research in terms of pure cost accounting."

Yet the academicians are not blameless. Last winter, a U. S. Dept. of Health, Education, & Welfare audit of 1977 research projects found $410.7 million (out of a total government research budget of $1.2 billion) inadequately accounted. Investigators unearthed widespread failure to document work performed, multiple payments for the same job, flagrant double dipping, use of federal money to pay for non-federal work, changes of terms in federal contracts, and failure to document purchases of equipment and supplies.

Yeshiva University, for example, over-charges HEW an estimated $670,000 in fringe benefits. The University of Minnesota was found to have no documentation for about 69 percent of the salaries and wages claimed for the period July 1, 1972 to June 30, 1974. Similar bookkeeping errors were discovered at the universities of Oklahoma, Mississippi, Iowa, and through much of the University of California system. In fact, almost all of the 100 schools engaged in federal research were guilty of some fiscal mismanagement. The government has agreed to let the schools re-pay the misused funds at the rate of 10 cents on the dollar.

Dr. Wiesner, for one, insists that the mismanagement is not grave enough to warrant Circular A-21 and some of the other proposed changes.

MOONLIGHTING PROFS

But the new rules were also motivated by a federal concern with moonlighting: the professorial practice of earning outside income through consulting work. The result, many fear, is that educators are nearly becoming lobbyists. Can a professor who is a paid consultant of the food industry, for instance, maintain the academic objectivity needed for research into food additives?

The federal government, in turn, wonders if it should be paying for that research. It's even beginning to act. In 1976, it dunned Stanford for $153,000 in rebates because seven professors hired as government researchers were spending too much time consulting for other clients. Now a House subcommittee has scheduled hearings on consulting abuses, and the California General Assembly is contemplating legislation that would require professors to disclose all consulting ties. Reading the handwriting on the wall, the University of Pennsylvania recently adopted a moonlighting policy that requires faculty members to reimburse the school if computers or other school property is used in consulting work.

The government is also looking into patents. Until now, school have owned the products of government-sponsored research for three years, when patent rights reverted to the government. During that time schools usually licensed their patents to private industry.

looking for practical experience, it would be good to offer internships in every field. In financial aid, Weiner suggests that MC try to meet more of the monetary needs and keep careful track of the aid given to each student. Finally, social and cultural programs should be better geared to suit students wants and needs.

The researchers concluded that Maryville has enough academic departments but that students indicate only a handful of them are really good. In light of this, all departments should review themselves and state why their program is attractive to students. All departments would do well to offer career guidance, practical out-of-classroom learning experiences, and more student/faculty interaction.

The "significant others" category encompasses personal problems that might contribute to the desire to leave college. Student orientations, an "early warning" system, and close attention to a student's interpersonal relationships with the staff and other personnel are ways of cutting attrition in this category.

In conclusion, the Weiner report urges Maryville to realize that retention is a by-product, not a goal. It states, "increased retention rates will result if programs and services for students are improved." Efforts must be made in all areas and aspects of the college. Only when things have improved to such an extent that students would naturally rather stay than leave can retention efforts be considered a success.

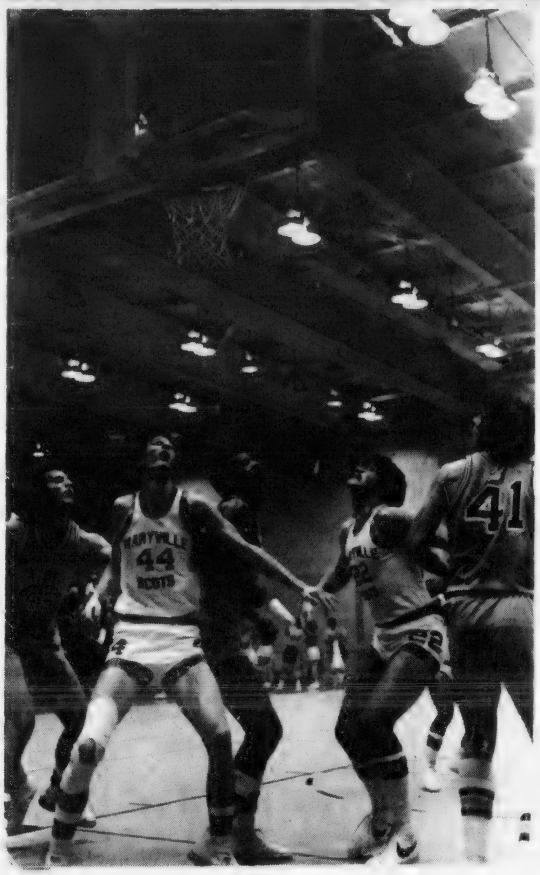
Centre downs Scots, 88-76



The Maryville College Scots lost at home Wednesday to Centre College of Kentucky. "We played as poorly as we have played all year!" were the words of Head Coach Rick Byrd when he described the game. The Scot's head coach said that the Scots did not play good defence, and they missed on several opportunity shots.

The game got out of the Scots' reach when, at the 6 minute mark, the Colonels of Centre scored eight unanswered points, and went into halftime with a 10 point lead.

In the second half, the Colonels were up by as much as twenty. But with timely shooting by all-tournament performer, Doug Tutin, and the intensity of the reserve players, namely Rick Becker, the Scots pulled to within eight points with four minutes left in the ballgame. As if by magic the Scots once again fell apart. Opportunities were blown when a number of Maryville players went to the free throw line but could not convert these chances into points.

The high scorers in the game were guards Wayne Emme and Rodney Nelson with 16 points each and Doug Tutin with 15.

Score: Centre 88
Maryville 76

All positioned well for the rebound . . . except there's no ball.

Girl's tennis takes off

by Holli Eckert

The Maryville College women's tennis team is literally off to a running start. Thanks to our new coach, Caroline Haynes, the Lady Scots are turning over a new leaf, making changes and succeeding.

For the first time in several years, the ladies are facing year-round practice and fitness training with fall term proving successful, encouraging, and money making.

Winter has the team in uniforms, running 3 miles, and exercising everyday, so spring will prove doubly successful.

This year's members include senior Holli Eckert, freshman Janet Helwig, senior Lynn Rogers, Sophomore Liz Barrie, senior Aubin Fowler, sophomore Patti Berkau and sophomore Cathy Carter. Not only have we seen improvement in talent, but morale as well. Many thanks to Coach Caroline.

Road race ready

The First Annual Maryville-Alcoa DAILY-TIMES SCOTS Road Race will be held on Saturday, February 17, beginning at 10 A.M. The course begins on the Maryville College Campus, continues through Greenbelt Bicentennial Park, and returns to the campus.

Three course lengths are to be offered. A 10km. race, a 5 km. race, and a 1 mile run/walk are the choices open to the participants. Trophies will be awarded to first-place winners in all classifications except the 1 mile run/walk. Awards will go to five places in the 10 km. and 5 km. runs, and T-shirts will go to all finishers in all races.

The entry fee is $3 for students (non-refundable) at preregistration or $4 on the day of the race. Adults will pay $4 at preregistration or $5 on the day of the race. Senior citizens and wheelchair entrants are free. The proceeds will go for the Maryville College minor sports.

On the day of the race, late registration and team registration (5 members per team) will begin at 8:30 A.M. at the Physical Education building. Late registration closes at 9:30 A.M. The call to the starting line is at 9:45 and the race begins at 10:00 A.M. At noon the race is officially over.

formed about the meetings.

Dean Mangus feels it was worthwhile, though. He and Dr. Anderson have already discusses what courses of action should be sursued. Memoes have already been written to and sent to the various groups concerned.

There are meetings scheduled for Copeland, Pearsons, and Carnegie on Monday, January 22. There are also plans to have these meetings again spring term. Dean Mangus says the administration is willing to go and talk anytime the invitation is extended.

They felt that talking about complaints is great, but unless action is taken, it was a waste of time.

He also says, "This is what Maryville College is all about."

Coach O'Brien looks on as his wrestlers grabbed their first victory this past weekend.

Lady Scots surrender two

The Lady Scots dropped their last two games by close scores, bringing their record to seven wins and six loses.

Maryville lost to Tusculun 53—48. MC shot better than Tusculum, 56% to 50%. Sandy Rabun was high scorer with 24 points for the Scots Donna Owens pumped in 17. In their game against Lincoln Memorial University, the Lady Scots were defeated by only three points, 50—47. The Scots were up by two points at half-time, and the score remained close the rest of the game.

Donna Owens was high scorer with 17 points. Dee Dee Chapman contributed 12 points.

Grapplers grab first match

In a rebuilding year, Maryville's young wrestling squad takes a 1—4 record into this week's Mid-South Tournament at Chattanooga, Tennessee Tech, Swanee, Chattanooga Valley, and Maryville comprise the tournament.

The Scot's first victory came at Saturday's tri-meet with Marshall University and Chattanooga State as they dropped Chattanooga State 28—24. The meet was won by Marshall University.

Coach Mike O'Brien said his young team is improving rapidly, and he especially praised the feats of Captain John Lacava , Dan Hayes, Kelly Beninger, Mitch Hamler, and Byron Finley.

O'Brian's best grapplers are Hayes and Lacarn, who both boast 4—1 worksheets.

The next home meet is a tri-meet against Sewanee and Tennessee Tech. on Feb. 3.

The Scots are lacking depth as they have only eleven players listed on their roster.

Backgammon to be taught

Backgammon will be taught by the Recreation 336 class on Monday night Jan. 29 from 6:30 to 8:30 P.M. in the Student Center.

Backgammon boards will be available for experienced players to use.

Other games will be offered such as scrabble, checkers, and chess. Cards will be available to anyone who wishes to play card games.

The Student Center is having a special from 6:30—8:30 P.M., only on this night. A hamburger, French fries, medium size coke or coffee will only be $1.25 plus tax.

Remember, this is a good opportunity to learn how to play backgammon for those of you who are interested. Everyone is welcome to come and participate or observe in this evening of entertainment.

Governor Lamar Alexander spoke to over 600 people in the Margaret Ware Dining Room last Saturday night.

Dodge for Lamar...no limo

Native Maryvillian Governor Lamar Alexander held a press conference in the second floor lounge of Pearsons Hall and spoke at the 59th annual Blount County Chamber of Commerce Banquet last Sat. night in the Margaret Ware Dining Hall.

Commenting on being in Maryville, Alexander said,"It feels great. I like it here. Maryville and Blount County are my home. They will always be my home." He added that he plans to return to Maryville every Jan. 26, the day in which he started his walk across the state in 1978.

Responding to questions about taking over office in the wake of Ray Blanton's criminal holiday, Alexander said the confusion caused him to move a little more quickly. He mentioned that the legal problems surrounding the 52 criminals allegedly released have taken much time.

He said his primary concern in his new office is to "restore the confidence in Tennessee." This should be done, he said, by observing his conduct in office.

Alexander was "astonished at the ruling" to relocate TVA from Knoxville to Muscle Shoals, AL and called it "a ridiculous decision." He added that the state would "use our own judges when important subjects come up." He assured both the press conference and the banquet party that he would do all he could to keep TVA in Knoxville "where it belongs."

Complimenting MC , Alexander called it "one of the great advantages in the community ... it would be difficult ...to inject into any county ... a college like Maryville College that has done for this county as Maryville College has done." He then presented President Anderson a check for $750 for the College. The check was his honorarium for speaking. He added that he had given $200 to the College a few weeks ago and urged the area residents to financially support MC, saying "I hope you give too." Alexander is a member of MC's Board of Directors and stated that he plans to continue serving the College in that capacity.

Speaking about the job before him, Alexander said his job is "to be a leader." He said a top priority is to raise the average per capita income in TN. It is currently fourth lowest in the nation. He feels that many problems can and should be solved in the home and that a

MC faces Great Decision

You have been elected to have a voice in U.S. Foreign Policy!

If you have been looking for a way to strengthen your knowledge of important issues in foreign policy and would like to have an opportunity to express your views, Great Decisions '79 is for you.

Great Decisions is a nonpartisan program offered nationally by the Foreign Policy Association and sponsored by the World Concern Committee (for the third consecutive year).

This year, the Foreign Policy Association asked MC's World Concern Committee to coordinate this program for the entire state. The W.C.C. is handling the Maryville-Alcoa community but has neither the time nor the manpower to coordinate for the state.

Meeting four times weekly for eight weeks, informal discussion groups will study and debate these major topics in foreign policy: The technology explosion: how to harness it for peaceful change? (week of Feb.5): Trade and the Dollar: coping with interdependence (2-12); NATO and the Russians: will the East-West balance hold? (2-19); Dealing with China: what's at stake --in Asia and the world? (2-26); the U.S. and Latin America: facing new facts of power (3-5); Black Africa: more weight in U.S. policy scales? (3-26); World Law of the Oceans: narrowing options for the U.S. (4-2); and International Terrorism: "Do something!" -- But what? (4-9)

The Great Decisions discussion program officially begins on Feb. 5. Meetings will be held both in the library's fiction room and in the F.A.C. lounge on Mondays and Wednesdays at 4:00 p.m. and on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:00 p.m. Although study guides are not mandatory, they do give an in-depth background on each topic and impartial analysis of each issue with pros and cons of alterrarive courses of action

Students vote at school

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)

In the early fall of 1976, 545 students from Prairie View A & M University attempted to register to vote in Waller County, Texas. But county registrar Leroy Symm allowed only 35 of the students to actually vote. Last week, however, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Symm had wrongly disqualified many of the other students. The court's decision is expected to make it easier for students all over the country to vote where they go to school.

Specifically, the court said local voter registration offices cannot require college students to meet different eligibility rules than those the rest of the populace must meet.

The U.S. Dept. of Justice, which took the students' case, said Symm,"singled out a particular group -- students living on campus. -- and has placed an extra burden on them that he does not impose on non-students." Symm refused to recognize students as residents unless they proved they owned property, had family in Waller County, or worked. Texas law defines residence only as a "fixed place of habitation."

The Supreme Court decision confirmed a March 1978 ruling of the U.S. District Court of Southern Texas.

MAGAZINE SLANTED FOR SPRING

Learning Center offers experience

by Anne Gilliland

The Learning Center, located on the first floor of Sutton Science Center, is providing a valuable and badly needed service for both MC students and the school children of the community.

According to Dr. Marilyn Pollio, director of the center, the program has two objectives: The first is to provide a place where MC students can get training and experience in diagnosing and treating learning problems through practicum courses. The second is to provide the children of Blount County with a place where learning problems can be treated quickly and inexpensively.

"Because laws that have recently passed, there are now more exceptional children in the classroom. Most teachers are not trained to handle these children " says Dr. Pollio. "There is also a greater demand for school psychologists."

Dr. Pollio points out that teaching jobs are scarce. She believes that if a student has extra training with exceptional children, he or she will have a better chance at getting a job.

Furthermore, students can learn whether they have the desire and ability to teach exceptional children.

The Learning Center is the only facility in Blount County for children with learning problems. There are places in Knoxville, but they have long waiting lists. A child might wait two years before staff members could start helping him.

Dr. Pollio points out that this waiting can cause not only school problems, but psychological problems as well. "When you're failing, you don't feel good," she comments.

The Learning Center will diagnose and work with children of all ages although most are in elementary and junior high school. The staff works with any kind of learning disablement or school problem.

"We've had a lot of successes - some of them spectacular," says Sherry Bonham; "We had one child who wouldn't talk when he first came here. Now the teacher has to quiet him in class."

"Other times, the success is less dramatic but makes just as great a difference in the child's life."

The Learning Center would appreciate students' donations of outgrown games and books. These are used to help make reading and arithmetic easier and more fun.

The Center also sponsored a freshman reading course in the fall which was taught by Caroline Haynes. She is currently teaching a speedreading course through the Continuing Education program.

According to Dr. Pollio, the center needs students who are willing to work hard with children.

"You have to eat, sleep, and breathe Learning Center," says Pris Book, an MC senior who works at the center. "But it's worth it when I see progress in a child and know that I'm doing it."

The center does not do psychological diagnosis or therapy, since only graduate students are allowed to do this work. It does not have the facilities to handle mentally retarded children.

"I'm straight with the parents," says Dr. Pollio, "If we can't help their children, we refer them."

The Learning Center moved into Sutton a year ago in January, and began training students. The first child began attending the center last spring. Around this time the Maryville-Alcoa DAILY TIMES ran a story about the center.

"Since then, we have been overrun," says Dr. Pollio. "Information has spread by word of mouth from parents, teachers, principals, and guidance counselors."

The Leaning Center is partially funded by Federal Title III money. Because the center must pay for supplies and staff salaries, it charges for its services.

Students who do practicums at the learning center should be majoring in or have a strong background in education or psychology. They must be willing to work hard. Dr. Pollio does not recommend taking it for a fourth course.

Practicums are heavily supervised, but, because the student receives a pass/fail grade, there is less tension. It provides a different kind of experience from the traditional one in the classroom.

Over the summer, the center hired and paid the students who did practicums at the center last year. One of these former students, Grace Riley, now works at the center as a paid staff member.

Other staff members include Sherry Bonham, co-director of the center, Nancy Pickens and Karen Gray.

Dr. Pollio confers with Sherry Bonham in the learning center office.

Foreign $$ hits American schools

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)

Substantial amounts of money poured into U.S. colleges and universities last year from abroad, and, if the trend continues, even more millions are expected through the next decade. On the one hand, the endowments and contributions from foreign governments provide American educators with a handy means of compensating for the cash shortages brought on by declining enrollments and the increasingly tense relationship between colleges and the U.S. government. Yet the foreign aid has also left the educators frankly nervous over the independence of the research performed under foreign-funded projects.

As John Mullen of the Association of State Colleges and Universities put it "Colleges like to have assistance, of course. But they don't like to see strings -- like race, sex, or religion -- attached. It depends on the circumstances."

Another Washington observer, who requested anonymity, thinks all "outside" funding is bad. "Colleges then have a commitment to an outside country. It's like them buying up land. It's more foreign involvement in our own country."

And John Phillips, head of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, willingly sums up the problem of foreign aid, by pointing out that "generally, funds which assist can be very helpful. It's dilemma because you ask 'What is the price that is paid for this help?' All colleges and universities are trapped in the inflation spiral, and if someone offers finance, what can they do? The whole thing raises a lot of questions."

'ATTEMPTS TO INFLUENCE

No one's been able to figure out exactly how many schools have gotten aid from foreign countries or how much they've gotten.

It is known, though, that Western Michigan, American University, Harvard, Columbia, and the universities of California - Berkeley, Southern California, Washington, and Hawaii have received grants from just one country -- South Korea -- over the six-year period ending in 1978.

South Korea has been one of the most active contributors to American education. It's estimated that country has given about $2.5 million since 1972. Sometimes, moreover, those contributions represented more than just random altruism.

After 18 months of investigation, the House Subcommittee on International Organizations reported that Seoul sometimes resorted to "harrassment and intimidation" of its beneficiaries. "Despite attempts to influence the use of funds for political purposes" most schools, according to the report, insisted that while the money was welcome, influence over its use was not.

The Korean Traders Scholarship Foundation, in particular, was less interested in scholarship than in politics. The outfit "provided the funds after being directed to do so, in one case, the Korean CIA tried to donate $300,000 to American University in Washington, D.C., though the school rejected the offer. It was the only known instance of KCIA involvement.

"Coca-Cola" is wax

(CPS) --The Coca Cola company began trying to get the right to sell its beverages in China immediately after President Nixon's first visit to the mainland in 1972. Now that it has finally won that right, the firm's plans have not been going according to projections.

The American School Board Journal reports the huge, Atlanta-based company met a surprising failure in its first substantial marketing effort in the People's Republic of China. The reason for the failure became clear, though, when it was discovered that the words "Coca Cola," when literally translated into Chinese characters, turned out to mean "female horse fattened with wax," or, variously, "bite the wax tadpole."

Profs buy term papers

CHICAGO,ILL.(CPS)

Term paper writing firms have long been the nemesis of conscientious college professors, and in some states the sale of term papers has been banned entirely. On the other side of the academic desk, however, it's become a different story. Some of the professors can now buy the classroom work of other professors.

The Society of American Law Teachers, for instance, has instituted an "Exam and Paper Exchange Service." for its members. "We are especially eager to include non-traditional testing materials – take-home papers, projects, drafting exercises, whatever," reads a recent anouncement for the service. The service charges a small fee to cover the costs of reproduction and handling.

Among the courses listed in the exchange service are Constitutional Law, Civil Prodeedures, Criminal Law, Evidence, Contracts, and Property.

Hotline operates

A new Education Center has been established to provide answers for questions concerning educational matters. On Jan. 15th, the Tennessee Student Assistance Corporation announced the establishment of the Center created by funds from the Tennessee General Assembly and federal grants. It is a hotline organization designed to provide information about financial aid, educational costs, admissions requirements, and program offerings. The E. I. C. can be reached by dialing toll-free 1-800-342-1663. This Center will provide prompt and accurate information to concerned callers.

Post Office peters out

Since David Pepper and Kathy Lane have resigned from the Maryville College Post Office, there have been noticeable mail problems. The main problem lies in getting the mail sorted and distributed. This problem stems from the lack of help in the Post Office.

After the resignations of Pepper and Lane, Mrs. Fay Hickman took over the Post Office as supervisor. Mrs. Hickman has just recently returned to Maryville after a five-year absence. According to Mrs. Hickman, there are only three student helpers who do not always show up when scheduled, and this leaves her with all the work. With only one person working in the post office, it makes it very difficult to get the mail out on time. Adding to the problem is the fact that Mrs. Hickman is also in charge of the printing; therefore, she is handling two jobs and is finding it very hard to deal with both of them at the same time without the proper help. Mrs. Hickman did state that the problems will eventually iron themselves out once the student help starts to show up on a more regular basis.

Another gripe heard throughout the year is the fact that mail is no longer distributed on Saturday. It was assumed that the mail was delivered to the M.C. Post Office by the Main Post Office, but nobody at the M. C. Post Office was there to sort and distribute it. However, according to Mrs. Hickman, the Main Post Office does not deliver mail to campus on Saturday any longer because they do not have a truck to make the delivery.

Millions down drain

Tellico dams money, if not water

On Tuesday, January 23, a special seven-member Endangered Species Committee voted to once again halt construction on the Tellico Dam. The committee was created by Congress last October, following a June Supreme Court ruling against the project. Tenn. Senator Howard Baker pushed for the committee, hoping it would decide to grant Tellico an exemption from the Endangered Species Act. Now, his wish denied, he has vowed to abolish the committee and get an exemption some other way.

The Tellico Dam issue is, at best, a long and complex one. Characters involved include TVA officials, local landowners, prominent Congressmen, vocal environmentalists, and tiny fish.

Tellico Dam was a mistake from the beginning. Through all the confusion, this is increasingly clear. There never was a sound basis for the project; from the beginning, both the cost/benefit ratio and the electrical output estimate were low. But TVA does such a nice job of building dams, and Congress figured Tellico was worth a mere $100 million or so. Soon, farmers in the Loudon area were relieved of about 38,000 acres of land.

But as lamentable as beginnings may be, it is too late for them now. The Tellico Dam is 90% finished and has already cost taxpayers $113 Million. All that's left to do is close the gates ---the one thing that seemingly cannot be done.

Before 1973, the snail darter was unknown to science. Today, the tiny fish that stopped the big dam is well known. Under the Endangered Species Act, the Little Tennessee River, its only natural habitat, was declared "critical" to its survival. Many people found it slightly more than astounding that TVA could be stopped by such a ridiculous notion. The snail darter case has continued to dominate popular discussion of the Tellico project. Yet in Congress, this ---the original reason behind stopping the dam --- has been all but forgotten.

What the snail darter controversy actually did was to initiate investigation into the Tellico project. A new cost/benefit estimate was ordered in October, 1977. It was discovered that completion and operation of the dam would cost $7.22 million annually, whereas benefits would amount to only $6.5 million. Something other than the snail darter began to look fish.

During the Endangered Species Committee meeting on Jan 23, economic and cost/benefit discussions dominated. The snail darter was virtually ignored. The Tellico project was voted down primarily because it was financially unsound. Yet, we question whether this decision was within the committee's jurisdiction. It was designed to decide ecological, not economic, matters. By overstepping its authority, the committee may have harmed the very thing it intended to protect --- the Endangered Species Act.

Frankly, the public has been taken for a ride. No matter what happens at this point, we're left holding the bill for a dam that never should have been started. One can't help but wonder if the 1966 Congress was misled, if the cost/benefit ratio is not favorable now, how could it have been when the project was started? The fiasco surrounding the Tellico Dam will long serve as a painful reminder of the waste that senseless government spending creates.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor.

Although athletics is not the major reason most students come to Maryville College, almost every student participates in one way or another in some form of athletics.

Quite a few students, however, decided not to participate in wrestling this year. For this reason there are seven varsity wrestlers on the squad this year. Many factors contributed to the downfall of the MC wrestling program.

The biggest problem occured with the hiring of the new wrestling coach, Mike O'Brien. Never an actual wrestling coach before, he had only two years of college wrestling experience before coming to Maryville. My question is: Why do you hire a guy with no wrestling experience to teach and coach wrestlers?

Another factor that has helped kill the program was the non-hiring of three time All-American Wayne Dunn as the Assistant Coach. Wayne could have been a great help to the team. He did come to coach b t received no pay. The reason he did not get paid is because the budget has been cut over $3,000 during the last four years.

Some former wrestlers, distraught because of poor conditions of the programs chose to move to greener pastures and go to Carson-Newman. It seems to me that if the administration thought about all the money they were going to lose in tuition from wrestlers leaving, they would try to keep the team.

Just remember that, only three years ago, the Maryville College

Buzzcocks

Welcome to the seedy world of English punk rock. Buzzcocks are the other side of Tom Robinson, more like mutants of Johnny Rotten's image tham political statesmen. And it would seem that they do it all for fun.

Originally from Manchester, this band went through the usual trials and tribulations of personnel changes and the bar circuit until they were finally offered a recording contract. They released several singles and gained a sizable reputation.

Their first American release, a single on United Artists, has 'What Do I Get?' backed by "Oh Shit." It is, if you will believe me, a commercial single. The "A" side is a romantic rock and roller with hooks and choruses, distinguishable from Top Forty only in the frantic speed of the song. Does "I want a love like any other/I want to have a lover" seem too mushy for punk? This is entirely in the realm of possibilities. I think that they're just trying to build a following on these shores with that kind of song.

The flip side is much better. Faster still, and with all the spitting vengeance of youth. "Admit, admit You're shit!" If it were up to me, this is the song that would make the band if they are interested in integrity. But my job is just telling you what I feel about the music.

I don't like the compromise of "What Do I Get?" but the single as a whole stands up and that's all.

DATE: January 27, 1979
TIME: 5:00 p.m.
PLACE: Maryville College Campus
MISSION: Protect newly elected Governor Alexander from radicals, communitst, terrorists, assassins, and others detrimental to the Governor's health

All is ready for the Governor's arrival. The students have been corraled into the small snack bar, unaware that even as they choke down their small meal, crack state trooper units are positioned above them, ready for anything.

The police visible to the students are only a fraction of the total force present. Specially trained and equipped state troopers are positioned in the buildings adjacent to Pearson's; plainclothesmen wander the campus looking for any suspicious characters or activity.

A walkie-talkie crackles and pops into life.

"Comm. 1, come in – this is Red Leader. Come in Comm. 1."

"This is Command 1. Go ahead Red Leader."

"Suh, we're in po-sition in Anderson now. All our equipment is ready."

"Good work, Red Lead ..... Awww, hell, let's drop the 'Red Leader/Comm. 1' poop, Charlie. It's gittinon mah nerves."

"Okay, Cap'n."

"Okay. Have all the other units report in and we'll start surveillance."

"Sure tha'ng, Cap.n."

Minutes pass. It is now 5:30 p.m. The captain in charge sits and plots his strategy –evaluating all possible situations. He picks his nose.

6:00 p.m. It has begun to rain. The captain shifts his weight in his chair. Suddenly, his walkie-talkie breaks the silence. An excited voice barks through the speaker.

"Cap'n! Fred just clubbed some kid down!!"

"What?! Who is this? Why?"

"Oh, sorry suh. This is Officer O'Neal, suh. Yeah, Fred knocked one of these college kids out cold. Said the kid called him a "dumb grit," whatever that is, so he whomped him up side the head."

"Great. Bring him up here and we'll get somebody in his place before he's missed."

The two officers take the unconscious student to the headquarters in the chapel. Photographs are taken and an FBI agent is quickly made up to look like the student. The Dean of Students provides the agent with the student's personal files for study.

The agent hurries out to infiltrate the dorms.

It is now 6:10 p.m. Another call comes in.

"Suh, ah just shot a kid by accident!"

"What the f . . . How?!"

"Wal, he'uz carryin' a umbrella and –well, it looked jez like a gun an' ah didn't want to take no chances, yuh know?"

"Yeah, sure. I bet this is Dumbrowski reportin', ain't it?"

"Yeah suh, this is me."

"Did anyone see or hear you?!"

"No suh! I had mah silencer on!"

"Okay, Dumbrowski, bring him on in."

Dumbrowski brings in the body and another FBI agent is made up to take its place.

It is now 6:53 p.m. Five students have been dropped in their tracks, and two have been billy-clubbed. Each is quickly replaced by an FBI agent. There is still more than a half-hour before the Governor's arrival.

As the guests arrive, they are meticulously checked by the surveillance teams. Each guest must pass through the metal detector hidden in the doorpost entering Pearson's. No precaution is overlooked. The time is 7:23 p.m.

Meanwhile, back at headquarters, things are busy. There is a dangerous shortage of FBI agents to replace dead or wounded students, as seven more casualties have been brought in.

The time is 7:31 p.m. The tension mounts. Suddenly . . .

'Hey Cap.n! ! This is O'Neal! Are you there?"

"Come in O'Neal, this is the captain."

"Uh, we gotta problem down here, suh."

"Well, what is it boy!"

"Dumbrowski just clubbed some buy down here who says he gotta git to the banquet. He ain't dressed like he's goin' to no banquet, though."

"Give me a description, O'Neal! !"

"Aw, right Cap'n! Male, caucasian, blonde hair, middle aged. He's wearin' a red flannel shirt, jeans, and a pair of walkin' shoes. Keeps insistin' he's the guest of honor. Likely story, huh Cap.n? We'll bring him on in."

"Uh, yeah O'neal. You do that."

Wrestlers had three All-Americans and were ranked ninth out of all the Division 111 schools. We had one of the best coaches in the nation in Don Elia, and the Maryville College name was respected in the south. Now we have a 1-4 record, a coach who knows less wrestling than some of our freshmen, and we are being beaten by teams we used to beat by 40 points.

I have gone out on a limb to write this letter, but I am tired of fighting athletic director Billy Henry and other administrators who are doing their best to phase out the wrestling program. I have resigned to the fact that in the future I won't be able to come back and watch Maryville College wrestle

Sincerely,
John Lacava

Dear Editor,

Last week a letter written by Marian Hummel appeared in this column. According to Marian, it was an attempt "to set the record straight."

Marian made it clear why she quit her job as R.A. I can understand the pressures of the job and can sympathize with her. However, she incorrectly stated in her letter that there is a discipline problem in Pearsons Dormitory.

Creature from the Black Jargoon

(CPS) --The way University of Cincinnati's Dr. John McCall sees it, he's just "taking some proactive steps to enhance the University's output with simpler imput on the part of facilitators." In other words, he wants the University to start saying what it means.

McCall is one of a burgeoning number of educators who have begun an active attack on "jargonization." In plain English, "jargonization" means the use of specialized, complicated terms for everyday activities. Educators are worried that such speech may make functional illiterates out of still more people. Some even fear that jargon could be used by powerful special interest groups to "bend the truth without even lying."

Thus, an unofficial movement to stamp out jargon is taking form, and its proponents include not only English teachers, but those who are often most guilty of "language pollution," Administrators and government officials. While some doubt the use of jargon can be harnessed (Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor Thomas Postlewait says fighting it is "about as wise as the charge of the Light Brigade), others are optimistically taking the first steps against jargon.

McCall has begun by levying 25 cent fines against University of Cincinnati administrators and deans who use the words "input" or "feedback" in other than their accurate, technical meaning. Furthermore, if the offending word is on multiple copies, it results in an additional one cent fine per copy.

That's just for January. In February, the targets are improper usages of "hopefully" and proactive," McCall warns.

McCall says his plan is working. Already an administrator recessed a meeting briefly to collect a fine from another administrator who reported an "input". One dean sent McCall a dollar as advance payment for four mistakes he felt certain he would make.

McCall himself has been fined for a sentence in a letter he c0 signed' "It is also worth noting that course work in English as a second language is offered for students whose academic progress might be enhanced by supplementing their communicative skills.

Meanwhile, the New York Times reports that the National Council of Teachers of English operates a thriving Committee on Public Doublespeak. The Committee urges its members to watch their own language, as well as that of their students. The NCTE also awards annual Doublespeak trophies to prominent jargon-users.

President Carter has also asked government officials to write their documents in clear language. U.S. Education Commissioner Ernest Boyer is keeping the faith by conducting clear-writing seminars for key staff members.

The man who popularized this war on jargon, broadcaster Edwin Newman, is still reportedly booked months in advance in his nation-wide lecturing tour. Newman, who wrote two books on the subject, speaks, of course, on the language.

She also insinuated that the problem is largely the fault of the women's volleyball and basketball teams. I strongly disagree.

First of all, there is no discipline problem in Pearsons. I feel that as a self-governing dorm, Pearsons is operating quite smoothly. However, I'll not deny the existence of the minor problems which are inevitable in any college dormitory. But, for the most part, Pearsons consists of mature, responsible individuals who respect each other's rights.

Secondly, there is no reason why the Lady Scots should be associated with this so-called problem. It seems to me that Dean Mangus has taken a particular delight in blaming this group of young women for much of the campus hell-raising.

The hall party which accurred on Friday, Jan. 12, was not, in any way, connected to another (private) party held in the room of a volleyball player. But somehow she (and subsequently the entire volleyball and basketball teams) received the blame for the noise and mess created by those in the hall.

I would also like to add that the majority of the people in the hall were not residents of Pearsons. Nor were they Lady Scots. Although no damage was done, these non-residents should have been more considerate to those of us who live in the dorm. After seeing the piles of popcorn and beer cans, I can almost understand why Dean Mangus got so upset.

However, if the blame is going to be placed on any particular person or group, it should be put on the one responsible - not on the Lady Scots. I'm afraid that somewhere along the line, someone got their wires crossed. I hope that this letter helps to set the record straight.

Sincerely,
Melinda Shannon

Dear Editor:

As we all know, the lack of college spirit at Maryville College is a serious problem. One facet of that problem is our school newspaper, the Highland Echo.

Although Maryville College has a reputation for being a staid institution, we must remember that these are the good ole days, the times that we will look back to and laugh; our paper should reflect this feeling.

I say no more articles on things like the Chilhowee Garden Club or who is elected to the Board of Trustees. Our paper is directed to the alumni, not geared to actual college life or thought.

When you really think about it, the average student is not interested in the meetings of administration. If they were interested, they would attend.

Why not have a list of happy hours in K-town, or a concert listing instead of bland editorials? Why not let students write articles on things the administration might not want to read, but the students would?

If the administration is worried about P.R. let them send out a newsletter to the alumni stating important but uninteresting facts, instead of trying to make them into important articles.

The thing we must remember is that we are young, and young life is fun. We should take the starch out of our paper and put some college humor in.

We just did.

When questioned about East TN, he replied that top priority in this area is Malfunction Junction and that his administration will strive to correct the hazardous intersection.

Scots win two in row

Wade Edmond on a jumper in last week's game against Emory and Henry.

After suffering seven straight losses it appears that Coach Byrd's basketball team is back on the winning track.

Maryville scored a 77-70 victory over Emory and Henry, VA at home Wed. night then bounced back on the road for a 76-65 triumph over Warren Wilson College Sat. night at Swannanoa, N. C. The win marked the first time this season that the Scots have won back to back victories as their record improved to 4-13.

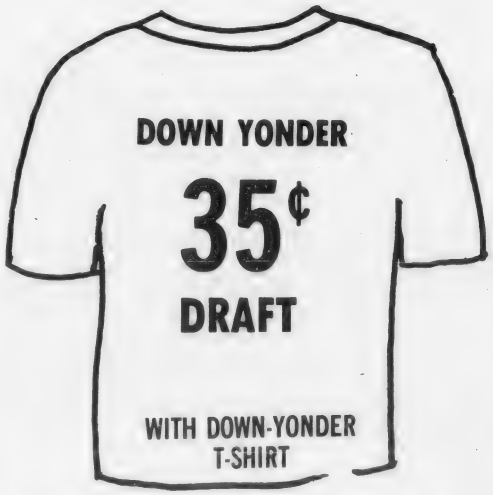
MC 77, Emory and Henry 70

The Scots came out ahead in a close and exciting game, thanks to good offensive and defensive performances. Maryville lost only two turnovers. Topping the MC scoring and rebounding departments was Rich Suttle with 18 points and 9 rebounds. Wayne Emme netted 16 points, Rodney Nelson had 14, and Wade Edmond 13. Edmond also gathered 7 rebounds.

MC 76, Warren Wilson 65

A balanced scoring attack led by Rich Suttle and Wayne Emme carried the Scots past the North Carolina Cagers. Suttle and Emme both poured in 18 points, while Doug Tutin and Rodney Nelson contributed 14 and 13 points respectively. Maryville held a comfortable 40-29 edge at half-time.

Chattanooga challenges grapplers



Four competitors on the Fighting Scots wrestling team traveled to Chattanooga last Sat. for the fifth annual Mid-South Wrestling Championship. Scots' entires were sophomores Byron Finley and Kevin Julian and freshman Dan Hayes and Kelly Beninger. Beninger and Hayes captured third and fourth place respectively in the 126 lb. and 167 lb. classification.

Beninger lost his opening round to the top seeded wrestler, received a bye in the first round of consolation and then went on to win 6-3 and 7-3 to improve his record to 5-3. Hayes, receiving the topseed, won his first round 10-3, lost a close decision to Georgia Tech 4-3, bounced back to win 7-1, and was decisioned 4-2 to leave his record at 6-3.

At the conclusion of the two-day tournament, Middle Tennessee had won the championship for the second consecutive year. Following in order were Georgia Tech, Jackson State, Chattahooche Valley, Sewanee, Chattanooga State, Tennessee Tech, Maryville College, and Carson-Newman.

MC's grapplers will host a tri-meet this Sat. at 2:00 in the gymnasium with Tennessee Tech and Sewanee.

HEW DRAWS UP NEW RULES FOR SPORTS MONEY

(CPS) It took Eastern Carolina University student Debbie Newby months of petitioning and pleading to get action on violations of a law that had been on the books for six years.

In the end, Newby, along with four other ECU students, persuaded ECU administrators to begin treating the gross inequities between women's and men's sports -- differences they knew were prohibited by federal Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. The biggest impediment, Newby recalls, was that both ECU officials and the ECU lawyer who assisted the students "weren't very informed at all about Title IX -- or rather they didn't realize the importance of the law."

Lack of awareness and concern about Title IX may have blocked broad implementation of Title IX, observers say, but the most potent factor may be the lack of guidance and enforcement from the federal government.

Since its passage in 1972, Title IX has prohibited sex discrimination in schools receiving federal support. Yet it took three years for the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) to come up with how-to rules, whereupon it gave schools three years to comply with the regs.

But at the July 1978 deadline, schools in complete compliance with Title IX were the exception rather than the rule. Punishment for non-compliance was withdrawal of federal funds (which amount to $12.1 billion for all colleges), but no school has yet been penalized.

Faced with such a dismal track record, HEW came out last month with its toughest set of rules yet. By next September, HEW says, schools will have to prove they are not discriminating against women in sports by showing "substantially equal per-capita expenditures" for male and female athletes in such "financially measurable areas" as scholarships, recruitment, equipment, travel and publicity.

Spending equal amounts on men and women is of necessity an implicit goal of sexual equality. But HEW had never demanded dollar-for-dollar equality. Spending more on men's sports was o.k. as long as "the patterns of expenditure did not result in a disparate effect on opportunity."

Thus, the new equal-spending rule is turning a lot of heads in athletics departments and in intercollegiate athletic organizations. Many men's athletic directors fear it will "force them to weaker men's programs substantially in order to pump more money into women's programs," as William Davis, president of the University of New Mexico and a member of the Office of Civil Rights task force on Title IX ,warns.

Vol. 64 No. 14 | February 8, 1979 | Thursday Evening | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee

Mr. Carroll Barger

Barger exhibits work in FAC

Carroll Barger, a talented artist, MC faculty member, and UT graduate, will have a one-man art show of paintings, drawings, and photographs in the FAC Gallery in February.

The exhibit will open with a reception from 6 to 7 p.m. on Monday Feb. 5 and continue from 9-4 Monday through Friday until Feb. 25. refreshments will be served at the opening, and paintings will be sold throughout the show.

His show will include 15 to 20 of his works completed over the last 3 to 4 years. Featured will be abstract watercolor paintings, his specialty, along with abstract and representational oil paintings, drawings, and photographs.

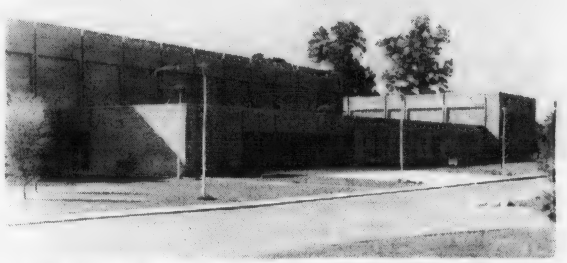
Barger, an experienced painter, generally paints the unusual things in a usual object and the contrasting relationship between the natural and manmade world. He uses a variety of textures, colors, and shapes to convey tension, movement, change, and oneness with nature.

Barger has been busy since receiving his B.F.A. with a major in oil painting in 1974 and an M.F.A. with a major in watercolor painting in 1977 from UT. He has been an artist in residence in the Cocke County School System and a graduate teaching assistant at UT-K. He is also an active member of the Southern Watercolor Society and the Tennessee Watercolor society.

He has been the recipient of several awards including one of four top prize winners in the Tennessee Watercolor society exhibit and $400 Mercury Printing Co. Award for one of his paintings.

Perkins directs finances

Daniel J. Perkins has been named financial aid director at Maryville College. He will replace William A. Ribble who is to become director of personnel at MC.



Perkins will assume his new activities February 12. He will be responsible for administering a variety of student financial assistance programs, including federal, state, and institutional funding for scholarships, grants, loans, and a work-study project.

"I am very pleased to have a person with such a keen interest in students assuming the management of our financial aid program. With his experience, he will undoubtedly provide excellent guidance for all of our assistance programs," Dr. Anderson said.

Perkins left his post as financial aid director at Glenville State in West Virginia where he had been serving in the job since July 1976. At GSC he was in charge of administering all student financial assistance programs, formulating financial aid packages, counseling students and parents, and managing the Financial Aid Office and staff.

The twenty-six-year-old West Viringia native is a member of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators and the West Virginia Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

Perkins and his wife Judy have a two-year-old son Joshua. Mrs. Perkins was executive secretary to the director of administrative services at Glenville State.

The Health and Physical Education Building reportedly admitted MC students in the early and mid 70's. It is now rented to community people. Those students wishing to use the swimming pool are asked to use the pool in front of Fayerweather Hall. Those wishing to use hand-ball courts are asked to use their dorm room walls. Those wishing to play a little basketball after E-hour are asked to get lost.

Henry, Atchley, Frank Schwartz?

Who runs the P.E. building?

by Laura Ives

There have been quite a few questions and complaints voiced lately about the Athletic Department and about Athletic Director, Billy Henry. For instance, is the wrestling team really being phased out, and, if so, why? Why are facilities such as the pool and weight room not open for more than a few hours a day for student use? How are the available funds actually being used? For example, why did three coaches go to California for a football conference this year when only one coach has gone in the previous years? Eager to find the truth behind these questions, we began by asking the man who should logically have the answers, Billy Henry.

According to Henry, the basis of all the problems is a lack of sufficient funds. When asked specifically about the wrestling program, he replied, "We cannot continue to offer as many athletic programs as we have because of funds. The entire program will be re-evaluated and some sports will be eliminated. The first to go will probably be track and wrestling. I just make recommendations. It's the people over at Anderson Hall who make the final decisions."

The weight room and swimming pools are only open to students for scanty hours a day because both these facilities require full-time supervision. This in turn requires money, which apparently there is not enough of. "My philosophy of the whole P.E. building is that it's here for the students. They come first," stated Henry. "If I had my way the gym would be open twenty-four hours a day, especially on weekend nights. I'd rather have kids here at the gym than at the Down Yonder or the Jailhouse drinking beer. But once again, the problem is supervision and the funding of supervision."

Since we were on the subject of funds, the question was raised as to who financed the California trip. According to Henry, all three coaches paid their own way, with the minor exception of fifty dollars provided by the department.

The final question, then, is who is really in charge of the Athletic Department? Billy Henry, in spite of his title, seems to prefer not to take full credit in this area. In fact, he told us, "I'm not really in charge of the building. S.M. Atchley is supposedly in charge of everything."

At this point we went to Anderson Hall to talk with Atchley, Director of Community Education and Services. When asked about Henry's statement she said, "My job is to schedule not only regular courses and non-credit classes, but also outside groups who want to rent the Help needed for Feb. meetings...quick

by Anne Gilliland

February meetings began Jan. 30 with a talk on "Faith, Science and the Future," and ended Feb. 1 with three one-act plays sponsored and directed by the MC Playmakers.

Other events were another lecture for CIV credit, three seminars, and a concert by the Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy.

One problem at this year's meetings was poor student attendance. Sarah Edris, co-chairman of the Worship committee, which coordinates and sponsors February meetings, commented on this.

"February meetings were a success, overall," she said. "However, I was shocked at the lack of cooperation on the part of the faculty of MC."

"The ACC had agreed that no classes would be mandatory during specific events, if we would, in turn, not plan things for the same class period both of the three days," she continued. "Testing was to be out of the question during this three-day period. But midterms were held and classes were mandatory."

She added that the worship committee had asked the ACC to make an official announcement this year because of similar problems last year.

Edris also said that she felt that classes scheduled at the same time as meetings influenced student attendance "very, very much."

Another problem with February meetings was confusion over the theme. Many students were not sure how the events fitted into the idea of "Faith, Science and the Future."

Edris expressed concern over this, saying that the idea of this year's meetings was to explore the possibilities of action and thought available to Christians today.

She said that the lectures and seminars were to discuss how such avenues as prayer, Bible study and social action fit into Christian life today.

Marian Hummel

Review

Hummel performs well

by Nickie Brown

A varied musical program was presented by soprano Marian Hummel for her Senior Recital last Friday evening. Accompanied by Kazurou Ohi, Marian sang works in French, German, Italian, and English.

Opening with a challenging melismatic aria from Handel's oratorio, Judas Maccabaeus, Marian followed with works by Schubert (the ever popular "Die Forelle") and Schumann. Highlighting the first half of the program was a work by Dupare. "L'Invitation ay Voyage." Marian expressed well the alluring mood of this truly French piece.

Following a typical Puccini aria from Manon Lescaut, Marian's rendition of "The Choir Master's Burial," by Britten, was proof of her fine enunciation. Anyone who has ever heard but not understood a song could appreciate Marian's accomplishment. The closing pieces, from Bernstein's collection I Hate Music, were distinctly different from one another; yet both had that spark of audience appeal. Indeed, even Marian seemed to enjoy these two songs the most. All in all, Marian gave a fine evening of music to an appreciative audience.

Post Offices delivers

First class mail will be distributed in student and faculty boxes on Saturdays though the Post Office will remain closed.

There has been difficulties with small notices, and it is requested that all notices for the Post Office boxes be at least 3½ X 5 inches in size. Smaller sizes are difficult to sort and often blow out of the boxes.

Lord of Rings spreads

BERKELEY,CA.(CPS)

Lord of the Rings, of course, is perennial best-seller, especially on campus, where it has been among the top ten best-selling books for over four consecutive years. It was on or near the list for the six years before 1974, too. With that in mind, Fantasy Films isn't content to merely release a full-length animated feature by Ralph Bakshi this year, and to promise a second part to the story in the future. Instead, it's giving anxious Hobbit fans who can't wait until Part Two is released plenty of ways to spend their money in the interim.

The film's producers have planned a merchandising campaign, carefully-orchestrated to avoid overkill, that's so big it won't even be in full swing until Christmas, 1979. That's more than a year after Part One started running in many areas last November 15. The movie will achieve full national distribution only in February. Thus far, it has grossed $3.6 million, somewhat short of the $7 million needed to produce the film. Another $6 million is being spent to promote it.

Twenty-some "Lord" products, meanwhile, are in the works. Cannon Towels, for example, is reported to be making a line of towels, sheets, and pillowcases emblazoned with scenes and characters from the movie. A hosiery mill has bought the license to darn Hobbit socks. Two juvenile editions of Tolkein's books, complete with illustrations from the film, are being published by Ballantine, which is also distributing a "Lord" calendar. Yet another book, this one describing the elaborate process of making the movie, is also planned.

Other manufacturers are getting dolls with moveable parts and coffee-table statues ready for market. They're cast of the principal characters. Bookstores are now receiving shipments of derivative buttons and posters, and "Lord of the Rings" tee-shirts came to clothing stores this month. There are also plans for bubble-gum cards, contingent on the film's success.

Yet most aren't waiting to see if the movie actually draws fans. Milton Bradley intends to release two games, one for Middle Earth initiates the other for more sophisticated fans. For reflective fans, there'll soon be a Tolkein jigsaw puzzle.

Inevitably, there's also a fan club. Membership in "The Fellowship" costs $15, and entitles member to an honorary certificate with the member's name written on it, a key chain, a fellowship decal and sticker, a couple of posters, a wall banner, and some other odds and ends.

There is also a soundtrack album composed by Leonard Roseman. In one of the few setbacks the producers have suffered thus far, singer Andy Williams, after some introspection, decided not to sing one of the movie's songs on his last Christmas special on NBC.

In February, though, television viewers will get to see a show centered around the late Rings author J.R.R. Tolkein, who, in contrast to all the film ballyhoo, was an extremely shy man. Fantasy Films, of course, produced the show.

What's going on

by Linda Wiley

There are several things going on this week, and even more are planned for the future.

Saturday night, Feb. 10, Theta Epsilon is sponsoring the 2nd annual Mr. Maryville Contest. It will be held on the 2nd floor of Fayerweather Hall in the Theta room. Admission will be 50 cents a person, and the contest will begin at 9:30.

On Wednesday, Feb. 14th, the B.S.A. will hold their 3rd Dating Game at 7:30 in the FAC Music Hall. Admission for the event will be 50 cents, and the winning couples will be given a free date.

Miller grows by barrels

The Miller Brewing Company announced shipments of 31,274,000 barrels of beer in 1978. This is up 29.1% from the 24,218,000 barrels shipped in 1977. Since 1972 total barrels shipped have increased 48.2%, from 5,373,00 to this year's mark.

Miller's principal brands are Miller High Life, Lite, and Lowenbrau. Miller has met the increased demand for its products with capital expenditures of nearly $1 billion on expansion and modernization programs. Plans call for an additional $1 billion which may be invested in future expansion programs.

MC: Graveyard for buildings

The only known photograph of the proposed new library of 1968.

Willard House

Ralph Lamar Memorial Hospital

Alumni Gymnasium

What do these buildings have in common? They were all frequently used at one time. This is a brief description of each:

Willard House -- Formerly Willard Memorial, the brick residence served as the presidential home. It was first occupied by Dr. Samuel Boardman, fourth president of MC in 1890. It is presently unused primarily because of a lack of adequate plumbing.

Alumni Gymnasium-By 1923, Bartlett Hall was no longer large enough for a campus gym. The Alumni Gymnasium was erected that year to meet the demands of a growing student population. It now holds old furniture and other remnants of the good ol' days.

Old Infirmary -- Just an average campus infirmary up into the 70's when a live-in nurse retired. Vacant now because rooms are too small for most practical purposes and are poorly heated.

Library -- In the spring of 1968, plans were drawn up by a faculty committee to outline the specific needs of a new library. A sketch was submitted, but further planning was halted. The original sketch was eventually scrapped -- it proved to be as inefficient in energy consumption as is Sutton Science Center today. What happened to the committee?

Still looking for Arthur

During the 1979 Interim Dr. Elizabeth Fowler and Mrs. Herma Cate will again be conducting their travel tour "In Search of King Arthur." This course provides for readings and research to be done preceding the tour in order to use the time abroad for actually visiting points of interest, attending concerts, seeing outstanding plays, and viewing great works of art.

The tour generally covers twenty-two days with five or six of them in London and the remaining time traveling throughout central and southern England. The itinerary usually includes a visit to Oxford, to Coventry Cathedral, and to Stratford for a Shakespearean play. From there we travel to Gloucester Cathedral, on through Monmouth and into Wales, visiting Tintern Abbey, and coming back into England at Bristol.

Then the tour goes to Wells Cathedral, to Bath with its Roman ruins and Georgian Crescent; to Glastonbury and King Arthur and Queen Guinevere's tomb; to the quaint little fishing village of Clovelly, which literally hangs on an almost inaccessible cliff; and on to Penzance on the rugged western coast. Here we will see little Minack Theater high atop the Cornish cliffs; St. Michael' Mount with its castle where the legendary King Mark is said to have lived, perhaps even visit the castle, and certainly view many other spots connected with the King Arthur legend--Camlann, site of Arthur's final battle with Mordred; Cadbury, which may have been Camelot; and Tintagel, Arthur's birthplace.

The drive across southern England will include visits to Plymouth; Winchester, site of King Arthur's Round Table; Stonehenge; Salisbury Cathedral; and Canterbury Cathedral, site of the Becket martyrdom and seat of the Archbishop, Oxford's highest church official.

If we are able to schedule the tour with KLM (Royal Dutch Airlines), we shall arrange a brief tour of Amsterdam before flying on to London.

As for the cost, we do not yet have an estimate, but we have always been able to arrange this tour for a very reasonable fee. We shall be contacting travel agencies within the next two or three weeks for estimates and shall use every means of keeping the cost as low as possible.

If you are interested in going on this tour, see either Dr. Fowler or Mrs. Cate so that they may have a tentative number to quote to the travel agencies. If you wish, put a note in either Box 2824 or 2866.

Fast food heads for China

(CPS) -- It didn't take long to put two and two together. Now that the Chinese are abandoning tea in favor of Coca-Cola, observers are just waiting for the Chinese debut of -- (and what else goes better with Coke?) -- burgers.

But the burger biggies are being demure at this point. "McDonald's has no active interest in the People's Republic of China at this time," a McDonald's spokesman told Advertising Age recently. The chain's sentiments are echoed by spokesmen at Wendy's International and Kentucky Fried Chicken/Heublein.

Yet the industry journal surmises that fast food chains are giving serious thought to Chinese franchises, the most determined candidate being International Dairy Queen. Goaded by the success of its 125-some franchises in Japan, Dairy Queen was getting ready to break ground in Taiwan when President Carter announced the U.S.'s new relationship with mainland China. Now Michael Quinn, Dairy Queen's operating manager for the Western hemisphere, is unsure that the Taiwanese franchisee will proceed as planned. Quinn said, though, that Dairy Queen still plans to go into Hong Kong this spring.

Road race is ready

With a lot of help from the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, the Tennis Lady Scots' Road Race set for Feb 17 at 10 a.m. is a reality.

The race is open to all and divided into three categories: the one mile walk/run, the three mile race, and the six mile race. Awards will go to five places in the six mile and three mile runs with t-shirts going to all finishers.

The entry fee is $3 for students and $4 for adults. Enter as a five-man team or as a single, but hear this, all sports that participate in the race will see a share of the promising profits, and Maryville College will see a stronger athletic department.

Zzzzzzz...

Feb. Meetings fizzle and flop

February Meetings have come and gone, and few knew they were over here. Amidst the regular schedule of classes, the meetings were squeezed in as though they were a side show for those who had nothing else to do.

The meetings (seminars) were a large disappointment for the few MC students who did attend. The seminars were carried on much like a classroom is conducted. The majority of the people attending the seminars were area residents and local ministers. On the average, about five MC students attended each seminar.. you guessed it, about the same five every time.

The meetings provided a change of schedule for the faculty, staff, and community. For the students, they were the same old thing, perhaps a bit duller.

One MC student who attended the seminars was sadly disappointed. "How does it really relate to us?" she asked. The seminars did not pertain to the students, but "instead we heard how adults write off income tax things." The student goes on to add "none of them (seminars) were good enough for me to say . . . 'wow, you missed a good one.' "

The meetings were not a complete flop. The Howard Hanger Jazz Festival offered a unique experience for the 200 people who attended their performance. The CIV also had good student turn-out, but take away the credit and see what would have happened. What is the problem?

In the past the meetings were often scheduled during class periods, and the class for that period was cancelled. Students invariably attended the seminars. This year the meetings were scheduled during free periods. This is a good idea to protect classroom time but disastrous for the meetings. No one wants to attend class and then move on to a boring seminar. Is the administration phasing the meetings out?

Do we need February Meetings? Do we want them?

Like mandatory chapel in the late sixties, perhaps February Meetings have run their course. Their time if over. Let us gracefully lay them to rest in the same casket as mandatory chapel. If we are to keep them, let's look at alternatives which would make them worthwhile.

The meetings need to be more oriented toward the students. Stop all classes for a day and schedule a wide variety of programs for that day. If the meetings are not worth stopping classes for, then they are obviously not worth having.

If the meetings continue as they have been, make them clearly geared towards the community. Don't pretend that they are for students when students don't attend and local resident do. A clear line must be drawn.

If the meetings are not orientated towards students and are not clearly stated as being mostly for local people, then they should be dropped.

We do not want to see this happen. February Meetings hold much potential for a small campus such as ours.

An editorial which appeared in the Echo on Feb 20, 1976, states that those meetings were boring and ill- planned. Student response to those meetings was, "My only response is sleepiness," to "I could care less."

It appears as if little progress has been made in the meetings over the past three years. We hope the meetings will be cultivated towards a level of respectability and that they may be an addition to the student's educational experience. We hope that similar editorials will not be needed in 1982.

You and your men wait silently. There is little room in the small box. The waiting charges the air with tension. You give the word-The small trapdoor in the floor is hauled open and you slip down to the base of the horse. Like your comrades, you are prepared for the worst. The quiet over the city is deafening.

Helping the rest of the men down from the horse, you wait for orders. Half the group is sent to open the gates, yours is assigned to eliminate anyone you can find.

The group you are in splits into two-man patrols and sets out. You curse the full moon for taking away any dark shadowed spots to hide in. Your first enemy is met stumbling out to wash away the drunkenness of the night's celebration in a fountain. He dies with a look of surprise in his eyes. You wind your way through the twisted canyon-maze of the city.

From the direction of the gates comes the signal that the gates are open. The virgin quiet of the city is violated as the sounds of bronze armour clanks and rattles down the streets and alleys of the city. The citizens of the city rush out to defend their homes. The clash and clatter of weapon against weapon echoes throughout the city.

Quickly you and your partner fall back, hoping to join up with some of your own troops, but as you run back through the twists and turns of the streets of the city, you are suddenly cut off by enemy troops. There are six of them to the two of you. The enemy draws closer, and you breath a prayer to the gods. Two men with lances lunge forward. You block the lance with your shield, and your sword digs into his shoulder between his breastplate and helmet. Quickly pulling your sword free, you see that your comrade's opponent too lies still on the ground. The other four warriors now rush in to avenge their friends' deaths. Your sword and theirs ring out in anger, one against the other. One of your opponent's shields split under a blow from your sword. A slash across his face finishes him. The other bears in only to have your blade pushed through his stomach. He coughs up a gout of blood and dies. Turning to help your friend you see that you are too late. One of the two he fought lay dead, but the other stood over him, even now pulling his bloodied weapon free of your friend's body. In a rage you fly into him. He only has time to look up.

Hurrying back to the main streets, you join up with your own warriors. As you join in the group, one of them grins broadly and says, "Troy has fallen! Thanks be to you, Odysseus; the gods smile on Something refreshingly new has joined the ranks of Uncle Sam's discotheque and Down Yonder grass - - - Jailhouse rock. The Jailhouse Lounge, since its opening last June, has rapidly become one of the popular night spots for MC students and rightly so.

Students willing prisoners at Jailhouse

The Jailhouse, located a short distance from campus on Rt. 73, is owned and operated by Randall and Marty Humphrey. They like having students for customers; they've specifically declared Tuesday "college night" featuring 20 cent hot dogs and occasional free bowls of peanuts or popcorn. "We enjoy having them out here," Randall Humphrey stated enthusiastically. "It's a lot of fun -- they get up here and play the drums and everything."

The popularity of the Jailhouse is largely due to the Humphreys' positive attitude toward college students. Wereas other places seen indifferent to student patronage and do little to encourage it, the Jailhouse lets us know we're wanted. They keep their prices low, within easy reach of tight college budgets. Students are free to sing, dance, play cards, play the drums, and generally get as (harmlessly) rowdy as they wish. Everyone smiles; no one seems in a particular hurry. It's a pleasant atmosphere, especially on Tuesdays when the place is virtually wall-to-wall MC kids.

The Jailhouse is open Mon-Sat. from 10 a.m. to 12 midnight. It features a band on Friday and Saturday nights, with a $1.00 cover charge. Wednesday has developed into a sort of "amateur night," with varying degrees of talent. The rest of the time, music is provided by a juke box and, at least on Tuesdays, the crowd itself is entertainment enough.

In general, the Jailhouse is a colorful and lively place, and it's natural that Maryville students have taken a liking to it. The owners have gone out of their way to make us feel welcome and wanted. It's good to know that our patronage is not only appreciated but also openly enjoyed. Friends like a friendly place to get together; this in essence, is what the Jailhouse provides. Hopefully, it will continue to do so for a long time to come. by Shelley Ballenger

The Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy performed for close to 200 people during February Meetings

SOUNDS

T. Sasscer

Howard Hanger's "Jazz Fantasy"

Howard Hanger's "Jazz Fantasy" performed for the music appreciators of our school at the end of the month. They were billed as a "Joyful Jazz Theater" and featured live animals and a dancing music interpreter.

It wasn't one of their better nights, musically speaking.. Howard's piano was so low that I thought it was supposed to be extremely subtle. And I sat in the front row. The bass player's amplifier was misbehaving, as was his stomach. And the live animals constituted two canines that occasionally strolled across the stage. "Let harmless dogs be," I say, but such was not the train of thought pursued by Howard Hanger and company, and they repeatedly interrupted their set to move the dogs offstage.

On the positive side of things, they had a horn player who could wail on the blues number they did. The dancer was a girl who dressed in various clothes as the music struck her. At one point, she climbed into a sheet-like covering and slides of her were shown onto the covering as she twisted around.

Their drummer, about whom something must be said, was as loose as one would want him to be and did two 'improvisations'.

I am easy to please musically, and I thoroughly enjoyed myself at the show. I could see that the musicians were trying, and that is important to me. I must point out that most of the people I talked to expressed somewhat negative attitudes. While I can see their side of the story, and admitedly the evening was less than perfect, I favor Live Music On The Campus. It seems sacrilegious not to appreciate what they're into, even it it's not what you yourself like.

Dixie Dregs

Please allow me to introduce the Dixie Dregs. They are a five-man jazz/fusion band from Atlanta. We've all heard the saying, "Oh no, another rock band!" from music listeners tired of listening to Judas Priest or punk rock, but look again.

The world needs this band. I saw them at U.T's Music Hall recently, and though it was the third time that I've seen them, they blew me away.

They have such a fresh inventive approach to music that it's like the sun pouring through a window. It's all smiles from the opening notes on.

Steve Morse, guitarist - - extraordinary and more or less leader of the band, is such a great player that although the band is relatively unknown, he was featured in a recent issue of Guitar Player magazine which features only the best.

Bassist Andy West was similarly featured in G.P. His bass lines float and rebound off of Morse's guitar, and West plays chords on his bass as though he were rhythm guitarist.

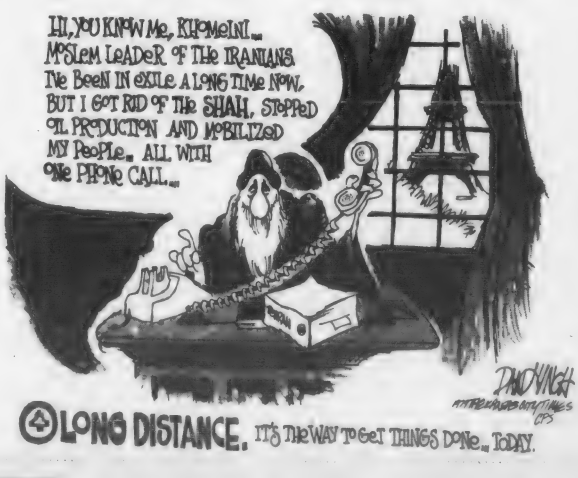
A drummer (who completes the "rhythm section") delighted the audience with his perpetual grin. They have a new keyboardist who I feel doesn't push the band forward too much, though in all fairness he doesn't drag, either. The fifth member is an electric violinist along the lines of Jean-Luc Ponty. At times his playing was so fast and so fluid that it was indistinguishable from the guitar.

The music comes under the basic classification of 'jazz/fusion', but being from the South (the band formed at the University of Florida), they always inject a couple of wholesome country scorchers like "Wabash Cannonball."

Their Coup de grace at a live show is "cruise control" which appears on their first album "Free Fall!"

The Dixie Dregs made an appearance at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland late last year from which they culled the first side of their new album "Night Of The Living Dregs" (available to the music head around March 12).

Saturday Night Fever cooled



(CPS) --To the thousands of "Saturday Night Fever" fans who thrilled to the contours of John Travolta's white pants, and who shivered in titillation or distaste at the gang-bang scene: treasure those memories.

Last Month, Paramount Pictures gathered up every one of the 1,080 prints of the film in distribution. After a little studio magic, "Fever" will reappear in March and April, with a GP-rating where once there was an R.

Paramount told Variety that a large share of the market was cut out by the film's under-17-not-admitted rating. So the studio is cutting seven minutes of the original's verbal obscenity and graphic sexual encounters, and embellishing it with some "cover" shooting and dubbing. Then Paramount is spending roughly $2 million to re-introduce the PG "Fever," and figures the "innate appeal" of the Bee Gee's disco soundtrack and John Travolta will bring the teeners on a run.

The film company had contemplated making a PG version as early as last February. But, says senior domestic sales vice-president Frank Mancuso, "we realized the film was performing too strongly to risk limiting the momentum of the R version by bringing in a PG." Thus far, "Fever" has brought back $17,463,000 to Paramount in film rentals.

So now, all Paramount has to worry about is the possibility of an R "Fever" being shpped out by mistake Variety reports that until all prints are altered, Paramount is "laying out substantial coin" to ensure their safety, thus dampening the possibility of seeing a bootleg "Fever" showing.

How far would you go for an A?

NEW HAVEN, CT (CPS) -- It happened, says Pamela Price. Raymond Duvall denies it. Yale University calls it investigation thorough. Price says it was " a sham and a farce."

So argued the contenders in the first sex-for-grades case ever to reach a courtroom. And although the Yale sexual harrassment trial ended last week, it may be weeks before Judge Ellen Burns reaches a decision, and years before the issues and emotions generated in a cramped courtroom here are resolved.

"I'd be surprised if the decision came by March," said one lawyer, citing judicial caution in the face of such an explosive case. At issue is what happened on and after June 6, 1976, when Price, a 1978 grad now at Berkeley Law School, claims Duvall, teaching her political science course, offered her an A if she slept with him, and a C if she refused.

"He asked me if I really, really, wanted an A," Price testified. "I said I'd like an A, but it wasn't an insane desire. Finally he asked; 'Will you make love to me?' I said no three or four times. He said, 'you have a really turn-me-on body.' I left then."

Raymond Duvall, a boyish, black-haired professor who actively cultivates his reputation as a tough grader, emphatically denied offering any student an A in exchange for sex. He testified he remembered nothing about speaking to Price on the day in question.

Price asked no damages in her suit, though she did ask that Yale establish formal proceedures for investigating charges of sexual harrassment. Yale, on the other hand, generally defended itself by saying the harrassment never took place.

First Formal Case

The pre-trial legal maneuvering, during which Yale repeatedly tried to have the case dismissed, produced a number of legal precedents. It established that sexual harrassment is a form of sexual discrimination, and thus a complaint that can be legally pursued under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibits schools from placing conditions on women's education that are not present on men's education. Last November, the Federal District Court also ruled that women in a private institution can go directly to the courts for remedy, without first complaining to the school or the federal government. Thus Yale, if it loses this case, stands to lose all its federal aid.

Regardless of Duvall's innocence or guilt, the rulings are thought to be the first formal case law that clears the way for students to legally protect themselves against sexual harrassment in academia.

Price testified that she visited Eva Balough, a personal friend and dean of Yale's Morse College, immediately after Duvall allegedly made his offer. Balough, according to Price, said such offers were common, but that nothing could be done. Balough denies saying it. "I told her, 'Pam, this is like a rape case in court. The woman says it happened. The man says it didn't.'"

Indeed, William Doyle, Yale's attorney, argued it as he might a rape case. For a day and a half, the small bulky lawyer poked and chipped at Price's story. Did she keep up with the reading for each lecture? (Price said she didn't remember.) Did she remember what the weather was on June 6, 1976? Did she recall what she wore? What kind of door was there to Duvall's office. Wooden? Steel? Did the door have glass?

After the last question, Duvall strode to the press table, and, banging the polished wood, boomed, "What is at issue here is this woman's credibility." He claimed she was a mediocre student who brought the suit for self-serving reasons.

Well-edited psycho movie

"My God," said a third-year student who, along with seemingly hundreds of other Yale students, observed the trial, "it's like a well-edited psycho movie." Referring to Doyle's arguments, he explained, "You know all the tricks and gimmicks and it still manages to convince you."

Anne Simon, Price's attorney and herself a Yale law grad, maintained that "the issue here is the adequacy of Yale's procedures to deal with sexual harrassment. Did Pamela Price have an avenue to pursue within the university?"

Doyle countered, "The only question in this case is what happened, and no other." Toward the end, Doyle called numerous middle-and high-level Yale administrators, who testified Yale's investigation began more than a year after the alleged incident, but faulted Price for not filing a formal complaint or going through channels. Though no one apprised Price of what the proper channels were, it was a moot point, Yale argued, because the proposition never occurred.

Price, who ultimately did receive a C in Political Science 39B, first filed a formal complaint in September, 1977. She delayed, she testified, because Dean Balough had allegedly counseled that nothing could be done. But in spring, 1977, the Yale Women's Caucus had collected evidence of sexual harrassment at the school and took it to the administration. "We were treated," recalls Ronnie Alexander, one of the complainants, "like a bunch of screaming women who were not telling the truth . . . They told (us) to get a lawyer." Alexander and four others filed a class action suit in August. At that point Balough contacted Price, just back from a student exchange program in Tanzania, and asked if Price wanted to file a formal complaint. She also advised Price to avoid the class action suit. Price then filed, though Duvall had by that time left Yale for the University of Minnesota.

In November, Price was told that an impartial panel of three professors had reviewed her work in Pol Sci 39B, and had upheld the grade of C. Price immediately joined the class action suit.

In the proceeding pre-trial maneuverings, all the plaintiffs except Price were removed from the case. After that, as Ronnie Alexander puts it, "if you had told me this thing would come to trial, I would have said you were nuts."

All Yale officials connected with the case refused comment until the case is settled.

Lytle moderates assembly

Maryville College and Union Presbytery will co-host a luncheon Friday, Feb. 9, for the Rev William P. Lytle, moderator of the 190th General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

The luncheon, which is open to the campus and local communities, is set for noon in Proffitt Dining Room on the MC campus. Lytle will speak informally to the group following the luncheon.

Students attending the luncheon will go through the regular line in the dining hall.

Meanwhile, the latest word is that even the hand-ball courts are being rented out.

Scots mash Millsaps

MC 85 Knoxville College 62

Pulling away form a tight 34-32 half time lead, Maryville outscored Knoxville College 11-2 in the first eight minutes of the second half and went on to win a 85-62 victory over the Bulldogs last Mon. night.

The Scots were cold in the first half as only nine points were scored in the last nine minutes of that half.

MC bigmen Rich Suttle, Doug Tutin, and Wade Edmond had a field day shooting in side buckets for the Scots; Suttle scored 10 of MC's first 20 points and finished off with 19 points and 15 rebounds. "Rich has played extremely well in the last six games," commented Coach Rick Byrd. "He's really improved over the course of the year."

The Scots have won four of their last five games. Doug Tutin led MC scorers with 23 points. Maryville's record is now 6-14;

MC 67 Transylvania 94

It is hard to win when the opposition hardly misses. That was the case Wed. night as a blistering bunch of Transylvanian shooters hit 70% from the floor in the first half and raced on to down the Scots 94-67 at Transylvania, KY.

Pacing the Maryville tally were Wayne Emme and Rick Suttle, who combined for 41 points. Emme had 24, Suttle 17, and Rod Nelson chipped in 12 for the Scots cause.

MC 89 Millsaps 66

With five players scoring in double figures Maryville bounced back on the winning track at home last Sat. night to trounce Millsaps College 89-66 for the third victory in four starts.

The Maryville lead was never in jeopardy as the Scots were led by Emme with 16 points, and Wade Edmond and Doug Tutin with 14 points each.

Big Rich Suttle dominated the board and led MC's winning effort with 14 rebounds.

The Scot's Rick Becker fights to keep the ball in action against Millsaps College.

Football team ranks

Maryville College's football team was ranked in two categories in the final NCAA Division III team statistics.

The Scots' ranked third in the won-lost percentage with a ..889 (8-1-0) record and wound up fourth in scoring defense with 61 points scored against them in nine games for a 6.8 average. Minnesota-Morris captured the top spot in both categories with a 10-0 record and 5.9 points average scored on their defense.

Head Coach Steve Fickert and his players are now working on the winter weight-lifting program to better themselves for next season.

Girl b-ballers sweep two

The Lady Scots basketball team traveled to Nashville this past week end and came home with two victories.

Their first game was against Christian Brothers. The Scotties had a 14 point lead in the first half. Christian Brothers came within one point and Donna Owens took an offensive rebound and scored. This put the Lady Scots up by three and padded the win for them. Coach Sharon Brown was proud of the way her team played. She said, "We held on when we needed to. We shot in the second half 45% to Christian Brother's 27%. It was a good close game." Sandy Rubin was high scorer with 25 points and Donna Owens added 18.

The next game brought the Lady Scots up against the University of Tennessee Nurses. It was evident that the Lady Scots were tired from the night before, and they played a sluggish first half. They exploded in the second half and ran away with a 61-34 victory.

Donna Owens was high scorer with 18 points and Sandy Rubin contributed 16. Brown stated that the team played well and said, "The trip to Memphis helped the team. We were more relaxed and it helped to boost the team's spirit. Now we're ready to finish the season."

The Maryville College wrestling team lost a tri-meet last Sat. to the University of the South 24-21 and Tennessee Tech University 30-12. The Grappler's next encounter is the S.E.I.W.A. on Feb. 8-10 at the University of the South.

In the scoring column it was Sewanee over MC 24-21, TTU over MC 30-12, and TTU over Sewanee 33-15.

ACC views athletics, ROTC

All College Council members heard reports from several committees Wed., Feb. 7, in Anderson Hall

The Intercollegiate Athletic Committee brought a new policy to the ACC for adoption. ACC members and representatives from the MC athletic department debated over the policy specifics for some 2 hours. Many ACC members felt the proposed policy was too vague, and few ACC members felt satisfied with the policy at all. As a result, a new committee will be appointed to modity the proposed athletic policy. This means that MC will be without an athletic policy until Sept., 1979, when the then newly formed policy will be reconsidered.

But a policy then will be better than none at all. As Dr. Carlidge said, "I have been here thirteen years, and there has never been an athletic policy."

The Community Standards and Residential Life Committee proposed that a 24 hour visitation policy be adopted for all residence halls. The residents' guests would be restricted to the lobby of the dorm after 11 p.m. Dean Mangus was the only opposition to this proposal and will meet with CSBC to discuss his concerns. ACC will again deal with the visitation policy Feb. 28.

Kevin Reillev, newly appointed Food Com. chairman, Dean Mangus, Dean Richardson, and S.M. Atchley ate at Carson Newman last week to test the quality of a possible replacement for Saga. They were favorably impressed, the food was superior and the cost only a few cents more per meal.

In opposition to the rental of the racquetball courts to the public, Bill Gannon presented a petition to the ACC asking that this be stopped immediately. ACC replied that they would send the petition to the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee (I.C.A.C.) to be acted upon.

The next ACC meeting will be held Wed., Feb. 28, at 4:00 p.m. in Anderson Hall, Rm. 315

Choir revved up for 29th tour

The Maryville College Concert Choir will make its 29th annual spring concert tour March 14-26. The Choir will perform thirteen church concerts during the thirteen-day tour of five states and will conclude its tour with a home performance on the MC campus at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, March 29.

The itinerary includes performances in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky and Tennessee. This is the Choir's seventh tour of this section of the country, the last being in 1974.

Under the direction of Dr. Harry Harter, the choir will also participate in the 5 p.m. Sunday service of the First Baptist Church in Newport, TN., and the ll a.m. service on Sunday March 11, at the Erin Presbyterian Church of Knoxville prior to the concert tour.

A diversified program appropriate to the Lenten season, including choral music covering five centuries, will be presented by the 40 member choir. The three-section program concludes traditionally with a paraphrased setting of the "Twenty-Third Psalm" to the Psalter tune "Crimond" arranged by Dr. Harter, and "The Lord Bless You and Keep you" by Peter Lutkin.

Choir members have traveled to nearly 500 cities east and west of the Mississippi River and over 65,000 miles over the past twenty-eight years. The MC concert choir has appeared on network radio and television programs and has previously performed in New York's famed Carnegie Hall.

The choir will also perform in seven high schools throughout various states. The high school program is oriented towards spiritual music and includes a medley from Fiddler on the Roof which is choreographed. The high school concerts are geared to recruit students for MC.

The tour will commence with the singing of the Alma Mater on the steps of the Chapel on Wed., the 14th. The choir will perform a return engagement on the Chapel steps on Tues. the 27th. at 2:30 a.m.

Track running scared

The Athletics Committee has been informed that M.C. may not be able to finance the Spring Track Program. All concerned persons are invited to attend.

Crozier likes to hike, starts own club

Linda Crozier, freshman from Tallahassee, FL, is founder and president of the Outdoor Club

by Anne Gilliland

Linda Crozier, a freshman from Tallahassee, FL started the Outdoor Club because she wanted to go hiking.

"One reason I came to school here was to be near the mountains," she explains, "Like many freshmen, I didn't have a car and I didn't know people with cars. It was frustrating not to be able to go.

She found it strange that MC did not have a hiking club and talked to Mr. Bonham about starting one. He suggested that the club do more than hiking.

He also suggested that she get in touch with Gary Black, a former MC student with a lot of experience in outdoor activities.

"We would like to do some things like white-water canoeing and rappelling," Crozier says, "but we have problems with insurance."

The club does plan to sponsor some calm water canoeing and caving and possibly some skiing and biking trips.

The club may give seminars on the more dangerous sports. Then if students want to try them, it will be at their own risk.

Mountain Supply, a store which carries outdoor equipment, sponsored a seminar on equipment this fall. Mountain Supply also gives a 10 percent discount to Outdoor Club members. Other seminars planned will include some on environmental issues.

On Monday the Outdoor club will hold a cookout in the college woods, with slides by Mark Michel.

On February 25, the club will sponsor a seminar given by Save Our Cumberland Mountains, a group fighting against strip mining. The seminar will include a trip to Petros, Tenn., to learn about what strip mining does to the land and to the people.

On March 2, the club will have a picnic at Look Rock, along with a talk on astronomy.

The Outdoor Club is an official college club, recognized by the ACC. Mr. Bonham is faculty advisor. Officers are: Linda Crozier, president; Cathy Angell, treasurer; Mary Beth Hall, secretary: Kathy Anderson, assistant secretary; and Pat Alberda, activities coordinator.

Crozier says the Outdoor Club was easy to start because there was such an obvious need for it at MC. However, there have been some frustrating times.

"I have a lot of good people behind me," she says "Without them, I would have given it up."

Fulks, Cain to perform

Voice major Judy Fulks is to give her junior recital tonight, Feb. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the FAC. Carol Alette will accompany her on the piano.

The program will include "Three Harp Songs" by Schubert and , Ave Maria" by Head. Two romantic pieces "Fantoches" by Debussy and "Apres un Reve!" by Farure are included along with two contemporary pieces. "As Dew in April" by Cummings and "I Hate Music" by Bernstein.

Tomorrow night, Friday February 16, Martha "Sugar" Cain will give a recital.

Cain's piano selections will include "Impromptu in A Flat Major" by Chopin, "Sonata in F Sharp Major Opus 78" by Beethoven, and two pieces from Schoenberg's 20th century work "Secks Klein Klavierstucke." Also included in the program are three 20th century impressionistic pieces entitled "Ro-Man Sketches," "Clouds," and "The Fountain of the Acqua Paola."

Assisting Sugar is Lesa Payne, who will sing two songs by Schubert entitled "Fruhlingsglaube" and "Der Schmetterling." "Er ist's" by Schumann will also be performed by Payne along with a Puccini aria "O Mio Babbino" from the opera Guabbu Schicchi.

Darvon disappears

by David Griffin

Darvon, a widely used analgesic drug, is, according to a Blount County Sherriff's department detective, the second leading killer of all drugs used "on the street." Until recently, Nurse Ann Allen dispensed the drug to anyone in need of it; however, upon the advice of Dr. Proffitt she has discontinued distribution of the drug. Proffitt believes the drug to be effective when used correctly; that is, by following a physician's directions. Darvon has evidently been abused by some students on campus; therefore, Proffitt prescribes substitutes whenever possible. Darvon, structurally related to the narcotic, methadone, is a combination of several drugs containing aspirin, caffeine, phenacetin, and propoxyphene. Propoxyphene is the ingredient that is now drawing the great concern over the use of Darvon. Propoxyphene in combination with alcohol tranquilizers, sedative-hypnotics (sleep producing drugs), and other central nervous system depressants has additive effects. Toxic effects and death have occurred from overdose of propoxyphene alone and in combination with other central nervous system depressants.

Propoxyphene is known to cause drug dependence. This dependence is characterized by mental and, less frequently, physical dependence and tolerance. Also, safe use during pregnancy has not been established relative to possible adverse effects on fetal development. Instances of withdrawl sysptoms in infants less than one month old have been reported following maternal use during pregnancy. Propoxyphene also supresses mental and physical abilities.

The second drug found in Darvon, which is relatively unknown, is phenacetin. This drug is known to damage the kidneys when taken in large amounts or for an extended period of time.

Darvon, which is produced by the Lilly Company, is believed by many to be effective, when used correctly. However, possible adverse effects from correct use can occur. These effects are as follows: dizziness, sedation, nausea, and vomiting. Other effects include constipation, abdominal pains, skin rashes, lightheadedness, headaches, weakness, euphoria, dysphoria and minor visual disturbances.

Worldgram: Turmoil in Iran

Iran is a Middle Eastern country which is in a great state of conflict. Some of the trouble is religiously based, and some of it is political.

A coalition of the ultra religious, the communists, and a few others united as the National Front in an attempt to bring down the Shah whose modernization program emphasized land reform and women's rights. The Shah has left the country and is now in Morocco.

Since his accession (1941), Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi has ruled as an absolute monarch rather than the constitutional monarch Iran's fundamental law requires. The people are displeased with the Shah's rule.

The Shah left the country and appointed Bakhtiar as Prime Minister in hope that Bakhtiar could bring the separate factions together. He attempted to maintain social order in the chaotic clashings of traditionalists and modernists. Unable to do this, Bakhtiar resigned earlier this week.

Ayatollah Khomeini's return (he was exiled in 1963) was met by the masses as their only hope to reunite the country.

The people legitimize Khomeini's political views by their constitution (1906-11) which stated that the people are the only true sovereign body in Iranian society.

The Shi'ites, the major sect of Islam in Iran, have Khomeini as their political messiah who may bring an end to westernization and a return to the traditional.

This affects us. Already we we are doubtful in receiving 9% of our oil.

It will be interesting to observe the further activities of a traditional society's attempt to return to the past.

Outdoor to Petros

Some of the greatest natural wealth in the nation is in the coalfields of Tennessee; yet it doesn't stay here with its people. The land and people in the Appalachian and Cumberland Mountains suffer the effects of stripmining with very few of the benefits. Big corporations, often based as far away as England, reap the benefits without considering the devastation they are causing. In 1971, an organization called "Save Our Cumberland Mountains" (SOCM) was formed to improve the quality of life in the East Tennessee coalfields. SOCM encourages people to visit Petros, Tn. (near Oak Ridge) where they can see firsthand the effects of stripmining. Sunday, Feb. 25, the Outdoors Club is sponsoring a trip to Petros. Anyone is welcome. If you'd like to find out more about it, contact Paul Heinze, Box 2745 or the Outdoors Club, Box 2008.

MC Saxophonist to perform

Saxophonist Laurence Wyman, a 1957 M.C. graduate, will perform at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 20, for the College's Performing Artists Concerts' 1979 Alumni Series. The concert will be held in the FAC Music Hall and is free of charge and open to the public. Sallie (Mrs. Victor) Schoen, MC associate professor of music, will provide the piano accompaniment.

For his concert, Dr. Wyman will perform 20th century works by Ibert, Wirth, Latham, Swain, Muczynski, Grancaix, and Tennessee composer Burnet Tuthill.

On Wednesday, Feb. 21, Dr. Wyman will conduct a saxophone workshop for junior and senior high and college students and other interested persons. The workshop will be held from 9:30 a.m. until noon in the FAC Music Hall.

College and university students will be admitted free with their ID cards. All others will be charged 50 cents. The workshop is sponsored by the MC Wind Ensemble. Those wishing further information should contact instructor Gene Taliaferro-Jones at the MC music department, 982-9132.

Dr. Wyman is on the music faculty at State University College at Fredonia, N.Y., where he developed the saxophone department. The Fredonia Saxophone Ensemble is well known as a touring group and may be heard on Mark Educational Records.

Personal initiative improves MC

Gripe here, gripe there, Gripe, gripe everywhere.

This seem to be the general pattern for Maryville College students-(Not that we are different from anyone else.) The problems of this College are well known, yet seldom is done about them. The reasons are varied, but pure apathetic behavior is a good start. It is much easier to complain about the shortcomings of any institution rather than to attack the problems with the purpose of improvement. It takes more than spirit (we shrug from the word), but it takes personal iniative and a strong desire to better one's environment.

Fortunat ely for Maryville College, such enthusiasm and initiative does exist. A freshman starting a recognized club in a matter of a few months, a social committee which keeps the week-ends alive (though they are notoriously known for being dead), a soccer club that achieves formal recognition, and an ice hockey club starting on its own initiative, are just a few examples of what can be accomplished if one is willing to become active.

Such enthusiasm breeds the potential to revamp and improve this College. It is good to see it in the student body and it is good to recognize it in the administration.

A few weeks ago, a series of dorm meetings brought the students and the administration together for a massive griping session. It appears as if action is being taken on many of the subjects which were brought up. This is a good start. A petition griping about the rental of the handball courts boosted 250 signatures and is now being considered by the ACC.

These examples offer proof that improvement is possible, but a prerequisite is that positive individual action be taken. There is no room for merited griping when apathy is involved.

It is not the buildings nor the grounds that make this College either desirable or undesirable. It is we who occupy this institution at any given time, and it is our actions that determine the caliber of the College.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

The All College Council of Maryville College took a survey at the end of last year to find out what students held in priority as far as the yearbook, Echo, Intramurals, Social Activities, etc. Needless to say, everyone complained that this school never offers anything fun to do on weekends. After going through the proper channels the Social Committee was given a budget that has made it possible for special events to happen.

These Social Committee workers are paid nothing for "waiting on their friends." The attitude of some students often makes us wonder - why even try any more? Why is it that when you offer something free, people take advantage of what ever they can? Wednesday night, in the Fine Arts Center Lounge, we had plenty of doughnuts for the average size group that usually attends social events. By nine-thirty, however, the Richy Kreme doughnuts had run out, and people began to complain. Let's see . . . maybe next time we should charge a dollar a piece in order to still have some left for the late comers; or we could ask Valentine to ration out the available food; or maybe there just shouldn't be a next time ! ! ! !

I don't mind constructive criticism as long as those with big mouths are willing to work. Otherwise, don't complain. A lot of good things are happening in this school! yet all we do is harp on the negative. Granted, some things need to be re-examined, but why not support the school we attend and make it better than what we expected to find. If people are willing to cooperate with the the administration and faculty, we'd fina a dedicated group of underpaid adults who stay here because of their loyalty to Maryville College.

The Social Committee doesn't ask for a lot of gratitude and thanks! all I ask is that, if you can't offer the time it takes to run an activity, don't criticize it. Social Committee meetings are held every Wednesday morning at 10:30 a.m. in the Dining Hall, and everyone is welcome to attend-

Dear Editor

In response to your editorial on February Meetings, which was published February 8, I would like to clarify the following points. A memo to the faculty from the Chaplain's Office did request that nothing major be required of students during and that class times not conflict with the February Meetings. Faculty cooperation was limited, which hindered student participation. A college policy decision could resolve this problem.

The statement that "the meetings were a large disappointment for the few MC students who did attend" is simply too categorical. O.K., Dr. Paul Abrecht was, for most MC students, a flop of a speaker. Two down, but five to go. The two performances, Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy and the Three One-Act Plays, had full houses. The seminars on Christian discipleship were excellent. Lloyd Edwards on Prayer was round-about, but he did share some good insights with us, and he spoke to the students, not above them. Hogan Yancey (Social Action) and Lee Humphries (Bible Study) superbly communicated in very practical terms some of the essence of each respective discipline. They are masters of their fields and of the art of communication. Those who missed either "missed a [very] good one."

Never since February Meetings ceased to be mandatory, like chapel, have students "invariably attended." Without CIV credit, attendance dropped further. However, this year, more than "about five students" attended any given seminar, and they were not always the same students.

And to the question, "For whom do we plan and hold February Meetings?" the answer is for Maryville College, its students, faculty and staff, with the focus on the students. The lack of campus response was the problem of this year's February Meetings.

Guide to Dateable Types at Maryville College Part 1

Here is is, the day after Valentine's Day! Spring is on its way and thoughts of love and romance are in the air. Here is a helpful two-part guide to the likes and dislikes of the opposite sex, dateable types, helpful hints on how to land a date, and interesting and useful facts.

Note: Column is divided into two sections, to keep from being sexist, and for your reading convenience.

The sexy bulge in Men's pants that turn women on.

Men's Section

Today's MC man only has to keep his eyes open to see what the female population has to offer. Any red-blooded male who sits facing the serving lines in the dining hall knows this. Watch sometime and see. Actually, MC Women know that you are watching and will strut and perform for you.

Knowing where to sit and what to do is vitally important. Always sit facing towards the serving lines and at the end seat of the table. This affords a clear, unobstructed view of all female activity. Never moan softly or even audibly. Always applaud a good performance. This lets the performer know that she is appreciated. Refrain from whistling, cheering, or making lewd comments.

Where to watch is just as important as where to sit. In the serving lines is a good preliminary watching spot. Here, the girls will prepare strutting techniques, or plot last minute salad bar tactics.

Watch the salad bar very carefully. Here you can watch the girl you picked out in the line or at the milk counters, which is another good spot to watch. Watch as they bend over and stretch over the salad bar and ice cream freezer. Watch 'em and take your pick!

Q. What is the difference between a toilet seat and Maryville Women?

A. A toilet seat is slightly warmer to the touch.

Women's Section

Today's MC woman has got to know what's going on to keep abreast of Maryville's many social functions and its many eligible men. One only has to keep in mind that Maryville men have only one thing on their mind --and you all know what that is. Hey-face it, Maryville men are out to get what they can! And believe me, men can gossip every bit as well as you can, only they gossip about different things, such as how far they got on their last date.

As far as dateable types, don't expect them to come to you --Maryville men expect the girls to make the effort and to come up to them. "You never come by and see me" is a oftheard line

The Who

One thing I can say about the Who, they didn't sell out like the Stones did on their new album. "Some Girls" is still the Rolling Stones, but . . . disco? I have nothing against disco, but that's not what I like to see the Stones as.

Who are you? I really want to know.

It's been three years since 'The Who By Numbers' came out, and a lot has happened to the band. Pete Townshend commonly draws on his life for inspiration for his music; as a matter fact, he is one of the best in that field. "New Song," the first cut, rams home the guilt of having taken a free ride: "I write the same old song with a few new lines/And everybody wants to cheer me." This seems to be the general feel of the album. At least four songs — all Pete Townshend's — begin with the promise that the band's (and its audience's) future can't be taken for granted with doors slamming all around. Townshend really feels out his weaknesses.

The single is the title track, 'Who Are You; and its much more forceful than 1975's "Squeezebox." It is a dynamic song, with much the same sentiments as "Won't Get Fooled Again," the band's 1971 certified masterpiece. Townshend has recently been on a tremendous depressive downswing in his lyrics, and this song is a burst of emotion. Townshend got drunk in Soho one evening, and barely remembers meeting two of the Sex Pistols in a bar. He told them a lot of his problems, his fears, and then passed out. He was awoken by a policeman the next morning, who recognized him, and sent him home without a bust.

This song, then, is dedicated to the punk rockers. "Who are you, you impudent youths who would be nothing today if I hadn't picked up a guitar more than a decade ago," he asks, via singer Roger Daltrey. After all is said and done, what can one do? Keith Moon is gone, but I have the feeling that the Who will always be the Who, and that's pretty great

Music aids test-taking

(CPS) -- If you want to do well on a test, maybe you should take it wile listening to music.

Dr. B. Everard Blanchard of Chicago's Depaul University says that students who listen to music while filling out their test books generally are less anxious and get higher grades than those who don't have music in their classrooms.

According to Zodiac New Service, Blanchard divided 254 DePaul students with similar academic skills into three groups. He gave them all an exam, but had one group labor in silence while another group listened to classical music, and a third group heard rock music.

The two groups listening to music, it turned out, had lowed blood pressure and pulse rates during the test than the students who didn't hear music. They also ended up with higher grades on the test.

Nader aids common folk

ANN ARBOR, MI (CPS)

"We worry too much about crime in the streets, and and not enough about crime in the suites -- the executive suites," mourns Ralph Nader. On a national speaking swing through college campuses, Nader is telling law students that lawyers and the legal system service high-paying corporate clients, and are not primarily concerned with justice. Only 600 of the nation's 400,000 attorneys, he says, are practicing "public interest" law.

So Nader has turned his attention to his profession, cranking up what he calls the Equal Justice Foundation. The organization of young lawyers will be trying to change the legal system. The goal is to make the system more responsive to the needs of ordinary people. To get the organization going, the consumer advocate has been speaking to packed law-school audiences, asking the students to live up to their ideals, and connit their money to the new foundation.

Most recently at the University of Michigan Law School, Nader condemned major aspects of legal education and practice. He referred frequently to his own training at Harvard Law School, charging it was primarily devoted to learning to solve the problems of rich people and corporations.

Last year, though, Nader's other organizations sponsored a book called The High Citadel, a study of Nader's alma mater. The book was criticised by the New York Times as "timid and shallow". The Los Angeles Times, with a somewhat friendlier review, labeled it "mild".

Nader's campus speech, though, is considerably more forceful than his written law school study. He says Harvard is not the only law

Anderson Hall responds to student complaints

Editor's note: The following is a letter to the editor which has been placed on this page due to its length.

To the Editor:

During the recent meetings that Dr. Anderson, Jane Richardson, and I had with students in all the residence halls, many issues and concerns were raised. Since those visits we all have been hard at work trying to find answers to those issues and concerns, and we want to inform students of our progress. We have not been able to solve all of the problems, but we are working on them every day. We want to do everything in our power to be helpful.

Saga Food Service –Most concerns dealt with the Saga Food Service. We have forwarded 32 different concerns to Saga for consideration. Saga has responded and changes have occurred in the cafeteria. This is only a start to improve the overall service. At the same time we have forwarded the list of concerns and Saga answers to the ACC Food Service Committee. We are also considering several alternative proposals to the Saga Food Service Program.

The College Snack Bar—Saga has agreed to expand the menu in the Snack Bar and to offer specials.

Vending Machines—We have reported the broken machines and the vendor assures us that he will keep them in good repair.

Academic Classes—Concerns about several academic classes were referred to Dr. Alfred Perkins, Academic Vice President, for review and evaluation.

The Physical Education Building—The second most frequently voiced concerns were related to this building.

The Weight Room—The weight room and the new weights are available to all students. In order to provide security and to avoid injury, it is necessary to provide supervision. There is a special weight training program that is available to all interested students. The hours the weight room is open are:

Monday - Friday 3:00-5:30 p.m.
Saturday 1:00-3:30 p.m.

Swimming Pool—Beginning Spring Term, the number of hours the pool is available to students, faculty and staff will be doubled. The proposed hours are:

Monday, Wed, Fri. 6:00-8:00 p.m.
Tues. & Thurs. 3:30-5:30 p.m.
Sat. & Sun. 3:00-5:00 p.m.

Community Night—The Physical Education Building was constructed with federal funds with the understanding that the building be made available to community members. Thus, from mid October through February, Monday nights have been designated as Community Night, and facility is closed to college students. The use of the building by community members is vital to our effort to promote good community relations and encourages community financial support, which is extremely important to the College.

Free Play Gym –Winter Term is a very difficult time to keep one of the three gyms continually available for free play, with varsity basketball, gymnastics, wrestling and intramurals scheduled for the gyms. With the beginning of Spring Term we will be able to have a gym available at any time for free play.

We are working on arrangements to improve the situation for next Winter Term.

Use of the Main Floor—It is possible for students to use the main floor when it is not scheduled. Use needs to be limited because of potential damage to the floor.

Scheduling—The master calendar in the main lobby of the Physical Education building is now being kept current, as well as the calendars outside each of the main areas of the building. Mr. Henry is responsible for the calendars, and any questions about scheduling should be directed to him.

Racquetball Courts—Earlier this term a survey of racquetball court use was taken by the Athletic Director. At that time it was determined that there are peak periods of use by students, faculty and staff. We have had a number of requests from community members to use the courts. The renting of a court is an excellent opportunity to provide greatly needed financial resources, which would benefit students, faculty and staff. Therefore, it was decided that at non-peak times one racquetball court would be rented to interested persons from the community. The peak period of student, faculty and staff use (from 2:00 p.m.to 7:00 p.m.) is not available for rental. Students, faculty and staff may reserve courts by telephoning the Physical Education equipment room (983-0640) on the day they wish to use a court.

Physical Education Building Scheduling Responsibility—The major part of the responsibility for scheduling the use of the P.E. Building rests with the Athletic Director. Academic scheduling is the responsibility of Dr. Larry Boroviak. Continuing Education classes are scheduled in the building by Ms S.M. Atchley with the cooperation of Mr. Henry and Dr. Boroviak. The scheduling of all student extra-curricular actvities in the building is the responsibility of Mr. Henry.

P.E. Building Hours—We are exploring ways to enable us to keep the building open longer. One of the key problems is maintaining the necessary security at all times.

Personal Issues—Several personal concerns were reviewed and responses given directly to the individual involved.
